Our kids greatly value and appreciate their mother, and I now defer to them to elaborate:

This April 25th, I am so happy to celebrate my mom's 50th birthday. The world is certainly a better place because of her! Mom has been the steady rock in my and my siblings' lives—always there with an answer, suggestion, open ear, love and support. She sincerely mourns our disappointments and enthusiastically celebrates our accomplishments. Mom has helped me find my way through the many choices and challenges that are inevitable in the formative years, and as a married adult now, I still often seek her advice, and will continue to do so.

Mom's "can-do" outlook makes anything possible, whether it's a stubborn word problem, science fair project, search for the perfect prom dress, or wedding centerpieces. She always poses thoughtful suggestions and selflessly offers help until the task is done or the decision is made. Her patience and flexibility are unceasing, or at least always seem to be!

Mom brings special touches into everyday life—notes in lunches, candy found in a suitcase while traveling, favorite treats for no reason, and thoughtful unexpected gestures that remind me just how much she really knows me. Holidays and special occasions are always made extra special, the essential part being that the family is together. I have learned from my mom the value of family, and the importance of unconditional love and total faith in Christ.

In our house my mom had a sign that read, "Home is where the heart is." And while I love the house I grew up in, I know that "home" will always be where Mom is—for she is the heart of our family.—Melissa Smith Clement.

The way Mom tucked me in at night always brought pleasant dreams.

On waking, my groggy head would hear her laughter and wonder, "How is anyone so joyful in the morning?"

Throughout the day I would watch her with affection. Her love went into even the simplest of things. I was always moved by the tenderness with which she read a book, folded a shirt, or made a sandwich.

Now when I hear her laugh, it conveys her innocence; the years must make her younger. Do you see the confidence in her stride? The years must make her wiser. Judging by the length of her smile, her heart must be growing bigger.

I celebrate my mom on this day in April. celebrate my mom every day.—Chris Smith.

The most reliable and compassionate. The most outgoing and joyous. My mother is more than I could ask for. She has always given everything she possibly could without a second thought. She has always gone above and beyond to show her love for my siblings and me. I love her so much and wish her a happy birthday!—Mike Smith.

This week, we will be celebrating the 50th birthday of my mom. For 50 years she has brought love and joy to each person she has met, most especially her family. Her gentle kindness and patient understanding communicates her deep love for her family. She does not just take care of our family physically, but spiritually and emotionally. I cannot count how many times she was the shoulder to cry on when one of us kids had a bad day, or how many words of praise she showered us with when we did well in school or in sports. She is always there with words to guide us in our lives and in our faith.

As I have grown older, I have come to realize what an intelligent, wise and loving woman Mom is. Each day she gives of herself for our family and sets an example for us a Christ-centered life. She inspires us to turn to God and trust in His care. Mom is not afraid to stand up for her beliefs, and she has dedicated her life to living the Gospel of Christ. It is impossible to adequately describe the love and care which Mom selflessly gives each day. I feel sincerely blessed to call such a wonderful woman "mom" and I pray that she will have many more birthdays in the years to come. I love you Mom!—Elyse Smith.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Monday, April 25, 2005

The House met at noon and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. RENZI).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
April 25, 2005.

I hereby appoint the Honorable RICK RENZI to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Lord God of heaven and Earth, we bless You and we thank You for Your Holy Scriptures which quicken the mind and enrich our lives.

You spoke to us through prophets, patriarchs and kings, apostles and martyrs. Beginning with Moses through John of Patmos, their written message has become Your living word to challenge each of us and every society throughout human history, repent and believe, for their voice has gone out to the limits of the Earth, their words to the ends of the world.

Lord, may the perceptions, discussions, and decisions of Congress be enlightened by attentive listening to Your Holy Word. And may all of Your people across this Nation make Your revelations known by the way they take Your word to heart and bring it to life both now and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

SENATE—Monday, April 25, 2005

The Senate met at 2 p.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

O God, who desires truth in our inward parts, strengthen us to live with integrity. Remind us that only the pure in heart will see You. Give us the discipline of introspection that strips the soul to its bare essence. Remove from us every mask of pretense and clothe us with Your righteousness.

Bless the Members of this legislative body. Teach them that truth is not merely academic but commands commitment. Grant that they will not only speak the truth but do it as well. Give them the courage to follow truth wherever it leads them. Empower them to advocate for right, even though unpopular. Make them champions for justice even when they must stand alone.

Lord, show each of us the path that leads to life. We pray this in Your righteous Name.

Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

> I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The acting majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, today we will resume debate on the motion to proceed to highway legislation. On Friday, a cloture motion was filed to the motion to proceed. Under the order, that cloture vote will occur at 11:45 tomorrow morning.

On behalf of the leadership, we hope that cloture will be invoked and that we will be able to begin consideration of the underlying bill. If the Senate can proceed to the highway bill tomorrow, Senators should expect another rollcall vote as the Senate considers amendments to the bill. Finally, I would like to announce the Senate will this week also consider any conference report that may become available.

NATIONAL KINDERGARTEN RECOGNITION DAY

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. Res. 119, submitted today.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

> A resolution (S. Res. 119) designating April 21, 2005, as "National Kindergarten Recognition Day."

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the resolution that nationally recognizes the critical role the kindergarten year plays in the lives of our Nation's children. This resolution designates April 21, 2005 as National Kindergarten Recognition Day.

I have chosen this day because exactly 168 years ago the first kindergarten classroom was opened. In 1837, many believed that young children did not have the ability to focus or to develop cognitive and emotional skills. However, Fredrich Froebel, a German school teacher and private tutor, held a different opinion and opened the first kindergarten classroom with the goal of shaping young children in a nurturing, educational, and protected environment.

Since then, Mr. Froebel's idea has been confirmed time and again by research—early years are learning years and kindergarten has a long history of enhancing children's cognitive, physical, and social development.

In the United States, kindergarten was first introduced to American communities in 1856. Now, close to four million children participate in kindergarten programs throughout the country. With attention now focused on increasing access to high-quality child care and pre-school programs, kindergarten is frequently overlooked.

While I support both of these laudable goals, I believe we cannot ignore the impact of the kindergarten year on the development of our Nation's children. And as policy makers, we must ensure that the kindergarten programs are using developmentally, culturally, and linguistically appropriate curricula and have teachers who have specialized knowledge and skills to address their unique needs.

On a personal note, I fondly remember my kindergarten year with my teacher, Mrs. Espinoza, who encouraged my curiosity and creativity. As a parent, I recall taking my daughters to their first day of kindergarten—they came home excited to tell my wife and me what they learned and to showcase their art and science projects in our home. Kindergarten prepared my girls for their later school success and cultivated their life-long love of learning. I will be just as proud to see my daughter Melinda graduate from high school next month as I was the day of her first school graduation, her kindergarten graduation.

It is a pleasure to introduce this resolution that honors kindergarten. It is my hope that we can use this day now, and in the future, to call attention to kindergarten and to discuss ways in which we can improve kindergarten classrooms throughout the Nation.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the resolution and preamble be agreed to en bloc, the motion to reconsider be laid on the table, and any statements be printed in the RECORD, without intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 119) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 119

Whereas Friedrich Froebel, known as the "Father of Kindergarten", opened the first kindergarten classroom on April 21, 1837, with the goal of shaping young children in a nurturing, educational, and protected environment;

Whereas kindergarten has a long history of enhancing children's cognitive, physical, and social development in the United States and throughout the world;

Whereas Margarethe Meyer Schurz opened the first German-speaking kindergarten in the United States in 1856, Elizabeth Peabody opened the first English-speaking kindergarten in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1873, and the first public school kindergarten classrooms were established under the leadership of Susan Blow and William Torrey Harris in St. Louis, Missouri, in the early 1870s;

Whereas kindergarten is a critical year in children's formal education, as well as in their continued physical, social, and emotional development, that prepares them for later school success and lifelong learning;

Whereas quality kindergarten programs use developmentally, culturally, and linguistically appropriate curricula, teaching practices, and assessments to support each child's learning and development progress to reach his or her maximum potential;

Whereas teachers who teach kindergarten need to have specialized knowledge and skills in working with young children to respond to the unique interests, learning styles, and developmental characteristics of children in their kindergarten year;

Whereas kindergarten programs need to be ready for all children who are eligible, including children with disabilities and children who are not native English speakers, and their families;

Whereas kindergarten programs should collaborate and coordinate with preschools and with the other early elementary grades in order to provide a continuum of appropriate, effective early learning for all children as they transition to and through the early grades of school;

Whereas in 2001, more than more 3,700,000 children between the ages of 4 and 6 years old attended kindergarten, including full-day, half-day, or alternate day programs;

Whereas the percentage of children attending full-day kindergarten programs has grown from 28 percent in 1977 to 60 percent in 2001; and

Whereas establishment of a "National Kindergarten Recognition Day" will help draw attention to the critical role kindergarten plays as the transitional year from early education programs to the elementary and secondary education system: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates April 21, 2005, as "National Kindergarten Recognition Day" to raise public awareness about the impact of the kindergarten year on the development of our nation's children; and

(2) urges the people of the United States to recognize the historic tradition of kindergarten in the United States and its contribution to preparing children for their elementary and secondary educational achievement and experiences.

NATIONAL SMALL BUSINESS WEEK

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate now proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 120, which was submitted today.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

> A resolution (S. Res. 120) honoring small businesses during the Small Business Administration's National Small Business Week, the week beginning April 24, 2005.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today in support of a Senate resolution that honors our Nation's 25 million small businesses and the tremendous contributions they make to our economy, as we celebrate the Small Business Administration's—SBA—National Small Business Week which runs April 24 through April 30, 2005.

Small businesses form a solid economic foundation for growth and job creation. The success of our Nation's small businesses have helped create nearly three-quarters of all new jobs and produce 50 percent of our country's gross domestic product.

Since becoming Chair of the Senate Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, I have made it one of my top priorities to be a megaphone for small businesses and help raise the needs and concerns of our countries' job creators in the Senate. Each year, there are 3 to 4 million new business startups—and one in 25 adult Americans take the steps to start a business. With one quarter of existing small business owners intending to form another business, this is clearly a sector that deserves our accolades and recognition.

And of course, one of our most valuable assets for ensuring the success of small businesses is the Small Business Administration. This agency is pivotal in overseeing the delivery of financial and business development tools for millions of aspiring entrepreneurs and existing small businesses across the United States. And since 1999, the SBA's programs have helped created and retain over 4.5 million jobs.

Particularly, the SBA's financing programs have been a crucial source to accessing capital for small businesses, and have never been more in demand with both the 7(a) program and 504 program delivering measurable results. The numbers from fiscal year 2004 represent these programs indisputable success, with the 7(a) program providing over $13.5 billion in loans to help small businesses create 132,603 new jobs. The 504 program lent $4 billion to support the creation of 86,847 jobs.

Furthermore, the SBA's entrepreneurial development programs assisted almost 1.5 million startup and existing small businesses. In fact, the Small Business Development Center—SBDC—program served over 725,000 clients and helped create or retain over 168,000 jobs in fiscal year 2003, while the SBA's Women's Business Center's training and counseling helped to create or retain over 6,500 jobs in fiscal year 2003.

We have also provided small businesses with tax relief to help grow their business. For example, I championed an increase in the amount a small business can deduct when they invest in equipment and other business assets capital that fuels expansion and job creation.

So as we celebrate our Nation's small businesses, we must be mindful of Congress's responsibility to ensure that each business has the opportunity to flourish. With the BA's budget drastically declining by 36 percent over the last 5 years, I will not hesitate to take action and ensure that this vital sector continues to have the valuable resources they deserve.

The SBA has been a critical partner to millions of small enterprises as well as aspiring entrepreneurs as they embark on the path to prosperity and job creation. The least we can do is strengthen, not erode, the SBA's core loan and technical assistance programs that have proven time and again to be the keystone in aiding the efforts and dreams of America's entrepreneurs.

Today we celebrate our Nation's entrepreneurs and honor America's small businesses. I urge my colleagues to show their support for the small businesses in their States and support this resolution. We must remember that the investment and support that we provide to our small business today is integral to our Nation's economic and job security tomorrow.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I rise today to honor America's single greatest economic resource: our small businesses. Small businesses drive our economy, making up 99 percent of all firms, and today marks the first day of the annual National Small Business Week celebration. This week, we honor the firms that are working year round to provide goods and services to us all. Every day, small businesses and entrepreneurs are making innovations, creating new jobs, and pushing our economy forward. In fact, more than 50 percent of our Nation's GDP and more than two-thirds of all new jobs in our economy are attributable to small businesses. From the high-tech startup and the small manufacturer to the family-owned bookstore and the lemonade stand run by the little girl down the street, small businesses and entrepreneurs are an exciting part of our communities. And the opportunities they create represent the American Dream.

Given the importance of small businesses to our economy, it is only logical that there would be a Federal agency dedicated to promoting and protecting their interests. The Small Business Administration, which I am sure my colleagues are well aware of, serves as an indispensable small business advocate and resource within the Federal Government. With offices and strategic resource partners across the country, the SBA is able to serve entrepreneurs at the local level by providing training, mentorship, and valuable resources and at the national level by encouraging agencies to extend contracts to small businesses and to develop small-business friendly regulations.

The SBA offers a number of programs designed to help small businesses overcome obstacles to success. I am proud to support these programs, which tackle issues ranging from entrepreneurial development and access to capital to Federal contracting and trade assistance.

Without these SBA resources, thousands of small businesses would not have grown, survived tough times, or even been created. Once small businesses such as Staples, Intel, Nike, America Online, Black Enterprise Magazine, Eskimo Joe's, Callaway Golf, FedEx, Hewlett-Packard, Jenny Craig, Gymboree, Ben & Jerry's, Winnebago, Sun Microsystems, and Outback Steakhouse all received assistance through at least one of the SBA's programs. These businesses started out small but are now household names. They prove that their owners had excellent business ideas even though traditional lenders or venture capitalists would not take a chance on them. The SBA gave these once small businesses an opportunity to grow, helping them to get their foot in the door and eventually bring new products to markets across the country and the world. The long-term gains that our economy experiences from helping these companies are too numerous to list entirely, but they include thousands of jobs, a stronger economy, increased opportunities and millions in additional tax revenue, which has paid for the SBA's budget many times over.

While helping them grow is a part of SBA's mission, many small businesses are not looking to become large corporations, and these too need SBA's assistance and support. Every small business is important. Our neighborhoods could not function and would not be the same without the local dry cleaner, the corner market, the day care provider, the hardware store, the car mechanic, the restaurant, and countless other small businesses. Whether family-owned or a franchise, an S Corp or a sole-proprietor, fast-growing or home-based, all small businesses contribute greatly to our economy. And for decades, the SBA has been there to help.

According to SBA Administrator Hector Barreto's recent testimony before the Senate Small Business and Entrepreneurship Committee, the SBA backed a record $21.3 billion in loans and related financing to small businesses last year. Of that money, nearly one-third of it went to businesses owned by women or minorities. The SBA's major technical assistance programs reached a record number of clients last year, and the procurement assistance programs aided more than 37,000 small businesses. These impressive figures demonstrate that the entrepreneurial sector of our economy is alive and flourishing, in part because of the SBA. It is up to us, in the Federal Government, to ensure that this entrepreneurial spirit continues to thrive.

This week, in honor of National Small Business Week, the SBA is hosting SBA Expo '05, which serves to highlight the year's greatest achievers and small business advocates. I am proud to join Senator SNOWE and several other members of Congress as an honorary cochair of this event, where the SBA will also honor the National Small Business Person of the Year and State winners, including Massachusetts' own Fred Curtis, Jr. of Curtis Tractor Cab. Mr. Curtis has worked tirelessly to expand his company, growing from 21 employees in 1988 to 221 employees last year. Demonstrating the value that a small investment can give, Curtis Tractor Cab has grown more than 700 percent since receiving an SBA 504 loan from the Worcester Business Development Corp. I thank Mr. Curtis for his important contributions to the Worcester area. I know I speak for the small business community in Massachusetts when I say we are very proud to have an entrepreneur like Mr. Curtis representing our State with this award.

I also commend all of the SBA award winners this week. Their contributions to their States, communities, and our national economy are immense. In addition, I specifically congratulate Steven Stultz, the National 2005 Financial Services Champion of the Year. Much of what the SBA does involves access to capital, and Mr. Stultz has been a ubiquitous leader for the greater lending community. He is an active member of the National Association of Development Companies—NADCO—sits on the Board of Directors for CDC Small Business Finance, and is in his second year of a 3-year term as chairman of the National Association of Government Guaranteed Lenders—NAGGL. Mr. Stultz's dedication and leadership have propelled the 7(a) and 504 loan programs into powerful economic development tools. He has worked closely with Congress, particularly with the Senate Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, to make necessary and thoughtful changes to the SBA's several loan program. I am thankful and supportive of his tireless advocacy and work to make access to capital easier for small businesses nationwide.

As a tribute to the SBA and the 25 million small businesses in the Nation, Senator OLYMPIA J. SNOWE and I support S. Res 120, to honor their impact on our Nation and our economy. As the resolution indicates, the SBA has assisted more than 20 million entrepreneurs throughout its history. However, despite the agency's noble mission, its assistance to small businesses is being threatened by this administration, which has cut funding to the SBA by 36 percent since 2001—more than any other Federal agency. One can only imagine how much more the SBA could have done for small businesses this year with just the same funding it received in 2001. We may never know the true cost these cuts have had on the future growth of our economy. How many Intels were passed up for funding, how many rural businesses weren't able to get management assistance, and how many jobs weren't created?

Small businesses give entrepreneurs the opportunity to pursue their passion, they give parents the opportunity to stay at home with kids while supplementing the household income, they give people the opportunity to be their own bosses, they empower women and minorities, and they spark innovation. Small businesses are vital to the success of our country and our economy, and we must do everything in our power to ensure our small businesses and entrepreneurs have the greatest resources in the world.

Mr. INHOFE. I ask unanimous consent the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The resolution (S. Res. 120) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 120

Whereas America's 25,000,000 small businesses have fueled the Nation's economy, creating more than ¾ of all new jobs and accounting for more than 50 percent of the Nation's gross domestic product;

Whereas small businesses are the Nation's innovators, advancing technology and fueling the economic growth and productivity;

Whereas the Small Business Administration has been a critical partner in the success of the Nation's small businesses and these businesses' continued economic growth;

Whereas the mission of the Small Business Administration is to maintain and strengthen the Nation's economy by aiding, counseling, assisting, and protecting the interests of small businesses and by helping families and small businesses recover from natural disasters;

Whereas the Small Business Administration has helped small businesses access critical lending opportunities, protected small businesses from excessive Federal regulatory enforcement, played a key role in ensuring full and open competition for government contracts, and improved the economic environment in which small businesses compete;

Whereas the Small Business Administration, which was established in 1953, has also provided valuable service to small businesses through financial assistance, technical assistance, procurement assistance, small business advocacy, and disaster recovery assistance;

Whereas for over 50 years the Small Business Administration has helped approximately 22,000,000 Americans start, grow, and expand their businesses and has placed almost $250,000,000,000 in loans and venture capital financing into the hands of entrepreneurs;

Whereas the Small Business Administration has helped millions of entrepreneurs achieve the American dream of owning a small business; and

Whereas the Small Business Administration will mark National Small Business Week, the week beginning April 24, 2005: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) honors small businesses during the Small Business Administration's National Small Business Week, the week beginning April 24, 2005;

(2) supports the purpose and goals of National Small Business Week; and

(3) commends the Small Business Administration and the Small Business Administration's resource partners—

(A) for their work, which has been critical in helping the Nation's small businesses grow and develop; and

(B) for being key players in the Nation's economic vitality.

CORRECTING THE ANABOLIC STEROID CONTROL ACT

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 893, introduced earlier today.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 893) to make technical corrections to the Anabolic Steroid Control Act of 2004.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. INHOFE. I ask unanimous consent the bill be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid on the table, and any statements relating thereto be printed in the RECORD, without intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 893) was read the third time and passed, as follows:

S. 893

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

"(xliv) stanozolol (17α-methyl-17β-hydroxy-[5α]-androst-2-eno[3,2-c]-pyrazole);".

TRANSPORTATION EQUITY ACT: A LEGACY FOR USERS—MOTION TO PROCEED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of the motion to proceed on H.R. 3, which the clerk will report:

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

Motion to proceed to the consideration of a bill (H.R. 3) to authorize funds for Federal-aid highways, highway safety programs, and transit programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, on Friday, the leader filed a cloture motion on the motion to proceed to H.R. 3, the highway bill. I believe the cloture vote has been scheduled for tomorrow at 11:45 am. I strongly urge all of my colleagues to vote yes.

The Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century, TEA–21, expired on September 30, 2003, nearly 19 months ago. Yet we are still attempting to get a bill done. The Federal-aid program has been operating under a number of short-term extensions—a total of six to date.

We need to get this done. The vote on Tuesday on cloture is critical. If we cannot proceed to this bill, we will miss yet another deadline and our States will continue to pay the price. The current May 31 expiration date for the highway, transit and safety programs is fast approaching. The House bill, H.R. 3, has some very significant differences from S. 732 the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, SAFETEA, the bill reported out by the Environment and Public Works Committee on March 16. We will need as much time as possible to work out a compromise. Although we may not all be in perfect agreement here on the Senate floor on each and every provision of S. 732, one thing I believe we are all in agreement on is that we need to get this done. In addition to conversations with colleagues, I have visited with community leaders and outside interest groups and the message is clear . . . get the bill done.

My committee colleagues and I are asking the Senate to consider essentially the same language that 76 Senators voted for in 108th Congress. The Environment and Public Works Committee used as its mark the Senate-passed S. 1072 with the exception that we adjusted the numbers to reflect the President's proposed spending level of $284 billion over 6 years. During our markup we accepted several non-controversial amendments from committee members. None of these amendments substantially changed the policy goals of the bill as passed last year.

Therefore, I strongly urge my colleagues to support the pending cloture motion and allow us to move to H.R. 3. We really need to keep this moving. The longer we delay enactment of a long-term bill, we are negatively effecting economic growth. According to DOT estimates, every $1 billion of Federal funds invested in highway improvements creates 47,000 jobs. The same $1 billion investment yields $500 million in new orders for the manufacturing sector and $500 million spread throughout other sectors of the economy.

State contract awards for the 2005 spring and summer construction season are going out to bid. If we fail to send a bill to the President by May 31st, States will not know what to expect in Federal funding and the uncertainty will potentially force States to delay putting these projects out for bid. According to the American Association of State Highway Transportation Officials—AASHTO, an estimated 90,000 jobs are at stake. This problem is exacerbated for northern States, such as Alaska, that have shorter construction seasons. Many State transportation departments have advanced State dollars to construct projects eligible for Federal-funding in anticipation of our action to reauthorize the program. Without a new bill, States are essentially left "holding the bag."

Over the past 6 years under TEA–21, we have made great progress in preserving and improving the overall physical condition and operation of our transportation system. However, more needs to be done. A safe, effective transportation system is the foundation of our economy. We are past due to fulfill an obligation to this country and the American people.

I am pleased that the President's budget assumed more funding for reauthorization over his previous level of $256 billion. I and along with many of you believe we need more. Certainly that is an issue that will be thoroughly debated on the floor of the Senate, but we can't even have that debate unless we get to the floor.

Again, if we are able to proceed, the language that the Senate will be considering is essentially the same bill that was passed on the Senate floor last year—a bipartisan product of many months of hard work and compromise. This bill remains a very good piece of legislation which I hope will require few, if any, changes here on the floor. However, I am anxious to discuss with Senators their amendments so that we can debate them and hopefully get this bill in conference with the House prior to the recess, but we need to get to the bill first.

S. 1072 passed the Senate last year guaranteed all donor States a rate of return of 95 percent. I can remember that was 75 percent when I first came here. At a lower funding level we were able only to achieve a 92 percent rate of return but kept the 10 percent floor over TEA–21. The scope, or split of percent funding above and below the line, remain the same at 92.5 percent.

In order to get this bill off the floor, we have to balance the needs of donor and donee States. I will be the first to acknowledge that this balance—as with any compromise—is not perfect. My colleagues representing donee and donor States that receive lower rates of return or growth rates than they feel fair have made this fact very clear to me over the past year.

I am very sympathetic to the concerns of both donors and donees in this situation. Both have significant transportation needs that cannot be ignored. Addressing their concerns has become more difficult in the last year due to the fact that we have less money. Providing either group with more money would add significantly to the cost of the bill or take away from other programs. But holding up even consideration of this bill will not solve the problem. We need to proceed to H.R. 3 so that donor and donee States will have the opportunity to offer their amendments on how to improve their State's treatment.

I am certain my colleagues share my strong desire to get a transportation reauthorization bill passed. We must act to get a bill to and through conference prior to the May 31 expiration of the current extension. This will be a very difficult challenge, but if we act quickly we can do it.

Now let's look at the alternative. What will happen if we do not pass a highway bill? There will not be another extension. If we don't pass the bill there will be no chance of improvement on donor State rate of return and no new safety core program to help Spates respond to thousands of deaths each year on our roadways.

Our bill up has many safety provisions, as the ranking Democrat, Senator JEFFORDS knows. We didn't agree on all these, but we finally agreed on a final product. Without a bill, there will be no real streamlining of environmental reviews, so critical products would be still subject to avoidable delays. There will be no increased ability to use innovative financing, thereby giving States more tools to advance projects.

Out in California, they have done some things that are working very well. We have studied these and put some very innovative provisions in this bill to allow us to get more for the dollar than we can get today. But without a bill, we cannot do that.

Without a bill, we would not have any Safe Routes to School. This is a program many of the Democrats and Republicans in the House and Senate have embraced. But without a bill, we will not have that.

Without a bill, the States will continue to have uncertainty in planning, thereby delaying projects and negatively impacting jobs.

It is easy to sit up here in Washington and be indecisive about these things, but the States have to make plans in advance. For each delay, that is less they are going to get.

Without a bill, we have no new border program, which is critical to border States dealing with NAFTA.

Without a bill, we have delay in the establishment of the national commission to explore how to fund transportation in the future. It is something we have been doing essentially the same way year in and year out, but we are studying new methods now as motor vehicles are more fuel efficient and a tax collection system based solely on fuel consumption becomes less practical.

Without a bill, we won't have any increased opportunity to address choke points at intermodal connectors.

The firewall protection of the highway trust fund would not be continued, thereby making the trust fund vulnerable to raids in order to pay for other programs.

It is very important that we move forward. We studied this for a year and a half before coming to the Senate a year ago right now. Certainly the ranking Democrat on the committee, Senator JEFFORDS, can remember the months and months we worked on it. We came to the Senate with a good bill, passed it, went to conference, and were unable to get a vote on the conference report. Because of that, all these 10 things I mentioned did not happen this year. For all these things to happen, to move forward, we have to have a bill. We cannot have a bill until we vote on the motion to proceed so that we will be able to move to the bill. That is what this is all about.

I recognize the ranking Democrat on the Environment and Public Works Committee, Senator JEFFORDS.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I thank Senator FRIST for the opportunity to debate this important legislation.

I also thank Senator REID for his leadership in getting us to where we are today on this bill.

In addition, I thank Chairman INHOFE, Senators BOND, and BAUCUS, as well as other chairmen and ranking members for all of their hard work and cooperation on this legislation.

A little over a year ago, I stood before my colleagues, in the same place I am standing now, asking for their support of our Nation's surface transportation system.

I am hopeful now, as I was then, that we will be able to work in a bipartisan fashion to pass this legislation quickly so our states can proceed with their critical work.

Today we are in a similar situation as we were a year ago.

Our bill maintains the important principles that were developed over the years of work in our committees.

We continue to grow and support the core programs that are the building block of a strong transportation system.

We maintain flexibility for States, because they know best how to meet their needs.

We also try to increase the funds going out to the States.

This bill will enhance safety on our Nation's highways through education, better infrastructure, and enforcement.

The increased intermodal flexibility set forth in the bill will allow States, if they wish to improve freight handling and movement.

The growth in congestion mitigation and air quality funding will help States improve air quality, reduce pollution and address congestion.

The bill makes it easier for States to mitigate project effects on habitat and wetlands, and retains and expands popular programs such as enhancements recreational trails and scenic byways.

This bill also reduces congestion on our Nation's roadways by enhancing public transportation and promoting intermodal solutions to regional transportation problems.

These are all critical components to a successful bill and I am glad that, through much hard work, we were able to develop strong national policy.

It may not be exactly what any one Member would have crafted on his or her own, but this is a strong and unified step in the right direction.

There are, however, some key differences.

A year ago, we presented you with a well-funded bill that struck a delicate balance between the core programs and flexibility on program and modal spending at the State and local level.

This time our job was made more difficult by fiscal constraints insisted upon by the administration.

The White House has suggested an overall funding level for surface transportation of $284 billion over 6 years.

This despite the President's own Transportation Department saying we need at least $300 billion to simply maintain the status quo, and something well above that level to make progress on conditions and performance.

Last year the Senate passed a highway bill at $318 billion with 76 votes.

It is unfortunate that the President fails to see the value of a robust transportation program.

It is unfortunate the President fails to see the jobs that will be lost, and the roads and bridges that will go unrepaired and unbuilt.

It is unfortunate the President doesn't see the lives that could be saved with better roads and the time that will be wasted sitting in traffic.

All of this is the result of inadequate funding.

While my colleagues and I have continued to impress upon him the value of increased funding, we continue to work within the box that the administration has put us in.

We tried to meet everyone's needs while not neglecting our responsibilities to the highway trust fund.

This is a very difficult task given the restrictions this administration has imposed on us.

But we did what was asked of us.

All of the committees have acted and passed a bill at $284 billion.

Make no mistake—we have made sacrifices that none of us wanted.

I am hopeful we will increase the funding in this bill as we move it through the Senate in the coming days.

That said, I stand here before you with the structure of a bill that has the potential to move our transportation system forward—not the giant leap we had hoped to make but meager steps that I hope will be the first of many in helping us get where we need to go.

Mr. President, I need not remind you that the authorization for this program expired 19 months ago.

In that time, there have been nearly 70,000 traffic fatalities with an economic cost of over $370 billion.

Americans continue to sit in traffic for close to 50 hours a year, 10 minutes more per hour traveled than when the last reauthorization bill was passed.

Mr. President, 18 percent of our roads are in poor or mediocre condition; 29 percent of bridges are deficient or functionally obsolete; over a quarter of our transit facilities are in below average condition; more than 3 million jobs are waiting to be created.

While we neglect to act, transportation in this country continues to degrade.

Things are getting worse, not better.

We have lost one construction season and are on our way to missing another.

In northern States such as Vermont, this is not a little problem. It is a big one.

We must act on this legislation now.

We must pass a nationwide surface transportation reauthorization bill this year.

I look forward to working with my colleagues to debate H.R. 3 on the Senate floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I say to my good friend, Senator JEFFORDS, we are not political equals in philosophy; yet I, as a conservative, agree with everything the Senator has said in terms of the need for roads and the need for infrastructure.

Senator JEFFORDS talked about some of the deficiencies we have, but I have to say in my State of Oklahoma the FAWA goes out and they rate roads and bridges. Oklahoma is dead last in bridges. This is a life-and-death situation. We lose lives every year.

A lot of my friends say: Well, you did not want to have a robust, expensive highway bill. I say to them: That is what we are supposed to be doing here.

I am a conservative. There is no one more conservative, according to the ACLU, than I am in this Senate. Yet I can say we need to spend money on infrastructure in the United States.

I will say a little bit about the formula of which I have been very proud. Both my good friend from Vermont and I used to serve in the other body before we came to the Senate. At that time, I was on the Transportation Committee in the House. I watched the way we did things there and how we do things here. I don't want to be critical of the way the other body operates, but we do it in a more fair and equitable way.

It would be easy—if we needed 60 Senators, we could give them projects until everyone signed on, and then forget about the other 40, have a vote, and go home. That could happen, but we did not do that. We have a complicated formula.

This creates different anxieties in different States where there is opposition because in one particular area they do not do as well as another State. Let me give an example of how complicated the formula is.

In a formula, you take into consideration an abundance of items, such as interstate lane miles. This is something in the formulas we take into consideration. Obviously, there is a reason. Or vehicle miles traveled, which is referred to as VMT. Over the next few days we will hear that quite often. The vehicle miles traveled on interstate has to be something to consider in terms of authorizing a 6-year program.

The contributions to the highway trust fund are very significant. We hear from some of the large States that they give more to the highway trust fund. I suggest it is not just people in that State who are making those contributions; people driving through the State also have to buy fuel in those States.

The lane miles on principal arteries, excluding the intersection, is weighted in the formula to a percentage. The VMT on principal arteries is considered. Diesel fuel used on highways is a consideration. Total lane miles on principal arteries divided by population is considered when we look at a formula that would affect all 50 States. So total lane miles on Federal aid highways, total vehicle miles traveled on Federal aid highways, the contributions to the highway trust fund, or the highway account, attributable to highway users, the cost to repair or replace deficient highways and bridges have to be considered. In the State of Alaska, for example, the Presiding Officer's State, it is more expensive. They have severe winters in Alaska. We do not have severe winters in some of the Southern States. This has to be part of the consideration.

The weighted nonattainment and maintenance area, population, the equal shares to each eligible State on highways, recreational trails program, the border planning, borders and corridors—this is significant to States such as California and Arizona, Texas, Florida, and, of course, the northern tier of States. The border States' share of cargo weight, what their share is of cargo value, the number of commercial vehicles entering the border State, the number of passenger vehicles entering the border State—all these are part of the formula.

We have low-income States. My State of Oklahoma is a low-income State. The State of Arizona is a high-income State. That is a consideration. One of the chief workers on the bill has been Senator BAUCUS from Montana. He is the ranking member on the committee; KIT BOND chairs that subcommittee on transportation within our committee. He has a low-population State. Obviously, if you have a low-population State, that has to be a consideration. There still have to be roads so they can travel and other people can travel through their States. But if they base it all on getting 100 percent back, and they do not have extra consideration—that has to be part of the formula.

Low-population-density States is a factor. The high fatality rates are a factor. The fatality rate in my State of Oklahoma is higher than average. The guaranteed minimum growth of each State—there is a limit applied to that—and the guaranteed minimum rate of return for donor States is a consideration. I remember when that guaranteed minimum rate of return for donor States was 75 percent, and it only crept up to 80, 85 and 90; now we operate on 90.5 percent. If we passed the bill offered last year, the way it passed in Senate, we would be at 95 percent. Every State would be guaranteed 95 percent return of donations of that State.

If we did not do it this way, we could do it the politically easy way—handing out projects until it is done. But that is where pork comes in. That is where most of the criticism comes from. I have heard a lot of the commentators talk about the highway bill the Senate has is full of projects and pork. My response is they have not read it yet. There are only two projects in the entire bill. Only two. On the other side, there are several hundred. It is a totally different approach.

So we have these things that are of major consideration. We have to get this bill done. The best way to get it done, of course, is to vote favorably tomorrow on the motion to invoke cloture on the motion to proceed, and then to move on to the bill.

Now, we have several people who may wish to speak. I mentioned Senator BOND, who is the chairman of the Transportation Subcommittee. Senator BAUCUS, who has been very helpful in working with us, is the ranking member of the subcommittee. There is Senator JEFFORDS and myself. Of course, we have 18 members of our committee. We would like to invite them to come down right now. I will defer to anyone who wants to come down and talk about this legislation. In the event that nobody shows up, I have more to say. I think, probably, the Senator from Vermont might have more to say, too.

So at the present time I will go ahead and suggest the absence of a quorum and encourage members of our committee and others who want to be heard on the highway bill to come down and speak.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURR). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized to speak for up to 30 minutes as in morning business. However, I want to say if anyone comes down to speak on the motion to proceed to the highway bill. I will stop at that point so they can be recognized. I will yield to them. However, I want my entire speech to be printed in the RECORD as if given intact.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

THIRD PILLAR OF CLIMATE ALARMISM

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, today I will continue my series of the four pillars of climate alarmism. This is the third pillar speech. In my first speech, I outlined how the media and some of the environmental extremists distorted, exaggerated, and mischaracterized a major climate change report from the National Academy of Sciences.

I showed how the left and the media exaggerated a document that contained numerous caveats about the uncertainties of current knowledge and the caution that its conclusions were tentative, proclaiming the report showed conclusively that global warming due to man is occurring.

In my second speech, I described some of the more serious and, indeed, fatal flaws in the 2001 Third Assessment Report from the U.N.'s Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, known also as the IPCC, which I will refer to from time to time. In that speech, I exposed how Michael Mann's now infamous "hockey stick," the flagship of the IPCC's claims that global warming is real, has been thoroughly discredited in scientific circles, and that the IPCC's projections of future carbon emissions, which drive temperature model conclusions, have been proven to be based on political decisions that, by the end of the century, countries such as Libya will be as wealthy or wealthier than the United States.

Now, I would like to examine the Arctic Climate Impact Assessment Report, which received considerable attention on its release late last year. Last November, the Arctic Council, described as a "high-level information forum" that includes the United States, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway, the Russian Federation, and Sweden, released its 140-page arctic synthesis report, entitled, "Impacts of a Warming Arctic." It details the major findings from the Arctic Council's 1,200-page scientific report, which will be released in the coming weeks.

The essence of the synthesis report is this: The Arctic is experiencing unprecedented climate change, caused, in large part, if not entirely, by manmade greenhouse gas emissions, while projections show dramatic Arctic warming accompanied by even more pronounced changes that will have serious repercussions for the entire planet.

At first blush, the report appears to be quite impressive. It contains glossy photos, charts, and graphs, and was produced by some 300 scientists from several nations. But it lacks virtually any scientific documentation, which casts doubt on the report's page after page of unqualified, matter-of-fact claims about Arctic warming. That documentation, we are told, is forthcoming in the more lengthy scientific report. So it is unclear if the 140-page document accurately reflects the contents of the scientific report.

If it does, then the scientific report simply ignores or dismisses reams of peer-reviewed scientific work contradicting the Arctic Council's conclusions. If it does not, then the synthesis report would appear to be an exercise in global warming propaganda.

The release of the report created a media sensation with nearly every major news outlet declaring, once again, that the scientific consensus on global warming had been reaffirmed.

Here is the Chicago Tribune's report from November 24, 2004:

> The council's 140-page report, four years in the making, warns of immense ice melts, a dramatic rise in ocean levels, the depletion of the Gulf Stream and other sea currents, wild fluctuations in weather patterns, increased ultraviolet radiation and wrenching dislocations in the food chain and habitat.

In equally dramatic fashion, the Associated Press described the report this way. It said:

> This most comprehensive study of Arctic warming to date adds yet more impetus to the projections by many of the world's climate scientists that there will be a steady rise in global temperature as the result of greenhouse gases released into the atmosphere from the burning of fossil fuels and other sources.

Such descriptions of the report are really not far off the mark, and for good reason. In this case, the media and extremist groups got exactly what they wished for—140 pages detailing a daunting list of projected environmental catastrophes: permafrost melting, infrastructure collapsing, glaciers vanishing, sea levels rising, coastal communities flooding, polar bears facing extinction.

Worse, the authors left the impression that these scenarios were all but assured, despite the fact that the assumptions on which they are based are highly uncertain—a point I will examine later in this speech. Thus, no spin, distortion, or exaggeration on the media's part was necessary.

The synthesis report constructs a deceptive picture of climate changes that have occurred in the Arctic over the last 30 years, particularly with respect to temperature change. A major piece of evidence supporting the Arctic Council's alarmist conclusions is the Arctic's "unprecedented" temperature increase over the last several decades. The report's authors make the following statement on page 23. I am quoting now. It says:

> Examining the record of past climatic conditions indicates that the amount, speed, and pattern of warming experienced in recent decades are indeed unusual and are characteristic of the human-caused increase in greenhouse gases.

Specifically, according to the Council, annual average temperature in the Arctic has increased at almost twice the rate of the rest of the world, while winter temperatures in Alaska and western Canada have increased about 3 to 4 degrees Celsius over the past half century, with larger increases projected in the next 100 years.

Surely, this is proof of unprecedented, human-induced warming, and of worrisome warming trends for the future? Not quite. Let's take a closer look at the peer-reviewed literature on the temperature history of the Arctic, which the Arctic Council's synthesis report totally ignored.

First, in the November 2002 issue of the Journal Holocene, researchers examined proxy temperature data in northern Russia spanning over 2,000 years. They found that "the warmest periods over the last two millennia in this region were clearly in the third, tenth to twelfth, and during the twentieth centuries." The earlier periods, they claim, were warmer than those of the 20th century, while 20th century temperatures appeared to peak at around 1940.

For a much broader perspective on Arctic temperatures, one can read the 2003 paper by researcher Igor Polyakov in the journal EOS, a publication of the American Geophysical Union. In the paper titled "Trends and Variations in Arctic Climate Systems," Polyakov studied land and ocean data from northward of latitude 62.5 degrees north, dating back to 1870.

As is obvious from this chart, one can see that current temperature over the entire region is similar to that measured 70 years ago. According to Polyakov:

> Two distinct warming periods from 1920 to 1945, and from 1975 to the present, are clearly evident.

He goes on to note that "compared with the global and hemispheric temperature rise, the high-latitude temperature increase was stronger in the late 1930s to the early 1940s than in recent decades."

Strangely there is no mention of this in the Arctic report, but alarmists don't seem to care. They would probably respond that: 300 scientists from all over the world believe such warming is occurring. You, sir, have merely identified two whose research presents a contrary view.

To answer that charge I will submit for the RECORD an impressive list of scientists from several countries, including the United States, whose peer-reviewed work shows current Arctic temperatures are no higher than temperatures recorded in the 1930s and the 1940s.

Let me quote from a few salient examples. In a 2003 issue of the Journal of Climate, seven researchers concluded the following:

> In contrast to the global and hemispheric temperature, the maritime Arctic temperature was higher in the late 1930s through the early 1940s than in the 1990s.

Here is another excerpt from the 2000 International Journal of Climatology, Dr. Rajmund Przybylak of Nicholas Copernicus University in Torun, Poland. It reads:

> The highest temperatures since the beginning of instrumental observation occurred clearly in the 1930s and can be attributed to changes in atmospheric circulation.

Finally, in 2001, researchers examined a 10,000-year span of sea core sediment in the Chukchi Sea and concluded that "in the recent past, the western Arctic Ocean was much warmer than it is today." They also found that "during the middle Holocene [approximately 6,000 years ago] the August sea surface temperature fluctuated by 5 degrees Celsius and was 3–7 degrees Celsius warmer than it is today." Obviously, the middle Holocene period was not known for SUVs and coal-fired powerplants.

To get a fuller sense of the report's bias, consider the Arctic Council's geographical definition of "the Arctic." This is important because the temperature record differs depending on one's definition. The Arctic report's temperature record includes data from northward of latitude 60 degrees North. Why the Arctic Council chose this point is not explained. In fact, the report's authors responsible for defining the Arctic admitted last November that their choice was arbitrary.

The Arctic Council's starting point is problematic for two reasons. First, Dr. George Taylor, Oregon's State climatologist and a past president of the American Association of State Climatologists, recently examined Arctic temperature trends using different starting points. As Dr. Taylor found, "[u]sing 60 degrees North introduced a lot of . . . questionable Siberian stations." In other words, measurements at that point are based in part on bad data.

Second, other researchers see the Arctic differently, and probably more accurately when describing long-term temperature trends. Polyakov, for example, defined Arctic as northward of 62.5 degrees North. This 2.5-degree difference is not trivial. Temperatures can change significantly between 62.5 degrees North and 60 degrees North. In fact, pushing the geographical boundaries southward, as the Arctic Council did, contributes to a substantial upward bias in temperature measurements.

Not only was the Arctic region arbitrarily defined, it appears that marine and coastal-based data were arbitrarily excluded from the report's temperature record. This is strange, considering two-thirds of the Arctic is covered by the Arctic Ocean. So it seems unreasonable to use only land-based stations, as the Arctic Council did, and not to include coastal stations. Russian drifting stations in the Arctic Ocean, and drifting buoys from the International Buoy Programme, as Polyakov and his colleagues did.

Using such data reveals a less dramatic temperature picture than the Arctic Council's. In 1993, University of Wisconsin climatologist Jonathan Kahal examined declassified data collected over the Arctic Ocean during the Cold War. In a paper in the journal Nature, Kahl found an "absence of evidence for greenhouse warming over the Arctic Ocean in the past 40 years" and a net decline in Arctic temperature. Admittedly, Kahl's temperature history stretches only from 1958 to 1986. But more importantly, it relies on marine and coastal-based data.

Dr. Taylor was among many mystified by these omissions. For him, there is only one possible explanation: "The [Arctic Climate Impact Assessment] appears to be guilty of selective use of data." He further explained, "Many of the trends described in the document begin in the 1960s or 1970s—cool decades in much of the world—and end in the warmer 1990s and early 2000s. So, for example, temperatures have warmed in the last 40 years, and the implication, 'if present trends continue,' is that massive warming will occur in the next century. Yet data are readily available for the 1930s and early 1940s, when temperatures were comparable to (and probably higher than) those observed today. Why not start the trend there? Because there is no net warming over the last 65 years?

This is kind of interesting because I can remember also giving a speech where I showed the cover of "Newsweek" magazine and the cover of "U.S. News and World Report." This was back in the 1970s. And the headlines were: Cooling period is coming; a new ice age is coming. We are all going to die. It is the same thing people are saying about a warming climate. If your starting point is at the end of that cold period, it gives a distortion, if there has been no net warming over the last 65 years.

In the pop culture version of global warming, there is no greater attraction than melting glaciers and sea ice. Press accounts appear daily of new studies purporting to show a widespread glacial retreat stemming from man-made greenhouse gas emissions. Warnings abound that this melting will cause a calamitous rise in sea levels. True to form, the Arctic Council follows the same story line, asserting that, "glaciers throughout the Arctic are melting." "This process is already under way," the report states, "with the widespread retreat of glaciers, snow cover, and sea ice. This is one reason why climate change is more rapid in the Arctic than elsewhere." but is this really the case?

Interestingly, the IPCC Third Assessment Report references peer-reviewed studies that contradict the Arctic Council's assessments. The IPCC, an organization convinced of the validity of the global warming consensus, noted that, "Glaciers and ice caps in the Arctic also have shown retreat in low-lying areas since about 1920," but also stated, "However, no increasing melting trend has been observed during the past 40 years."

Sonar data on sea ice collected in the 1990s also tell a different story. As the BBC wrote in 2001, "The latest and most comprehensive analysis yet of the sonar data collected in the 1990s shows little if any thinning—at least towards the end of that decade. Indeed, at the North Pole, there are indications in the data that the ice even got a little thicker."

What they are saying is, there are some areas that you can visibly go to and say yes, glaciers are melting, but in other areas it is getting thicker.

Among other omissions, the Arctic Council gave little weight to the observed variability of Arctic sea ice thickness. The term "observed variability" of sea ice thickness has specific meaning in the Arctic: Scientists estimate that sea ice mass there can vary by as much as 16 percent in a single year. As Dr. Seymour Laxon, a lecturer in the Department of Space and Climate Physics at the University College London, explained, "The observed variability of Arctic sea ice thickness contrasts with the concept of a slowly dwindling ice pack, produced by global warming."

So what causes these variations in sea ice mass? In 2002, Dr. Greg Holloway, of the Institute for Ocean Sciences in Sidney, Canada, and his colleagues Dr. Tessa Sou, showed that decadal wind pattern changes caused a shifting of Arctic sea ice, creating thinner ice in some regions and thicker ice in others. As Dr. Holloway explained, "It's a circumstance where the ice tends to leave the central Arctic and then mostly pile up against the Canadian side, before moving back into the central Arctic again." Based on this research, Dr. Holloway believes that "we have been a little bit overly stampeded into the idea that here is a terribly alarming melting taking place."

Holloway is not alone in his assessment. In 2003, German researchers Cornelia Koeberle and Ruediger Gerdes found evidence of natural "wind stress" strongly affecting variability in Arctic sea ice. "The results make connecting 'global warming' to Arctic ice thinning very difficult for two reasons," the researchers wrote. "First, the large decadal and longer-term variability masks any trend . . . Second, the wind stress strongly affects the long-term development of ice volume. A long-term change in wind stress over the Arctic, possibly by an increase in the number of atmospheric circulation states that favor ice export, would affect the ice volume in a similar manner as a temperature increase."

In addition to questionable claims about Arctic sea ice, the Arctic report includes dubious projections about the Greenland Ice Sheet. Climate models, the Arctic Council reports, "project that local warming in Greenland will exceed 3 degrees Celsius during this century." The result? "Ice sheet models project that a warming of that magnitude would initiate the long-term melting of Greenland Ice Sheet." And furthermore, "Even if climactic conditions then stabilized, an increase of this magnitude is projected to lead eventually (over centuries) to a virtually complete melting of the Greenland Ice Sheet, resulting in a global sea level rise of about seven meters."

This sounds ominous, but again, peer-reviewed literature on the subject, excluded from the Arctic report, tells a countervailing story. For example, a team of experts at Los Alamos National Laboratory recently examined Greenland's instrumental surface temperatures. Here's what they found: "Since 1940, however, the Greenland coastal stations data have undergone predominately a cooling trend. At the summit of the Greenland ice sheet, the summer average temperature has decreased at the rate of 2.2 [degrees Celsius] per decade since the beginning of the measures in 1987." We are talking about a reduction in temperature, of an increase.

Finally, the report's projections for the Greenland ice sheet, glaciers, and sea ice were based on data obtained from global climate models. Those projections assume anthropogenic warming, and proceed to show a gradual but persistent melting of glaciers and ice, leading to a dangerous rise in sea levels. However, as climate scientists have repeatedly pointed out, climate models are highly imperfect. In fact, they are notoriously inaccurate in how they simulate the complexities of the climate system.

This is especially true of Arctic climate. According to a letter signed by 11 climate scientists, sent to the Senate Commerce Committee last fall, "Arctic climate varies dramatically from one region to another, and over time in ways that cannot be accurately reproduced by climate models. The quantitative impacts of natural and anthropogenic factors remain highly uncertain, especially for a region as complex as the Arctic."

Researchers associated with the University of Alaska-Fairbanks wholeheartedly endorsed this view. They recently wrote, "Unfortunately, most global climate models are not capable of sufficiently reproducing the climatological state of the Arctic Ocean, sea ice and atmosphere . . . as [an] example, the simulated sea ice thickness is overestimated, and its overall pattern is in error, with the thickest ice located in the Siberian instead of the Canadian sector of the Arctic Ocean."

Based on these well-documented technological constraints, how can one take seriously the Arctic Council's claim that "While the models differ in their projections of some of the features of climate change, they are all in agreement that the world will warm significantly as a result of human activities and that the Arctic is likely to experience noticeable warming particularly early and intensely"?

The alarmist nature of the Arctic report is to be expected. How else can they justify its enormous costs of regulating carbon dioxide? We know the costs of this would be enormous. Wharton Econometrics Forecasting Associates—this is from the Wharton School of Economics, not from Senator JIM INHOFE—estimates that implementing Kyoto would cost the average American family of four $2,715 a year. Acknowledging the holes in the science underlying claims of catastrophic global warming would undermine their agenda. What is the agenda? Two international leaders have said it best.

Margot Walstrom, the EU's environmental commissioner, said that Kyoto is "about leveling the playing field for big business worldwide." French President Jacques Chirac said during a speech at The Hague in November 2000 that Kyoto represents "the first component of an authentic global governance." That is what they want to do, level the playing field for big business worldwide, bring the United States down to Third World status eventually, and have an authentic global governance.

Based on these and other major deficiencies, the Arctic Climate Impact Assessment hardly serves as compelling proof that greenhouse gas emissions are causing unprecedented changes in Arctic climate, or that trends point to a future marred by widespread damage to Arctic ecosystems. To be sure, the report fails to provide a thorough, balanced, comprehensive overview of the most compelling research on Arctic climate.

Instead, the so-called "synthesis report" is a biased, selective examination of climate trends in the Arctic. It completely ignores well-known, established facts. For instance, it is firmly established that Arctic temperatures in the late 1930s and early 1940s were higher than in the 1990s and that Greenland's temperatures in recent decades have undergone a cooling trend, not a warming trend. It is also well known that sea ice mass can vary by as much as 16 percent in a single year. Moreover, this report fails the test of transparency and openness and lacks virtually any documentation. It reads more like an ideological tome. Extremist groups are using it as a legal brief to sue energy producers on behalf of Arctic peoples. Hardly surprising.

Dr. George Taylor, Oregon's State climatologist, succinctly described the report when he said: "Nice graphics, but bad science."

This is what we have been hearing. The extremists have to make us believe that something catastrophic will happen. The same people who are talking about global warming today were the ones who, in the 1970s, were talking about global cooling, saying another ice age is coming. It is interesting.

I recommend reading a book by Michael Creighton called, "The State of Fear." Michael Creighton is one of the best-known authors in America. He writes fiction; these are novels, but he is a scientist and also a medical doctor. He was going to write a novel on global warming and the terrible things that could happen. Instead of that, after he did research, he wrote another novel. While it is fiction, its footnotes are all scientific. I recommend that book. As any thoughtful person who has a scientific background will tell you, the idea of global warming very well may be the greatest single hoax ever perpetrated on the American people.

With that, I made the comment before speaking that I am anxious for Members to come down and talk about our bill. We are now under debate on the motion to proceed to the consideration of the highway bill, H.R. 3. We will have a vote on that motion to proceed tomorrow morning. The vote is set for sometime around 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. I have been told there are some Members who wish to speak in morning business. I would like to inquire, if there are any real long speeches, if at some point someone comes down to speak on the highway bill, or on the motion to proceed to that bill—I would not want a commitment, but I would request they defer to them when they should arrive on the floor.

With that, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CHALLENGES IN THE SENATE

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, first of all, I am really pleased we finally have the highway bill on the floor. I appreciate the leadership of the chairman and the ranking member. This is an authorization that is, I think, 2½ years old or so. Many of us have been frustrated. I know the chairman and Senator JEFFORDS have been frustrated that we have not been able to finish this work. I hope we can finish this bill and move it through the Senate.

I wanted to comment about another couple of issues. I am worried about the way things develop here in the Senate. We treat serious things too lightly; we treat light things too seriously. We have, it seems to me, the framework for a huge brawl in the Senate over procedure, and there are so many challenges facing our country that this President and this Congress are not looking in the eye with the thought of responding directly to them. I will mention a few of them today.

Politics, regrettably, in recent times has become a sport in which one side trashes the other side, and it is either our way, or no way, or the highway. Now, we have a circumstance where we are facing serious challenges: we face fiscal policies that are off the rail, the largest budget deficits in history; we face the largest trade deficit in history, with massive numbers of American jobs being shipped overseas; we face energy problems that are causing severe pain and dislocation, and everybody knows what the price of gasoline is these days; we struggle with health care costs that are skyrocketing; and all of these issues are hard for families to deal with. And yet, despite these issues, we are confronted by the prospect of a majority that doesn't like the current rules with respect to judgeships, so they will try to break the rules of the Senate, for the first time in history, in order to change the rules because we have approved only 205 out of 215 judges sent to us by the President—again, we have approved 97 percent of all of the judges sent to us by the President for lifetime appointments on the bench. But because there are 10 that have not been approved, the President and the majority party believe they want to break the rules of the Senate in order to change the rules of the Senate.

There are so many other important things we ought to deal with. It is just Byzantine that this issue is what we are fighting about. There is a constitutional role for the Congress—particularly the Senate—with respect to judgeships. The President proposes, and we advise and consent. There is nothing in the Constitution that says we cannot use the rules of the Senate for those few judges we believe are inappropriate, those few we think represent the extreme and should not be on the bench for a lifetime.

Yet, because, again, 3 percent of the judges have not been approved, while 97 percent have, we have the prospect of what is commonly called the "nuclear" option of trying to change the Senate rules by breaking the Senate rules.

I will tell you what I think we should be working on. First, health care costs. The fact is, when most families sit around their supper table and talk about their lives, they are talking about things that relate to their everyday existence: Do I have a good job? Does it pay well? Do I have job security? Do grandpa and grandma have access to good health care? Are we sending our kids to good schools? Do we live in a safe neighborhood?

These issues affect the daily lives of the American people. Health care is not an option. When you are sick, you need health care. We have 45 million people without health insurance. We have the cost of health care skyrocketing. It is rising at a much more rapid pace than inflation. The cost of prescription drugs is going out of sight. Yet, is this Congress tackling health care issues? No, we are not. Will we allow legislation on the floor of the Senate that would provide for the safe reimportation of prescription drugs to put downward pressure on prescription drugs? No. Will we allow the Federal Government to negotiate lower prices with the pharmaceutical companies like the VA? Will we allow that negotiation for the Medicare Program? No. In fact, this Congress explicitly says you may not do that. It is unbelievable. We have these huge health care challenges, but we will not look that issue in the eye.

Our budget deficits are the largest in the history of our country. We just passed an $80 billion emergency bill last week. We knew for 2 years that is what it would cost—$5 billion, $6 billion a month in Iraq and Afghanistan—and there was zero in the President's budget request for it. So they proposed spending it on an emergency basis. Nobody talks about raising money for it; just spend it. In fact, I have raised questions about how it is being spent—and I offered an amendment saying we are being stolen blind with respect to contractors in Iraq—to wit, Halliburton. Halliburton is charging us for 42,000 meals a day served to U.S. soldiers, when it turns out they are serving only 14,000 meals a day. In my hometown, they have a word for that sort of thing.

I asked for an investigation into this kind of waste, fraud, and abuse in contracting. It is massive. But you cannot get a committee to investigate that. The Congress doesn't want to have a select committee to investigate that. So it is just throwing the money out the door in hopes that some of it will stick. In fact, there is massive waste, fraud, and abuse and everybody knows it. But nobody wants to confront it.

Education. We have a serious problem with education in this country. There are 400,000 qualified high-school kids that will not go to college this year because of financial burdens, and another 220,000 kids won't go to college because they simply cannot afford it. You have well over a half-million qualified kids who will not be going to college who should be in college. We know college tuition has risen 28 percent, after inflation, in the last 4 years. We have not considered the reauthorization of the Higher Education Act. We extended it, but that should have been reauthorized several years ago. It is set to expire. The President's budget would eliminate the Perkins student loan program, Upward Bound, and a series of other programs that I think are very important. Pell grants have largely been stagnant in terms of their level, while tuition has gone way out of sight.

We don't look energy right in the eye, although I must say there is hope here. I met with Senators DOMENICI and BINGAMAN. I am a senior member on the Energy Committee, and I hope we can bring a bill to the floor of the Senate. That is a bipartisan bill.

Go to the gas pump these days, and then read in the paper after you paid for that gas, that Exxon reported the highest profit ever reported for one quarter by any corporation. Think of that. We have a revenue-sharing system by which the American taxpayer, the American consumer shares their money with the Saudis, the Kuwaitis, the Iraqis, the Venezuelans, and others who have the oil, and then the oil companies that are the conduit for that oil are making record profits as well.

If anything demands an investigation, it is that, in my judgment. We need an energy policy that does not hold this country hostage to oil, 60 percent of which comes from off our shores.

These are a few of the issues we ought to stare straight in the eye, and those of us who are not part of the political extreme—and there are too many these days who are perverting the political process in this country. I think a shameful perversion of the political process in many ways—but I hope those of us who are part of the strong political center in America will finally convince this administration and this Congress to take a hard look at the real challenges our country faces and then begin the long, challenging work to try to address them.

This is a great place. We are lucky to be here, lucky to be alive now. There is no place like it on Earth. It is our job as caretakers of this wonderful democracy to fix problems as we see them, to address problems, not to go off on these political searches to figure out who is the worst. The question is not who is the worst in the political system of ours, the question is whose ideas are the best that can move this country forward and give our country and our children the prospect for a better and brighter future.

I have much more to say, but because of time constraints today, I will leave it at that and say I hope as these weeks unfold we will begin to address the substance of the real challenges facing our country—Federal budget deficits, trade deficits, health care, education, energy, and other issues—all of which have a significant impact on the way we live in the country and all of which will have a significant impact on America's future.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I want to make a couple comments in response to my good friend from North Dakota.

First, I encourage Members to come down to the Chamber. The current order of business is the motion to proceed to the highway bill. It is very important. It is critical. There is nothing we are dealing with right now that is more important. There is so much at stake, as I already outlined. We need to have more Members come down. Certainly, if I am talking, I will defer to them if they do come to the floor.

PARTNERSHIP FOR FISH AND WILDLIFE

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I wish to share with you an experience from last Friday. We had a field hearing in Oklahoma on the Partnership for Fish and Wildlife. This is a program not many people know about. It is one that has not ever been authorized, but it is one that has gone year to year with an appropriation, whereby a landowner who is trying to do something for the environment, trying to do something for conservation, trying to do something for habitat will put up $3 for every $1 the Fish and Wildlife Service puts up to join a partnership with them. They have come up with some incredible results, and it shows that those areas of Government where you work with Government and not have Government dictating mandates to individuals or to communities works so much better. This is a model for other programs. Consequently, I thought Earth Day was a good day for me, as chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, to introduce the bill, which I have introduced, to authorize this Partnership for Fish and Wildlife Program.

Also, there is a vacancy that has occurred with the Director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. We have a Southwest regional director by the name of H. Dale Hall. He came up for our hearing on Friday in Oklahoma. He is one of the incredible, dedicated Federal workers. It seems to me he would be an excellent Director for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. I would like to nominate this man for that purpose.

He is a wildlife biologist. Mr. Hall meets the qualifications for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Director as established by 16 United States Code 742B, being knowledgeable in the principles of fisheries and wildlife management by reason of education and experience. Mr. Hall received a bachelor of science degree in biology and chemistry from Cumberland College in Williamsburg, KY, and a master's degree in fisheries science from Louisiana State University.

He had military experience prior to joining the Service in 1978. Mr. Hall served 4 years in the U.S. Air Force beginning in 1968 with overseas assignments in Italy and the Philippines.

He has private sector experience. After returning to civilian life in 1972, Mr. Hall managed catfish farms in the Mississippi Delta region for Eden Fisheries and Farm, Inc.

He has experienced all kinds of awards. He joined the Service in 1978 and has worked in the Mississippi Valley, Houston field office, the Washington, DC, office, the Pacific regional office, the Southwest regional office, and now serves as regional director for the Southwest region. That is Oklahoma, Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico.

He was honored as one of the Service's 10 most outstanding merit pay employees for 1986. In February of 1996, he was presented with the Department of Interior's Meritorious Service Award by then-Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

I nominate this man for this position. I think he would make an excellent Director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

I again reiterate that the order of business now is on a motion to proceed to the highway bill. Cloture has already been filed. We will be voting on cloture tomorrow morning. I cannot think of one thing we are doing now that is more important than getting a highway bill. We have been operating on extensions for a long period of time. When we do extensions, we do not get any of the benefits of streamlining, we do not get any of the safety benefits, we do not get any of the school-to-work programs, or any of the other programs. These are things that need to be done.

All an extension does is extend what is currently out there. Therefore, the States and communities do not know what to expect. They do not know how to anticipate how much money is going to be there or whether any of these programs to protect the environment are going to be there, or any streamlining programs.

I cannot tell you how important it is we not operate on extensions but instead that we do pass this highway bill. We should have done it last year. Last year, we had the bill that came up. The President of the United States felt it should be a smaller number. We felt if the bill is paid for—and at that time the Finance Committee, under the chairmanship of CHUCK GRASSLEY and the ranking member, MAX BAUCUS, came up with money that could be raised for that purpose so it would not add to the deficit. Consequently, we passed a bill out of the Senate that was $318 billion for a 6-year reauthorization. That would have been fine. It went to conference and got hung up in conference. One or two people stopped us from having this bill. Now all of America is suffering for it.

This is our second run at it. We are almost out of time. The current extension expires on May 31. If we do not have a bill by May 31, then we are going to have to operate on an extension. This is something that would certainly be to the detriment of all States.

Obviously, we are all prejudiced for our own States. My State is Oklahoma. Oklahoma has very severe problems with bridges. We need to correct those problems. Border States have problems with NAFTA traffic coming up, south to north, and back down. That adds a lot.

We are trying to do something with the Borders and Corridors Program. If we do not have a bill, we will not have that program. We have a lot of things that are very significant and need to be addressed.

I encourage my fellow Members to come to the floor and talk about the motion to proceed to the highway bill, talk about the highway conditions in their States, and help us to get this bill passed.

I will say this, the bill we had last year, even though it was $318 billion over a 6-year period, we enjoyed a 76-to-21 majority in this body. I know the distinguished Presiding Officer was not here at the time, but I had an opportunity to talk to all the Members who were not here to vote last time about how they would vote, and virtually all of them are supporting this highway bill.

It is essentially the same bill. We have been working on it, my friend from Vermont, the ranking Democrat of the committee I chair, we have been working on this now for 2½, almost 3 years. We can never make up what happened. We understand that. When you get into a complicated formula and consider all the things I outlined a few minutes ago, there are going to be some people who do not want to have a bill. There are procedural steps that can be taken to stop us from having a bill. All we want is to have a vote.

Speaking of a vote, I do not have a better friend than the Senator from North Dakota. We disagree on issues politically. He made some comments to which I would like to respond. First on judges.

I do not think my State of Oklahoma is that different from other States. I do not think it is different from North Carolina. I do not think it is different from North Dakota or most States. When I walk around and visit people in my State of Oklahoma—for 19 years I have gone back on a weekly basis, so I am there talking to normal people, because there are not that many here in Washington—I find out what concerns them. They are concerned about a lot of the issues with which we deal.

Certainly, they are concerned about the war in Iraq. They are concerned about the fact that we are finally winning the war against terrorism. We are doing a good job over there. I was there a few days ago and made a point, since I am on the Senate Armed Services Committee, to spend some time in the Sunni Triangle where they are supposed to dislike us the most. I have never seen anything like it. In Fallujah, there is a guy who was the brigade commander for Saddam Hussein who hated Americans before. Then he got the title of brigade commander for the Iraqi security forces, and he started working with our Marines over there. He started loving them so much, he said when they rotated out—and this includes embedded training where his troops were training with our Marines; our Marines were helping to train these individuals—when our Marines rotated and left, he said they actually cried. He has renamed the Fallujah Iraqi security forces. They are now called the Fallujah Marines, named after our marines. That is what is happening in the Sunni Triangle.

I went to Tikrit, the hometown of Saddam Hussein. During the training process in Tikrit, outside one of the stations they were training in was a car bomb that killed 10 Iraqis and severely injured 30 more. In Tikrit, the 40 families who either lost through death or severe injuries people who are being trained to fight for the Iraqi security forces substituted other members of their families. It is incredible because they have this great love.

We got in a Blackhawk helicopter and flew all over the Sunni Triangle at less than 100 feet. It is the safest way to fly. There are terrorists out there who can hit the helicopter.

As we went across, we saw little kids come up on villages waving American flags. There are many people, I am sure, right now who send care packages to our troops over there. What these troops are doing with the care packages is taking the candy and cookies and repackaging them. Then we go 100 feet over the Sunni Triangle, when the kids are waving, and they throw the candy out to the kids. There is a love that is indescribable. We never hear that from the media back here. The media is very biased. The networks are biased, and we do not hear the success stories. Good things are happening.

I was there a few weeks before that after the January 30 election. Everyone was saying the election was not going to go off. People risked their life to vote, and they told me they could not see the ballot because of the tears in their eyes. Another one told me it occurred to her when she voted that it was not only ending a 35-year bloody regime of Saddam Hussein, but it was the first time in 7,000 years she and the Iraqi people were having a right, an opportunity for self-determination. It is a huge thing happening over there.

We all know about the weapons of mass destruction and trying to discredit the President. We knew there were terrorist training camps. We have gotten rid of them. We are seeing a new democracy emerge and totally change the Middle East. It has been successful.

I only say that because there are a lot of important things going on, and one is, of course, dealing with the current deficit. We are going to have deficits. My good friend from North Dakota was critical of the deficit that is taking place right now. I think it has been pretty well established—in fact, even the Democrats have agreed—that this recession actually started in March of 2000, which was under the Clinton administration. When you go into recession, for every 1-percent decrease in economic activity, that translates to $46 billion in revenues.

We had the revenue going down at the same time we had 9/11. We are in a war and we cannot come out of a deficit while we are in a war. We had a reduction in the military. I do not criticize the Clinton administration for what happened to the military after the first gulf war, but when the military is downsized, some of our modernization programs are stopped and it is expensive.

Right now I do not know how many American people realize that we are actually sending our kids out to battle with equipment that is not as good as our potential adversaries. Our best artillery piece, for example, is the Paladin. The Paladin is World War II technology. After each shot, you have to get out and swab the breach, like you used to have to do during World War II. Yet there are five countries right now, including South Africa, that are making a better non-line-of-sight cannon than our Paladin. Our kids do not have as good equipment, and that is because our modernization program came to somewhat of a screeching halt.

I was very proud of GEN John Jumper back in I think it was 1998 when out of his frustration he was trying to say we have to do something about our modernization programs; that our best strike vehicle is currently the F-15 and the F-16 and the Russians are making the SU-30s and 31s, as they were at the time, and selling them to potential adversaries, and they are better than our F-15s and F-16s. When we have our F-22s online, and our Joint Strike Fighter, we will change that, but we have to progressively do this, and it is expensive. That is why we will continue to have deficits for a while until we get this thing done.

In all fairness, we have to realize that, No. 1, the administration inherited a deficit; No. 2, we are at war; and, No. 3, we are rebuilding a military operation.

Getting back to the judges, as I said, I do not think Oklahoma is a lot different from other States. When I go down the street and I talk to people, they are much more concerned about what is happening with the judicial decisions and liberal judges trying to make law from the benches. They are concerned about school prayer, gay marriage, and the Pledge of Allegiance with "one Nation under God" coming out. These things bother people back in Oklahoma. Maybe they do not bother people in other States but they do in Oklahoma. All we want are circuit judges to be nominated and then given a simple majority vote on the floor, so that we can determine whether that nomination by the President can be confirmed.

I do appreciate what the Senator from North Dakota was saying. However, I have to say to my knowledge never in the history—sometimes people say, well, how about Judge Bork back several years ago? That was a different situation altogether. Never in history has there been a filibuster of circuit judge nominees. It should not be 60 people to confirm a judge; it should be 51 people. All we want is a vote. We do not care how it comes out. That is going to be the will of the Senate, but the Constitution specifically says "Advice and Consent of the Senate." That is a majority, and that is all we really want.

I know there are liberals who have a liberal agenda who do not want to have conservatives or constructionists confirmed on the various circuit courts and Federal benches, and ultimately the U.S. Supreme Court. But I can assure my colleagues that the vast majority of people in Oklahoma do.

Lastly, I do agree with the Senator from North Dakota when he talked about the need for an energy policy. I became aware of this and concerned with this way back in the early 1980s when Ronald Reagan was President of the United States. I believed that he should have had an energy policy for America. Quite frankly, even though he was my favorite guy in contemporary history, he did not do it. There were so many other things facing his two terms that he was not able to come up with an energy policy.

I can remember when Secretary Hodel and I would go around the country, we would make speeches about how our dependence on foreign countries for our ability to fight a war for our energy supply was not an energy issue, it was a national security issue. We tried to convince people of that, and we were not successful.

Then, of course, along came other administrations and they did not do it, either. I thought certainly the first Bush administration, since he had an oil background. would be more concerned about it. But this President does. He says we should have a comprehensive energy policy for America, and one of the cornerstones should be a limit as to how much we should be dependent upon foreign countries for our energy supply—or I will put it a different way, for our ability to fight a war.

So here we have a situation where back when I started making speeches about our dependency on foreign countries for our oil was when we were dependent for about 34 percent. Now it is up to 65 percent. We are dependent upon foreign countries for our ability to fight a war twice as much as we were back in the 1980s. So it is going in the wrong direction.

What we need is an energy bill. I was very glad to see the vote on ANWR. It is kind of interesting, the Arctic National Wildlife, that tiny little part of the wildlife reservation that people are concerned about, all of the Natives in Alaska want it, all the Alaskans want it, the House wants it up in Alaska, the Senate wants it, everybody else wants it, but we refused to give it to them to allow them to explore and produce on ANWR. Now they can do that.

A comprehensive energy bill should have an oil and a gas component to it. It should have fossil fuels, coal, nuclear energy, and renewable energy. If we can have that, we can have an energy bill. I think we are going to have one. I am particularly concerned about it because I chair the Environment and Public Works Committee and about one-third of the Energy bill is in the jurisdiction of my committee. We are going to do what we can to work with the distinguished Senator from New Mexico, Mr. DOMENICI, to try to make that happen.

I encourage Members to come to the floor, and in the event they do I would certainly relinquish the floor to anyone who wants to talk about the highway bill.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KERRY. What is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to proceed to the highway bill.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent I be permitted to speak as in morning business for a period not to exceed 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DEPENDENCY ON FOREIGN OIL

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, this morning, Americans braced themselves for another week of devastating news about the gas pump. This morning, Americans learned again of the record increases in the price of oil in America. When they turn on the news tonight, they are not going to learn of anything that has been done by this Congress or the administration in the past months or even past years. They are not going to see Washington taking the necessary steps to end our dependency on foreign oil. Instead, people will see President Bush meeting with Saudi Crown Prince Abdullah, a stark reminder of our dangerous dependence on foreign oil and how much that dependence threatens our economy as well as our national security.

The President offers strong words against nations that sponsor terror, but for those in control of 65 percent of the world's oil supply, those words are compromised from the get-go. That is wrong, but it is fundamentally what happens when the administration is committed to an energy future that is dependent on oil, oil, and more oil, at all costs, even if that cost is our national security.

The fact is, we are more dependent on foreign oil today than ever before. Despite the sharp rhetoric of the 1970s and the initial effort to try to be less dependent on oil, it has consistently increased. This dependence slows our economy, harms our environment, dilutes our national security, and it burdens Americans with the high gas prices they face today. Sadly, the President's energy bill, which we are going to soon debate in the Senate, fundamentally ignores these problems, and it does nothing to lower gas prices.

In the last days, the administration has conceded "changes to production, consumption, imports and prices are negligible under the plan submitted to the Congress." Frankly, Washington has danced around this statement for a year now. But last week, President Bush himself acknowledged the truth. He said:

> [The] energy bill wouldn't change the price at the pump today. I know that and you know that.

So if we all know that, why pass this Energy bill along in its current form when real solutions are staring us in the face? Americans are paying an average of $2.28 a gallon at the pump. That is up 6 cents in the last week, over 50 percent in the last year, and up a staggering 56 percent since 2001. The President's so-called energy plan does nothing to reduce our dependency on foreign oil. The President's own economists found oil imports will actually increase 85 percent by 2025 under a proposal such as the one we see in the Congress. Less than 5 percent of the incentives in this bill are devoted to developing alternative sources of energy. That is 5 percent for the future, 95 percent for the status quo.

In 2002, when the Senate passed an energy bill with a bipartisan vote of 88 to 11, the bill provided for a balanced tax package: 50 percent of the benefits to oil and gas and 50 percent to renewables. By abandoning that balanced, forward-looking approach, this bill sells out our Nation's dream of an energy independent future.

Why are we taking the time in the Senate and the House to discuss an energy bill that does not take the steps available to begin to free us from our dependency? The failure to aggressively address the dependency will condemn a generation of Americans to higher gas prices, and the problem will only get worse. The era when the United States, Japan, and Europe comprised the bulk of the world's demand for oil is long over. Oil consumption from developing Asian nations is going to more than double in the next 25 years, from 15 million to 32 million barrels a day. Chinese consumption will grow from 5 million to nearly 13 million per day. India's consumption will rise from 2 to more than 5 million barrels per day.

The escalating demand for foreign oil is simply unsustainable. Every American who has taken an economics class, who owns a small business, or who balances the family checkbook understands that when demand for the product goes up and supply of that product is limited, prices are going to go through the roof. If you do not own your own product, that is great, but if you do, you are in trouble. Obviously, we do not. The fact is that the United States only has 3 percent of the world's oil reserves. So no matter what happens, we are going to remain dependent if fossil fuel and oil are going to remain the staple of our transportation, heating, and other product sources in the United States.

In reality, international demand for oil is going up, and prices are going up as that demand goes up. There is little we can do to stop it unless we change the fundamentals on which we are currently producing and providing for the various oil needs of our Nation. We cannot drill our way out of this problem under any scenario whatever. Whether we drill in Alaska or even the oil in the deep water of the gulf, we cannot drill our way out of it.

America needs to move forward in the technology race. We need to invent our way out of it. The spectacle of an American President literally reduced to asking—some would describe it as begging—another country to open the spigots and try to provide some momentary relief is really its own statement about where we find ourselves today. The fact is, what we ought to be doing is accelerating research and development in our country.

Today's meeting with the Saudis really underscores what is wrong with the energy policy of our country. The danger of maintaining our dependence on foreign oil is so obvious that Americans cannot help but question the actions of this administration. The actions do not meet their words. The President has said the right things. Last week, he said:

> With oil at more than $50 a barrel . . . energy companies do not need taxpayer funded incentives.

So he said the right thing. But the facts tell a different story. The Energy bill provides 95 percent of the tax benefits to oil and gas companies, with over $8 billion directly going to the oil and gas companies of the country. Only 5 percent—less than even in the bill we passed 2 years ago in the Senate, or 3 years ago—is going to go to those things that would actually provide Americans with relief. At a time when oil and gas prices are at historic highs, our energy policy ought to be aimed at investing in new and renewable sources of energy, not lining the pockets of the special interests.

On energy, the administration has not been leveling with the American people. I think the President and Congress continue to miss an extraordinary opportunity. Most public policy forces us to make difficult tradeoffs: foreign versus domestic, urban versus rural, consumer versus business. But energy policy does not require us to do that. Other than the big oil companies, everyone benefits from reducing our dependence on foreign oil. Energy policy provides us with a unique opportunity to address a huge group of challenges all at the same time.

If we lead the world in investing in new energy technologies, we create thousands of high-paying jobs right here in America. If we learn to tap clean energy sources, we preserve a clean environment for our families and future generations. We reduce mercury and acid rain. If we remove the burden of high gas prices, American consumers will have more cash in their pockets to spend on consumption products or on savings or on college or other things. That will all give our economy the boost it needs. Most importantly, if we end our dependence on foreign oil, we strengthen our national security.

The Energy bill before the Congress accomplishes none of these goals. In fact, it weakens all of them. Let me focus on one of those things that it weakens, our national security. Increased American energy dependence further entangles our Nation in unstable regions of the world and forces us even to compromise our values. In exchange for oil, we transfer wealth to people who have done us harm and would do us harm in the future.

This is, obviously, as bad for our troops and for those serving abroad as it is for people who experience the high gas prices here. We risk being drawn into dangerous conflicts because of our dependency in a particular region. We also see an already overburdened military that has to bear the consequence of that.

In recent years, U.S. forces have had to help protect the Cano Limon pipeline in Colombia. Our military had to train indigenous forces to protect the pipeline in Georgia. We plan to spend $100 million on a special network of police officers and special forces units to guard oil facilities around the Caspian Sea and to continue to search for bases in Africa so we can protect all of the facilities there. Our Navy patrolled tanker routes in the Indian Ocean, South China Sea, and the Western Pacific.

The reality is, we have to protect oil because that is what protects our way of life today. This is a serious issue, with real consequences, because of the unstable nature of conflict-ridden, oil-producing areas which challenge our security.

In the spring of 2004, insurgents attacked an Iraqi oil platform. There was violence against oil workers in Nigeria. The result was to press global oil output and record-high gasoline prices. We were helpless to stop it. I do not think any American wants to be helpless where national security is concerned.

Our dependence on foreign oil creates just the sort of alliances that George Washington warned against in 1796. These alliances with foreign suppliers leave us more vulnerable, and they can crumble the foundations of our economic and national security.

The most dangerous aspect of this is that we are not alone in this dependency. I mentioned it earlier: International demand for oil is rising at an alarming rate. Another word for "demand" is "competition." Another word for "competition" is "race." At this rate, the great powers of the world may resume the race to secure the remaining energy reserves. That is an alarming scenario, but it is exactly the course we find ourselves on. With strong leadership, we can avoid it. But we cannot do it without a balanced energy plan that ends our dependence on foreign oil.

If anyone needs an example of how energy dependence can shortchange national security, look no further than the war on terror itself. If we assume oil miraculously drops back to $30 a barrel—no one assumes that, but if you did—over the next 25 years, the United States will send over 3 trillion American dollars out of the country, much of it to regimes that do not share our values, and even, in many cases, our goals.

It is bad enough to think that those $3 trillion are not going to go directly into the American economy, that they are going to go to other countries. It is worse to consider the impact on our volatile relationship with regimes such as the House of Saud, fragile as it finds itself increasingly today.

Our dependence on Saudi oil is a bad bargain for the war on terror. In the past, Hamas received almost half of its funding from Saudi Arabia. We know al-Qaida has relied on prominent Saudi Arabians for financing, and Saudi Arabia sponsors clerics who still, after all the rhetoric, promote the ideology of terror.

We all know what is going to happen today. The President is going to ask Prince Abdullah to raise production. But we have to be honest with the American people and acknowledge it is a short-term fix at best, and it is one that carries its risks.

In the year 2000, Governor Bush said he would "jawbone OPEC" to "open the spigots." But 5 years later, either he has not jawboned enough or it is not important. It is time the administration learned the only long-term solution to America's energy crisis and to our security itself is to end our dependence on foreign oil.

National security is the most inexcusable casualty of our energy policy. But again, it is not the only one. Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan has said:

> Markets for oil and natural gas have been subject to a degree of strain over the past year not experienced for a generation.

I might say, respectfully, it may not have been experienced for a generation, but it was entirely predictable that this would come around again, particularly when you look at the development rates of China, India, and other Asian and South Asian countries.

As the chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers said:

> High energy prices are now a drag on our economy.

That is the Republican administration speaking for itself.

This administration's energy policy works for Saudi Arabia, it works for the countries that get those trillions of dollars, it works for big oil and gas companies—all of which have record profits. I think one of the top companies had a 213-percent increase in profits, others 146 percent, others in the double digits. Show me the American family whose income went up commensurately. Show me most American businesses that are struggling with health care costs and now have increased costs of transportation. The American trucking industry has billions of dollars, perhaps $20 billion paid out because of the rise in the cost of fuel.

So everyone is losing: consumers, small businesses, the environment, our troops, our security—everyone but the oil and gas companies.

We need an energy policy that works for America and works for the 21st century. We have successfully moved from different sources of fuel in our history. We went from wood to coal. We went from coal to oil.

We went from oil to a mix of oil and gas and coal and nuclear and hydroelectric, and now we are talking about wind power and other sources. We have the capacity to have various kinds of additives and even biodiesel and other forms, but we are not moving rapidly to secure the marketplace for those alternatives.

It is time now for America to make its next transition in fuel, to move to a mix of solar and wind and biomass and fuel cells and clean coal and other wonders of American ingenuity. We have huge reserves of coal. But despite all the rhetoric, the administration hasn't even adequately funded the clean coal technology program. We need to tap America's strength. The new president of MIT wrote a couple of articles the other day pointing out how America is slipping backwards in technology. All you have to do is pick up any of the analyses on competitiveness in technology in America today. America is producing fewer engineers, fewer scientists. Fewer kids in college are going into science and the physical sciences. Less money is being put into the R&D to move us into that competitive edge.

That competitive edge is what built the economy of the 1990s. It is what helped us to be able to create the high value-added jobs so we moved to an unemployment rate that was the lowest in the modern history of our Nation, and we paid down debt. We invested in the long-term future of our country. We have seen a complete reversal of that in the last 4½ years.

I hope this Congress will do what it ought to do, not start pitting people against each other according to definitions of faith, but come here with faith in America and American ingenuity and understand that we need to tap America's strength. We need to tap our markets, our capacity for invention, innovation, and our values. That is the way we will control our own destiny. We need to embrace and foster a revolution toward an energy world that benefits our environment, our economy and, most importantly, our security.

The President's energy plan will bring us more of the same—the status quo, a more dangerous future of energy dependence and high prices. It is time we came together with a real energy policy that works for the American people and puts Americans back in charge of their future and liberates our children from the stranglehold of fossil fuel.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, the regular order is the cloture motion on the motion to proceed to the highway bill. This is one we are very much concerned about. I have said several times I am hoping Members will come to the floor and speak on the highway bill. I know the distinguished Senator from Illinois wants to be heard right now. Let me only make one comment.

Earlier on I talked a little bit about the Energy bill. The distinguished junior Senator from Massachusetts started off with a quote by the President that was not quite complete. What the President said was the Energy bill would have no immediate impact on gas prices but long-term gas prices will be affected by an energy bill. I made that very clear a few minutes ago when I talked about the fact we have been trying to get an energy bill since the 1980s.

I don't say this in a partisan way because we tried to get an energy bill during the Reagan administration and the Carter administration before that, the first Bush administration, and the Clinton administration. We were unable to do it. It was not until this President came along and offered an energy bill or an energy policy for America. It is long in waiting. Obviously, supply and demand tells us that portion of energy that is generated by oil and gas is going to be cheaper if we are able to do it locally and do it in this country without depending upon foreign sources of oil.

We know what happened in OPEC days back in the 1970s. We know we can be held hostage again. It is a very serious problem. But an energy bill should include all forms of energy. I agree with the Senator from Massachusetts, we should be concentrating also on technology, on renewables. Certainly I disagree with the Senator from Massachusetts when he says he wants clean coal technology and he wants to be able to utilize coal. It was the Democrats in the committee I chair who killed the Clear Skies—didn't kill it, but delayed it—Initiative of the President which would have the most dramatic reduction on pollutants, on NO$_x$, SO$_x$, and mercury pollution than any President has ever advocated in the history of America, a 70-percent reduction. To do this we had to continue to have clean coal technology. That is part of the bill, as are oil and gas and nuclear and renewables.

We made an effort to do that and were unable to do it on a partisan line. If the Senator from Massachusetts is interested in having a bipartisan approach to the use of clean coal technology and to expand the use of coal, we need to look at all of the above, all of the forms of energy. I will join him in that program.

The Senator from Illinois wants to be recognized as in morning business. Since I do want to get back to the highway bill, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Illinois be recognized for 30 minutes as in morning business and then immediately following his 30 minutes, I be recognized for 30 minutes as in morning business, and then we would go back to the regular order. I encourage Members who are interested in the motion to proceed to the highway bill to come to the floor, to be heard, and so we can recognize them for that purpose.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. If I overheard the request, the Senator from Oklahoma suggested 30 minutes in morning business.

Mr. INHOFE. Yes, for the Senator from Illinois, unless he desires more.

Mr. DURBIN. That should be adequate. I thank the Senator.

JUDICIAL NOMINEES

Mr. President, I come to the floor with some feelings of disappointment. I had hoped that on reflection, Majority Leader FRIST would change his mind about taking part in a rally yesterday in Kentucky with groups that claim anyone who opposes President Bush's judicial nominees is opposed to "people of faith." The organizers of that rally, the Family Research Council, called their rally "Justice Sunday." I agree with Bob Edgar, general secretary of the National Council of Churches. A better name would have been "Just Us Sunday."

This Republican religious group is trying to redefine faith to fit its own narrow definition. What is their test? Does their definition of faith turn to the Bible? You know the biblical test, how do you treat the least of your brethren. No, the litmus test of faith for this group is as follows: Do you agree that a President—namely President Bush—ought to be able to ignore the Constitution, the rules of the Senate, and 200 years of Senate tradition to appoint people to the Federal bench for lifetime appointments even if those nominees hold extreme political views outside the mainstream of America?

That is their test of faith. If you say yes, then you are a person of faith. If you say no, they would brand you as anti-God and antifamily.

The depth we have reached in this political debate that the majority leader of the Senate would add his name and his words to a rally which is so divisive, which tries to make a constitutional issue a religious issue. I had hoped Senator FRIST would decide not to take part in it. I hoped he would have used his leadership position to discourage those who are using this religious McCarthyism that seems to be gripping our political system now that the Republicans are in control of the House and the Senate. Unfortunately, he did not.

He sent a taped message which contained within it, I will concede, some conciliatory words warning those involved not to go too far, as Senator LINDSEY GRAHAM did yesterday on a television show which I shared. But unfortunately, I am sure those who were involved with the Family Research Council were heartened by the appearance of Senator FRIST.

Now we are learning that placing your own candidates in lifetime Federal judgeships is not enough for this group.

They are also plotting to rid the bench of Federal judges they don't like. The Los Angeles Times ran a story last Friday about a private conference of evangelical leaders in Washington, attended by Senator FRIST and House Majority Leader TOM DELAY, whose name appears constantly in this national debate. They had an audiotape of the conference. The story quotes two of the organizers of yesterday's rally in Kentucky, talking about working with congressional Republicans on plans to get rid of the Federal courts they don't like. This is a quote from Tony Perkins, one of the lead spokesmen yesterday for the Family Research Council. He said this at this Washington, DC, conference with TOM DELAY and BILL FRIST:

> There's more than one way to skin a cat, and there's more than one way to take a black robe off the bench.

According to the Times article:

> Mr. Perkins said he had attended a meeting with congressional leaders a week earlier where the strategy of stripping funding from certain courts was "prominently" discussed. "What they're thinking of is not only the fact of just making these courts go away and recreating them the next day, but also defunding them," Mr. Perkins said.

The story reports Mr. Dobson, a reverend also involved with this effort, as saying:

> Very few people know this, that the Congress can simply disenfranchise a court. They don't have to fire anybody or impeach them or go through that battle. All they have to say is the Ninth Circuit doesn't exist anymore, and it is gone.

Mr. Perkins said these plans to remake America's courts are "on the radar screen, especially of conservatives here in Congress."

We have valued, since the creation of this great Nation, our independent and balanced judiciary. I am certain that members of the judiciary are angered at times with positions taken and things said by those in the executive and legislative branches. It works both ways. Yet we understand the nature of our checks and balances, the nature of three separate branches of government is unique to America and has given us the strength to survive in this democracy for over 200 years.

The strategy of TOM DELAY, Senator FRIST, and groups like the Family Research Council challenge this premise of our constitutional democracy. I would like to address the questions raised about what might happen if the Republicans go forward with the so-called nuclear option. First, let me tell you that the phrase "nuclear option" was not conceived by a group of Democrats in a back room. As I understand it, Senator TRENT LOTT, a leading Republican, called this approach a nuclear option, understanding, as he did, that it is an assault on some of the most fundamental principles of the Constitution and the Senate. It was, in fact, nuclear war and the use of a nuclear weapon from a procedural point of view. It assaulted one of the most basic principles of America, the principle of checks and balances.

Look at the political landscape in America today. Republicans control the White House, the House, the Senate, and the Supreme Court. Not in 60 years has so much power been vested in one party. But from the point of view of many of their special interest groups, it is not enough; they want more. They don't just want to govern in America; they want to rule. That means they need and want powers beyond those given to a political party under our Constitution.

Think about why we have a Senate. It was part of the Great Compromise. Thirteen colonies came together, deciding whether they could work together as one government, and the smaller colonies said we don't have a chance. If you count numbers, the more populous colonies will always win the debate. So the Great Compromise said the House of Representatives will have more people, with more representatives in the more populous States, so they will have more votes. But the Senate is different. Every State gets two Senators. The rules of the Senate were written so, even within the Senate, when one Senator objected to a major change in law, the Senate rules respected that minority Senator. In fact, it wasn't until right after World War I that there was a way to even stop what was known as a filibuster. If you saw "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," you saw Jimmy Stewart, that new idealistic Senator, take to the floor arguing for something he believed in until he ran out of breath and collapsed. Well, that is the filibuster. The way you can stop it is with a certain number of votes. Beginning in the 20th century, that number of votes is 60. It recognizes that this unique Chamber in America's Government will always recognize the rights of the minority.

We have built on that principle, and that is why the filibuster was created. Sadly, the Republican majority today wants to break the rules of the Senate and change the filibuster rule. They want to end the checks and balances that have been part of this institution since the Constitution was written. For what? So President Bush can have every judicial nominee he proposes to Congress, without debate, without dissention, and it would not be subject to a filibuster.

I think the filibuster is one of the most basic tenets of our checks-and-balances system. It prevents a tyranny of the majority and encourages compromise and moderation. Think about it; if it takes 60 votes, you need to compromise. If it takes 60 votes, neither side has that, so you need bipartisanship. It works every single day on legislation and on nominees.

What about the President's track record when it comes to judges? Consider this: Since President Bush came to office, he sent 215 names of judicial nominees to the floor of the Senate; 205 have been approved. Only 10 have not been approved. More than 95 percent of the President's nominees have been approved by the Senate but, sadly, the point of view of the White House is that it is not enough. They want them all. They are willing to assault the Constitution and change the Senate rules. With an approval rate of 95 percent, this is not a crisis; it is a manufactured political crisis.

Republicans claim it is unconstitutional to filibuster. They are wrong. The Constitution makes it clear that the rules of the Senate are the decision of the Senate. Here is what article I, section 5 of the Constitution specifically states:

> Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings. . . .

That means the House and the Senate may determine the rules of its proceedings. From the beginning, the Senate has allowed filibusters. In 1789, the first Senate filibustered a bill about moving the capitol from New York City to Washington. But these Republicans, under President Bush and Vice President CHENEY, want to change that time-honored rule. They claim the use of the filibuster to block judicial nominees has never happened, that it is unprecedented. That is what you hear from them. They are wrong.

Before George W. Bush became President, 11 judicial nominations needed 60 or more votes—cloture—to end a filibuster.

On two other judicial nominations—one in 1986 and one in 1994—cloture was filed in order to end filibusters, but it was later withdrawn. Of those 11 nominations on which cloture was needed to end a filibuster, 4 occurred during the Clinton administration.

Let me just point to one. March 8, 2000, the nomination of Richard Paez to be a judge of the Ninth Circuit. Fourteen Republican Senators voted on the Senate floor to filibuster Judge Paez's nomination. Look at the list of the 14 Senators, and do you know what name you will find? Senator BILL FRIST. He is now the majority leader, and he claims this never happened in the history of the Senate. He, in fact, voted on the floor of the Senate for a filibuster against Richard Paez, a Clinton nominee to the Ninth Circuit. For the record, it was vote No. 37, 106th Congress, second session, March 8, 2000.

In addition to the 4 Clinton judicial nominees who were filibustered, 60 additional Clinton nominees never received a hearing. It was a pocket filibuster. What is unprecedented is what Republicans are threatening now, to fundamentally change the rules and traditions of the Senate and the constitutional principle of checks and balances. To argue that no judicial nominee will ever need more than 51 votes—7 times since 1949, the Senate has faced this question: Can a simple majority change the cloture rule? Every single time, the answer has been no, whether it was Democrats in the majority or Republicans in the majority.

In 1953, Minority Leader Lyndon Johnson, the "master of the Senate," as he was dubbed, a man who knew something about finding and using power wherever he could legitimately find it, worked with Majority Leader Taft to protect the Senate from the nuclear option of his day, when a single Democratic Senator threatened to use it.

Time and again, there have been threats to change this filibuster, and it has never happened. There has been ample opportunity to do that.

One Senator who was involved in that was Senator Fritz Mondale of Minnesota. He led a 1975 effort to change the cloture rule. Twenty-seven years later, in September 2002, an older and wiser Fritz Mondale came back to the Senate to talk about his years as part of the Leader's Lecture Series.

He admitted he made a mistake to try to push through a nuclear option. I want to read part of what he said. This is what Fritz Mondale said on reflection:

> When I came to the Senate, I thought a simple majority should be enough to end debate. I had seen the cloture rule abused in the past, especially on civil rights. The old rules permitted virtually endless talk. In recent years, many Senators had developed a postcloture strategy where, even after a successful cloture vote, they could still carry on forever, reading and amending the Journal, reading and amending the Chaplain's prayer—as we did for several days—filing hundreds of amendments with no end in sight.

Listen to what Fritz Mondale said:

> It had to be changed, and it was, to what is now called the Byrd rule. But to end a filibuster still requires 60 votes, and I believe that is about right.
> It is a balancing act. You need to be able to close off debate, but you also need to give an individual Senator the power to stop everything in the country and to rip open an issue in a way that no other institution in America can. It can't happen in the House. Their rules of debate are very different. It can't happen in news conferences. It can't happen on talk shows. That is entertainment, not debate. Only the Senate can stop the Nation in its tracks, and it is the only body in the world that allows it.

To claim, as nuclear option supporters do, that the 1975 effort proves the constitutionality of their plan is simply wrong. It is a misrepresentation of the facts. They argue we are simply talking about judicial nominees. Yet we know from a Congressional Research Service analysis of this issue that if they went forward with the nuclear option on judicial nominees, nominees who are being appointed to the bench for a lifetime, more could follow from that.

I still hope we can avoid this constitutional confrontation, this crisis. I hope the destruction that will be brought to the Senate can be avoided. I hope we can have a positive view toward the Senate's future. But let me say this: If the Republican majority in the Senate exercises the nuclear option, breaks the rules of the Senate for the first time to change the rules, to eliminate the filibuster on judicial nominees, to attack the principle of checks and balances, the constitutional principle of our Government, then I think the response from the Democratic side can easily be described as this: If the Republicans are going to break the rules, the Democrats are going to play by the rules. Let me tell you what I mean.

We believe we must defend the Senate and the Constitution. We will not allow one party to eliminate an essential part of checks and balances. The Senate operates according to customs. The minority party defers to the majority party regarding what bills come to the floor, and other questions. It is a system that requires trust and cooperation every day.

If Republicans choose to use the nuclear option, they are choosing to assault that trust and cooperation. We can no longer routinely give our unanimous consent to whatever procedural request the majority leader makes. Instead, we will use the existing rules and precedents to have the Senate focus on the real crises facing America's families and businesses. Instead of granting deference to the Republican majority to set the agenda on the Senate floor, Democrats will use the existing rules and the precedents of the Senate to focus on issues such as health care, energy, education, minimum wage, making certain we take care of our veterans and soldiers.

We have already placed a number of important bills on the Senate calendar, any of which can be brought up at once if the Republicans trigger the nuclear option. These bills address real priorities and challenges we face: funding our schools, bringing down the price of gasoline at the pump, finding a way to provide health insurance and health care for Americans, veterans benefits, and imposing fiscal discipline with Government spending.

Let me make it clear. We are not going to set out to close down the Senate or to close down the Government. Senator REID, our Democratic leader, and all the Members of the Senate feel as I do, that shutting down the Government was the hapless tactic of the Gingrich revolution. It was a terrible idea. Rush Limbaugh was the only American applauding it every day, but the American people knew better. They want our Government to continue. They want Government services that are essential not to be in danger. So we are prepared to use the Senate rules to make certain that the defense of our Nation and the defense of our Armed Forces will be paramount, that passing key appropriations bills will occur, the Government will go about its business.

But when it comes to the rest of the debate in the Senate, when it comes to the agenda of legislative issues, we believe we can and will use the rules, if the nuclear option is exercised, to make certain that this debate is broadened—broadened beyond the special interest debates of K Street, the lobbyists who sit around the corridors out here begging for their bills to be called. We will expand this to include a debate over issues American families are begging us to consider, such as the cost of health insurance, help in putting children through college, finding a way for us to deal with the energy crisis in a responsible way that will conserve energy and bring about more fuel efficiency, in addition to environmentally responsible exploration for new energy sources.

Let's talk about gasoline for a minute. Americans are paying nearly 50 cents a gallon more for gas today than they were a year ago. Gas prices have surged an average of 19 cents per gallon in the last 3 weeks. What is the Republican solution? Many times it is more of the same. Keep increasing America's dependence on increasingly expensive oil from increasingly volatile parts of the world.

If Republicans are insisting on changing the rules of the Senate, Democrats will use the opportunity to press for an end to price gouging at the pumps today. We will also push for real long-term solutions, including conservation and new sources of alternative energy that will make America more secure in the future.

Think of it, 45 million Americans in our country, 1 in 7 have no health insurance. Tens of thousands more are underinsured. Rising health costs are eating up every penny of the profits at many companies. Did you read the report in the paper in the business section last week? General Motors lost $1 billion in the last quarter. When they were asked why they were losing money if they were still selling cars, they said: With every car we sell is $1,500 in health insurance costs and $500 in pension costs. So before we can compete with the foreign manufacturers, we have to pay for the health insurance and the pension costs.

What we are saying is this ought to be part of a national debate. There has not been a single suggestion on the floor of the Senate from the Republican leadership that they are ready to even discuss health care, nor from the White House.

If we move beyond the nuclear option, we on the Democratic side feel this debate has to take place, and we will move proactively to put this on the calendar for debate during this session of the Senate.

In recent months, we found the new prescription drug benefit under Medicare will cost hundreds of billions of dollars more than first estimated. Now this week a new report warns the drug benefit will not provide adequate coverage for seniors with cancer and other chronic illnesses, and leave them with huge personal prescription drug bills. If the Republicans in the Senate use the nuclear option to try to change the rules of the Senate, Democrats will use whatever rules we can, whatever leverage we can find to fix the Medicare prescription drug bill.

Millions of young people across America are going to graduate from high school next month. Many are off applying to colleges, fingers crossed they will get into that great school. But there is a fear in every family—at least in most families—that some of the sons and daughters who are accepted at the best schools will not be able to go because the families cannot afford it. If the Republicans insist on using the nuclear option, the Democrats will push to bring to the floor Senate measures to make college more affordable for families across America.

We will look for ways to bring to the floor a bill to fund properly VA health facilities and end the deficits that are forcing Americans all across America to wait months to see a doctor.

We do not have to manufacture crises. There are real, urgent problems with which this Senate ought to be dealing. If the Republicans are interested in governing, they will join the Democrats in addressing these issues. If they are more concerned about political gains, they will object. Democrats will not break the rules and we will not stand by idly if others try to destroy the rules of the Senate for temporary political advantage. We will use the rules, we will live by the rules, we will follow the rules at every opportunity to protect the Constitution and do the people's business.

Senators can expect if the nuclear option is called and passes we will spend more time at our desks, more time in session, more time on the floor, more time in Washington. The old complaint about 1,000-page bills coming to the Senate never having been read, they will be read. The complaint that amendments come to the floor Senators have not had a chance to read, they will be read. The complaint about speaking to an empty Chamber with few Senators around, that may change. There will be Senators on the floor, part of a debate over amendments that are important to this country.

I sincerely hope the Republican majority will think twice. Senator McCAIN said, and I think rightly, you never know what the next election might bring. You might find yourself in a minority status, and it is important for us to understand that as Senators have come and gone, almost 1,900 now in the history of the United States, as issues have come and gone, as Congresses have come and gone, the traditions and rules of the Senate have endured. The Constitution which guides this Chamber, which brings us to the floor today and every day, the Constitution we have all sworn to uphold and defend is worth fighting for.

When a White House with any President of either party tries to extend their power at the expense of the Constitution, historically the Senate has said no.

This time, unfortunately, this President is demanding more power than any President in the history of the United States when it comes to judicial nominees. This President is demanding powers that have never been exercised under this Constitution. Sadly, his party, the proud Republican Party, is not willing to say no. They should. In the past, Franklin Roosevelt's Democratic Party said no to him when he overextended. Thomas Jefferson's party said no to him when he tried to extend his Presidential power. They understood that the Constitution is more important than the power of any President.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, right now, the regular order is the motion to proceed to the highway bill. It is one of the most significant bills we will be addressing this year. It is one that we are very hopeful will pass. Last year, the highway bill passed with a vote of 76 to 21. Having received that very strong majority, we believe that this bill is so much like it that we should be able to do the same thing.

I understand that tomorrow morning at 11:45 there will be a vote. Again, as I have said since 2 this afternoon, I encourage Members to come to the floor to be heard on the motion to proceed to the highway bill, and I am hoping that will happen. I will only make a couple of comments.

I do not want to sound redundant, but I will respond to the distinguished Senator from Illinois. A couple of hours ago I commented that the people from Oklahoma maybe are different from the rest of the country. When I go down the street, people are concerned about the decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court. They are concerned about liberal judges legislating from the bench, and this President has been concerned about that. I am talking about things like school prayer, gay marriages, and "one nation under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance. These things are very important. These things are probably important to people all over the country.

It can be talked about hour after hour. Threats can be made about what one would do, but it is not a nuclear option, it is a constitutional option. This has been true for 214 years now, where there has not been a filibustering of circuit court judges. This is something that should not require a supermajority of 60 votes. If there is one thing my people in Oklahoma want changed, it is to be able to select judges who will interpret the Constitution and not use the bench for legislation purposes.

As far as the Energy bill is concerned, I do agree with the Senator from Illinois that we need to do something about our dependence on foreign oils for our energy supply. It is going to be absolutely necessary to have this Energy bill, and I believe we will have it. We need to address drilling. We need to do something about fossil fuels. We need to do something about nuclear and renewables. Just one example: In the House bill that was passed, there is a tax provision that will encourage people to go after marginal production. My State of Oklahoma happens to be a very large marginal producer. For those who are not familiar with this, a marginal well produces 15 barrels or fewer a day. We have the largest number of marginal wells in our State of Oklahoma. If we had every marginal well producing today that has been shut down or plugged up in the last 10 years, it would be more than we are currently importing from Saudi Arabia. These are little things that can be in an energy bill.

The President was misquoted on the Senate floor a few minutes ago, but certainly everyone realizes it is just a supply and demand issue. If we are able to produce more here, it is going to be cheaper. That is what we need to do. Those individuals who are somehow living in this mythical world that we can run the greatest machine in the history of the world on windmills are wrong. By the way, speaking of windmills, I find even some of the environmentalist extremists now do not want windmills because they are killing the birds. We have to realize we have the most powerful, largest machine ever in the history of the world, and we need to have an energy bill to run that machine.

CHINA'S THREAT TO NATIONAL SECURITY

Mr. President, over the past 3 weeks I have given three speeches calling our attention to the rising threat that China is becoming to our national security. Today I will highlight the areas that most directly affect our national security: weapons proliferation and military modernization. These two aspects are interrelated and add an alarming dynamic to our complex relationship with China.

It is a difficult situation, one in which information is our best resource. Five years ago, Congress created the bipartisan U.S.-China Commission to study the significance of recent events and the impact these events have on our national security. The Commission has held hearings and enlisted the services of experts across the world to gain clarity about what is happening with China. The conclusions are compiled in the U.S.-China Economic and Security Review Commission's 2004 report to Congress, a document that reveals an alarming picture of where we are heading.

China has made commitments to stop proliferating illegal technology over and over since 1992. However, its actual practice has been markedly different. Just this past January, the Bush administration sanctioned eight Chinese companies for aiding Iran's missile development. Two of these companies, China Great Wall Industry Corporation and China North Industry Corporation, have been repeatedly sanctioned for over a decade. Another penalized company, China Aero-Technology Import and Export Corporation, is suspected of transferring technology from McDonnell-Douglas to China's military. The fact is that China has been unable to control its own companies. According to State Department testimony, China has a "serial proliferation problem," and while the official line is to crack down on the weapons trade, "reality has been quite different."

Over recent years, these transfers have become even more problematic, as the Commission details in its report:

> . . . Chinese transfers have evolved from sales of complete missile systems, to exports of largely dual-use nuclear, chemical, and missile components and technologies . . . Recent activities "have aggravated trends that result in ambiguous technical aid, more indigenous capabilities, longer range missiles, and secondary proliferation." Continuing intelligence reports indicate that Chinese cooperation with Pakistan and Iran remains an integral element of China's foreign policy . . . Beijing's failure to control such transfers gives the appearance that these are allowed in accordance with an unstated national policy. China has generally tried to avoid making fundamental changes in its transfer policies by offering the United States carefully worded commitments or exploiting differences between agreements.

In mid-2003, the CIA reported to Congress that "firms in China provided dual-use missile-related items, raw materials, and/or assistance to . . . countries of proliferation concern such as Iran, Libya, and North Korea." With these recently sanctioned companies, we see that China is fully willing to proliferate regardless of the consequences. Why? Well, perhaps we need to consider that something else is going on here besides profits.

China seems to proliferate with countries that have been terrorist sponsors, countries such as Iran, Iraq and Libya. These countries in turn offer China something they desperately need: oil. In my last speech I discussed China's search for oil sources and the implications this has on economic and national security. But the connection here is beyond energy. The Commission report describes what it looks like:

> This need for energy security may help explain Beijing's history of assistance to terrorist-sponsoring states, with various forms of WMD-related items and technical assistance, even in the face of U.S. sanctions . . . But, this pursuit of oil diplomacy may support objectives beyond just energy supply. Beijing's bilateral arrangements with oil-rich Middle Eastern states also helped create diplomatic and strategic alliances with countries that were hostile to the United States. For example, with U.S. interests precluded from entering Iran, China may hope to achieve a long-term competitive advantage relative to the United States. Over time, Beijing's relationship-building may counter U.S. power and enhance Beijing's ability to influence political and military outcomes. One of Beijing's stated goals is to reduce what it considers U.S. superpower dominance in favor of a multipolar global power structure in which China attains superpower status on par with the United States.

I cannot say it stronger than that. China is exploiting our timidity. The Commission recommends that we pressure the administration to develop and publish a coordinated, comprehensive strategy. I think that is very sound advice and I will be introducing a resolution shortly to that effect.

Another major area of concern is China's military modernization. The weapons China is investing in include cruise missiles, amphibious assault ships, submarines, long-range target acquisition systems, and advanced SU-30 and SU-31 fighter aircraft it has been purchasing from Russia.

I have always been very proud of GEN John Jumper, who had the courage back in 1998 to stand up publicly to say right now we have other countries that are producing better equipment than we have, such as our strike vehicles. The very best we have is the F-15 and F-16. The SU-30s, according to General Jumper, are in many ways superior to ones we make in this country. We have to correct that situation and we are going to with the advent of the FA-22 and joint strike fighters that will be coming on line, but in the meantime China is buying these vehicles. We have always known they have a nuclear capability, but what is more concerning now is they have developed a conventional capability that is equal to or greater than ours in many respects.

The commission believes that this force is being shaped to fit a Taiwan conflict scenario:

> [China's] military advancements have resulted in a dramatic shift in the cross-Strait balance toward China, with serious implications for Taiwan, for the United States, and for cross-Strait relations.

The commission states that there are two ways we can prevent a military escalation over Taiwan. The first is to pressure the EU to maintain its arms embargo on China. This is a group of bipartisan experts saying this. Second, we should have harsher punishments for contractors who sell sensitive technology to China. We need a comprehensive annual report on who is selling what to China because, quite frankly, right now we simply don't know exactly how deep this problem goes.

Opting to ignore the situation with China is not a choice that we as representatives of the American people can afford to make. I urge this body to listen closely to the commission's conclusion:

> We need to use our substantial leverage to develop an architecture that will help avoid conflict, attempt to build cooperative practices and institutions, and advance both countries' long-term interests. The United States has the leverage now and perhaps for the next decade, but this may not always be the case . . . If we falter in the use of our economic and political influence now to effect positive change in China, we will have squandered an historic opportunity . . . China will likely not initiate the decisive measures toward more meaningful economic and political reform without substantial, sustained, and increased pressure from the United States.

In the resolution I introduce, I will be asking you to stand behind the US-China Commission's recommendations. These recommendations are listed in the Commission's 2004 Report to Congress. I have highlighted a few of these in my recent speeches, but there are many more. We need to send a message of urgency to the administration to adopt what our own commission recommends. This is not a partisan move. This is a real and legitimate need to respond to the facts before us. We have a clear picture of where the trends are heading—economically, militarily and in ideology—and the security of the United States demands our response.

In my last speech that will accompany the resolution I will be introducing, I will summarize all the recommendations from the commission. I hope it will be the first—but not final—step in the development of a more proactive and comprehensive policy toward China. It needs to be a policy that adequately addresses our national security, especially the proliferation of military technology. It also needs to address free trade, human rights and, of course, Taiwan. I fear the track we are on does not adequately address any of these.

This is very distressing. In some of the previous talks we quoted some of the Chinese colonels when they said we can do this to America, we can compete not only militarily but economically. This is something we have to be concerned about. I cannot think of anything that would be more important to address from a national security objective than that.

However, there is something that is most important to address right now and that is the subject we are on, which is the reauthorization of the highway bill.

I will make a couple of comments about that. I know there are some other people who want to come down. I will yield to them at that time. But when you look at the way the Senate has historically approached the reauthorization of the highway bill, it is different than has been done on the other side. It is the more difficult way because there are so many things that are in a formula. Formulas address problems in low-income States, in low-population States, in low-population density States, in States with high fatality rates, with guaranteed minimum growth and guaranteed minimum rate of return from donor States. We have donee States. All of these things are part of a very complex formula.

We will tomorrow be talking about this for an hour, from 10:45 to 11:45. There will be 1 hour equally divided between both sides. I will be controlling the time on this side. I hope at that time we have Members come down who are concerned about this bill, who have problems with this bill, so we can respond to those problems but, most importantly, so we can have cloture on a motion to proceed and have a vote. That vote will take place at 11:45 tomorrow morning. I look forward to coming down and debating the merits of the highway bill.

The bill passed last year—and this is substantially the same as last year's bill—passed this body by a margin of 76 to 21. I anticipate the same thing will happen, but it will not happen until we get to the bill. We will not get on the bill until the cloture on the motion to proceed is voted on, which will be at 11:45 tomorrow morning.

With that, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent there now be a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SILVER STAR IN ILLINOIS ARMY RESERVE UNIT

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I would like to say a few words about two Army Reserve soldiers from Illinois I had the pleasure of meeting recently: SPC Jeremy Church and LT Matthew Brown.

Both of these soldiers fought last year in a battle that remains the largest enemy ambush of American troops in the war in Iraq. The battle occurred on Good Friday last year, April 9, 2004.

The 724th Transportation Company of Bartonville, IL, was taking part in a convoy escort operation delivering fuel to Baghdad International Airport when it was ambushed by insurgents. More than 150 enemy fighters poured heavy weapons fire onto the convoy.

Lieutenant Brown was the convoy commander. Specialist Church was his driver. In the first minutes of the attack, Lieutenant Brown was wounded, losing his eye. Specialist Church remained calm, simultaneously treating his wounded lieutenant, driving his damaged vehicle, and firing his rifle, one-handed, at the enemy.

Specialist Church drove to safety, dropped off the wounded Lieutenant Brown, rallied some assistance, and then drove back into danger, the kill zone, to help rescue, extract, his buddies who were still trapped under fire. He loaded casualties onto a truck until it was full, then sent the wounded soldiers to safety while he remained behind to continue the fight, taking cover behind destroyed vehicles.

For his actions that day, Specialist Church was awarded the Silver Star, the third-highest honor the United States can offer for valor in combat. He is the first and only U.S. Army Reserve soldier to win this medal in this conflict. Lieutenant Brown was awarded the Bronze Star.

In that same battle, PFC Gregory Goodrich was killed. SPC Keith Maupin was captured and remains missing in action.

Members of the National Guard and Reserve train on weekends and during 2-week annual training periods to prepare for that day when their country might call upon them to step away from families and civilian careers in order to fight America's wars.

These citizen-soldiers were ready to do that. The call came. They answered it. Now they have borne the terrible burden of battle. Gregory Goodrich gave his life. Keith Maupin remains missing. Matthew Brown has lost an eye and, because of that, he will probably lose his job as a Peoria, IL, law enforcement officer. Jeremy Church risked life and limb to save others and to vigorously fight back the attackers. All of these men exemplify the finest traditions of America's citizen-soldiers. We honor their service.

APPROVAL OF COMMITTEE RULES

Mr. LOTT. Mr President, on April 21, 2005 the Joint Committee on Printing approved the following rules for the committee. Pursuant of rule XXVI, paragraph 2, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the committee rules be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RULE 1.—COMMITTEE RULES

(a) The rules of the Senate and House insofar as they are applicable, shall govern the Committee.

(b) The Committee's rules shall be published in the Congressional Record as soon as possible following the Committee's organizational meeting in each odd-numbered year.

(c) Where these rules require a vote of the members of the Committee, polling of members either in writing or by telephone shall not be permitted to substitute for a vote taken at a Committee meeting, unless the ranking minority member assents to waiver of this requirement.

(d) Proposals for amending Committee rules shall be sent to all members at least one week before final action is taken thereon, unless the amendment is made by unanimous consent.

RULE 2.—REGULAR COMMITTEE MEETINGS

(a) The regular meeting date of the Committee shall be the second Wednesday of every month when the House and Senate are in session. A regularly scheduled meeting need not be held if there is no business to be considered and after appropriate notification is made to the ranking minority member. Additional meetings may be called by the Chairman, as he may deem necessary or at the request of the majority of the members of the Committee.

(b) If the Chairman of the Committee is not present at any meeting of the Committee, the vice-Chairman or ranking member of the majority party on the Committee who is present shall preside at the meeting.

RULE 3.—QUORUM

(a) Five members of the Committee shall constitute a quorum, which is required for the purpose of closing meetings, promulgating Committee orders or changing the rules of the Committee.

(b) Three members shall constitute a quorum for purposes of taking testimony and receiving evidence.

RULE 4.—PROXIES

(a) Written or telegraphic proxies of Committee members will be received and recorded on any vote taken by the Committee, except for the purpose of creating a quorum.

(b) Proxies will be allowed on any such votes for the purpose of recording a member's position on a question only when the absentee Committee member has been informed of the question and has affirmatively requested that he be recorded.

RULE 5.—OPEN AND CLOSED MEETINGS

(a) Each meeting for the transaction of business of the Committee shall be open to the public except when the Committee, in open session and with a quorum present, determines by roll call vote that all or part of the remainder of the meeting on that day shall be closed to the public. No such vote shall be required to close a meeting that relates solely to internal budget or personnel matters.

(b) No person other than members of the Committee, and such congressional staff and other representatives as they may authorize, shall be present in any business session that has been closed to the public.

RULE 6.—ALTERNATING CHAIRMANSHIP AND VICE-CHAIRMANSHIP BY CONGRESSES

(a) The Chairmanship and vice Chairmanship of the Committee shall alternate between the House and the Senate by Congresses: The senior member of the minority party in the House of Congress opposite of that of the Chairman shall be the ranking minority member of the Committee.

(b) In the event the House and Senate are under different party control, the Chairman and vice Chairman shall represent the majority party in their respective Houses. When the Chairman and vice-Chairman represent different parties, the vice-Chairman shall also fulfill the responsibilities of the ranking minority member as prescribed by these rules.

RULE 7.—PARLIAMENTARY QUESTIONS

Questions as to the order of business and the procedures of Committee shall in the first instance be decided by the Chairman; subject always to an appeal to the Committee.

RULE 8.—HEARINGS: PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENTS AND WITNESSES

(a) The Chairman, in the case of hearings to be conducted by the Committee, shall make public announcement of the date, place and subject matter of any hearing to be conducted on any measure or matter at least one week before the commencement of that hearing unless the Committee determines that there is good cause to begin such hearing at an earlier date. In the latter event, the Chairman shall make such public announcement at the earliest possible date. The staff director of the Committee shall promptly notify the Daily Digest of the Congressional Record as soon as possible after such public announcement is made.

(b) So far as practicable, all witnesses appearing before the Committee shall file advance written statements of their proposed testimony at least 48 hours in advance of their appearance and their oral testimony shall be limited to brief summaries. Limited insertions or additional germane material will be received for the record, subject to the approval of the Chairman.

RULE 9.—OFFICIAL HEARING RECORD

(a) An accurate stenographic record shall be kept of all Committee proceedings and actions. Brief supplemental materials when required to clarify the transcript may be inserted in the record subject to the approval of the Chairman.

(b) Each member of the Committee shall be provided with a copy of the hearing transcript for the purpose of correcting errors of transcription and grammar, and clarifying questions or remarks. If any other person is authorized by a Committee Member to make his corrections, the staff director shall be so notified.

(c) Members who have received unanimous consent to submit written questions to witnesses shall be allowed two days within which to submit these to the staff director for transmission to the witnesses. The record may be held open for a period not to exceed two weeks awaiting the responses by witnesses.

(d) A witness may obtain a transcript copy of his testimony given at a public session or, if given at an executive session, when authorized by the Committee. Testimony received in closed hearings shall not be released or included in any report without the approval of the Committee.

RULE 10.—WITNESSES FOR COMMITTEE HEARINGS

(a) Selection of witnesses for Committee hearings shall be made by the Committee staff under the direction of the Chairman. A list of proposed witnesses shall be submitted to the members of the Committee for review sufficiently in advance of the hearings to permit suggestions by the Committee members to receive appropriate consideration.

(b) The Chairman shall provide adequate time for questioning of witnesses by all members, including minority Members and the rule of germaneness shall be enforced in all hearings notified.

(c) Whenever a hearing is conducted by the Committee upon any measure or matter, the minority on the Committee shall be entitled, upon unanimous request to the Chairman before the completion of such hearings, to call witnesses selected by the minority to testify with respect to the measure or matter during at least one day of hearing thereon.

RULE 11.—CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION FURNISHED TO THE COMMITTEE

The information contained in any books, papers or documents furnished to the Committee by any individual, partnership, corporation or other legal entity shall, upon the request of the individual, partnership, corporation or entity furnishing the same, be maintained in strict confidence by the members and staff of the Committee, except that any such information may be released outside of executive session of the Committee if the release thereof is effected in a manner which will not reveal the identity of such individual, partnership, corporation or entity in connection with any pending hearing or as a part of a duly authorized report of the Committee if such release is deemed essential to the performance of the functions of the Committee and is in the public interest.

RULE 12.—BROADCASTING OF COMMITTEE HEARINGS

The rule for broadcasting of Committee hearings shall be the same as Rule XI, clause 4, of the Rules of the House of Representatives.

RULE 13.—COMMITTEE REPORTS

(a) No Committee report shall be made public or transmitted to the Congress without the approval of a majority of the Committee except when Congress has adjourned: provided that any member of the Committee may make a report supplementary to or dissenting from the majority report. Such supplementary or dissenting reports should be as brief as possible.

(b) Factual reports by the Committee staff may be printed for distribution to Committee members and the public only upon authorization of the Chairman either with the approval of a majority of the Committee or with the consent of the ranking minority member.

RULE 14.—CONFIDENTIALITY OF COMMITTEE REPORTS

No summary of a Committee report, prediction of the contents of a report, or statement of conclusions concerning any investigation shall be made by a member of the Committee or by any staff member of the Committee prior to the issuance of a report of the Committee.

RULE 15.—COMMITTEE STAFF

(a) The Committee shall have a staff director, selected by the Chairman. The staff director shall be an employee of the House of Representatives or of the Senate.

(b) The Ranking Minority Member may designate an employee of the House of Representatives or of the Senate as the minority staff director.

(c) The staff director, under the general supervision of the Chairman, is authorized to deal directly with agencies of the Government and with non-Government groups and individuals on behalf of the Committee.

(d) The Chairman or staff director shall timely notify the Ranking Minority Member or the minority staff director of decisions made on behalf of the Committee.

RULE 16.—COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

The Chairman of the Committee may establish such other procedures and take such actions as may be necessary to carry out the foregoing rules or to facilitate the effective operation of the Committee. Specifically, the Chairman is authorized, during the interim periods between meetings of the Committee, to act on all requests submitted by any executive department, independent agency, temporary or permanent commissions and committees of the Federal Government, the Government Printing Office and any other Federal entity, pursuant to the requirements of applicable Federal law and regulations.

ARMENIAN GENOCIDE

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, yesterday marked the 90th anniversary of the beginning of the Armenian Genocide. A date of great significance for many Rhode Islanders, and growing in significance for all Americans, this day not only commemorates the atrocities of the past, but also reminds us that it must not happen again. Remembering the victims is our duty to the past and to the future.

The term "genocide" did not even exist when these atrocities occurred from 1915 to 1923, yet the numbers are staggering. Over 1.5 million people perished. Over 500,000 people were forcibly removed from their homes and their homeland. Armenian religious, political, and intellectual leaders were killed. Men were removed from their families and women and children were left vulnerable to deportation, kidnapping, and starvation, and 132,000 Armenian orphans became foster children in American families.

It is vital for the distinct identity of every culture to be honored and celebrated. Over one and a half million Americans are of Armenian heritage, and on this day we are grateful for their many contributions to our country. Rhode Island and this entire Nation continue to benefit from a strong and vibrant Armenian community.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

MEDIC STEVEN SIRKO

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I rise today with a heavy heart and deep sense of gratitude to honor the life of a brave young man from Portage. Steven Sirko, 20 years old, died on April 17 while stationed in Maqdadiyah, Iraq.

with his entire life before him. Steven risked everything to fight for the values Americans hold close to our hearts, in a land halfway around the world.

Recently married to another army medic, Steven turned down a chance to stay stateside with the Army's Special Forces in order to be in Iraq near his wife. A football player in high school, Steven was remembered by friends and family as a tough, outgoing student. His father told a local newspaper, that his son was "very strong, very outgoing, very respectful. After 9/11, like so many young men, he wanted to fight terrorism." His stepbrother, who also served in the Army, called Steven, "the light of any crowd."

Steven was killed while serving his country in Operation Iraqi Freedom. He served in the first battalion, 30th infantry regiment, third brigade, and third infantry division. This brave young soldier leaves behind his wife, Virginia; his father, Rick Sirko; his mother, Linda Lipford; his stepmother, Rose Sirko; three sisters; one brother; and two stepbrothers;.

Today, I join Steven's family and friends in mourning his death. While we struggle to bear our sorrow over this loss, we can also take pride in the example he set, bravely fighting to make the world a safer place. It is his courage and strength of character that people will remember when they think of Steven, a memory that will burn brightly during these continuing days of conflict and grief.

Steven was known for his dedication to his family and his love of country. Today and always, Steven will be remembered by family members, friends, and fellow Hoosiers as a true American hero and we honor the sacrifice he made while dutifully serving his country.

As I search for words to do justice in honoring Steven's sacrifice, I am reminded of President Lincoln's remarks as he addressed the families of the fallen soldiers in Gettysburg: "We cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here." This statement is just as true today as it was nearly 150 years ago, as I am certain that the impact of Steven's actions will live on far longer than any record of these words.

It is my sad duty to enter the name of Steven Sirko in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the Senate for his service to this country and for his profound commitment to freedom, democracy and peace. When I think about this just cause in which we are engaged, and the unfortunate pain that comes with the loss of our heroes, I hope that families like Steven's can find comfort in the words of the prophet Isaiah who said, "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces."

May God grant strength and peace to those who mourn, and may God be with all of you, as I know He is with Steven.

SPECIALIST GRANT CROFT

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise today to publicly recognize SPC Grant Croft of Sioux Falls, SD, for receiving the Army Commendation Medal.

Specialist Croft is serving in Mosul, Iraq, as a medic for the 2nd Platoon, 194th Military Police Company based at Fort Campbell, KY. He is a talented and dedicated serviceman, who, according to his superiors, "On a daily basis, sets the standard for what a soldier medic should be. Specialists Croft's strength, stamina and moral character are a constant source of strength for our platoon."

On January 21, 2005, while training at the Udari Range in Iraq, prior to the platoon's arrival in Mosul, Specialist Croft earned the Army Commendation Medal for his performance following an Apache helicopter crash. The Army's description of the event states: "Without regard for his own safety, Specialist Croft quickly moved to the crashed aircraft and immediately began the necessary medical treatment for [the pilots'] life threatening injuries. He placed himself in harms way through the entire process. His selfless act and professional actions were those of a highly skilled and dedicated medic."

It is with great honor that I share Specialist Croft's tremendous accomplishments with my colleagues. He is a true patriot, and America is deeply grateful for his service.

TRIBUTE TO JOE BEYRLE

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, on Friday, April 22, a true American hero was laid to rest in Arlington National Cemetery. Joe Beyrle of Muskegon, MI, was a paratrooper in the 101st Division on D-Day in World War II. His capture by the Germans and his heroic escape to fight with the Russian Army on the Eastern Front, making him the only American soldier to fight with both the United States and Russian armies against Nazi Germany, have been chronicled in a wonderful book by retired Army Colonel Thomas Taylor called The Simple Sounds of Freedom.

It was my privilege to speak at the burial ceremony for Joe Beyrle. I ask unanimous consent that my remarks be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EULOGY FOR JOE BEYRLE

Arlington National Cemetery, April 22, 2005

We cannot be reminded often enough about the extraordinary things that seemingly ordinary Americans have done to protect our country and our freedoms.

A short year after Joe Beyrle graduated from Muskegon's Saint Joseph High School in June of 1942, he found himself on the way to England as an elite paratrooper in the storied Screaming Eagles of the 101st Airborne Division. And that is when Joe Beyrle, like other members of the Greatest Generation, came face to face with unimaginable challenges, and went from being seemingly ordinary to extraordinary.

I knew Joe and JoAnne, and I knew of Joe's wartime exploits, long before Tom Taylor's wonderful book about Joe was published. What makes that book so special for me is that now everyone can be inspired by the amazing story of Joe's service during World War II: the rigorous training that made "Jumpin' Joe" such an expert paratrooper that he was selected for clandestine drops in occupied France before D-Day to supply the French resistance with gold; his dogged determination after his capture on D-Day by the Germans to escape and rejoin his unit; his courageous decision to fight with the Russian Army after he finally escaped the German POW camp—even helping to liberate the very POW camp from which he had escaped—making him the only American soldier to fight for both the United States and the Russians against Nazi Germany; and the remarkable story of his travel after he was wounded to the American Embassy in Moscow, where American officials at first thought he was a spy because his dog tags had been found on a dead soldier thought to be him two years earlier.

And of course who can forget the story of Joe marrying JoAnne in September, 1946—in a ceremony conducted by the same priest who had conducted a funeral mass for the presumed killed-in-action Joe Beyrle a few years before.

And what a memorable moment it was in 1994 when President Clinton and President Yeltsin honored Joe simultaneously in the White House Rose Garden as part of the celebration of the 50th anniversary of D-Day.

Joe's indomitable spirit, love of country and will to survive come through every page of his remarkable story, a story that reads more like fiction than history. One of my favorite examples of the legendary Beyrle tenacity—Joe would probably call it bullheadedness—took place at the end of the story when Joe was being held in custody in Moscow until the American Embassy officials could establish his true identity.

In a feverish and woozy state from his wounds, Joe decided to overpower the Marine guarding his room and escape again—to rejoin the Russian Army and get home by way of Berlin! Even Joe admitted: "Of all my escape plans, this was the wildest and dumbest of all!"

It is said that courage isn't the absence of fear but the presence of faith. Joe was a man of courage because he had such a vast reservoir of faith—faith in himself; faith in the cause that his country asked him to fight for; and faith in his Creator.

Shortly after Tom Taylor's book about Joe was published, I hosted a reception for Joe and his family and Tom Taylor in the hearing room of the Senate Armed Services Committee. The Secretary of the Army, the Army Vice Chief of Staff, and the Russian Ambassador attended out of respect for Joe. Joe was in his element that day, passing out Screaming Eagle lapel pins and replicas of the paratrooper's crickets used by the Screaming Eagles on D-Day to identify one another behind enemy lines. I still have the one he gave me. Listen.

When I referred to Joe Beyrle at the reception as a hero, Joe said that "the real heroes are buried in Europe." There are indeed a lot of American heroes buried in Europe. But surely some of America's greatest heroes are here at Arlington, visited each day by a hushed and awestruck multitude of their grateful fellow citizens whose freedom was defended by their sacrifices.

There is no more hallowed ground than where we stand today. And there is no hero more deserving of resting here than Joe Beyrle. Let us all honor Joe by resolving in this sacred place to live by his example of selfless service. The highest tribute we can pay to this extraordinary American is to make sure that the Simple Sounds of Freedom always resonate in this great country that he loved so much.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HONORING THE INDIANA SPORTS CORPORATION

● Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I rise today to call to the attention of my colleagues a signal anniversary occurring on May 3, 2005, the 25th Anniversary of the Indiana Sports Corporation, ISC.

Over the past quarter of a century, the ISC has been a tremendous contributor to the city of Indianapolis, providing economic stimulus, volunteer and community involvement opportunities, and most importantly, working to identify our capital city as a worthy destination for amateur sporting events. I have been pleased to work with the ISC through the Dick Lugar Community Run, Walk and Corporate Challenge, an event I look forward to every year.

Since 1979, the ISC has hosted more than 400 national and international sporting events. These events include: NCAA Championships, highlighted with four NCAA Division 1 Men's Basketball Final Fours, 1980, 1991, 1997, 2000; the 1987 Pan American Games; the 1982 U.S. Olympic Festival, the 2001 World Police and Fire Games; World Championships in track and field, 1987, gymnastics 1991, rowing 1994, basketball 2002 and swimming, 2004. Additionally, they have hosted U.S. Olympic trials and other National Governing Body, NGB, national championships in canoe/kayak, diving, gymnastics, judo, rowing, swimming, synchronized swimming, table tennis, track and field, and volleyball.

It is likewise noteworthy that since 1988, the ISC has awarded over $2.5 million to more than 200 youth service organizations across the State of Indiana, and 132 Olympic hopefuls through its CHAMPS and Future Olympians grant programs respectively.

I am pleased to join the vast number of individuals who have been touched by the efforts of the Indiana Sports Corporation over the years in congratulating them on this signal anniversary.●

40TH ANNIVERSARY OF MOORE'S LAW

● Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, 40 years ago, when having a computer in your home was inconceivable and being able to hold a miniature computer in the palm of your hand was the stuff of science fiction, Gordon Moore, then a young engineer with Fairchild Semiconductor, had a revolutionary idea.

In the April 19, 1965, issue of Electronics Magazine, Moore first articulated what would come to be known as Moore's law: that the number of transistors on a computer chip would double in power approximately every 18 months but the price would actually decrease. Moore's law was revolutionary because it said that computer power improves essentially for free. Not only did this mean technology could be accessible and affordable for all Americans, it set the stage for increases in productivity unheard of since the Industrial Revolution.

Today, Moore's 40-year-old prediction is not just the thought of a dreamer, written for the benefit of a few early high-tech pioneers; it is the metronome of the technology industry. The drive to keep up with the drumbeat of Moore's law has meant unparalleled innovation in the high-tech industry. It has resulted in quality, high-paying jobs and contributed to our Nation's economic stability. The growth of computer technology in the U.S. has brought countless benefits to consumers and businesses throughout this country.

We are proud in my home State of Oregon to be part of the high-tech engine that helped build the digital economy. We are happy to be home to companies like Intel Corporation, which Moore helped found in 1974. Intel, which employs 15,500 people and has invested approximately $11 billion in Oregon, is an important contributor to our economy and an example of the impact that leadership in technology can have at the local level.

Oregon's high-tech industry continues to be a vital and growing part of the State's economy, creating jobs, fueling the growth of small and large businesses, and driving the innovation necessary to keep pace with Moore's law today.

The fulfillment of Moore's 40-year-old prediction will continue to lead to advances in virtually every aspect of our lives. It means smaller and more affordable computers, and cameras the size of pills that can be swallowed to explore our insides without surgery. It also means family and friends can overcome great distances, connecting in an instant over the digital airwaves.

Though his prediction has held true, Gordon Moore could not have foreseen the power and influence of his observation. I'm proud today to pay tribute to his contributions and recognize the impact Moore's law has had on our economy and our world.●

HONORING REVEREND FRED SHUTTLESWORTH

● Mr. TALENT. Mr. President, I honor Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth, who is a key leader in the civil rights movement and continues to be a guiding light in his community. I am honored that Reverend Shuttlesworth is visiting Missouri on April 29, and I want to commemorate his visit by briefly sharing some of his accomplishments.

Reverend Shuttlesworth grew up in Birmingham, AL, and graduated from Alabama State University in 1951. After graduating, he continued to do graduate work at Alabama State and then received seminary training at Cedar Grove Academy and Selma University. His involvement in civil rights has been grounded in his belief that "a man should not be judged by the color of his skin any more than he is judged by the color of his eyes."

In 1953, at the age of 30, Reverend Shuttlesworth became pastor of the Bethel Baptist Church in Birmingham, during the period of time when the city earned the nickname "Bombingham" for the black homes that were bombed by white supremacists. In May 1956, Reverend Shuttlesworth helped lead a group of ministers to establish the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, in response to the NAACP being outlawed in Alabama.

Reverend Shuttlesworth, on many occasions, nearly became a martyr of the Civil Rights Movement. On Christmas Day 1956, as Reverend Shuttlesworth prepared to lead protests against the segregation of Birmingham's buses, someone threw a bomb under his bed in the parsonage of his church, where he was talking to a visiting deacon. Miraculously, he was unharmed.

Undeterred, in 1957 Reverend Shuttlesworth joined with Dr. Martin Luther King, Reverend Ralph David Abernathy and Bayard Rustin to form the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which was firmly committed to using nonviolence to advocate for Civil Rights despite the violence that was being committed against its members. He would later help to organize sit-ins against segregated lunch counters and was a key leader of the mass protests and demonstrations in Birmingham during the spring of 1963. During those tumultuous times, Reverend Shuttlesworth was also assaulted by police dogs, knocked unconscious by a fire hose, and jailed more than 35 times.

Reverend Shuttlesworth moved to Cincinnati, where he founded the Greater New Light Baptist Church in 1966, and today he continues to serve as Pastor. In 1988, Reverend Shuttlesworth established the Shuttlesworth Housing Foundation to help needy families access capital for down payments for the purchase of homes. His efforts have helped hundreds of low-income families in the Cincinnati area to become homeowners.

These are just a portion of the good works that this outstanding servant of God has done to help make our Nation more just. I commend Reverend Shuttlesworth for his outstanding contributions to the cause of civil rights for all Americans. I am honored to share his story with my colleagues, and I wish him and his family all the best for the future.•

STATE REPRESENTATIVE CHARLES W. CAPPS, JR.

• Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to bring to the Senate's attention the distinguished career of Charles W. Capps, Jr., who has served with distinction and honor as a member of the Mississippi State House of Representatives from Bolivar County since 1971.

My friend, Charlie Capps has announced that he will retire from the legislature in June. As a member of the House of Representatives, Charlie Capps has earned the respect of eight governors, the members of the Mississippi Congressional Delegation, and all who have called upon him for advice and assistance over the past three decades.

Charlie Capps is well known throughout our State for his contributions to higher education, highways, wildlife conservation, job development, and job training. He made special efforts to improve the quality of life in the Mississippi Delta.

He has held many positions of responsibility including service as Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations from 1988 to 2003. During those years, the State has experienced unprecedented economic growth. Today, workforce training centers, mental health facilities, university libraries, recreational lakes, and distance learning centers are part of the legacy of this great Mississippian.

I congratulate Charlie Capps for his distinguished career of public service and for his indelible contribution to our State.•

TRIBUTE TO DONNIE R. WHEELER

• Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise today to commend Mr. Donnie R. Wheeler for becoming the first president of the National Association of Clean Water Agencies—NACWA—formerly the Association of Metropolitan Sewerage Agencies, AMSA. Mr. Wheeler currently serves as the General Manager of the Hampton Roads Sanitation District—HRSD—Virginia Beach, VA. He is regarded by his peers as an exceptional leader, dedicated to protecting the environment and health of Virginia and the Nation.

Mr. Wheeler is a graduate of Virginia Tech and for 7 years was employed by the Virginia State Water Control Board before joining HRSD in 1974. HRSD, a nationally recognized regional wastewater treatment utility, serves 17 cities and counties covering 3100 square miles of southeast Virginia. Under his management, HRSD has received numerous awards from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and is recognized as a state innovator for such initiatives as Virginia's first municipal water reuse project.

Under his leadership, I trust that NACWA will promote responsible national policies to advance clean water and a healthy environment. Mr. Wheeler, is a founder of the Virginia Association of Municipal Wastewater Agencies—VAMWA—and served as its president for 6 years. In his long career, Mr. Wheeler has earned the respect of his colleagues at all levels of government and his achievements have earned him awards from the Virginia Water Environment Association—VWEA—and Environment Virginia. Mr. Wheeler also has served as an adjunct professor of Environmental Engineering at Old Dominion University.

In the true sense of the word and by his many achievements in a long and distinguished professional career, Mr. Wheeler is an "environmentalist" who will now proudly serve in a new leadership role the industry in which he has worked for so many years. It is with pleasure that I congratulate and commend Mr. Wheeler on being elected the first president of NACWA.•

COWBOY VIGIL

• Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I today honor a great American, a great Coloradan, and a great Puebloan.

Alcario Vigil was born and raised in the San Luis Valley in Colorado and on April 1st turned 100 years old. His life has been rich with accomplishments and extraordinary devotion to his family, his friends, and his community.

Known as "Cowboy," Alcario Vigil grew up in Lobatos, CO, just down the road from the Salazar family ranch in the San Luis Valley. Like most of his neighbors, he was brought up in a poor family and eventually took over responsibility for his parents' ranch with his wife Sophia. Together, the Vigil family survived the hardships of the Great Depression and raised eight children on the Lobatos family ranch, where they prospered and strengthened Colorado and this country.

Throughout his life, Alcario has been respected as an outstanding community servant, a devoted husband, and a loving father. He has a remarkable record serving as a Penitente for more than 70 years. He has passed those values to his descendents, some of whom are now seventh-generation Coloradans.

Although "Cowboy" lost his devoted wife Sofia in 1994, and his son Jose just 2 years ago, Alcario remains strong and healthy in his Pueblo home. Even at 100 years, he works the ranch's irrigation ditches in the summer months and enjoys visits from his family and friends.

The Pueblo County Commission recently declared April 1, 2005, to be "Alcario (Cowboy) Vigil Day." Given all he has done and all he has seen, I think every day ought to be Alcario "Cowboy" Vigil Day.•

RECOGNITION OF AMSA ON ITS 35TH ANNIVERSARY

• Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I take this opportunity to congratulate the Association of Metropolitan Sewerage Agencies, AMSA, on the occasion of its 35th anniversary and on its name change to the National Association of Clean Water Agencies or NACWA. NACWA is the only association that exclusively represents the Nation's municipal wastewater treatment agencies. Its 35-year record of advocacy and leadership in fully meeting the goals of the Clean Water Act has helped guarantee the chemical, biological and physical health of our Nation's rivers, lakes, streams, bays, and coasts.

NACWA's members serve the majority of the sewered population in the country and treat and reclaim over 18 billion gallons of wastewater a day. Simply stated, NACWA and its members deserve to be celebrated for their ongoing role in the remarkable revitalization of America's waterways.

Despite the improvements made so far to the Nation's waters, the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee and NACWA understand that significant work remains to be done to achieve the lofty goals of the Clean Water Act. From the committee's close working relationship with the association, we know NACWA is well-positioned to continue to build on this Nation's water quality gains.

The Senate Environment and Public Works Committee has looked to AMSA and will continue to look to NACWA as a valued informational resource. The association has always been willing to share its expertise and to provide leadership in challenging times. For example, in the wake of the attacks on September 11, 2001, the association responded immediately with creative ideas and vital leadership in developing tools and resources to help further secure the Nation's critical water infrastructure. In fact, the association has been a vital resource on a host of clean water issues from wet weather control and the critical need for a Federal-State-local partnership to meet the Nation's clean water challenges.

As chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, I have worked closely with the association and know that NACWA will build on its tradition as a trusted resource for Congress and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. I am also confident that NACWA will meet its strategic objectives and the goals of AMSA's original founders. Most importantly, NACWA's success is a direct result of its unparalleled membership. NACWA, then AMSA, was established in 1970 by representatives of 22 municipal wastewater treatment agencies. Since then, AMSA has grown into an organization of nearly 300 municipal agency members, including Oklahoma City, Stillwater and Tulsa, and a total membership of nearly 400 organizations poised to ensure that the 21st century will enjoy continued water quality progress.

The association's public agency members not only represent what is best about public service, they exemplify what it means to be environmental practitioners. Their daily work enables us to enjoy our Nation's rivers, lakes, streams and bays—somethng we as a National must never take for granted.

Once again, I congratulate NACWA on this important milestone as an organization and applaud its members for their outstanding service.•

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. DOMENICI (for himself, Mr. BINGAMAN, Ms. MURKOWSKI, Mr. BENNETT, and Mr. JOHNSON):

S. 895. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior to establish a rural water supply program in the Reclamation States to provide a clear, safe affordable, and reliable water supply to rural residents; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, in the 1746 Poor Richard's Almanac, Benjamin Franklin wrote, "When the well is dry, we learn the worth of water." Nowhere is the bottom of the well approaching more quickly than in western United States. Nearly depleted aquifers and deteriorated infrastructure on which our small and rural communities rely coupled with their inability to raise large amounts of capital to afford water infrastructure has resulted in substantial want. When the water dries up, so will many of our communities. As such, the scarcity of water in rural western communities is a dire situation.

An article appearing on April 15, 2005 in the Wall Street Journal elucidates the breadth of our Nation's water infrastructure need. The article states that most water infrastructure and water treatment plants in the U.S. are more than 50 years old and, in many cases, are more than 100 years old. The huge capital outlays needed to rehabilitate this aging and, in many cases, deteriorated infrastructure far exceeds the ability of many rural communities to pay. Neither can these communities accommodate the costs in their rate structures nor are the necessary capital outlays within their bonding capacity. Exacerbating this problem is that, in many western states such as my home state of New Mexico, ground water supplies for which many communities have relied on for water are nearly depleted. In many cases, the only practicable alternative for providing water to these communities is to build public works projects to transport water from other sources. This, too, requires large sums of money which rural and small communities can ill-afford.

Today, I rise to introduce the Rural Water Supply Act of 2005. This bill would begin the process of providing for the essential water needs of rural communities in the western United States. It establishes a federal loan guarantee program within the Bureau of Reclamation that would allow rural communities to obtain loans at interest rates far lower than had the loans not been guaranteed by the Federal Government. This allows rural communities access to the large sums of money required to construct water infrastructure while recognizing the significant demand on the Bureau's budget. The bill also expedites the appraisal and feasibility studies which allow these communities to assess how best to address their water supply needs and act accordingly. At present, rural communities have to wait for Congress to direct the Bureau of Reclamation to proceed with appraisal and feasibility studies. This bill expedites the appraisal and feasibility level process by requiring that, upon request of the community, the Bureau perform a study, provide funds to a rural water community to perform them, or accept and review studies undertaken independently by a community. This bill will provide much needed assistance to struggling communities.

I would like to thank Senator BINGAMAN, the ranking member of the Committee of Energy and Natural Resources who I have had the great pleasure of serving with for over two decades for being an original co-sponsor of this bill. In addition, I very much appreciate the willingness of the Bureau of Reclamation to work with my staff on this important matter.

Preserving our rural communities in the west requires that we address this instantly and vigorously. The U.S. Congress cannot sit idly by as water shortages cause death to our rural communities. I assure you that this bill will receive prompt consideration in the Energy and Natural Resources Committee and it is my sincere hope that the Senate will give this legislation its every consideration.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 895

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Rural Water Supply Act of 2005".

Sec. 206 Title to newly constructed facilities.
Sec. 207 Water rights.
Sec. 208 Interagency coordination and cooperation.
Sec. 209 Authorization of appropriations.

TITLE I—RECLAMATION RURAL WATER SUPPLY ACT OF 2005

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Reclamation Rural Water Supply Act of 2005".

SEC. 102. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) FEDERAL RECLAMATION LAW.—The term "Federal reclamation law" means the Act of June 17, 1902 (32 Stat. 388, chapter 1093), and Acts supplemental to and amendatory of that Act (43 U.S.C. 371 et seq.).

(2) INDIAN.—The term "Indian" means an individual who is a member of an Indian tribe.

(3) INDIAN TRIBE.—The term "Indian tribe" has the meaning given the term in section 4 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450b).

(4) NON-FEDERAL PROJECT ENTITY.—The term "non-Federal project entity" means a State, regional, or local authority, Indian tribe or tribal organization, or other qualifying entity, such as a water conservation district, water conservancy district, or rural water district or association.

(5) OPERATIONS, MAINTENANCE, AND REPLACEMENT COSTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "operations, maintenance, and replacement costs" means all costs for the operation of a rural water supply project that are necessary for the safe, efficient, and continued functioning of the project to produce the benefits described in a feasibility study.

(B) INCLUSIONS.—The term "operations, maintenance, and replacement costs" includes—

(i) repairs of a routine nature that maintain a rural water supply project in a well kept condition;

(ii) replacement of worn-out project elements; and

(iii) rehabilitation activities necessary to bring a deteriorated project back to the original condition of the project.

(C) EXCLUSION.—The term "operations, maintenance, and replacement costs" does not include construction costs.

(6) PROGRAM.—The term "program" means the rural water supply program established under section 103.

(7) RECLAMATION STATES.—The term "reclamation States" means the States and areas referred to in the first section of the Act of June 17, 1902 (43 U.S.C. 391).

(8) RURAL WATER SUPPLY PROJECT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "rural water supply project" means a project that is designed to serve a group of communities, which may include Indian tribes and tribal organizations, dispersed homesites, or rural areas with domestic, industrial, municipal, and residential water, each of which has a population of not more than 50,000 inhabitants.

(B) INCLUSION.—The term "rural water supply project" includes—

(i) incidental noncommercial livestock watering and noncommercial irrigation of vegetation and small gardens of less than 1 acre; and

(ii) a project to improve rural water infrastructure, including—

(I) pumps, pipes, wells, and other diversions;

(II) storage tanks and small impoundments;

(III) water treatment facilities for potable water supplies;

(IV) equipment and management tools for water conservation, groundwater recovery, and water recycling; and

(V) appurtenances.

(C) EXCLUSION.—The term "rural water supply project" does not include—

(i) commercial irrigation; or

(ii) major impoundment structures.

(9) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

(10) TRIBAL ORGANIZATION.—The term "tribal organization" means—

(A) the recognized governing body of an Indian tribe; and

(B) any legally established organization of Indians that is controlled, sanctioned, or chartered by the governing body or democratically elected by the adult members of the Indian community to be served by the organization.

SEC. 103. RURAL WATER SUPPLY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in cooperation with non-Federal project entities and consistent with this title, shall establish and carry out a rural water supply program in reclamation States to—

(1) investigate and identify opportunities to ensure safe and adequate rural water supply projects for municipal and industrial use in small communities and rural areas of the reclamation States; and

(2) plan the design and construction, through the conduct of appraisal investigations and feasibility studies, of rural water supply projects in reclamation States.

(b) NON-FEDERAL PROJECT ENTITY.—Any activity carried out under this title shall be carried out in cooperation with a qualifying non-Federal project entity, consistent with this title.

(c) ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall, consistent with this title, develop and publish in the Federal Register criteria for—

(1) determining the eligibility of a rural community for assistance under the program; and

(2) prioritizing requests for assistance under the program.

(d) FACTORS.—The criteria developed under subsection (c) shall take into account such factors as whether—

(1) a rural water supply project—

(A) serves—

(i) rural areas and small communities; or

(ii) Indian tribes; or

(B) promotes and applies a regional or watershed perspective to water resources management;

(2) there is an urgent and compelling need for a rural water supply project that would—

(A) improve the health or aesthetic quality of water;

(B) result in continuous, measurable, and significant water quality benefits; or

(C) address current or future water supply needs;

(3) a rural water supply project helps meet applicable requirements established by law; and

(4) a rural water supply project is cost effective.

(e) INCLUSIONS.—The Secretary may include—

(1) to the extent that connection provides a reliable water supply, a connection to preexisting infrastructure (including dams and conveyance channels) as part of a rural water supply project; and

(2) notwithstanding the limitation in section 102(8), a town or community with a population in excess of 50,000 inhabitants in an area served by a rural water supply project if, at the discretion of the Secretary, the town or community is considered to be a critical partner in the rural supply project.

SEC. 104. RURAL WATER PROGRAMS ASSESSMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Director of the Indian Health Service, the Secretary shall develop an assessment of—

(1) the status of all rural water supply projects under the jurisdiction of the Secretary authorized but not completed prior to the date of enactment of this Act, including appropriation amounts, the phase of development, total anticipated costs, and obstacles to completion;

(2) the current plan (including projected financial and workforce requirements) for the completion of the rural water supply projects within the time frames established under the provisions of law authorizing the projects or the final engineering reports for the projects;

(3) the demand for rural water supply projects;

(4) programs within other agencies that can, and a description of the extent to which the programs, provide support for rural water supply projects and water treatment programs in reclamation States, including an assessment of the requirements, funding levels, and conditions for eligibility for the programs assessed; and

(5) the extent of the unmet needs that the Secretary can meet with the program that complements activities undertaken under the authorities already within the jurisdiction of the Secretary and the heads of the agencies with whom the Secretary consults.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives a detailed report on the assessment conducted under subsection (a).

SEC. 105. APPRAISAL INVESTIGATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—On request of a non-Federal project entity with respect to a proposed rural water supply project that meets the eligibility criteria published under section 103(c) and subject to the availability of appropriations, the Secretary may—

(1) receive and review an appraisal investigation that is—

(A) developed by the non-Federal project entity independent of support from the Secretary; and

(B) submitted to the Secretary by the non-Federal project entity;

(2) conduct an appraisal investigation; or

(3) provide a grant to, or enter into a cooperative agreement with, the non-Federal project entity to conduct an appraisal investigation, if the Secretary determines that—

(A) the non-Federal project entity is qualified to complete the appraisal investigation in accordance with the criteria published under section 103(c); and

(B) using the non-Federal project entity to conduct the appraisal investigation is the lowest cost alternative for completing the appraisal investigation.

(b) DEADLINE.—An appraisal investigation conducted under subsection (a) shall be scheduled for completion not later than 2 years after the date on which the appraisal investigation is initiated.

(c) APPRAISAL REPORT.—As soon as practicable after an appraisal investigation is submitted to the Secretary under subsection (a)(1) or completed under paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (a), the Secretary shall prepare an appraisal report that—

(1) considers—

(A) whether the project meets—

(i) the appraisal criteria developed under subsection (d); and

(ii) the eligibility criteria developed under section 103(c);

(B) whether viable water supplies and water rights exist to supply the project, including all practicable water sources such as lower quality waters, nonpotable waters, and water reuse-based water supplies;

(C) whether the project has a positive effect on public health and safety;

(D) whether the project will meet water demand, including projected future needs;

(E) the extent to which the project provides environmental benefits, including source water protection;

(F) the ability of the project to supply water consistent with Indian trust responsibilities, as appropriate;

(G) whether the project applies a regional or watershed perspective and promotes benefits in the region in which the project is carried out;

(H) whether the project—

(i)(I) implements an integrated resources management approach; or

(II) enhances water management flexibility, including providing for—

(aa) local control to manage water supplies under varying water supply conditions; and

(bb) participation in water banking and markets for domestic and environmental purposes; and

(ii) promotes long-term protection of water supplies;

(I) preliminary cost estimates for the project; and

(J) whether the non-Federal project entity has the capability to pay 100 percent of the costs associated with the operations, maintenance, and replacement of the facilities constructed or developed as part of the rural water supply project; and

(2) provides recommendations on whether a feasibility study should be initiated under section 106(a).

(d) APPRAISAL CRITERIA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall promulgate criteria (including appraisal factors listed under subsection (c)) against which the appraisal investigations shall be assessed for completeness and appropriateness for a feasibility study.

(2) INCLUSIONS.—To minimize the cost of a rural water supply project to a non-Federal project entity, the Secretary shall include in the criteria methods to scale the level of effort needed to complete the appraisal investigation relative to the total size and cost of the proposed rural water supply project.

(e) REVIEW OF APPRAISAL INVESTIGATION.—Not later than 180 days after the date of submission of an appraisal investigation under subsection (a)(1) or the completion of an appraisal investigation under paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (a), the Secretary shall—

(1) with respect to an appraisal investigation conducted by a non-Federal project entity under subsection (a)(1), provide to the non-Federal entity an evaluation of whether the appraisal investigation satisfies the criteria promulgated under subsection (d);

(2) make available to the public, on request, the results of each appraisal investigation conducted under this title; and

(3) promptly publish in the Federal Register a notice of the availability of the results.

(f) COSTS.—

(1) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of an appraisal investigation conducted under subsection (a) shall be 100 percent of the total cost of the appraisal investigation, up to $200,000.

(2) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), if the cost of conducting an appraisal investigation is more than $200,000, the non-Federal share of the costs in excess of $200,000 shall be 50 percent.

(B) EXCEPTION.—The Secretary may reduce the non-Federal share required under subparagraph (A) if the Secretary determines that there is an overwhelming Federal interest in the appraisal investigation.

(g) CONSULTATION; IDENTIFICATION OF FUNDING SOURCES.—In conducting an appraisal investigation under subsection (a)(2), the Secretary shall—

(1) consult and cooperate with the non-Federal project entity and appropriate State, tribal, regional, and local authorities;

(2) consult with the heads of appropriate Federal agencies to—

(A) ensure that the proposed rural water supply project does not duplicate a project carried out under the authority of the agency head; and

(B) if a duplicate project is being carried out, identify the authority under which the duplicate project is being carried out; and

(3) identify what funding sources are available for the proposed rural water supply project.

SEC. 106. FEASIBILITY STUDIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—On completion of an appraisal report under section 105(c) that recommends undertaking a feasibility study and subject to the availability of appropriations, the Secretary shall—

(1) in cooperation with a non-Federal project entity, carry out a study to determine the feasibility of the proposed rural water supply project;

(2) receive and review a feasibility study that is—

(A) developed by the non-Federal project entity independent of support from the Secretary; and

(B) submitted to the Secretary by the non-Federal project entity; or

(3) provide a grant to, or enter into a cooperative agreement with, a non-Federal project entity to conduct a feasibility study, for submission to the Secretary, if the Secretary determines that—

(A) the non-Federal entity is qualified to complete the feasibility study in accordance with the criteria promulgated under subsection (d); and

(B) using the non-Federal project entity to conduct the feasibility study is the lowest cost alternative for completing the appraisal investigation.

(b) REVIEW OF NON-FEDERAL FEASIBILITY STUDIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In conducting a review of a feasibility study submitted under paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (a), the Secretary shall—

(A) in accordance with the feasibility factors described in subsection (c) and the criteria promulgated under subsection (d), assess the completeness of the feasibility study; and

(B) if the Secretary determines that a feasibility study is not complete, notify the non-Federal entity of the determination.

(2) Revisions.—If the Secretary determines under paragraph (1)(B) that a feasibility study is not complete, the non-Federal entity shall pay any costs associated with revising the feasibility study.

(c) Feasibility Factors.—Feasibility studies authorized or reviewed under this title shall include an assessment of—

(1) near- and long-term water demand in the region to be served by the rural water supply project;

(2) advancement of public health and safety of any existing rural water supply project and other benefits of the proposed rural water supply project;

(3) alternative new water supplies in the study area, including any opportunities to treat and use low-quality water, nonpotable water, water reuse-based supplies, and brackish and saline waters through innovative and economically viable treatment technologies;

(4) environmental quality and source water protection issues related to the rural water supply project;

(5) innovative opportunities for water conservation in the study area to reduce water use and water system costs, including—

(A) nonstructural approaches to reduce the need for the project; and

(B) demonstration technologies;

(6) the extent to which the project and alternatives take advantage of economic incentives and the use of market-based mechanisms;

(7)(A) the construction costs and projected operations, maintenance, and replacement costs of all alternatives; and

(B) the economic feasibility and lowest cost method of obtaining the desired results of each alternative, taking into account the Federal cost-share;

(8) the availability of guaranteed loans for a proposed rural water supply project;

(9) the financial capability of the non-Federal project entity to pay the non-Federal project entity's proportionate share of the design and construction costs and 100 percent of operations, maintenance, and replacement costs, including the allocation of costs to each non-Federal project entity in the case of multiple entities;

(10) whether the non-Federal project entity has developed an operations, management, and replacement plan to assist the non-Federal project entity in establishing rates and fees for beneficiaries of the rural water supply project;

(11)(A) the non-Federal project entity administrative organization that would implement construction, operations, maintenance, and replacement activities; and

(B) the fiscal, administrative, and operational controls to be implemented to manage the project;

(12) the extent to which the project addresses Indian trust responsibilities, as appropriate;

(13) the extent to which assistance for rural water supply is available under other Federal authorities;

(14) the engineering, environmental, and economic activities to be undertaken to carry out the study;

(15) the extent to which the project involves partnerships with other State, local, or tribal governments or Federal entities; and

(16) in the case of a project intended for Indian tribes and tribal organizations, the extent to which the project addresses the goal of economic self-sufficiency.

(d) Feasibility Study Criteria.—

(1) In general.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall promulgate criteria (including the feasibility factors listed under subsection (c)) under which the feasibility studies shall be assessed for completeness and appropriateness.

(2) Inclusions.—The Secretary shall include in the criteria promulgated under paragraph (1) methods to scale the level of effort needed to complete the feasibility assessment relative to the total size and cost of the proposed rural water supply project and reduce total costs to non-Federal entities.

(e) Feasibility Report.—

(1) In general.—After completion of appropriate feasibility studies for rural water supply projects that address the factors described in subsection (c) and the criteria promulgated under subsection (d), the Secretary shall—

(A) develop a feasibility report that includes—

(i) a recommendation of the Secretary on—

(I) whether the rural water supply project should be authorized for construction; and

(II) the appropriate non-Federal share of construction costs, which shall be—

(aa) at least 25 percent of the total construction costs; and

(bb) determined based on an analysis of the capability-to-pay information considered under subsections (c)(9) and (f); and

(ii) if the Secretary recommends that the project should be authorized for construction—

(I) what amount of grants, loan guarantees, or combination of grants and loan guarantees should be used to provide the Federal cost share;

(II) a schedule that identifies the annual operations, maintenance, and replacement costs that should be allocated to each non-Federal entity participating in the rural water supply project; and

(III) an assessment of the financial capability of each non-Federal entity participating in the rural water supply project to pay the allocated annual operation, maintenance, and replacement costs for the rural water supply project;

(B) submit the report to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives;

(C) make the report publicly available, along with associated study documents; and

(D) publish in the Federal Register a notice of the availability of the results.

(f) Capability-To-Pay.—

(1) In general.—In evaluating a proposed rural water supply project under this section, the Secretary shall—

(A) consider the financial capability of any non-Federal project entities participating in the rural water supply project to pay the capital construction costs of the rural water supply project; and

(B) recommend an appropriate Federal share and non-Federal share of the capital construction costs, as determined by the Secretary.

(2) Factors.—In determining the financial capability of non-Federal project entities to pay for a rural water supply project under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall evaluate factors for the project area, relative to the State and county average, including—

(A) per capita income;

(B) median household income;

(C) the poverty rate;

(D) the ability of the non-Federal project entity to raise tax revenues or assess fees;

(E) the strength of the balance sheet of the non-Federal project entity; and

(F) the existing cost of water in the region.

(3) Indian tribes.—In determining the capability-to-pay of Indian tribe project beneficiaries, the Secretary may consider deferring the collection of all or part of the non-Federal construction costs apportioned to Indian tribe project beneficiaries unless or until the Secretary determines that the Indian tribe project beneficiaries should pay—

(A) the costs allocated to the beneficiaries; or

(B) an appropriate portion of the costs.

(g) Cost-Sharing Requirement.—

(1) In general.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the Federal share of the cost of a feasibility study carried out under this section shall not exceed 50 percent of the study costs.

(2) Form.—The non-Federal share under paragraph (1) may be in the form of any in-kind services that the Secretary determines would contribute substantially toward the conduct and completion of the study.

(3) Financial hardship.—The Secretary may increase the Federal share of the costs of a feasibility study if the Secretary determines, based on a demonstration of financial hardship, that the non-Federal participant is unable to contribute at least 50 percent of the costs of the study.

(4) Larger communities.—In conducting a feasibility study of a rural water supply system that includes a community with a population in excess of 50,000 inhabitants, the Secretary may require the community to pay a greater percentage of the non-Federal share than that required for communities with less than 50,000 inhabitants.

(h) Consultation and Cooperation.—In addition to the non-Federal project entity, the Secretary shall consult and cooperate with appropriate Federal, State, tribal, regional, and local authorities during the conduct of each feasibility assessment and development of the feasibility report conducted under this title.

SEC. 107. MISCELLANEOUS.

(a) Authority of Secretary.—The Secretary may enter into contracts, financial assistance agreements, and such other agreements, and promulgate such regulations, as are necessary to carry out this title.

(b) Transfer of Projects.—Nothing in this title authorizes the transfer of pre-existing facilities or pre-existing components of any water system from Federal to private ownership or from private to Federal ownership.

(c) Federal Reclamation Law.—Nothing in this title supersedes or amends any Federal law associated with a project, or portion of a project, constructed under Federal reclamation law.

(d) Interagency Coordination.—The Secretary shall coordinate the program carried out under this title with existing Federal and State rural water and wastewater programs to facilitate the most efficient and effective solution to meeting the water needs of the non-Federal project sponsors.

(e) Multiple Indian Tribes.—In any case in which a contract is entered into with, or a grant is made, to an organization to perform services benefitting more than 1 Indian tribe under this title, the approval of each such Indian tribe shall be a prerequisite to entering into the contract or making the grant.

(f) Ownership of Facilities.—Title to any facility planned, designed, and recommended for construction under this title is intended to be held by the non-Federal project entity.

(g) EFFECT ON STATE WATER LAW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this title preempts or affects State water law or an interstate compact governing water.

(2) COMPLIANCE REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall comply with State water laws in carrying out this title.

(h) NO ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—Nothing in this title requires a feasibility study for, or imposes any other additional requirements with respect to, rural water supply projects or programs that are authorized before the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 108. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title $20,000,000 for the period of fiscal years 2006 through 2015, to remain available until expended.

(b) RURAL WATER PROGRAMS ASSESSMENT.—Of the amounts made available under subsection (a), not more than $1,000,000 may be made available to carry out section 104 for each of fiscal years 2006 and 2007.

(c) LIMITATION.—No amounts made available under this section shall be used to pay construction costs associated with any rural water supply project.

TITLE II—TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY WATER WORKS ACT

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Twenty-First Century Water Works Act".

SEC. 202. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) INDIAN TRIBE.—The term "Indian tribe" has the meaning given the term in section 4 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450b).

(2) LENDER.—The term "lender" means any non-Federal qualified institutional buyer (as defined in section 230.144A(a) of title 17, Code of Federal Regulation (or any successor regulation), known as Rule 144A(a) of the Securities and Exchange Commission and issued under the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. 77a et seq.)).

(3) LOAN GUARANTEE.—The term "loan guarantee" means any guarantee, insurance, or other pledge by the Secretary to pay all or part of the principal of, and interest on, a loan or other debt obligation of a non-Federal borrower to a lender.

(4) NON-FEDERAL BORROWER.—The term "non-Federal borrower" means—

(A) a State (including a department, agency, or political subdivision of a State); or

(B) a conservancy district, irrigation district, canal company, water users' association, Indian tribe, an agency created by interstate compact, or any other entity that has the capacity to contract with the United States under Federal reclamation law.

(5) PROJECT.—The term "project" means—

(A) a rural water supply project (as defined in section 102(8)); or

(B) an extraordinary operation and maintenance activity for, or the rehabilitation of, a facility—

(i) that is authorized by Federal reclamation law and constructed by the United States under such law; or

(ii) in connection with which there is a repayment or water service contract executed by the United States under Federal reclamation law.

(6) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 203. PROJECT ELIGIBILITY.

(a) ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall develop and publish in the Federal Register criteria for determining the eligibility of a project for financial assistance under section 204.

(2) INCLUSIONS.—Eligibility criteria shall include—

(A) submission of an application by the lender to the Secretary;

(B) demonstration of the creditworthiness of the project, including a determination by the Secretary that any financing for the project has appropriate security features to ensure repayment;

(C) demonstration by the non-Federal borrower, to the satisfaction of the Secretary, of the ability of the non-Federal borrower to repay the project financing from user fees or other dedicated revenue sources;

(D) demonstration by the non-Federal borrower, to the satisfaction of the Secretary, of the ability of the non-Federal borrower to pay all operations, maintenance, and replacement costs of the project facilities; and

(E) such other criteria as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(b) WAIVER.—The Secretary may waive any of the criteria in subsection (a)(2) that the Secretary determines to be duplicative or rendered unnecessary because of an action already taken by the United States.

(c) PROJECTS PREVIOUSLY AUTHORIZED.—A project that was authorized for construction under Federal reclamation laws prior to the date of enactment of this Act shall be eligible for assistance under this title, subject to the criteria established by the Secretary under subsection (a).

(d) CRITERIA FOR RURAL WATER SUPPLY PROJECTS.—A rural water supply project that is determined to be feasible under section 106 is eligible for a loan guarantee under section 204.

SEC. 204. LOAN GUARANTEES.

(a) AUTHORITY.—Subject to the availability of appropriations, the Secretary may make available to lenders for a project meeting the eligibility criteria established in section 203 loan guarantees to supplement private-sector or lender financing for the project.

(b) TERMS AND LIMITATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Loan guarantees under this section for a project shall be on such terms and conditions and contain such covenants, representations, warranties, and requirements as the Secretary determines to be appropriate to protect the financial interests of the United States.

(2) MAXIMUM AMOUNT.—The amount of a loan guarantee shall not exceed 90 percent of the reasonably anticipated eligible project costs.

(3) INTEREST RATE.—The interest rate on a loan guarantee shall be negotiated between the non-Federal borrower and the lender with the consent of the Secretary.

(4) AMORTIZATION.—A loan guarantee under this section shall provide for complete amortization of the loan guarantee within not more than 40 years.

(5) NON-SUBORDINATION.—In case of bankruptcy, insolvency, or liquidation of the non-Federal borrower, a loan guarantee shall not be subordinated to the claims of any holder of project obligations.

(c) PREPAYMENT AND REFINANCING.—Any prepayment or refinancing terms on a loan guarantee shall be negotiated between the non-Federal borrower and the lender with the consent of the Secretary.

SEC. 205. OPERATIONS, MAINTENANCE, AND REPLACEMENT COSTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The non-Federal share of operations, maintenance, and replacement costs for a project receiving Federal assistance under this title shall be 100 percent.

(b) PLAN.—On request of the non-Federal borrower, the Secretary may assist in the development of an operation, maintenance, and replacement plan to provide the necessary framework to assist the non-Federal borrower in establishing rates and fees for project beneficiaries.

SEC. 206. TITLE TO NEWLY CONSTRUCTED FACILITIES.

(a) NEW PROJECTS AND FACILITIES.—All new projects or facilities constructed in accordance with this title shall remain under the jurisdiction and control of the non-Federal borrower subject to the terms of the repayment agreement.

(b) EXISTING PROJECTS AND FACILITIES.—Nothing in this title affects the title of—

(1) reclamation projects authorized prior to the date of enactment of this Act;

(2) works supplemental to existing reclamation projects; or

(3) works constructed to rehabilitate existing reclamation projects.

SEC. 207. WATER RIGHTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this title preempts or affects State water law or an interstate compact governing water.

(b) COMPLIANCE REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall comply with State water laws in carrying out this title. Nothing in this title affects or preempts State water law or an interstate compact governing water.

SEC. 208. INTERAGENCY COORDINATION AND COOPERATION.

The Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture shall enter into a memorandum of agreement providing for Department of Agriculture financial appraisal functions and loan guarantee administration for activities carried out under this title.

SEC. 209. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this title, to remain available until expended.

By Mr. FEINGOLD:

S. 896. A bill to modify the optional method of computing net earnings from self-employment; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation to address an injustice in the Tax Code that is threatening family farmers and other self-employed individuals. Some of my constituents, primarily Wisconsin farmers, have requested Congress's assistance to correct the Tax Code so they can protect their families. The legislation I introduce today, the Farmer Tax Fairness Act of 2005, is similar to legislation I introduced last Congress and will solve the problem for today and into the future.

Farming is vital to Wisconsin. Wisconsin's agricultural industry plays a large and important role in the growth and prosperity of the entire State. Wisconsin's status as "America's Dairyland," is central to our State's agriculture industry. Wisconsin's dairy farmers produce approximately 23 billion pounds of milk and 25 percent of the country's butter a year. But Wisconsin's farmers produce much more than milk; they also are national leaders in the production of cheese, potatoes, ginseng, cranberries, various processing vegetables, and many organic foods. So when the hard-working farmers of Wisconsin need help, I will do all I can to assist.

One concern that I have heard from Wisconsin farmers is that the Tax Code can limit their eligibility for social safety net programs, including old age, survivors, and disability insurance, OASDI, under Social Security and the hospital insurance HI part of Medicare. These programs are paid for through payroll taxes on workers and through the self-employment tax on the income of self-employed individuals. To be eligible for OSADI and HI benefits an individual must be fully insured and must have earned a minimum amount of income in the years immediately preceding the need for coverage. Every year, the Social Security Administration, SSA, sets the amount of earned income that individuals must pay taxes on to earn quarters of coverage, QCs, and maintain their benefits. An individual's eligibility requirements depend upon the age at which death or disability occurs, but for workers over 31 years of age, they must have earned at least 20 QCs within the past 10 years.

Self-employed individuals can have highly variable income, and, particularly for farmers who are at the whim of Mother Nature, not every year is a good year. During lean years, individuals may not earn enough income to maintain adequate coverage under OASDI and HI. Therefore, the Tax Code provides options to allow self-employed individuals to maintain eligibility for benefits. These options allow individuals to choose to pay taxes based on $1,600 of earned income, thus allowing self-employed entrepreneurs to maintain the same Federal protections even when their income varies.

Unfortunately, both the options for farmers and nonfarmers—Social Security Act 211(a) and I.R.C. §1402(a)—have not kept pace with inflation, and they no longer provide security to families across the country. Decades ago, self-employment income of $1,600 earned an individual four QCs under SSA's calculations. In 2001, the amount needed to earn a QC rose to $830 of earned income, so individuals electing the optional methods were only able to earn one QC per year, making it much harder for them to remain eligible for benefits because they must average 2 QCs per year to be eligible.

Congress's failure to address this problem threatens the ability of self-employed individuals to maintain eligibility for OASDI and HI. I have heard from several of my constituent who want these options to be fixed so they can make sure their families will be taken care of in the event that something unforeseen occurs.

Therefore, I am introducing the Farmer Tax Fairness Act of 2005 in order to provide farmers and self-employed individuals with a fair choice. Under this bill, they will continue to be able to elect the optional method if they so choose. When individuals do elect the option, this legislation provides an update to the Tax Code so farmers and self-employed individuals can retain full eligibility for OASDI and HI benefits. It indexes the optional income levels to SSA's QC calculations, allowing these farmers and self-employed individuals to claim enough earned income to qualify for four OCs annually. In addition, by linking the earned income level to SSA's requirements for QCs, the bill will ensure that the amount of income deemed to be earned under the optional methods will not need to be adjusted by Congress again.

Along with providing security to self-employed individuals and farmers across the country, this solution is fiscally responsible. It actually provides a short run increase in U.S. Treasury revenues while having negligible impact upon the Social Security trust fund in the long run.

Let me take a moment to acknowledge the efforts of the Senator from Iowa, Mr. GRASSLEY, to address this problem in the 107th Congress. As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, he included similar legislative language in the chairman's mark for the Small Business and Farm Economic Recovery Act of 2002. The Senate Finance Committee held a markup on the legislation on September 19, 2002, but the changes to the optional methods did not become law.

When incomes fall, the Tax Code provides optional methods for calculating net earnings to ensure that farmers and self-employed individuals maintain eligibility for social safety net programs. When these provisions were developed, Congress intended self-employed individuals to have the ability to pay enough to earn a full 4 QCs. Unfortunately the Tax Code has not kept up with the times and due to inflation many farmers are losing eligibility for some of Social Security's programs. Congress needs to provide security to farm families and other self-employed individuals. I urge my colleagues to support the Farmer Tax Fairness Act of 2005.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 896

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Farmer Tax Fairness Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. MODIFICATION TO OPTIONAL METHOD OF COMPUTING NET EARNINGS FROM SELF-EMPLOYMENT.

(a) AMENDMENTS TO THE INTERNAL REVENUE CODE OF 1986.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The matter following paragraph (15) of section 1402(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended—

(A) by striking "$2,400" each place it appears and inserting "the upper limit", and

(B) by striking "$1,600" each place it appears and inserting "the lower limit".

(2) DEFINITIONS.—Section 1402 of such Code is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(l) UPPER AND LOWER LIMITS.—For purposes of subsection (a)—

"(1) LOWER LIMIT.—The lower limit for any taxable year is the sum of the amounts required under section 213(d) of the Social Security Act for a quarter of coverage in effect with respect to each calendar quarter ending with or within such taxable year.

"(2) UPPER LIMIT.—The upper limit for any taxable year is the amount equal to 150 percent of the lower limit for such taxable year.".

(b) AMENDMENTS TO THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The matter following paragraph (15) of section 211(a) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(A) by striking "$2,400" each place it appears and inserting "the upper limit", and

(B) by striking "$1,600" each place it appears and inserting "the lower limit".

(2) DEFINITIONS.—Section 211 of such Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"Upper and Lower Limits

"(k) For purposes of subsection (a)—

"(1) The lower limit for any taxable year is the sum of the amounts required under section 213(d) for a quarter of coverage in effect with respect to each calendar quarter ending with or within such taxable year.

"(2) The upper limit for any taxable year is the amount equal to 150 percent of the lower limit for such taxable year.".

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 212 of such Act is amended—

(A) in subsection (b), by striking "For" and inserting "Except as provided in subsection (c), for"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) For the purpose of determining average indexed monthly earnings, average monthly wage, and quarters of coverage in the case of any individual who elects the option described in clause (ii) or (iv) in the matter following section 211(a)(15) for any taxable year that does not begin with or during a particular calendar year and end with or during such year, the self-employment income of such individual deemed to be derived during such taxable year shall be allocated to the two calendar years, portions of which are included within such taxable year, in the same proportion to the total of such deemed self-employment income as the sum of the amounts applicable under section 213(d) for the calendar quarters ending with or within each such calendar year bears to the lower limit for such taxable year specified in section 211(k)(1).".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mr. BAUCUS):

S. 897. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to clarify the calculation of the reserve allowance for medical benefits of plans sponsored by bona fide associations; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill to clarify the tax treatment of a narrow range of health plans sponsored by associations.

I am joined in this effort by my good friends and colleagues, the Chairman and the Ranking Democratic Member of the Finance Committee respectively, Senator GRASSLEY and Senator BAUCUS.

For many years, trade associations of small businesses have sponsored plans for their member companies to provide health care coverage to their employees. These plans have helped thousands of small businesses across the country control rising health care costs and keep administrative costs to a minimum.

Unfortunately, final regulations issued by the Internal Revenue Service in 2003 concerning "10-or-more" employer health benefit plans that use the experience-rating method threaten to shut down the health plans of many associations. Essentially, these regulations state that health plans that utilize experience rating are not allowed to accumulate reserves, forcing them into the untenable position of either operating on a break-even basis or losing money.

These regulations were not aimed directly at association health plans, but at certain other employer-provided benefits, such as life and disability insurance, where the IRS has found a pattern of abuse among some companies. However, the proposed implementation of the regulations make it impossible for an association to continue operating a health plan for the group's small business members, even where no abuse of the rules has occurred.

For example, in my home State of Utah, at least one association of small businesses has already been negatively affected by these regulations. This association has dozens of small business members that are dependent upon the health plan the association has had in place for decades. Compliance with the regulations will very likely lead to increased costs for health coverage for the 1,300 employees and their 2,200 dependents of these small businesses. If the trust is not able to properly reserve funds for the future, some of these businesses could be forced to drop out as premiums rise higher and higher and the plan is unable to offset those increases with the reserves.

The legislation we are introducing today would correct this problem by providing that medical benefit plans of bona fide associations may have a reserve of up to 35 percent. This amount is designed to give association health plans the flexibility they need without raising the potential for abuse.

In the face of rising health care costs, employers that offer health coverage to their employees are struggling to maintain these benefits, and those who do not offer coverage find the cost of providing this important advantage increasingly out of reach. With the recent 59 percent spike in health care costs over the past five years, employers have had to resort to various cost-cutting moves in order to keep providing health care benefits. The IRS regulations affecting 10-or-more employer health benefit plans could strike a devastating blow to many small businesses, forcing them to stop providing health care benefits altogether, or at least making the coverage more expensive and/or less available to employees.

This legislation was developed with bipartisan support. It is noncontroversial. It corrects a problem created by a well-meaning regulation that inadvertently overreached its target. I urge all of my colleagues to help us correct this error and not allow medical benefit health plans offered by small business associations to be forced to shut down, leaving thousands of employees facing higher costs for medical coverage, or worse, no coverage at all.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 897

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. ALLOWANCE OF RESERVE FOR MEDICAL BENEFITS OF PLANS SPONSORED BY BONA FIDE ASSOCIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 419A(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to account limit) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6) ADDITIONAL RESERVE FOR MEDICAL BENEFITS OF BONA FIDE ASSOCIATION PLANS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—An applicable account limit for any taxable year may include a reserve in an amount not to exceed 35 percent of the sum of—

"(i) the qualified direct costs, and

"(ii) the change in claims incurred, but unpaid, for such taxable year with respect to medical benefits (other than post-retirement medical benefits).

"(B) APPLICABLE ACCOUNT LIMIT.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'applicable account limit' means an account limit for a qualified asset account with respect to medical benefits provided through a plan maintained by a bona fide association (as defined in section 2791(d)(3) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300gg-91(d)(3))".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending after December 31, 2004.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleagues, Senators HATCH and GRASSLEY, in introducing legislation that will allow associations to make health insurance available to employers without either wondering if the full premium is deductible, or holding minimal reserves.

Across this country, many associations sponsor health insurance plans for member employers—plans that provide health coverage for thousands of working Americans. These arrangements allow smaller employers to get a better deal on insurance than they could on their own. As we struggle to improve the number of Americans who have health insurance coverage, we surely want to encourage an arrangement that provides cost-effective health benefits.

In order to smooth the cost of these medical benefits, these plans often hold reserves that are more than is necessary to cover unpaid claims that have been incurred at the end of the year. We should encourage that practice. But current law discourages these plans from holding more than the bare minimum in reserve.

The problem is that these plans use welfare trusts as a vehicle to fund the benefits. Under current law, if a state trade association sponsors a health welfare trust, and that trust does not charge every participant the same premium, then that plan may have to go back to employers after the end of the year and say "Sorry. You can't deduct all of that premium we asked you to pay last year." Either that, or the association has to keep premiums low enough to avoid non-deductible contributions, and risk under-funding the benefits. That is not a good outcome.

So we have a simple solution here. This bill allows these association health plans to maintain reserves of thirty-five percent of annual costs without jeopardizing the deductibility of employer contributions to the trust. With current technology, claims are usually processed in a matter of days, not months, so thirty-five percent of annual costs is more than is normally needed to cover unpaid claims at the end of the year. That will leave a cushion to cover adverse experience, and help smooth future premium fluctuations.

This simple change will allow bona fide associations all over this country to not only continue providing health benefits, but to secure those benefits with adequate reserves. Plans like the State Bankers Association Group Benefits Trust that has been operating out of my home town of Helena, Montana, since 1978. This Trust provides health insurance to employees of banks in Montana, Wyoming, and Idaho. Forty-nine Montana banks provide coverage for nearly 3,000 Montanans through this program.

This bill is important to the employers and employees who get health insurance coverage through the State Bankers' trust, and the many other association health trusts in Montana and around the country. We encourage our colleagues to join us in helping associations continue to provide health benefits to tens of thousands of American workers and their families.

By Mrs. HUTCHISON (for herself, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. COCHRAN):

S. 898. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to authorize a demonstration grant program to provide patient navigator services to reduce barriers and improve health care outcomes, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 898

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Patient Navigator Outreach and Chronic Disease Prevention Act of 2005”.

SEC. 2. PATIENT NAVIGATOR GRANTS.

Subpart V of part D of title III of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 256) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 340A. PATIENT NAVIGATOR GRANTS.

“(a) GRANTS.—The Secretary, acting through the Administrator of the Health Resources and Services Administration, may make grants to eligible entities for the development and operation of demonstration programs to provide patient navigator services to improve health care outcomes. The Secretary shall coordinate with, and ensure the participation of, the Indian Health Service, the National Cancer Institute, the Office of Rural Health Policy, and such other offices and agencies as deemed appropriate by the Secretary, regarding the design and evaluation of the demonstration programs.

“(b) USE OF FUNDS.—The Secretary shall require each recipient of a grant under this section to use the grant to recruit, assign, train, and employ patient navigators who have direct knowledge of the communities they serve to facilitate the care of individuals, including by performing each of the following duties:

“(1) Acting as contacts, including by assisting in the coordination of health care services and provider referrals, for individuals who are seeking prevention or early detection services for, or who following a screening or early detection service are found to have a symptom, abnormal finding, or diagnosis of, cancer or other chronic disease.

“(2) Facilitating the involvement of community organizations in assisting individuals who are at risk for or who have cancer or other chronic diseases to receive better access to high-quality health care services (such as by creating partnerships with patient advocacy groups, charities, health care centers, community hospice centers, other health care providers, or other organizations in the targeted community).

“(3) Notifying individuals of clinical trials and, on request, facilitating enrollment of eligible individuals in these trials.

“(4) Anticipating, identifying, and helping patients to overcome barriers within the health care system to ensure prompt diagnostic and treatment resolution of an abnormal finding of cancer or other chronic disease.

“(5) Coordinating with the relevant health insurance ombudsman programs to provide information to individuals who are at risk for or who have cancer or other chronic diseases about health coverage, including private insurance, health care savings accounts, and other publicly funded programs (such as Medicare, Medicaid, health programs operated by the Department of Veterans Affairs or the Department of Defense, the State children's health insurance program, and any private or governmental prescription assistance programs).

“(6) Conducting ongoing outreach to health disparity populations, including the uninsured, rural populations, and other medically underserved populations, in addition to assisting other individuals who are at risk for or who have cancer or other chronic diseases to seek preventative care.

“(c) PROHIBITIONS.—

“(1) REFERRAL FEES.—The Secretary shall require each recipient of a grant under this section to prohibit any patient navigator providing services under the grant from accepting any referral fee, kickback, or other thing of value in return for referring an individual to a particular health care provider.

“(2) LEGAL FEES AND COSTS.—The Secretary shall prohibit the use of any grant funds received under this section to pay any fees or costs resulting from any litigation, arbitration, mediation, or other proceeding to resolve a legal dispute.

“(d) GRANT PERIOD.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), the Secretary may award grants under this section for periods of not more than 3 years.

“(2) EXTENSIONS.—Subject to paragraph (3), the Secretary may extend the period of a grant under this section. Each such extension shall be for a period of not more than 1 year.

“(3) LIMITATIONS ON GRANT PERIOD.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary—

“(A) shall ensure that the total period of a grant does not exceed 4 years; and

“(B) may not authorize any grant period ending after September 30, 2010.

“(e) APPLICATION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—To seek a grant under this section, an eligible entity shall submit an application to the Secretary in such form, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require.

“(2) CONTENTS.—At a minimum, the Secretary shall require each such application to outline how the eligible entity will establish baseline measures and benchmarks that meet the Secretary's requirements to evaluate program outcomes.

“(f) UNIFORM BASELINE MEASURES.—The Secretary shall establish uniform baseline measures in order to properly evaluate the impact of the demonstration projects under this section.

“(g) PREFERENCE.—In making grants under this section, the Secretary shall give preference to eligible entities that demonstrate in their applications plans to utilize patient navigator services to overcome significant barriers in order to improve health care outcomes in their respective communities.

“(h) DUPLICATION OF SERVICES.—An eligible entity that is receiving Federal funds for activities described in subsection (b) on the date on which the entity submits an application under subsection (e), may not receive a grant under this section unless the entity can demonstrate that amounts received under the grant will be utilized to expand services or provide new services to individuals who would not otherwise be served.

“(i) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PROGRAMS.—The Secretary shall ensure coordination of the demonstration grant program under this section with existing authorized programs in order to facilitate access to high-quality health care services.

“(j) STUDY; REPORTS.—

“(1) FINAL REPORT BY SECRETARY.—Not later than 6 months after the completion of the demonstration grant program under this section, the Secretary shall conduct a study of the results of the program and submit to the Congress a report on such results that includes the following:

“(A) An evaluation of the program outcomes, including—

“(i) quantitative analysis of baseline and benchmark measures; and “(ii) aggregate information about the patients served and program activities.

“(B) Recommendations on whether patient navigator programs could be used to improve patient outcomes in other public health areas.

“(2) REPORTS BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may provide interim reports to the Congress on the demonstration grant program under this section at such intervals as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

“(3) INTERIM REPORTS BY GRANTEES.—The Secretary may require grant recipients under this section to submit interim and final reports on grant program outcomes.

“(k) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—This section shall not be construed to authorize funding for the delivery of health care services (other than the patient navigator duties listed in subsection (b)).

“(1) The term ‘eligible entity’ means a public or nonprofit private health center (including a Federally qualified health center (as that term is defined in section 1861(aa)(4) of the Social Security Act)), a health facility operated by or pursuant to a contract with the Indian Health Service, a hospital, a cancer center, a rural health clinic, an academic health center, or a nonprofit entity that enters into a partnership or coordinates referrals with such a center, clinic, facility, or hospital to provide patient navigator services.

“(2) The term ‘health disparity population’ means a population that, as determined by the Secretary, has a significant disparity in the overall rate of disease incidence, prevalence, morbidity, mortality, or survival rates as compared to the health status of the general population.

“(3) The term ‘patient navigator’ means an individual who has completed a training program approved by the Secretary to perform the duties listed in subsection (b).

“(m) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—To carry out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for fiscal year 2006, $5,000,000 for fiscal year 2007, $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2008, $6,500,000 for fiscal year 2009, and $3,500,000 for fiscal year 2010.

“(2) AVAILABILITY.—The amounts appropriated pursuant to paragraph (1) shall remain available for obligation through the end of fiscal year 2010.”.

By Mr. BURNS:

S. 899. A bill to direct the Secretary of Agriculture to convey certain land in the Beaverhead-Deerlodge and Kootenai National Forests, Montana, to Jefferson County and Sanders County, Montana, for use as cemeteries and other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, this bill conveys 3.4 acres on the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest to Jefferson County, MT and 10 acres on the Kootenai National Forest to Sanders County, MT for continued use as cemeteries.

The Elkhorn Cemetery in Jefferson County has been used as a cemetery since the 1860's. Due to surveying errors and limited information when the National Forest boundaries were surveyed in the early 1900's, the cemetery was included as National Forest lands. The cemetery is still in use by local families who homesteaded and worked the mines in the area. However, Forest Service manual direction strongly discourages burials on National Forest lands, placing both the families and Forest Service in an awkward position.

The Noxon Cemetery is part of a Kootenai National Forest administrative site that is currently for sale. The cemetery has been used since at least 1910 and contains over 300 graves. Sanders County wants to protect the cemetery from potential damage, and the Forest Service wants to remove the encumbrance of the cemetery from the administrative site sale or future Federal ownership.

In both locations, it is clear the cemeteries should not have been included as part of the National Forest. The County Commissioners and the local public strongly support the conveyance.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 899

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Montana Cemetery Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. CONVEYANCE TO JEFFERSON COUNTY AND SANDERS COUNTY, MONTANA.

(a) CONVEYANCE.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act and subject to valid existing rights, the Secretary of Agriculture (referred to in this Act as the "Secretary"), acting through the Chief of the Forest Service, shall convey to Jefferson County, Montana, the Elkhorn Cemetery and to Sanders County, Montana, the Noxon Cemetery, for no consideration, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the parcels of land as described in subsection (b).

(b) DESCRIPTION OF LAND.—The parcels of land referred to in subsection (a) are the parcels of National Forest System land (including any improvements on the land) known as—

(1) the Elkhorn Cemetery, which consists of 10 acres in Jefferson County located in SW1/4 Sec. 14, T. 6 N., R. 3 W.; and

(2) the Noxon Cemetery, which consists of 3.4 acres in Sanders County located in SE1/4, Sec. 24, T. 26 N., R. 33 W.

(c) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions for the conveyance under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 119—DESIGNATING APRIL 21, 2005, AS "NATIONAL KINDERGARTEN RECOGNITION DAY"

Mr. SALAZAR (for himself, Ms. LANDRIEU, and Mr. BINGAMAN) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 119

Whereas Friedrich Froebel, known as the "Father of Kindergarten", opened the first kindergarten classroom on April 21, 1837, with the goal of shaping young children in a nurturing, educational, and protected environment;

Whereas kindergarten has a long history of enhancing children's cognitive, physical, and social development in the United States and throughout the world;

Whereas Margarethe Meyer Schurz opened the first German-speaking kindergarten in the United States in 1856, Elizabeth Peabody opened the first English-speaking kindergarten in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1873, and the first public school kindergarten classrooms were established under the leadership of Susan Blow and William Torrey Harris in St. Louis, Missouri, in the early 1870s;

Whereas kindergarten is a critical year in children's formal education, as well as in their continued physical, social, and emotional development, that prepares them for later school success and lifelong learning;

Whereas quality kindergarten programs use developmentally, culturally, and linguistically appropriate curricula, teaching practices, and assessments to support each child's learning and development progress to reach his or her maximum potential;

Whereas teachers who teach kindergarten need to have specialized knowledge and skills in working with young children to respond to the unique interests, learning styles, and developmental characteristics of children in their kindergarten year;

Whereas kindergarten programs need to be ready for all children who are eligible, including children with disabilities and children who are not native English speakers, and their families;

Whereas kindergarten programs should collaborate and coordinate with preschools and with the other early elementary grades in order to provide a continuum of appropriate, effective early learning for all children as they transition to and through the early grades of school;

Whereas in 2001, more than more 3,700,000 children between the ages of 4 and 6 years old attended kindergarten, including full-day, half-day, or alternate day programs;

Whereas the percentage of children attending full-day kindergarten programs has grown from 28 percent in 1977 to 60 percent in 2001; and

Whereas establishment of a "National Kindergarten Recognition Day" will help draw attention to the critical role kindergarten plays as the transitional year from early education programs to the elementary and secondary education system: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates April 21, 2005, as "National Kindergarten Recognition Day" to raise public awareness about the impact of the kindergarten year on the development of our nation's children; and

(2) urges the people of the United States to recognize the historic tradition of kindergarten in the United States and its contribution to preparing children for their elementary and secondary educational achievement and experiences.

SENATE RESOLUTION 120—HONORING SMALL BUSINESSES DURING THE SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION'S NATIONAL SMALL BUSINESS WEEK, THE WEEK BEGINNING APRIL 24, 2005.

Ms. SNOWE (for herself, Mr. KERRY, Mr. TALENT, Mr. VITTER, Mr. CORNYN, Mr. COLEMAN, Mr. BURNS, Mr. BOND, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. ISAKSON, and Ms. LANDRIEU) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 120

Whereas America's 25,000,000 small businesses have fueled the Nation's economy, creating more than ¾ of all new jobs and accounting for more than 50 percent of the Nation's gross domestic product;

Whereas small businesses are the Nation's innovators, advancing technology and fueling the economic growth and productivity;

Whereas the Small Business Administration has been a critical partner in the success of the Nation's small businesses and these businesses' continued economic growth;

Whereas the mission of the Small Business Administration is to maintain and strengthen the Nation's economy by aiding, counseling, assisting, and protecting the interests of small businesses and by helping families and small businesses recover from natural disasters;

Whereas the Small Business Administration has helped small businesses access critical lending opportunities, protected small businesses from excessive Federal regulatory enforcement, played a key role in ensuring full and open competition for government contracts, and improved the economic environment in which small businesses compete;

Whereas the Small Business Administration, which was established in 1953, has also provided valuable service to small businesses through financial assistance, technical assistance, procurement assistance, small business advocacy, and disaster recovery assistance;

Whereas for over 50 years the Small Business Administration has helped approximately 22,000,000 Americans start, grow, and expand their businesses and has placed almost $250,000,000,000 in loans and venture capital financing into the hands of entrepreneurs;

Whereas the Small Business Administration has helped millions of entrepreneurs achieve the American dream of owning a small business; and

Whereas the Small Business Administration will mark National Small Business Week, the week beginning April 24, 2005: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) honors small businesses during the Small Business Administration's National Small Business Week, the week beginning April 24, 2005;

(2) supports the purpose and goals of National Small Business Week; and

(3) commends the Small Business Administration and the Small Business Administration's resource partners—

(A) for their work, which has been critical in helping the Nation's small businesses grow and develop; and

(B) for being key players in the Nation's economic vitality.

SENATE RESOLUTION 121—SUPPORTING MAY 2005 AS "NATIONAL BETTER HEARING AND SPEECH MONTH" AND COMMENDING THOSE STATES THAT HAVE IMPLEMENTED ROUTINE HEARING SCREENING FOR EVERY NEWBORN BEFORE THE NEWBORN LEAVES THE HOSPITAL

Mr. COLEMAN (for himself, Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Ms. SNOWE) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions:

S. RES. 121

Whereas the National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders reports that approximately 28,000,000 people in the United States experience hearing loss or have a hearing impairment;

Whereas 1 out of every 3 people in the United States over the age of 65 have hearing loss;

Whereas the overwhelming majority of people in the United States with hearing loss would benefit from the use of a hearing aid and fewer than 7,000,000 people in the United States use a hearing aid;

Whereas 30 percent of people in the United States suffering from hearing loss cite financial constraints as an impediment to hearing aid use;

Whereas hearing loss is among the most common congenital birth defects;

Whereas a delay in diagnosing the hearing loss of a newborn can affect the social, emotional, and academic development of the child;

Whereas the average age at which newborns with hearing loss are diagnosed is between the ages of 12 to 25 months; and

Whereas May 2005 is National Better Hearing and Speech Month, providing Federal, State, and local governments, members of the private and nonprofit sectors, hearing and speech professionals, and all people in the United States an opportunity to focus on preventing, mitigating, and treating hearing impairments: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) supports the goals and ideals of National Better Hearing and Speech Month, May 2005;

(2) commends those States that have implemented routine hearing screenings for every newborn before the newborn leaves the hospital; and

(3) encourages all people in the United States to have their hearing checked regularly.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to submit the Better Hearing and Speech Month Resolution with my friend and colleague Senator JOSEPH LIEBERMAN of Connecticut.

By passing this resolution, Congress will recognize May 2005 as National Better Hearing and Speech Month which will help raise public awareness, encourage prevention and treatment of hearing impairments, and commend those States that have implemented routine hearing screening for every newborn baby before the infant leaves the hospital. One in every ten Americans has hearing loss making it one of the most prevalent chronic health conditions in this country. In addition, every day 33 babies are born in the United States with permanent hearing loss, making it one of the most frequently occurring birth defects. The impact of delayed detection and intervention can last a lifetime.

When hearing loss is found early, intervention and treatment can produce dramatic improvements in child speech and language development by school age.

This Resolution will raise public awareness of the 28 million Americans who suffer from hearing loss and the importance of early detection and treatment.

I look forward to working with my colleagues to pass this Resolution as research shows that children identified with hearing loss early and those who receive appropriate early qualified intervention by the age of six months have significantly improved speech skills than children whose hearing loss is identified later.

SENATE RESOLUTION 122—RECOGNIZING THE HISTORIC EFFORTS OF THE REPUBLIC OF KAZAKHSTAN TO REDUCE THE THREAT OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION THROUGH COOPERATION IN THE NUNN-LUGAR/COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION PROGRAM, AND CELEBRATING THE 10TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE REMOVAL OF ALL NUCLEAR WEAPONS FROM THE TERRITORY OF KAZAKHSTAN

Mr. LUGAR submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 122

Whereas at the time of the collapse of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in December 1991, 1,410 nuclear warheads on heavy intercontinental ballistic missiles, air-launched cruise missiles, and heavy bombers were located within the Republic of Kazakhstan;

Whereas, on July 2, 1992, the parliament of Kazakhstan approved and made Kazakhstan a party to the Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms, with annexes, protocols and memorandum of understanding, signed at Moscow July 31, 1991, and entered into force December 5, 1994 (commonly known as the "START Treaty");

Whereas, on February 14, 1995, Kazakhstan formally acceded to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, done at Washington, London, and Moscow July 1, 1968, and entered into force March 5, 1970 (commonly known as the "Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty");

Whereas, on December 13, 1993, the Government of Kazakhstan signed the Safe and Secure Dismantlement Act (SSD) and its 5 implementing agreements with the United States, and became eligible to receive $85,000,000 in assistance under the Nunn-Lugar/Cooperative Threat Reduction Program;

Whereas the decision of the people and the Government of Kazakhstan to transfer all nuclear weapons from the territory of Kazakhstan to the control of the Russian Federation allowed Kazakhstan to become a non-nuclear-weapon State Party to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty;

Whereas the continuing efforts of the Government of Kazakhstan to pursue cooperative efforts with the United States and other countries to secure, eliminate, destroy, or interdict weapons and materials of mass destruction and their means of delivery provides a model for such efforts; and

Whereas, in April 1995, the Government of Kazakhstan formally transferred the last nuclear warhead from the territory of Kazakhstan to the territory of the Russian Federation: Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate commends, on the occasion of the 10th anniversary of the removal of the last nuclear warhead from the territory of Kazakhstan, the people and the Government of the Republic of Kazakhstan for their historic decision to rid Kazakhstan of nuclear weapons.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, today I submit a Senate resolution to celebrate the decision made by Kazakhstan to join the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty (NPT) as a non-nuclear weapon state. Ten years ago this month Kazakhstan sent the last Soviet nuclear warhead on its territory to Russia.

With the Review Conference on the NPT in New York starting next week, it is an especially important time to note the progress made toward the NPT's goals, with U.S. assistance, in Kazakhstan.

More than a decade ago, when the Soviet Union collapsed, Kazakhstan became the fourth largest nuclear power in the world. But instead of enlarging the nuclear club, Kazakhstan joined Ukraine and Belarus in turning away from weapons of mass destruction. Courageous leaders chose instead to embrace the NPT in removing all nuclear arms from Kazakhstan.

The world cheered when Kazakhstan formally acceded to the NPT. I am proud of the role the United States played in Kazakhstan's decision and of our role in facilitating the removal of thousands of nuclear warheads and the elimination of hundreds of SS–18 intercontinental ballistic missiles, silos, and command centers. The addition of three more nuclear-armed states would have been a devastating setback for the NPT.

It is particularly important that the Senate draw attention to Kazakhstan's wise and brave choice, as it stands in stark contrast to events in India, Pakistan, North Korea, and Iran. In 1998, the world was shocked by the testing of nuclear weapons in India and Pakistan. In January 2003, the durability of the NPT was shaken by North Korea's purported withdrawal. We have watched for the past two years as the IAEA deliberated over Iran's numerous safeguards violations amid Tehran's threats of withdrawal from the NPT should the body seek to enforce the treaty's provisions.

With these events in mind, we should remember Kazakhstan. Instead of violating international norms and retaining nuclear weapons, Kazakh leaders made the right choice. When searching for success stories, the international community can turn to Kazakhstan.

The Nunn-Lugar Program also assisted Kazakhstan in eliminating the former Soviet nuclear weapons testing complex at the Degelen Mountain Test Tunnel Complex and at Balapan. In close cooperation with Kazakh partners, the Nunn-Lugar program systematically dismantled the complex and sealed nearly 200 nuclear test tunnels and shafts. These facilities will never again contribute to the weapons systems that threatened the world during the Cold War.

The United States, Kazakhstan, and the international community still have much work to do and these efforts will require compromise and sacrifice. The last ten years have shown that nothing is impossible. Both sides have set aside past differences to accomplish this cooperation. Let us continue to approach these challenges with creativity, a willingness to cooperate, and a commitment to the NPT.

SEC. 1110. NONREDUCTION IN PAY WHILE FEDERAL EMPLOYEE IS PERFORMING ACTIVE SERVICE IN THE UNIFORMED SERVICES OR NATIONAL GUARD. (a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Reservists Pay Security Act of 2005".

(b) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter IV of chapter 55 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 5538. Nonreduction in pay while serving in the uniformed services or National Guard

"(a) An employee who is absent from a position of employment with the Federal Government in order to perform active duty in the uniformed services pursuant to a call or order to active duty under a provision of law referred to in section 101(a)(13)(B) of title 10 shall be entitled, while serving on active duty, to receive, for each pay period described in subsection (b), an amount equal to the amount by which—

"(1) the amount of basic pay which would otherwise have been payable to such employee for such pay period if such employee's civilian employment with the Government had not been interrupted by that service, exceeds (if at all)

"(2) the amount of pay and allowances which (as determined under subsection (d))—

"(A) is payable to such employee for that service; and

"(B) is allocable to such pay period.

"(b)(1) Amounts under this section shall be payable with respect to each pay period (which would otherwise apply if the employee's civilian employment had not been interrupted)—

"(A) during which such employee is entitled to reemployment rights under chapter 43 of title 38 with respect to the position from which such employee is absent (as referred to in subsection (a)); and

"(B) for which such employee does not otherwise receive basic pay (including by taking any annual, military, or other paid leave) to which such employee is entitled by virtue of such employee's civilian employment with the Government.

"(2) For purposes of this section, the period during which an employee is entitled to reemployment rights under chapter 43 of title 38—

"(A) shall be determined disregarding the provisions of section 4312(d) of title 38; and

"(B) shall include any period of time specified in section 4312(e) of title 38 within which an employee may report or apply for employment or reemployment following completion of service on active duty to which called or ordered as described in subsection (a).

"(c) Any amount payable under this section to an employee shall be paid—

"(1) by such employee's employing agency;

"(2) from the appropriation or fund which would be used to pay the employee if such employee were in a pay status; and

"(3) to the extent practicable, at the same time and in the same manner as would basic pay if such employee's civilian employment had not been interrupted.

"(d) The Office of Personnel Management shall, in consultation with Secretary of Defense, prescribe any regulations necessary to carry out the preceding provisions of this section.

"(e)(1) The head of each agency referred to in section 2302(a)(2)(C)(ii) shall, in consultation with the Office, prescribe procedures to ensure that the rights under this section apply to the employees of such agency.

"(2) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall, in consultation with the Office, prescribe procedures to ensure that the rights under this section apply to the employees of that agency.

"(f) For purposes of this section—

"(1) the terms 'employee', 'Federal Government', and 'uniformed services' have the same respective meanings as given them in section 4303 of title 38;

"(2) the term 'employing agency', as used with respect to an employee entitled to any payments under this section, means the agency or other entity of the Government (including an agency referred to in section 2302(a)(2)(C)(ii)) with respect to which such employee has reemployment rights under chapter 43 of title 38; and

"(3) the term 'basic pay' includes any amount payable under section 5304.".

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 55 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 5537 the following:

"5538. Nonreduction in pay while serving in the uniformed services or National Guard.".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to pay periods (as described in section 5538(b) of title 5, United States Code, as amended by this section) beginning on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

RESERVE AFFILIATION BONUS

SEC. 1111. Notwithstanding subsection (c) of section 308e of title 37, United States Code, the maximum amount of the bonus paid to a member of the Armed Forces pursuant to a reserve affiliation agreement entered into under such section during fiscal year 2005 shall not exceed $10,000, and the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Homeland Security, with respect to the Coast Guard, may prescribe regulations under subsection (f) of such section to modify the method by which bonus payments are made under reserve affiliation agreements entered into during such fiscal year.

SERVICEMEMBERS' GROUP LIFE INSURANCE

SEC. 1112. SERVICEMEMBERS' GROUP LIFE INSURANCE ENHANCEMENTS. (a) INCREASED MAXIMUM AMOUNT UNDER SERVICEMEMBERS' GROUP LIFE INSURANCE.—Section 1967 of title 38, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(3)(A), by striking clause (i) and inserting the following new clause:

"(i) In the case of a member—

"(I) $400,000 or such lesser amount as the member may elect;

"(II) in the case of a member covered by subsection (e), the amount provided for or elected by the member under subclause (I) plus the additional amount of insurance provided for the member by subsection (e); or

"(III) in the case of a member covered by subsection (e) who has made an election under paragraph (2)(A) not to be insured under this subchapter, the amount of insurance provided for the member by subsection (e)."; and

(2) in subsection (d), by striking "$250,000" and inserting "$400,000".

(b) ADDITIONAL AMOUNT FOR MEMBERS SERVING IN CERTAIN AREAS OR OPERATIONS.—

(1) INCREASED AMOUNT.—Section 1967 of such title is further amended—

(A) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f); and

(B) by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection (e):

"(e)(1) A member covered by this subsection is any member as follows:

"(A) Any member who dies as a result of one or more wounds, injuries, or illnesses incurred while serving in an operation or area that the Secretary designates, in writing, as a combat operation or a zone of combat, respectively, for purposes of this subsection.

"(B) Any member who formerly served in an operation or area so designated and whose death is determined (under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense) to be the direct result of injury or illness incurred or aggravated while so serving.

"(2) The additional amount of insurance under this subchapter that is provided for a member by this subsection is $150,000, except that in a case in which the amount provided for or elected by the member under subclause (I) of subsection (a)(3)(A) exceeds $250,000, the additional amount of insurance under this subchapter that is provided for the member by this subsection shall be reduced to such amount as is necessary to comply with the limitation in paragraph (3).

"(3) The total amount of insurance payable for a member under this subchapter may not exceed $400,000.

"(4) While a member is serving in an operation or area designated as described in paragraph (1), the cost of insurance of the member under this subchapter that is attributable to $150,000 of insurance coverage shall be contributed as provided in section 1969(b)(2) of this title and may not be deducted or withheld from the member's pay.".

(2) FUNDING.—Section 1969(b) of such title is amended—

(A) by inserting "(1)" after "(b)"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) For each month for which a member insured under this subchapter is serving in an operation or area designated as described by paragraph (1)(A) of section 1967(e) of this title, there shall be contributed from the appropriation made for active duty pay of the uniformed service concerned an amount determined by the Secretary and certified to the Secretary concerned to be the cost of Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance which is traceable to the cost of providing insurance for the member under section 1967 of this title in the amount of $150,000.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1967(a)(2)(A) of such title is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: ", except for insurance provided under paragraph (3)(A)(i)(III)".

(d) COORDINATION WITH VGLI.—Section 1977(a) of such title is amended—

(1) by striking "$250,000" each place it appears and inserting "$400,000"; and

(2) by adding at the end of paragraph (1) the following new sentence: "Any additional amount of insurance provided a member under section 1967(e) of this title may not be treated as an amount for which Veterans' Group Life Insurance shall be issued under this section.".

(e) REQUIREMENTS REGARDING ELECTIONS OF MEMBERS TO REDUCE OR DECLINE INSURANCE.—Section 1967(a) of such title is further amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) Pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, notice of an election of a member not to be insured under this subchapter, or to be insured under this subchapter in an amount less than the maximum amount provided under paragraph (3)(A)(i)(I), shall be provided to the spouse of the member."; and

(2) in paragraph (3)—

(A) in the matter preceding clause (i), by striking "and (C)" and inserting ", (C), and (D)"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

"(D) A member with a spouse may not elect not to be insured under this subchapter, or to be insured under this subchapter in an amount less than the maximum amount provided under subparagraph (A)(i)(I), without the written consent of the spouse.".

(f) REQUIREMENT REGARDING REDESIGNATION OF BENEFICIARIES.—Section 1970 of such title is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j) A member with a spouse may not modify the beneficiary or beneficiaries designated by the member under subsection (a) without the written consent of the spouse.".

(g) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section and the amendments made by this section shall take effect on the first day of the first month that begins more than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(h) TERMINATION.—The amendments made by this section shall terminate on September 30, 2005. Effective on October 1, 2005, the provisions of sections 1967, 1969, 1970, and 1977 of title 38, United States Code, as in effect on the date before the date of the enactment of this Act shall be revived.

DEATH GRATUITY

SEC. 1113. (a) INCREASE IN DEATH GRATUITY.—

(1) AMOUNT.—Section 1478(a) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "$12,000" and inserting "$100,000".

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect on October 7, 2001, and shall apply with respect to deaths occurring on or after that date.

(3) NO ADJUSTMENT FOR INCREASES IN BASIC PAY BEFORE DATE OF ENACTMENT.—No adjustment shall be made under subsection (c) of section 1478 of title 10, United States Code, with respect to the amount in force under subsection (a) of that section, as amended by paragraph (1), for any period before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(4) PAYMENT FOR DEATHS BEFORE DATE OF ENACTMENT.—Any additional amount payable as a death gratuity under this subsection for the death of a member of the Armed Forces before the date of the enactment of this Act shall be paid to the eligible survivor of the member previously paid a death gratuity under section 1478 of title 10, United States Code, for the death of the member. If payment cannot be made to such survivor, payment of such amount shall be made to living survivor of the member otherwise highest on the list under 1477(a) of title 10, United States Code.

(b) ADDITIONAL GRATUITY FOR DEATHS BEFORE EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) REQUIREMENT TO PAY ADDITIONAL GRATUITY.—

(A) In the case of a member of the Armed Forces described in subparagraph (B), the Secretary of the military department concerned shall pay a death gratuity in accordance with this subsection that is in addition to the death gratuity payable in the case of such death under sections 1475 through 1477 of title 10, United States Code.

(B) The requirements of this subsection apply in the case of a member of the Armed Forces who died before the date of the enactment of this Act as a direct result of one or more wounds, injuries, or illnesses that—

(i) were incurred in the theater of operations of Operation Enduring Freedom or Operation Iraqi Freedom; or

(ii) were incurred as described in section 1413a(e)(2) of title 10, United States Code, on or after October 7, 2001.

(2) AMOUNT.—The amount of the additional death gratuity is $150,000.

(3) BENEFICIARIES.—The beneficiary or beneficiaries who are entitled under section 1477 of title 10, United States Code, to receive payment of the regular military death gratuity in the case of the death of a member referred to in paragraph (2) shall be entitled to receive the additional death gratuity payable in such case. If there are two or more such beneficiaries, the portion of the total amount of the additional death gratuity payable to a beneficiary in such case shall be the amount that bears the same ratio to the total amount of the additional death gratuity under paragraph (2) as the amount of the share of the regular military death gratuity payable to that beneficiary bears to the total amount of the regular military death gratuity payable to all such beneficiaries in such case.

(4) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection:

(A) The term "additional death gratuity" means the death gratuity provided under paragraph (1).

(B) The term "regular military death gratuity", means a death gratuity payable under sections 1475 through 1477 of title 10 United States Code.

SEC. 1114. RENAMING OF DEATH GRATUITY PAYABLE FOR DEATHS OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AS FALLEN HERO COMPENSATION. (a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter II of chapter 75 of title 10, United States Code, is amended as follows:

(1) In section 1475(a), by striking "have a death gratuity paid" and inserting "have fallen hero compensation paid".

(2) In section 1476(a)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking "a death gratuity" and inserting "fallen hero compensation"; and

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking "A death gratuity" and inserting "Fallen hero compensation".

(3) In section 1477(a), by striking "A death gratuity" and inserting "Fallen hero compensation".

(4) In section 1478(a), by striking "The death gratuity" and inserting "The amount of fallen hero compensation".

(5) In section 1479(1), by striking "the death gratuity" and inserting "fallen hero compensation".

(6) In section 1489—

(A) in subsection (a), by striking "a gratuity" in the matter preceding paragraph (1) and inserting "fallen hero compensation"; and

(B) in subsection (b)(2), by inserting "or other assistance" after "lesser death gratuity".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—(1) Such subchapter is further amended by striking "Death gratuity:" each place it appears in the heading of sections 1475 through 1480 and 1489 and inserting "Fallen hero compensation:".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such subchapter is amended by striking "Death gratuity:" in the items relating to sections 1474 through 1480 and 1489 and inserting "Fallen hero compensation:".

(c) GENERAL REFERENCES.—Any reference to a death gratuity payable under subchapter II of chapter 75 of title 10, United States Code, in any law, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States shall be deemed to be a reference to fallen hero compensation payable under such subchapter, as amended by this section.

INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES AUTHORIZATION

SEC. 1115. Funds appropriated in this Act, or made available by the transfer of funds in or pursuant to this Act, for intelligence activities are deemed to be specifically authorized by the Congress for purposes of section 504 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 414).

SEC. 1124. Section 403(l) of title 37, United States Code, is amended by striking "180 days" each place it appears and inserting "365 days".

SENSE OF SENATE ON TREATMENT OF CERTAIN VETERANS UNDER REPEAL OF PHASE-IN OF CONCURRENT RECEIPT OF RETIRED PAY AND VETERANS DISABILITY COMPENSATION

SEC. 1125. It is the sense of the Senate that any veteran with a service-connected disability rated as total by virtue of having been deemed unemployable who otherwise qualifies for treatment as a qualified retiree for purposes of section 1414 of title 10, United States Code, should be entitled to treatment as qualified retiree receiving veterans disability compensation for a disability rated as 100 percent for purposes of the final clause of subsection (a)(1) of such section, as amended by section 642 of the Ronald W. Reagan National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2005 (Public Law 108-375; 118 Stat. 1957), and thus entitled to payment of both retired pay and veterans' disability compensation under such section 1414 commencing as of January 1, 2005.

SEC. 1126. BENEFITS FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES RECUPERATING FROM INJURIES INCURRED IN OPERATION IRAQI FREEDOM OR OPERATION ENDURING FREEDOM. (a) PROHIBITION ON CHARGES FOR MEALS.—

(1) PROHIBITION.—A member of the Armed Forces entitled to a basic allowance for subsistence under section 402 of title 37, United States Code, who is undergoing medical recuperation or therapy, or is otherwise in the status of "medical hold", in a military treatment facility for an injury, illness, or disease incurred or aggravated while on active duty in the Armed Forces in Operation Iraqi Freedom or Operation Enduring Freedom shall not, during any month in which so entitled, be required to pay any charge for meals provided such member by the military treatment facility.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The limitation in paragraph (1) shall take effect on January 1, 2005, and shall apply with respect to meals provided members of the Armed Forces as described in that paragraph on or after that date.

(b) TELEPHONE BENEFITS.—

(1) PROVISION OF ACCESS TO TELEPHONE SERVICE.—The Secretary of Defense shall provide each member of the Armed Forces who is undergoing in any month medical recuperation or therapy, or is otherwise in the status of "medical hold", in a military treatment facility for an injury, illness, or disease incurred or aggravated while on active duty in the Armed Forces in Operation Iraqi Freedom or Operation Enduring Freedom access to telephone service at or through such military treatment facility in an amount for such month equivalent to the amount specified in paragraph (2).

(2) MONTHLY AMOUNT OF ACCESS.—The amount of access to telephone service provided a member of the Armed Forces under paragraph

(1) in a month shall be the number of calling minutes having a value equivalent to $40.

(3) ELIGIBILITY AT ANY TIME DURING MONTH.—A member of the Armed Forces who is eligible for the provision of telephone service under this subsection at any time during a month shall be provided access to such service during such month in accordance with that paragraph, regardless of the date of the month on which the member first becomes eligible for the provision of telephone service under this subsection.

(4) USE OF EXISTING RESOURCES.—In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary shall maximize the use of existing Department of Defense telecommunications programs and capabilities, private organizations, or other private entities offering free or reduced-cost telecommunications services.

(5) COMMENCEMENT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—This subsection shall take effect on the first day of the first month beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(B) EXPEDITED PROVISION OF ACCESS.—The Secretary shall commence the provision of access to telephone service under this subsection as soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(6) TERMINATION.—The Secretary shall cease the provision of access to telephone service under this subsection on the date this is 60 days after the later of—

(A) the date, as determined by the Secretary, on which Operation Enduring Freedom terminates; or

(B) the date, as so determined, on which Operation Iraqi Freedom terminates.

PROHIBITION ON IMPLEMENTATION OF CERTAIN ORDERS AND GUIDANCE ON FUNCTIONS AND DUTIES OF GENERAL COUNSEL AND JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL OF THE AIR FORCE

SEC. 1127. No funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act, or any other Act, may be obligated or expended to implement or enforce either of the following:

(1) The order of the Secretary of the Air Force dated May 15, 2003, and entitled "Functions and Duties of the General Counsel and the Judge Advocate General".

(2) Any internal operating instruction or memorandum issued by the General Counsel of the Air Force in reliance upon the order referred to in paragraph (1).

SEC. 1128. IMPLEMENTATION OF MISSION CHANGES AT SPECIFIC VETERANS HEALTH ADMINISTRATION FACILITIES. (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 414 of the Veterans Health Programs Improvement Act of 2004, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(h) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term 'medical center' includes any outpatient clinic.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect as if included in the Veterans Health Programs Improvement Act of 2004 (Public Law 108–422).

RE-USE AND REDEVELOPMENT OF CLOSED OR REALIGNED MILITARY INSTALLATIONS

SEC. 1129. (a) In order to assist communities with preparations for the results of the 2005 round of defense base closure and realignment, and consistent with assistance provided to communities by the Department of Defense in previous rounds of base closure and realignment, the Secretary of Defense shall, not later than July 15, 2005, submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the processes and policies of the Federal Government for disposal of property at military installations proposed to be closed or realigned as part of the 2005 round of base closure and realignment, and the assistance available to affected local communities for re-use and redevelopment decisions.

(b) The report under subsection (a) shall include—

(1) a description of the processes of the Federal Government for disposal of property at military installations proposed to be closed or realigned;

(2) a description of Federal Government policies for providing re-use and redevelopment assistance;

(3) a catalogue of community assistance programs that are provided by the Federal Government related to the re-use and redevelopment of closed or realigned military installations;

(4) a description of the services, policies, and resources of the Department of Defense that are available to assist communities affected by the closing or realignment of military installations as a result of the 2005 round of base closure and realignment;

(5) guidance to local communities on the establishment of local redevelopment authorities and the implementation of a base redevelopment plan; and

(6) a description of the policies and responsibilities of the Department of Defense related to environmental clean-up and restoration of property disposed by the Federal Government.

REQUESTS FOR FUTURE FUNDING FOR MILITARY OPERATIONS IN AFGHANISTAN AND IRAQ

SEC. 1130. (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) The Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2004 (Public Law 108–87) and the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2005 (Public Law 108–287) each contain a sense of the Senate provision urging the President to provide in the annual budget requests of the President for a fiscal year under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, an estimate of the cost of ongoing military operations in Iraq and Afghanistan in such fiscal year.

(2) The budget for fiscal year 2006 submitted to Congress by the President on February 7, 2005, requests no funds for fiscal year 2006 for ongoing military operations in Iraq or Afghanistan.

(3) According to the Congressional Research Service, there exists historical precedent for including the cost of ongoing military operations in the annual budget requests of the President following initial funding for such operations by emergency or supplemental appropriations Acts, including—

(A) funds for Operation Noble Eagle, beginning in the budget request of President George W. Bush for fiscal year 2005;

(B) funds for operations in Kosovo, beginning in the budget request of President George W. Bush for fiscal year 2001;

(C) funds for operations in Bosnia, beginning in budget request of President Clinton for fiscal year 1997;

(D) funds for operations in Southwest Asia, beginning in the budget request of President Clinton for fiscal year 1997;

(E) funds for operations in Vietnam, beginning in the budget request of President Johnson for fiscal year 1966; and

(F) funds for World War II, beginning in the budget request of President Roosevelt for fiscal year 1943.

(4) The Senate has included in its version of the fiscal year 2006 budget resolution, which was adopted by the Senate on March 17, 2005, a reserve fund of $50,000,000,000 for overseas contingency operations, but the determination of that amount could not take into account any Administration estimate on the projected cost of such operations in fiscal year 2006.

(5) In February 2005, the Congressional Budget Office estimated that fiscal year 2006 costs for ongoing military operations in Iraq and Afghanistan could total $65,000,000,000.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) any request for funds for a fiscal year after fiscal year 2006 for an ongoing military operation overseas, including operations in Afghanistan and Iraq, should be included in the annual budget of the President for such fiscal year as submitted to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code;

(2) the President should submit to Congress, not later than September 1, 2005, an amendment to the budget of the President for fiscal year 2006 that was submitted to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, setting forth detailed cost estimates for ongoing military operations overseas during such fiscal year; and

(3) any funds provided for a fiscal year for ongoing military operations overseas should be provided in appropriations Acts for such fiscal year through appropriations to specific accounts set forth in such appropriations Acts.

(c) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS FOR CERTAIN REPORTS.—(1) Each semiannual report to Congress required under a provision of law referred to in paragraph (2) shall include, in addition to the matters specified in the applicable provision of law, the following:

(A) A statement of the cumulative total of all amounts obligated, and of all amounts expended, as of the date of such report for Operation Enduring Freedom.

(B) A statement of the cumulative total of all amounts obligated, and of all amounts expended, as of the date of such report for Operation Iraqi Freedom.

(C) An estimate of the reasonably foreseeable costs for ongoing military operations to be incurred during the 12-month period beginning on the date of such report.

(2) The provisions of law referred to in this paragraph are as follows:

(A) Section 1120 of the Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Defense and for the Reconstruction of Iraq and Afghanistan, 2004 (Public Law 108–106; 117 Stat. 1219; 10 U.S.C. 113 note).

(B) Section 9010 of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2005 (Public Law 108–287; 118 Stat. 1008; 10 U.S.C. 113 note).

REPORTS ON IRAQI SECURITY FORCES

SEC. 1131. Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, and every 90 days thereafter, the President shall submit an unclassified report to Congress, which may include a classified annex, that includes a description of the following:

(1) The extent to which funding appropriated by this Act will be used to train and equip capable and effectively led Iraqi security services and promote stability and security in Iraq.

(2) The estimated strength of the Iraqi insurgency and the extent to which it is composed of non-Iraqi fighters, and any changes over the previous 90-day period.

(3) A description of all militias operating in Iraq, including their number, size, strength, military effectiveness, leadership, sources of external support, sources of internal support, estimated types and numbers of equipment and armaments in their possession, legal status, and the status of efforts to disarm, demobilize, and reintegrate each militia.

(4) The extent to which recruiting, training, and equipping goals and standards for Iraqi security forces are being met, including the number of Iraqis recruited and trained for the army, air force, navy, and other Ministry of Defense forces, police, and highway patrol of Iraq, and all other Ministry of Interior forces, and the extent to which personal and unit equipment requirements have been met.

(5) A description of the criteria for assessing the capabilities and readiness of Iraqi security forces.

(6) An evaluation of the operational readiness status of Iraqi military forces and special police, including the type, number, size, and organizational structure of Iraqi battalions that are—

(A) capable of conducting counterinsurgency operations independently;

(B) capable of conducting counterinsurgency operations with United States or Coalition mentors and enablers; or

(C) not ready to conduct counterinsurgency operations.

(7) The extent to which funding appropriated by this Act will be used to train capable, well-equipped, and effectively led Iraqi police forces, and an evaluation of Iraqi police forces, including—

(A) the number of police recruits that have received classroom instruction and the duration of such instruction;

(B) the number of veteran police officers who have received classroom instruction and the duration of such instruction;

(C) the number of police candidates screened by the Iraqi Police Screening Service screening project, the number of candidates derived from other entry procedures, and the overall success rates of those groups of candidates;

(D) the number of Iraqi police forces who have received field training by international police trainers and the duration of such instruction;

(E) a description of the field training program, including the number, the planned number, and nationality of international field trainers;

(F) the number of police present for duty;

(G) data related to attrition rates; and

(H) a description of the training that Iraqi police have received regarding human rights and the rule of law.

(8) The estimated total number of Iraqi battalions needed for the Iraqi security forces to perform duties now being undertaken by the Coalition Forces, including defending Iraq's borders, defeating the insurgency, and providing law and order.

(9) The extent to which funding appropriated by this Act will be used to train Iraqi security forces in counterinsurgency operations and the estimated total number of Iraqi security force personnel expected to be trained, equipped, and capable of participating in counterinsurgency operations by the end of 2005 and of 2006.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, not later than 90 days after the date on which the initial obligation of funds made available in this Act for training Afghan security forces, including police, border security guards and members of the Afghan National Army, is made, the Secretary of State, in conjunction with the Secretary of Defense, shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that includes the following:

(1) An assessment of whether the individuals who are providing training to Afghan security forces with assistance provided by the United States have proven records of experience in training law enforcement or security personnel.

(2) A description of the procedures of the Department of State and Department of Defense to ensure that an individual who receives such training—

(A) does not have a criminal background;

(B) is not connected to any criminal or terrorist organization, including the Taliban;

(C) is not connected to drug traffickers; and

(D) meets certain age and experience standards.

(3) A description of the procedures of the Department of State and Department of Defense that—

(A) clearly establish the standards an individual who will receive such training must meet;

(B) clearly establish the training courses that will permit the individual to meet such standards; and

(C) provide for certification of an individual who meets such standards.

(4) A description of the procedures of the Department of State and Department of Defense to ensure the coordination of such training efforts between these two Departments.

(5) A description of the methods that will be used by the Government of Afghanistan to maintain and equip such personnel when such training is completed.

(6) A description of how such training efforts will be coordinated with other training programs being conducted by the governments of other countries or international organizations in Afghanistan.

(b) In this section the term "appropriate congressional committees" means the Committee on Appropriations, the Committee on Armed Services, and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committee on Appropriations, the Committee on Armed Services, and the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives.

DARFUR ACCOUNTABILITY

SEC. 2109. (a) It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the atrocities unfolding in Darfur, Sudan, have been and continue to be genocide;

(2) the United States should immediately seek passage at the United Nations Security Council of a resolution that—

(A) imposes additional sanctions or additional measures against the Government of Sudan, including sanctions that will affect the petroleum sector in Sudan, individual members of the Government of Sudan, and entities controlled or owned by officials of the Government of Sudan or the National Congress Party in Sudan, that will remain in effect until such time as the Government of Sudan fully complies with all relevant United Nations Security Council resolutions;

(B) establishes a military no-fly zone in Darfur and calls on the Government of Sudan to immediately withdraw all military aircraft from the region;

(C) urges member states to accelerate assistance to the African Union force in Darfur, sufficient to achieve the expanded mandate described in paragraph (5);

(D) calls on the Government of Sudan to cooperate with, and allow unrestricted movement in Darfur by, the African Union force, the United Nations Mission in Sudan (UNMIS), international humanitarian organizations, and United Nations monitors;

(E) extends the embargo of military equipment established by paragraphs 7 through 9 of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1556 and expanded by Security Council Resolution 1591 to include a total prohibition of sale or supply to the Government of Sudan; and

(F) expands the mandate of UNMIS to include the protection of civilians throughout Sudan, including Darfur, and increases the number of UNMIS personnel to achieve such mandate;

(3) the United States should not provide assistance to the Government of Sudan, other than assistance necessary for the implementation of the Sudan North-South Peace Agreement, the support of the southern regional government in Sudan, or for humanitarian purposes in Sudan, unless the President certifies and reports to Congress that the Government of Sudan has fully complied with all relevant United Nations Security Council resolutions and the conditions established by the Comprehensive Peace in Sudan Act of 2004 (Public Law 108–497; 118 Stat. 4018);

(4) the President should work with international organizations, including the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), the United Nations, and the African Union to undertake action as soon as practicable to eliminate the ability of the Government of Sudan to engage in aerial bombardment of civilians in Darfur and establish mechanisms for the enforcement of a no-fly zone in Darfur;

(5) the African Union should extend its mandate in Darfur to include the protection of civilians and proactive efforts to prevent violence;

(6) the President should accelerate assistance to the African Union in Darfur and discussions with the African Union, the European Union, NATO, and other supporters of the African Union force on the needs of the African Union force, including assistance for housing, transportation, communications, equipment, technical assistance such as training and command and control assistance, and intelligence;

(7) the President should appoint a Presidential Envoy for Sudan to support peace, security and stability in Darfur and seek a comprehensive peace throughout Sudan;

(8) United States officials, at the highest levels, should raise the issue of Darfur in bilateral meetings with officials from other members of the United Nations Security Council and other relevant countries, with the aim of passing a United Nations Security Council resolution described in paragraph (2) and mobilizing maximum support for political, financial, and military efforts to stop the genocide in Darfur; and

(9) the United States should actively participate in the UN Committee and the Panel of Experts established pursuant to Security Council Resolution 1591, and work to support the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in their efforts to increase the number and deployment rate of human rights monitors to Darfur.

(b)(1) At such time as the United States has access to any of the names of those named by the UN Commission of Inquiry or those designated by the UN Committee the President shall—

(A) submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report listing such names;

(B) determine whether the individuals named by the UN Commission of Inquiry or designated by the UN Committee have committed the acts for which they were named or designated;

(C) except as described under paragraph (2), take such action as may be necessary to immediately freeze the funds and other assets belonging to those named by the UN Commission of Inquiry and those designated by the UN Commission, their family members, and any assets or property that such individuals transferred on or after July 1, 2002, including requiring that any United States financial institution holding such funds and assets promptly report those funds and assets to the Office of Foreign Assets Control; and

(D) except as described under paragraph (2), deny visas and entry to those named by the UN Commission of Inquiry and those designated by the UN Commission, their family members, and anyone the President determines has been, is, or may be planning, carrying out, responsible for, or otherwise involved in crimes against humanity, war crimes, or genocide in Darfur, Sudan.

(2) The President may elect not to take action described in paragraphs (1)(C) and (1)(D) if the President submits to the appropriate congressional committee, a report—

(A) naming the individual or individuals named by the UN Commission of Inquiry or designated by the UN Committee with respect to whom the President has made such election, on behalf of the individual or the individual's family member or associate; and

(B) describing the reasons for such election, and including the determination described in paragraph (1)(B).

(3) Not later than 30 days after United States has access to any of the names of those named by the UN Commission of Inquiry or those designated by the UN Committee, the President shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees notification of the sanctions imposed under paragraphs (1)(C) and (1)(D) and the individuals affected, or the report described in paragraph (2).

(4) Not later than 30 days prior to waiving the sanctions provisions of any other Act with regard to Sudan, the President shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report describing the waiver and the reasons for such waiver.

(c)(1) The Secretary of State, in conjunction with the Secretary of Defense, shall report to the appropriate congressional committees on efforts to deploy an African Union force in Darfur, the capacity of such force to stabilize Darfur and protect civilians, the needs of such force to achieve such mission including housing, transportation, communications, equipment, technical assistance, including training and command and control, and intelligence, and the status of United States and other assistance to the African Union force.

(2)(A) The report described in paragraph (1) shall be submitted every 90 days during the 1-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, or until such time as the President certifies that the situation in Darfur is stable and that civilians are no longer in danger and that the African Union is no longer needed to prevent a resumption of violence and attacks against civilians.

(B) After such 1-year period, and if the President has not made the certification described in subparagraph (A), the report described in paragraph (1) shall be included in the report required under section 8(b) of the Sudan Peace Act (50 U.S.C. 1701 note), as amended by section 5(b) of the Comprehensive Peace in Sudan Act of 2004 (Public Law 108–497; 118 Stat. 4018).

(d) In this section:

(1) The term 'appropriate congressional committees' means the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and the Committee on International Relations and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

(2) The term "Government of Sudan" means the National Congress Party-led government in Khartoum, Sudan, or any successor government formed on or after the date of the enactment of this title.

(3) The term "member states" means the member states of the United Nations.

(4) The term "Sudan North-South Peace Agreement" means the comprehensive peace agreement signed by the Government of Sudan and the Sudan People's Liberation Army/Movement on January 9, 2005.

(5) The term "those named by the UN Commission of Inquiry" means those individuals whose names appear in the sealed file delivered to the Secretary-General of the United Nations by the International Commission of Inquiry on Darfur to the United Nations Security Council.

(6) The term "UN Committee" means the Committee of the Security Council established in United Nations Security Council Resolution 1591 (29 March 2005); paragraph 3.

SENSE OF SENATE REGARDING TIMELY ENACTMENT OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES

SEC. 6047. SENSE OF THE SENATE. It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) our immigration system is badly broken, fails to serve the interests of our national security and our national economy, and undermines respect for the rule of law;

(2) in a post-9/11 world, national security demands a comprehensive solution to our immigration system;

(3) Congress must engage in a careful and deliberative discussion about the need to bolster enforcement of, and comprehensively reform, our immigration laws;

(4) Congress should not short-circuit that discussion by attaching amendments to this supplemental outside of the regular order; and

(5) Congress should not delay the enactment of critical appropriations necessary to ensure the well-being of the men and women of the United States Armed Forces fighting in Iraq and elsewhere around the world, by attempting to conduct a debate about immigration reform while the supplemental appropriations bill is pending on the floor of the United States Senate.

NEPAL

SEC. 6052. (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) That on February 1, 2005, Nepal's King Gyanendra dissolved the multi-party government, suspended constitutional liberties, and arrested political party leaders, human rights activists and representatives of civil society organizations.

(2) That despite condemnation of the King's actions and the suspension of military aid to Nepal by India and Great Britain, and similar steps by the United States, the King has refused to restore constitutional liberties and democracy.

(3) That there are concerns that the King's actions will strengthen Nepal's Maoist insurgency.

(4) That while some political leaders have been released from custody, there have been new arrests of human rights activists and representatives of other civil society organizations.

(5) That the King has thwarted efforts of members of the National Human Rights Commission to conduct monitoring activities, but recently agreed to permit the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to open an office in Katmandu to monitor and investigate violations.

(6) That the Maoists have committed atrocities against civilians and poses a threat to democracy in Nepal.

(7) That the Nepalese Army has also committed gross violations of human rights.

(8) That King Gyanendra has said that he intends to pursue a military strategy against the Maoists.

(9) That Nepal needs an effective military strategy to counter the Maoists and pressure them to negotiate an end to the conflict, but such a strategy must include the Nepalese Army's respect for the human rights and dignity of the Nepalese people.

(10) That an effective strategy to counter the Maoists also requires a political process that is inclusive and democratic in which constitutional rights are protected, and government policies that improve the lives of the Nepalese people.

(11) That it is the Sense of the Senate that King Gyanendra should immediately release all political detainees, restore constitutional liberties, and undertake good faith negotiations with the leaders of Nepal's political parties to restore democracy.

FISCHER-TROPSCH COAL-TO-OIL PROJECT

SEC. 6053. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds that have been appropriated to and awarded by the Secretary of Energy under the Clean Coal Power Initiative in accordance with financial assistance solicitation #DE–PS26–02NT41428 (as described in 67 Federal Register 575) to construct a Fischer-Tropsch coal-to-oil project may be used by the Secretary to provide a loan guarantee for the project.

PROTECTION OF THE GALAPAGOS

SEC. 6054. (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) The Galapagos Islands are a global treasure and World Heritage Site, and the future of the Galapagos is in the hands of the Government of Ecuador.

(2) The world depends on the Government of Ecuador to implement the necessary policies and programs to ensure the long term protection of the biodiversity of the Galapagos, including enforcing the Galapagos Special Law.

(3) There are concerns with the current leadership of the Galapagos National Park Service and that the biodiversity of the Galapagos and the Marine Reserve are not being properly managed or adequately protected; and

(4) The Government of Ecuador has reportedly given preliminary approval for commercial airplane flights to the Island of Isabela, which may cause irreparable harm to the biodiversity of the Galapagos, and has allowed the export of fins from sharks caught accidentally in the Marine Reserve, which encourages illegal fishing.

(b) The Senate strongly encourages the Government of Ecuador to—

(A) refrain from taking any action that could cause harm to the biodiversity of the Galapagos or encourage illegal fishing in the Marine Reserve;

(B) abide by the agreement to select the Directorship of the Galapagos National Park Service though a transparent process based on merit as previously agreed by the Government of Ecuador, international donors, and nongovernmental organizations; and

(C) enforce the Galapagos Special Law in its entirety, including the governance structure defined by the law to ensure effective control of migration to the Galapagos and sustainable fishing practices, and prohibit long-line fishing which threatens the survival of shark and marine turtle populations.

(c) The Department of State should—

(A) emphasize to the Government of Ecuador the importance the United States gives to these issues; and

(B) offer assistance to implement the necessary policies and programs to ensure the long term protection of the biodiversity of the Galapagos and the Marine Reserve and to sustain the livelihoods of the Galapagos population who depend on the marine ecosystem for survival.

TRAUMATIC INJURY PROTECTION

SEC. 6059. TRAUMATIC INJURY PROTECTION. (a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter III of chapter 19, Title 38, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 1965, by adding at the end the following:

"(11) The term 'activities of daily living' means the inability to independently perform 2 of the 6 following functions:

"(A) Bathing.

"(B) Continence.

"(C) Dressing.

"(D) Eating.

"(E) Toileting.

"(F) Transferring."; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"§ 1980A. Traumatic injury protection

"(a) A member who is insured under subparagraph (A)(i), (B), or (C)(i) of section 1967(a)(1) shall automatically be issued a traumatic injury protection rider that will provide for a payment not to exceed $100,000 if the member, while so insured, sustains a traumatic injury that results in a loss described in subsection (b)(1). The maximum amount payable for all injuries resulting from the same traumatic event shall be limited to $100,000. If a member suffers more than 1 such loss as a result of traumatic injury, payment will be made in accordance with the schedule in subsection (d) for the single loss providing the highest payment.

"(b)(1) A member who is issued a traumatic injury protection rider under subsection (a) is insured against such traumatic injuries, as prescribed by the Secretary, in collaboration with the Secretary of Defense, including, but not limited to—

"(A) total and permanent loss of sight;

"(B) loss of a hand or foot by severance at or above the wrist or ankle;

"(C) total and permanent loss of speech;

"(D) total and permanent loss of hearing in both ears;

"(E) loss of thumb and index finger of the same hand by severance at or above the metacarpophalangeal joints;

"(F) quadriplegia, paraplegia, or hemiplegia;

"(G) burns greater than second degree, covering 30 percent of the body or 30 percent of the face; and

"(H) coma or the inability to carry out the activities of daily living resulting from traumatic injury to the brain.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) the term 'quadriplegia' means the complete and irreversible paralysis of all 4 limbs;

"(B) the term 'paraplegia' means the complete and irreversible paralysis of both lower limbs; and

"(C) the term 'hemiplegia' means the complete and irreversible paralysis of the upper and lower limbs on 1 side of the body.

"(3) The Secretary, in collaboration with the Secretary of Defense, shall prescribe, by regulation, the conditions under which coverage against loss will not be provided.

"(c) A payment under this section may be made only if—

"(1) the member is insured under Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance when the traumatic injury is sustained;

"(2) the loss results directly from that traumatic injury and from no other cause; and

"(3) the member suffers the loss before the end of the period prescribed by the Secretary, in collaboration with the Secretary of Defense, which begins on the date on which the member sustains the traumatic injury, except, if the loss is quadriplegia, paraplegia, or hemiplegia, the member suffers the loss not later than 365 days after sustaining the traumatic injury.

"(d) Payments under this section for losses described in subsection (b)(1) shall be—

"(1) made in accordance with a schedule prescribed by the Secretary, in collaboration with the Secretary of Defense;

"(2) based on the severity of the covered condition; and

"(3) in an amount that is equal to not less than $25,000 and not more than $100,000.

"(e)(1) During any period in which a member is insured under this section and the member is on active duty, there shall be deducted each month from the member's basic or other pay until separation or release from active duty an amount determined by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs as the premium allocable to the pay period for providing traumatic injury protection under this section (which shall be the same for all such members) as the share of the cost attributable to provided coverage under this section, less any costs traceable to the extra hazards of such duty in the uniformed services.

"(2) During any month in which a member is assigned to the Ready Reserve of a uniformed service under conditions which meet the qualifications set forth in section 1965(5)(B) of this title and is insured under a policy of insurance purchased by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs under section 1966 of this title, there shall be contributed from the appropriation made for active duty pay of the uniformed service concerned an amount determined by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs (which shall be the same for all such members) as the share of the cost attributable to provided coverage under this section, less any costs traceable to the extra hazards of such duty in the uniformed services. Any amounts so contributed on behalf of any member shall be collected by the Secretary of the concerned service from such member (by deduction from pay or otherwise) and shall be credited to the appropriation from which such contribution was made in advance on a monthly basis.

"(3) The Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall determine the premium amounts to be charged for traumatic injury protection coverage provided under this section.

"(4) The premium amounts shall be determined on the basis of sound actuarial principles and shall include an amount necessary to cover the administrative costs to the insurer or insurers providing such insurance.

"(5) Each premium rate for the first policy year shall be continued for subsequent policy years, except that the rate may be adjusted for any such subsequent policy year on the basis of the experience under the policy, as determined by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs in advance of that policy year.

"(6) The cost attributable to insuring such member under this section, less the premiums deducted from the pay of the member's uniformed service, shall be paid by the Secretary of Defense to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs. This amount shall be paid on a monthly basis, and shall be due within 10 days of the notice provided by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to the Secretary of the concerned uniformed service.

"(7) The Secretary of Defense shall provide the amount of appropriations required to pay expected claims in a policy year, as determined according to sound actuarial principles by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

"(8) The Secretary of Defense shall forward an amount to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs that is equivalent to half the anticipated cost of claims for the current fiscal year, upon the effective date of this legislation.

"(f) The Secretary of Defense shall certify whether any member claiming the benefit under this section is eligible.

"(g) Payment for a loss resulting from traumatic injury will not be made if the member dies before the end of the period prescribed by the Secretary, in collaboration with the Secretary of Defense, which begins on the date on which the member sustains the injury. If the member dies before payment to the member can be made, the payment will be made according to the member's most current beneficiary designation under Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance, or a by law designation, if applicable.

"(h) Coverage for loss resulting from traumatic injury provided under this section shall cease at midnight on the date of the member's separation from the uniformed service. Payment will not be made for any loss resulting from injury incurred after the date a member is separated from the uniformed services.

"(i) Insurance coverage provided under this section is not convertible to Veterans' Group Life Insurance.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 19 of title 38, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to section 1980 the following:

"1980A. Traumatic injury protection.".

(c) RETROACTIVE PROVISION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Any member who experienced a traumatic injury (as described in section 1980A(b)(1) of title 38, United States Code) between October 7, 2001, and the effective date under subsection (d), is eligible for coverage provided in such section 1980A if the qualifying loss was a direct result of injuries incurred in Operation Enduring Freedom or Operation Iraqi Freedom.

(2) CERTIFICATION; PAYMENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall—

(A) certify to the Office of Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance the names and addresses of those members the Secretary of Defense determines to be eligible for retroactive traumatic injury benefits under such section 1980A; and

(B) forward to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, at the time the certification is made under subparagraph (A), an amount of money equal to the amount the Secretary of Defense determines to be necessary to pay all cost related to claims for retroactive benefits under such section 1980A.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the first day of the first month beginning more than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) RULEMAKING.—Before the effective date described in paragraph (1), the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, in collaboration with the Secretary of Defense, shall issue regulations to carry out the amendments made by this section.

RESIDENT AND NONRESIDENT HUNTING AND FISHING REGULATIONS

SEC. 6060. STATE REGULATION OF RESIDENT AND NONRESIDENT HUNTING AND FISHING. (a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Reaffirmation of State Regulation of Resident and Nonresident Hunting and Fishing Act of 2005".

(b) DECLARATION OF POLICY AND CONSTRUCTION OF CONGRESSIONAL SILENCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—It is the policy of Congress that it is in the public interest for each State to continue to regulate the taking for any purpose of fish and wildlife within its boundaries, including by means of laws or regulations that differentiate between residents and nonresidents of such State with respect to the availability of licenses or permits for taking of particular species of fish or wildlife, the kind and numbers of fish and wildlife that may be taken, or the fees charged in connection with issuance of licenses or permits for hunting or fishing.

(2) CONSTRUCTION OF CONGRESSIONAL SILENCE.—Silence on the part of Congress shall not be construed to impose any barrier under clause 3 of Section 8 of Article I of the Constitution (commonly referred to as the "commerce clause") to the regulation of hunting or fishing by a State or Indian tribe.

(c) LIMITATIONS.—Nothing in this section shall be construed—

(1) to limit the applicability or effect of any Federal law related to the protection or management of fish or wildlife or to the regulation of commerce;

(2) to limit the authority of the United States to prohibit hunting or fishing on any portion of the lands owned by the United States; or

(3) to abrogate, abridge, affect, modify, supersede or alter any treaty-reserved right or other right of any Indian tribe as recognized by any other means, including, but not limited to, agreements with the United States, Executive Orders, statutes, and judicial decrees, and by Federal law.

(d) STATE DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term "State" includes the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

TITLE VII—TEMPORARY WORKERS

SEC. 7001. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Save Our Small and Seasonal Businesses Act of 2005".

SEC. 7002. NUMERICAL LIMITATIONS ON H-2B WORKERS. (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 214(g) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1184(g)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(9)(A) Subject to subparagraphs (B) and (C), an alien counted toward the numerical limitations of paragraph (1)(B) during any 1 of the 3 fiscal years prior to the submission of a petition for a nonimmigrant worker described in section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(b) may not be counted toward such limitation for the fiscal year in which the petition is approved.

"(B) A petition referred to in subparagraph (A) shall include, with respect to an alien—

"(i) the full name of the alien; and

"(ii) a certification to the Department of Homeland Security that the alien is a returning worker.

"(C) An H-2B visa for a returning worker shall be approved only if the name of the individual on the petition is confirmed by—

"(i) the Department of State; or

(1) by inserting "or section 101(a)(15)(E)(iii)" after "section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b1)" each place it appears;

(2) in paragraph (3)(C)(i)(II), by striking "or" in the third place it appears;

(3) in paragraph (3)(C)(ii)(II), by striking "or" in the third place it appears; and

(4) in paragraph (3)(C)(iii)(II), by striking "or" in the third place it appears.

This Act may be cited as the "Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Defense, the Global War on Terror, and Tsunami Relief, 2005".

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act Making Emergency Supplemental Appropriations for Defense, the Global War on Terror, and Tsunami Relief, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2005, and for other purposes.".

ORDERS FOR TUESDAY, APRIL 26, 2005

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until 9:45 a.m. on Tuesday, April 26. I further ask that following the prayer and the pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved, and the Senate then proceed to a period of morning business for up to 60 minutes with the first 30 minutes under the control of the Democratic leader or his designee and the final 30 minutes under the control of the majority leader or his designee; provided that following morning business the Senate resume consideration of the motion to proceed to H.R. 3, the highway bill, and there be 60 minutes of debate equally divided between the two leaders or their designees; provided further that upon the use or yielding back of that time the Senate proceed to the cloture vote on the motion to proceed to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. I further ask consent that the Senate recess from 12:30 p.m. to 2:15 p.m. for the weekly party lunches.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. INHOFE. Tomorrow, following morning business, the Senate will resume consideration of the motion to proceed to the highway bill. Under the previous order, we will have up to 1 hour of debate prior to a cloture vote on the motion to proceed. The cloture vote will be at approximately 11:45 a.m., and that will be the first vote of tomorrow's session. It is my hope that cloture will be invoked and further that we would be able to move to the bill without using the full 30 hours of postcloture debate. Once on the bill, we will move forward with the amending process. Senators should expect additional rollcall votes during tomorrow's session.

On behalf of the leader, I inform my colleagues we will have a busy week leading into next week's recess. In addition to the highway bill, we will act on the budget resolution conference report once it becomes available. There are a couple of important nominations expected to be reported out of the committee this week that we hope to act upon, as well. Rollcall votes are expected each day this week, and Senators are asked to plan their schedules accordingly.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT

Mr. INHOFE. There being no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order, following the remarks of Senator BOXER for not to exceed 60 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I had asked for an hour to speak for the RECORD on a number of issues. First, I will pay tribute to 53 young Americans who have been killed in Iraq since December 7, 2004. This brings to 402 the number of soldiers who were either from California or based in California that have been killed while serving our country. I want to make the point to my colleagues this represents 26 percent of all the military deaths in Iraq. Twenty-six percent of those deaths have come from California, either the person was born and raised in California or was stationed in California. We continue to mourn those losses. As I have promised since the day the war started, I will pay tribute to them by name so they are not forgotten.

CPL In C. Kim died December 7 as a result of a nonhostile vehicle incident in Al Anbar Province. He was assigned to Camp Pendleton.

PFC Christopher S. Adlesperger died December 9 as a result of enemy action in Al Anbar Province. He was also assigned to Camp Pendleton.

I want to mention the ages of these soldiers too. Corporal Kim was 23 years old. PFC Christopher Adlesperger was 20 years old.

I pray for these young Americans and their families.

Mr. President, it is with a very heavy heart that I continue to report to the Senate on these young people, and not so young people, who are being killed in Iraq, it seems, almost every day. In this eulogy where I simply read the names and tell you how this happened, we have talked about people from the age of 19 to 51 years old. In this war, we have people of all ages because it is the regular military and also Reserves and National Guard. We have a lot of people who are married with children. The loss is huge, regardless of age. Often, there are even more people who are effected when we have someone who is married with a family—not only the moms and dads but the spouses and the children and the broader community.

So I pray for these young Americans, may they rest in peace; and I pray for their families, may they heal. It is the ultimate act of bravery to answer the call of the Commander in Chief. It is the ultimate act of bravery. I was in Iraq last month, and the security challenges we face there are enormous. I don't have the time tonight to go into detail. It was a bipartisan trip of Senators, and each Senator had two guards at all times with machine guns, plus additional security all around us. We could not go on the main road from Baghdad Airport because of the lack of safety. We flew in Blackhawk helicopters with the greatest pilots in the world, with two machine guns looking out at all times. Every time we were anywhere on the ground, you could smell the danger. We were so well protected. Even in the General Assembly building, where you would think it would be very safe, they said it was the site of kidnappings.

Even in the Embassy compound, we heard that one of the military people killed there, LCDR Keith Taylor, died January 29 in a rocket attack on the U.S. Embassy in Baghdad. That is a highly protected and defended place. We sat there, and I noted the looks on the faces of the civilians sitting around—the fear, the anguish, the anxiety. I made a point of thanking them for their service. I know they want to build a democracy there. I noted how fearful and anxious they looked. I truly expected at least one of them to say: No, you are misreading it; that is not so. But they did not contradict it.

It is a very dangerous place. I think we all learned that through loss of that beautiful young woman, Marla Ruzicka, who is a true hero of her generation, if not the country. She was working in Iraq with a nonprofit organization she set up that actually was funded by this Senate, I am proud to say, to find the innocent victims of war, what we call collateral damage of war. Marla put a face on these little children and these grieving mothers and fathers.

She would go out into the homes of the Iraqi people—it is so dangerous to do that—with her blond hair flying. She would take the testimony, and then she would bring it back to the military who grew to trust Marla. Then, if it all checked out, these people would get some recompense to try and rebuild their lives.

It was a very moving funeral I went to with my family in Lakeport, CA. People came from all over the country and all over the world to honor Marla. I know Senator LEAHY, on our side, has taken the lead on this incredible program. I hope to work with him and Members of both sides of the aisle to make sure that program continues.

Of course, we need to have a plan for success in Iraq, and my view is we do not have that right now. When we ask the people who brought us the war, namely the President, how long we are going to be there, he says: As long as it takes. I think we can do better. I think there are five or six things we can do. But, again, I do not have time to go into it tonight, and I have spoken about this at length before.

Clearly, training the Iraqis is key, and General Petraeus told us when we met with him that he is very high on the Iraqi troops. He thinks they are terrific. He thinks they can step in. There are 120,000 of them. This is good news. We ought to be able to begin to bring our troops home and replace them with the Iraqis.

I also met with the new leaders of the country, and I believe if we do not set some dates, they will forever rely on us. I do not think that is the way it should be. I really do not. They need to get on their own two feet, and we ought to help them—train these soldiers, train these police forces and bring our troops back.

It is not working out well for us over there. It is counterproductive right now. The CIA told us that when we visited. Indeed, the head of the CIA told us in hearings that it is fueling the insurgency. General Newbolt, who planned the original military victory in Iraq, told us the same. We need to have a goal of when we are going to leave because otherwise it is fueling discontent. The insurgency is so deep now. Different groups are coming every day taking "credit" for these horrible civilian deaths.

The status quo is not good there. I hope we can move forward with a plan for success. A lot of our people have given their lives and their limbs, thousands of them coming home without limbs, over 11,000 at this point. We need to stand with them and with their families and make sure we are there for them because they are suffering mightily.

They are brave, they are courageous, they will do whatever they are asked to do. They are extraordinary. We need to stand with them, regardless of whether we think this war was the best thing we ever did or the worst thing we ever did. That is secondary. We have to stand with them.

WELDON AMENDMENT

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, Senator FRIST was true to his word. He told me I could have a vote to repeal what I consider to be a very dangerous amendment that came into an appropriations bill without any hearings, without any discussions, without any votes, and I think could very well lead to a very dangerous situation for the women of our country.

I decided not to push the vote. It was too close to call. Some people said there were 56 votes against us. That was not my count, but I knew that in order to win this vote I needed to talk with people individually at great length.

Why is that? Because this is one of the most confusing amendments that we have ever faced in the Senate. Just ask the people at HHS, who are trying to implement it. Just ask the people who filed suit. They say it is so vague and so broad that it could literally mean people coming into an emergency room, not getting served, and dying in an emergency room. This is what could happen.

I thank Senator FRIST for being true to his word, for giving me the opportunity, and I want to briefly explain what I plan to do about this Weldon amendment, with the help of my friends and colleagues.

Senator HARKIN and I plan to work across the aisle to modify this amendment so that it really is what it claims to be, a conscience clause. No one objects to conscience clauses. I support them. Conscious clauses are in the law. I am happy to clarify them, make sure anyone who has a moral objection to performing an abortion absolutely has every right not to have to do that.

I have talked at length with Senator HARKIN, and we are going to work with our colleagues. That means with Senator SPECTER and the other members of the Appropriations Committee so they understand the ramifications of this Weldon amendment, which I will go into in a minute.

Second, as I mentioned, there have been lawsuits filed challenging the constitutionality of the Weldon amendment. I believe the arguments are compelling. As I have said before—and we were proven right when other anti-choice amendments that were thrown out of court—I believe this one also will be thrown out. Because it cannot possibly be that any judge anywhere, regardless of whether he or she is liberal, conservative, moderate, Republican, Democrat, or anything else, would put women's lives in danger like this could do. So I feel very confident it will come out all right.

I am going to give a brief discussion on what I think the Weldon amendment means as it is now written.

Although the proponents of the Weldon amendment call it a conscience clause, nowhere in the amendment do we see the words "religion," "morals," "beliefs," or "values." It is masquerading as a conscience clause, but it really is not. I call it a denial clause because it will deny women emergency care when their lives are in danger, deny low-income rape victims reproductive health care, deny doctors the right to give their patients vital information, and deny States the ability to enforce critical laws ensuring the health of women.

The fact is, our hospitals and doctors already have a Federal conscience clause, it's called the 1973 Church Amendment. What Weldon does is different. It's a big loophole that allows anyone, including HMOs, to decide, for any reason, that they do not want any of their doctors not only not performing abortions but also telling a woman that it is a legal right for her, referring her, talking to her honestly about what her options are.

This amendment is giving a denial clause to an HMO which, by the way, I do not think they have a conscience, given the way many of them treat people. So we are giving the HMO, a corporation, a big denial clause—not the doctor, not the nurse but the corporation. So that means they can now gag doctors who work for them by telling them: You better not inform a woman about her rights because if you do, it is against the guidelines of this HMO.

Now, in this Weldon amendment, there is no exception for rape or incest. Imagine, there is no exception for rape and incest. So even if a woman comes in who has been brutally raped or the victim of incest, under this Weldon amendment, the hospital or the HMO could violate current law and say: So sorry about that, you are on your own. Now, this is America in 2005. Where is our conscience? Where are our moral values? Where are our family values if we pass an amendment like this, that would throw a woman out in the most dire of circumstances? It is just horrific.

And this goes against our Medicaid law. The Hyde amendment makes an exception for rape and incest if a woman is on Medicaid and if she is poor. HENRY HYDE and I talked about that quite a bit, and he supported that very much. First the exception was if one's life is at stake, they can get Medicaid help to end the pregnancy. Then it was rape and incest. There is no such exception in Weldon, and guess what happens. If the Medicaid law is enforced, states can now lose all of their Federal funds for education, labor, and health. This is just crazy. It makes no sense at all.

We believe that Weldon would allow a woman to die in an emergency room. There are very unbelievably tragic stories. Let us say a woman is in a car accident while she is in the early stages of her pregnancy. She is rushed into the emergency room, and she is losing blood. The only way to save her life is to terminate the pregnancy. Under Weldon, if the hospital says, I am sorry, we do not do that, she could just simply die waiting for help. This is what Weldon does. This is why I cannot believe a judge is going to allow it to continue.

So the Weldon amendment is drawn in such a way that all the laws we have—including the emergency room law ensuring a hospital takes measures to stabilize patients if their lives are endanger and the Medicaid law that allows a woman to get an abortion if she is raped or the victim of incest—are overridden by Weldon. Any State law that steps in to help guarantee reproductive services and referrals to woman is overridden by Weldon. And if States enforces their own law to help a woman in a crisis, they can lose all of their Federal funds, not just their family planning funds but every dollar of their education money, their labor money, and their health money. We are talking about billions of dollars across the board.

We all know it is totally unconstitutional to gag a doctor. Every year the anti-choice people pass a Mexico City gag rule, which I am proud to say the Senate does not support, but the President does, and it always manages to survive. The gag rule is in effect abroad, but they cannot do it here. Why? Because in this country we have freedom of speech, and a gag cannot be put around a doctor's mouth and tell them they cannot let their patients know all of their options; that is unconstitutional. But here, under Weldon, an HMO can gag any doctor that works for it. So it is really completely outrageous.

In essence, we are going to have a whole series of laws overturned by the Weldon amendment. The odd thing is, if the backers of the Weldon amendment would come to the table and tell us all the things they want to do, we could have an honest debate. The trouble we have is that the people who support Weldon will say: All we have is a conscience clause. But that isn't the case.

We have letters from doctors, patients, States, and we have lawsuits that really unmask the true ramifications of Weldon. What we have is a provision that masquerades as a conscience clause when it is really a denial clause that would punish States. These are the people who I thought liked States rights.

Let us take the issue of hospital mergers. In the past, under current law, every State in the Union that I know of has the ability, when a hospital merges, to set conditions for those mergers. The attorneys general of those States have the right to put conditions on those mergers. Under Weldon, that's no longer possible if such conditions include making sure that in this merger a woman has still reproductive health care. So it is taking away the rights of States, and that is again why I believe we can fix this, because it is so dangerous in its current form.

We have this amendment masquerading as a conscience clause. But it is not a conscience clause, it is a denial clause because it will deny women the health care they need to live, to be helped and saved in an emergency. It will gag doctors. It will stop attorneys general in all of our States from carrying out their duties. A couple of States have sued on behalf of this. Many who must implement it have thrown their hands up. They do not know how to enforce it. It never had a hearing in the Senate. We never looked at it, and it passed as part of the appropriations bill.

Again, I thank Senator FRIST for living up to his commitment he made to me. I appreciate it. What we are going to do is continue to work to let everyone know how outrageous this law is, how far reaching this law is, how dangerous this law is to women, how it walks away from family values, from States rights, from anything decent when one says to a woman who has been raped or is the victim of incest that she is on her own. That is not what this country is about.

At some point, we are going to make sure that this Weldon amendment is either modified so it becomes what it says it is, which is a conscience clause that no one has an objection to, or is repealed.

How much more time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California has 23 minutes remaining.

JOHN BOLTON NOMINATION

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I want to close on a couple of topics. The first one, because I sit on the Foreign Relations Committee, is the nomination of John Bolton to be our Ambassador to the United Nations. I do call on the President to rethink this nomination. Out of the thousands of strong, conservative Republicans who care about the world, there has to be somebody better than someone who has a pattern of not only abusing his staff, called a serial abuser by one witness, but also, and this is really threatening, trying to get them fired if they do not give him the information he wants.

I am talking about false information and reaching down from the very high level at which he has been to the bottom of another agency that he did not even have direct line control over and trying to force not one but two and maybe three intelligence analysts to paint a picture that he wanted to use so that he could present a country as an imminent threat to this Nation, which could have led to some serious ramifications. Of all the people to pick now, it should not be someone who would try to politicize intelligence gathering.

I received another letter on Friday, which I sent to both sides of the committee. I hope this will be looked at. It concerns a case where years ago John Bolton was trying to overturn a U.N. resolution—or have it modified—that dealt with infant formula in the developing nations. Some of my colleagues may remember that issue, where babies were dying throughout the developing world because they were mixing the baby formula with contaminated water, and the U.N. voted very strongly to stop distributing and selling that baby formula. According to this woman, who has a lot of credentials—an attorney who worked with John Bolton—she said that Bolton ordered her to contact these developing nations and tell them to back off and modify this resolution so that Nestle Company and others could sell their product in the developing world. And this is interesting—conscience clause—she said: My conscience does not allow me to do this because if one baby died as a result of what I did, I could not live with myself. There is a conscience clause in the agency that says if somebody has a conscience problem when given an assignment, they do not have to do it. Well, Bolton said, if you do not do this, you are fired, and he fired her on the spot, according to her. She is going to go under oath and testify to this. Then he found out he could not fire her because she was protected by Civil Service. She comes back to work, and what do they find? Her entire office had been moved. Where is it moved? To the basement of the building. No telephone. A desk and a chair. She loved her job, and she eventually got a telephone down there and worked around John Bolton and stayed there doing her work.

This is yet another story. So we have a pattern of abusive behavior. Some of my friends on the other side of the aisle say, this is just the person we need for the U.N.—somebody tough. If you want someone in the U.N. who has a history of trying to change intelligence information—and now the world knows it.

As my ranking member JOE BIDEN has stated, this is the guy who may have to make the intelligence case against Iran. This is the guy who may have to make the intelligence case against North Korea with this background of using political pressure to get the kind of intelligence he wanted to build a case. This is not the right person. We do not want someone there who will politicize intelligence gathering. I don't think we want someone there who is such a hothead that it will turn a lot of people off.

We have testimony from multiple sources. At first, my friends on the other side of the committee said it is an isolated incident; you are talking about one incident. We have incident after incident.

Oh, he is just the person we need. We want someone tough. Tough is one thing. Tough and principled and committed is one thing. Abusing people is something else. A man is called a serial abuser by someone who has the credentials to know—e-mails back this up—trying to get people fired because they want to do their job.

It was so bad that Colin Powell, the Secretary of State, had to actually go and talk to all these "independent" analysts; his message was, don't you worry about it. You continue to do your work. I thank him for that. The testimony is clear. He went there and told those analysts, don't you be bullied. I am using those words. But the message he had was, don't you worry about it. Do your work. Do your job. It is very clear.

How refreshing it was to see Senator VOINOVICH, at the committee, listen to what Senator BIDEN, in particular, was saying. They had the information, chapter and verse, proof of why this is not a good appointment.

I know the pressures that have come to bear on Senator VOINOVICH. It is not pleasant to be alone. I have been there. I know how it feels. But he is answering to his conscience. I think he did the Senate proud by doing that.

Now we hear other colleagues on the committee saying maybe they need more time and more information.

Again, this can all be avoided. There are so many other people who can do this job. I said before that John Bolton is very loyal to this conservative doctrine. There could be many positions for him in the administration. We need someone in the spirit of John Danforth—Republican, conservative, wonderful former Senator who went to the United Nations, who immediately had the support and the credibility and the respect.

In closing, I will talk about an issue I know the Presiding Officer has been very involved with, and that is the filibuster issue. As someone who once wanted to end a filibuster myself at an early stage, I now understand how foolish I was at that point. Why did I want it to end when I first came here as freshman? We had the majority and the Republicans were thwarting us. It was very frustrating. We wanted to fix everything. I voted to say this filibuster has to go.

Little did I realize that is the way the Senate is supposed to operate in a deliberative fashion. As one of the Founders said, the House is the cup. It gets hot. It is steaming. And when the issues get to the Senate, it is the saucer. They cool down. One of the ways to ensure that is to have extended debate.

FILIBUSTER

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, there has been so much misinformation on the filibuster I want to make sure I put my thoughts into the record. We hear Republican Senators actually get up and say they never filibustered any judges. I was stunned, so we went back into history and we have a chart for that.

The first filibuster in modern times was started by the Republicans in 1968 against Abe Fortas for the Supreme Court. We know there have been 11 in recent times, 11 filibusters. Here is one in 1971, probably started by the Democrats. William Rehnquist to be a Supreme Court justice. Here is one in 1980, probably started by the Republicans, Stephen Breyer, to be a judge on the First Circuit Court of Appeals. Then in 1984 Harvie Wilkinson, Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals. In 1986, Sydney Fitzwater, to be a judge for the Northern District of Texas. 1992. Edward Earle Carnes to be judge on the Eleventh Circuit. 1994, Lee Sarokin to be a judge on the Third Circuit Court of Appeals. In 1999, Brian Theodore Stewart, to be a judge for the District of Utah. In the year 2000—and this is my State—there was a major filibuster; we fought hard and we beat the filibuster. We got the votes needed. Richard Paez to be a judge on the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals and Marsha Berzon to be a judge on the Ninth Circuit.

When we hear Republicans say they never launched a filibuster, you can ask, what? Here is Bob Smith who led the filibuster, Republican, from New Hampshire. Here is what he said:

> . . . It is no secret that I have been the person who has filibustered these two nominations, Judge Berzon and Judge Paez.

Here he is again:

> So don't tell me we haven't filibustered judges and that we don't have the right to filibuster judges on the floor of the Senate. Of course we do. That is our constitutional role.

Here is a Republican Senator who started a filibuster against two judge nominees for the Ninth Circuit. He called this a "constitutional role." Now we have other Republicans saying the constitutional option is no filibuster. Wrong. You are contradicting your own people here.

Now, ORRIN HATCH himself admitted there were filibusters on the floor:

> Indeed, I must confess to being somewhat baffled that, after a filibuster is cut off by cloture, the Senate could still delay a final vote on nomination.

That is ORRIN HATCH. This is the major point I want to make, Who is the real leader out there pushing to end the filibuster on judges? Pushing, pushing, pushing?

And, by the way, it is unbelievable we have confirmed 205 of George W. Bush's nominees to the courts. We have stopped 10. Let me say it again: 205 have gotten through and we have stopped 10.

Now, do the math, and I will say to you: In your life, if you get 95 percent of what you want, wouldn't you go around with a smile on your face? I would. If I got 95 percent of what I wanted from the Senate, I would be so happy. If I got 95 percent of what I wanted from my family—if they sought my way 95 percent of the time—I would be happy; especially when they were teenagers, I would be really happy.

But do you know what. If I were arrogant, and I wanted everything, and I thought I knew best all the time, and I wanted to grab all the power, I would be sunk. So these folks over here, who got 95 percent of what they wanted—205 judges, and then 10 whom we thought were out of the mainstream—and, by the way, wow, are they out of the mainstream—they are unhappy. And now they are going to change the rules in the middle of the game.

For 200 years of our Constitution we have been able to speak and express ourselves. I have to tell you, this is dangerous to our democracy. When one party wants its all, when one party wants to stop minority rights, that is dangerous. And that is where we are.

But here is the best of all—and I hope people will know this—when we had this filibuster on Marsha Berzon, and when we had this filibuster of Richard Paez, guess who voted to keep the filibuster going on Richard Paez. I will give you a clue. He appeared on a big screen over the weekend. I will give you another clue. He was elected by the Republicans to be the majority leader of the Senate, BILL FRIST. He says filibusters are terrible, filibusters are wrong. Yet he voted to continue the filibuster on Richard Paez.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Executive vote No. 37 of March 8, 2000, on Richard Paez to cut off the filibuster be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the vote was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NOT VOTING—1

McCain (R-AZ)

Mrs. BOXER. So let's hold people accountable for what they do and say. I admit I was foolish on the filibuster when I was a freshman and I came in here. I also wanted everything to go my way. I was wrong. And it is hard for a Senator to say they are wrong. We do not like to admit it. But I was wrong. But how can BILL FRIST lead the charge, say that filibusters are wrong, it is terrible, it is awful, it is against the Constitution, and everything else he says—which I do not agree with any of what he said—and then not address the fact that he voted to sustain a filibuster. It does not make sense.

We have soldiers dying in Iraq, in Afghanistan. Lord knows where they are going to go in this very dangerous world. And the mission: to make sure democracy thrives. Do you know that when I was in Iraq, we were told one of the reasons the minority groups there, the Kurds, felt comfortable was they knew they were going to copy the model of this democracy, including the filibuster?

They said: Oh, we know we are going to have our rights heard because we are going to have the right to filibuster. They even told that to a Republican Senator who went over there.

By the way, when I was in the Palestinian territories—this is another interesting part of my trip—the first thing the Palestinians said they want to do is make sure their people get a monthly social security benefit that is guaranteed. I truly wanted to ask the Minister there—I think he was the Minister of the Interior—to please contact President Bush and tell him that a guaranteed social security benefit was their first priority, as the President tries to undo the guaranteed benefit for Social Security. That trip I went on was fascinating in so many different ways. But mostly, what I realized was, we need to be the model of freedom and democracy. If we start taking away minority rights, if we start saying we cannot stand to hear each other—by the way, I understand it. I know it is painful to hear me speak for some of my colleagues who do not agree with me. They say: Oh, I can't listen to one more word. And I feel the same way when they start talking about things with which I fundamentally disagree.

But that is what it is about here because all of America has to be represented here, from the most liberal, to the most conservative, to everything in between. All of us have to feel represented. But if we stop the ability of the other to debate and discuss, especially on judges, where it is a lifetime appointment, at a very high salary—they never have to face the electorate. This is the only moment.

So what if we say they have to meet a higher bar? That is a good thing on behalf of the people. Because—guess what—do you know what they rule on? They rule on everything to do with your life. They rule on whether there should be child labor. They rule on whether you should be harassed and exploited in the workplace. They rule on whether you have the right to clean air and safe drinking water. They rule on everybody's rights: voting rights, civil rights, human rights. They rule on whether your child can get a good education. They rule on whether corporate America must provide a safe workplace for you. They rule on whether the Federal Government can say that people who pollute have to clean up that pollution.

Why do you think there are so many people who want to get every single judge? Because they want judges of a certain philosophy. That is wrong. We should work for mainstream, fair judges—that is what we need on the bench—who can see all sides. But when one side wants everything, when 95 percent is not enough, when 205 to 10 is not good enough, beware of what is coming down. Do not change the rules in the middle of the game. That is not fair. That is not right. It is throwing a fit over something, when you have gotten 95 percent of what you want.

You do not change the rules in the middle of the game, like they did in the House on the Ethics Committee. Do not do that. That is not right, it is not fair, and it is wrong. It is wrong for the American people.

Everyone in the world looks to America—everyone in the world. When we start weakening our rules around here, and weakening the rights of the people to exercise the rights they have been given as Senators, we are in a lot of trouble.

So, Mr. President, I have gone through a number of issues, starting off with the most solemn, which was reading the names of those in the military who have died, who were either from California or were based in California. I promised my constituents I would always come to the floor periodically to remember them. The saddest thing: 26 percent of the dead soldiers happened to be either from California or based in California. That is a huge number. So it is with a very heavy heart that I did that.

But we have a lot to do, a lot on our agenda. I hope we will stay focused on the things that matter to the people—on the things that matter to the people. Let's not spend time changing the rules of the Senate that we have had for so many years. Let's not do that. Let's do the work. Let's get a success strategy for Iraq. Let's get health care for our people. Let's get education for our children. Let's make sure the air is clean and the water is safe, that we protect our beautiful places. Let's make sure we attack this issue of gas prices, which in my State we are seeing $3 a gallon. I wrote to the FTC, and I said: Please investigate what is going on with the refiners. Please look at these mergers that are coming at us now that will make it even worse.

We have work to do. But, no, we have to have our leader go on a Sunday, or whatever, and—big publicity—address a group about changing the rules of the filibuster. This does not meet the test, it seems to me, of doing the job.

We know there will be fallout. That is the nuclear option, and nuclear explosions have fallout. It doesn't mean shutting down the Senate, but I can assure you, it is going to mean working harder in the Senate, working really hard, working on some things that maybe we haven't worked on in a while, forcing that. But I have to tell you, 205 to 10, you should be smiling, not frowning, not addressing people and saying how terrible you are doing. You should be happy. It is a heck of a lot better than a lot of Democratic Presidents have done. You should be happy.

You should bring us judges that are mainstream, and there wouldn't be any filibusters. I have supported so many. You succeeded 205 times. You failed 10 times because you tried to put people on there who really were so far out of the mainstream it would be dangerous.

Can't we compromise this thing and come together? Let's get back to work.

I ask unanimous consent that my prepared text on the Weldon amendment be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WELDON AMENDMENT

Mr. President, I rise this evening to talk about the Weldon amendment, a sweeping provision endangering women's health that was slipped into the 2005 appropriations bill at the last minute without any hearings, discussions, or votes.

In November, Senator Frist promised me an up or down vote on repealing the Weldon amendment by the end of April. Last week, I decided to hold off on that vote for the time being.

First, the Weldon amendment will expire in less than 6 months. I believe that the best way to defeat this provision right now is to work with Senator Harkin and Members on both sides of the aisle to remove or modify it in the next spending bill.

I have talked at length with Senator Harkin about this. He has promised that he will work closely with Senator Specter and me to underscore our commitment to a real conscience clause for doctors and hospitals without undermining our commitment to the health of women across our country.

Second, two lawsuits have already been filed challenging the constitutionality of Weldon. Their arguments are compelling and I believe that the plaintiffs one of which is the California attorney general—will prevail.

There has been a lot of misinformation about Weldon. So I thought it would help to show this provision in black and white:

Here is what Weldon says:

(d)(1) None of the funds made available in this Act may be made available to a Federal agency or program, or to a State or local government, if such agency, program or government subjects any institutional or individual health care entity to discrimination on the basis that the health care entity does not provide, pay for, provide coverage of, or refer for abortions.

(2) In this subsection, the term "health care entity" includes an individual physician or other health care professional, a hospital, a provider-sponsored organization, a health maintenance organization, a health insurance plan, or any other kind of health care facility, organization or plan.

I have read this language over and over again. And nowhere do I find the words "religion, morals, beliefs, or values."

That is because Weldon is not a conscience clause. It is a denial clause because it could deny women emergency care when their lives are in danger, deny low-income rape victims reproductive health care, deny doctors the right to give their patients vital information, and deny states the ability to enforce critical laws ensuring the health of women.

Some are saying that Weldon is needed to protect the religious beliefs of doctors and hospitals that don't want to perform abortions. But that is not true.

No Federal law forces any doctor to perform an abortion. And no Federal law forces any hospital to perform an abortion, unless the woman will die without an emergency procedure.

In fact, we already have many Federal and State laws protecting the conscience of our health care providers, including the 1973 Church amendment.

That conscience clause says that public authorities may not require any individual or health care entity that receives financial assistance under our federal health programs to perform or assist in the performance of any sterilization procedure or abortion if his performance or assistance in the performance of such procedure or abortion would be contrary to his religious beliefs or moral convictions make its facilities available for the performance of any sterilization procedure or abortion if the performance of such procedure or abortion in such facilities is prohibited by the entity on the basis of religious beliefs or moral convictions, or provide any personnel for the performance or assistance in the performance of any sterilization procedure or abortion if the performance or assistance in the performance of such procedures or abortion by such personnel would be > contrary to the religious beliefs or moral convictions of such personnel. Or discriminate in the employment, promotion, or termination of employment of any physician or other health care personnel, or discriminate in the extension of staff or other privileges to any physician or other health care personnel, because he performed or assisted in the performance of a lawful sterilization procedure or abortion, because he refused to perform or assist in the performance of such a procedure or abortion on the grounds that his performance or assistance in the performance of the procedure or abortion would be contrary to his religious beliefs or moral convictions, or because of his religious beliefs or moral convictions respecting sterilization procedures or abortions.

It is not just the Federal law that offers protections. As you can see on this chart, some 46 States—almost every one of them—have enacted their own conscience clauses for doctors and providers who don't want to provide abortions.

Some are claiming that Weldon is simply a clarification of current law. I find that amazing, given that it takes hours for even the most seasoned attorneys and lawmakers to make any sense of this provision. There is nothing clarifying about it.

Weldon is a giant loophole that effectively bars federal, state, and local governments from enforcing laws protecting the reproductive health of women.

Most Americans, including most people of faith, believe that we need to strike the right balance between honoring personal beliefs and protecting the public at large.

In one survey, 89 percent of people said they oppose allowing insurance companies to refuse to pay for medical services on religious grounds.

Weldon takes it a step further, allowing any insurance company, HMO, or other entity to refuse to provide services or referrals on any grounds, and in any circumstances, even if a woman's life is in danger.

Late last week, Rev. Carlton Veazey, the president of the Religious Coalition for Reproductive Choice, brought me 2,000 petitions from people of faith in all 50 States.

These petitions said that, "Weldon is not just bad law, it is immoral law, dangerous law, and women will be hurt by it, some perhaps even killed by it."

What do our consciences say about that?

What do our consciences say about helping the thousands of women who become pregnant as a result of rape each year? The Weldon amendment makes no exceptions for them, or for women whose lives are in serious danger.

Weldon tells our State and local governments that they can not ensure that any woman, including victims of rape and incest, receive abortion referrals and services without losing all their Federal health, education, and labor funding.

Weldon tells our State and local governments that their title X clinics no longer have to refer a poor woman who asks about an abortion, even if she has been raped or her life is in danger.

Weldon tells our State and local governments that they should no longer honor the Hyde amendment, which provides Medicaid coverage for low-income women who are victims of rape or incest, or whose lives are in danger.

Here is what the Hyde amendment says:

> None of the funds appropriated under this Act, and none of the funds in any trust fund to which funds are appropriated under this Act, shall be expended for any abortion. . . .
>
> The limitations established in the preceding section shall not apply to an abortion (1) if the pregnancy is the result of an act of rape or incest; or (2) in the case where a woman suffers from a physical disorder, physical injury, or physical illness, including a life-endangering physical condition caused by or arising from the pregnancy itself, that would, as certified by a physician, place the woman in danger of death unless an abortion is performed. . . .

What if a poor woman is raped by her uncle? Say she does not have a job. She relies on Medicaid for her health care. She is not told about the option of emergency contraception and becomes pregnant.

What if she cannot emotionally bear to give birth to her relative's child—her rapist's child?

Under the Hyde amendment we say Medicaid must pay for her abortion if she is the victim of rape or incest. But, under Weldon, that is no longer the case.

What if she goes to her regular Medicaid managed care organization, but is never told that these services are covered, and never referred anywhere else? The States can no longer enforce the Hyde amendment, or even their own laws helping rape and incest victims.

What do our consciences say about helping women who will die without emergency abortions?

Weldon has no exceptions for women whose lives are in danger.

It tells States that they cannot enforce laws ensuring that poor women who face life-threatening situations will receive abortion referrals or services.

It undermines the 1986 Federal Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act, EMTALA, which says that if a pregnant woman comes to a hospital with a life-threatening situation, she will receive the treatment needed to be stabilized, even if that includes an abortion.

This law states:

> If any individual comes to a hospital and the hospital determines that the individual has an emergency medical condition, the hospital must provide . . .
>
> . . . within the staff and facilities available at the hospital, for such further medical examination and such treatment as may be required to stabilize the medical condition. . . .

A San Francisco doctor called my office to tell some of these tragic stories. One of her patient's blood was not clotting. She was bleeding for over an hour.

If she had been sent home or encouraged to continue her pregnancy, she would have likely died. Thankfully, she got care.

Another woman, a married mother, came to the hospital with an ectopic pregnancy, which means the pregnancy was developing in her cervix. If a woman grows a pregnancy in her cervix, she can die.

Again, this doctor was able to save her life.

But, what if these woman had walked into a hospital that refused to provide emergency abortions?

The Congress passed the Emergency Treatment and Active Labor Act to ensure that no one is ever turned away if their lives are in danger.

Now, Weldon tells a hospital or HMO to ignore this law. It says they can let a woman die if they don't want to perform an abortion.

And there is nothing States can do about it without losing all their Federal labor, health, and education funding.

Weldon allows all health care companies to gag doctors, and deny women vital information about their reproductive health options.

Weldon tells State and local governments they can no longer protect the doctor-patient relationship through Federal or State laws without losing all their Federal health, education, and labor funding.

Weldon conflicts with current title X Federal regulations, which require family planning clinics to:

> Offer pregnant women the opportunity to be provided information and counseling regarding each of the following options:
>
> (A) Prenatal care and delivery;
>
> (B) Infant care, foster care, or adoption; and
>
> (C) Pregnancy termination.
>
> (ii) If requested to provide such information and counseling, provide neutral, factual information and nondirective counseling on each of the options, and referral upon request, except with respect to any option(s) about which the pregnant woman indicates she does not wish to receive such information and counseling.

Under Weldon, a title X clinic can take our funding, but refuse to give women information. Think about what this could mean for the poor women who rely on these clinics.

Last year, a married Latina woman in her early 30s came to one of our title X family planning clinics in Los Angeles. She had two children under six.

She had been to the clinic before because her husband is unfaithful. He had infected her with severe STDs.

When she became pregnant again, she was very scared about having the baby. Her home life was extremely unstable, and she was worried about the impact of STDs on the fetus.

She made the extremely difficult decision to have an abortion. She asked the clinic to refer her. It did. That was the law.

But now Weldon is in direct conflict with this Federal regulation saying that title X family planning clinics that serve poor women must give them a referral if asked.

Now clinics can ignore this law. Women can be left without information. And States have no power to act.

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists says:

> The Federal refusal clause would jeopardize a physician's ability to inform a patient of all her legal medical options at federally funded Title X family planning clinics, and would categorize the Title X referral requirement as discriminatory—effectively gagging physicians across the country.

According to ACOG ethical guidelines, "Under all conditions of practice . . . consultation and referral should be carried out in the patients' best interest."

Weldon is not in the patient's best interest. It allows title X clinics, HMOs, and anyone else to deny our health care professionals their right to free speech and their patients the right to full information about their options.

If States try to enforce their own laws, they could lose billions of dollars in Federal labor, health, and education funding. For example:

All 50 States have the power to ensure that hospital mergers don't undermine the public interest. In some cases, an attorney general might determine that, for a merger to go forward, the two parties must find some way to protect the reproductive health care of women.

The Indiana supreme court has held that limits on State medical assistance for abortion in cases of life endangerment, rape or incest are unconstitutional under the State constitution because they do not include exceptions for women's health.

The New Mexico supreme court held that a regulation limiting medical assistance for abortion in cases of life endangerment, rape or incest is unconstitutional under the New Mexico constitution.

A court in Illinois has held that under a law limiting State medical assistance for abortion to cases of life endangerment is unconstitutional, under the constitution of Illinois.

Under Weldon, States face a Hobson's choice between denying reproductive health services and information to women or losing billions of dollars in Federal labor, health, and education funding.

They are told they have to ignore their constitutions, to ignore Federal law and State law. They are told they no longer can find creative ways to ensure women's health.

In New Jersey, a court approved an arrangement that set aside some of the assets of a secular hospital prior to its acquisition by a Catholic hospital.

The assets were meant to support the continuation of the secular hospital's mission of providing reproductive health services, which it would not be able to fulfill after the merger.

Now, New Jersey can no longer enforce this arrangement without risking more than $7 billion in Federal funding.

Now, some say that States are free to enforce laws protecting reproductive health. They say States can do whatever they want if they just give up Federal funds. Sure.

Let's look at what States would lose. And, keep in mind: these numbers are very conservative.

This chart has California losing at least $37 billion in Federal funding, but our Attorney General has put the number at $49 billion.

No State can afford to give up substantial resources that help educate and care for its children, provide for and train its workers, and bring health care to all its citizens.

This is not about choice, it is about coercion.

That is one of the many reasons why the California attorney general has sued in Federal court, a lawsuit that I believe will prevail.

The suit says the Weldon amendment is unconstitutional because it restricts a woman's right to abortion when necessary to preserve her life or health.

It says that Weldon exceeds Congress's spending power because it is so vague.

In South Dakota v. Dole, 1987, the court said that when "Congress desires to condition the States' receipt of federal funds, 'it must do so unambiguously, enable[ing] the States to exercise their choice knowingly, cognizant of the consequences of their participation.'"

Another lawsuit filed in the District of Columbia on behalf of health care clinics makes the same claim. It says: "The amendment 'leaves Title X grantees to guess how to meet Weldon's mandate while meeting the mandates of [Title X regulations], and, indeed, whether this is even possible.'"

If States aren't sure how to comply with Weldon, they cannot make a knowing choice. And, with the amount of funding at stake, they are bound to err on the side of extreme caution, thereby creating a chilling effect.

The California lawsuit says that Federal funding conditions must be rationally related to the Federal interest in the program receiving them.

What does unemployment insurance or No Child Left Behind funds have to do with reproductive health?

Nothing. But the penalties under Weldon are so unconstitutionally extreme and coercive that States have no choice but to comply.

This amendment is unconstitutional and dangerous.

It is not a conscience clause. We already have that.

It is a denial clause that will cause unnecessary hardship for victims of rape, women whose lives are in danger, poor women who rely on their doctors for information, and States that will be forced to choose between protecting women and losing billions of dollars in funds.

If the Senate wants a new conscience clause, we can draft a real conscience clause.

I will work with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to do just that.

But I will not back down until we alter or repeal the Weldon language as written and do right by the women, doctors, and States across America.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:45 A.M. TOMORROW

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CORNYN). Under the previous order, the Senate stands adjourned until 9:45 a.m. on Tuesday, April 26, 2005.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 6:20 p.m., adjourned until Tuesday, April 26, 2005, at 9:45 a.m.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

TRIBUTE TO JEFFERSON ECONOMIC COUNCIL

HON. THOMAS G. TANCREDO

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, April 25, 2005

Mr. TANCREDO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Jefferson Economic Council, Colorado's oldest economic development agency. Early next month, the council will be celebrating its 50th anniversary.

The Jefferson Economic Council has worked tirelessly over the last half-century to brighten the future of Jefferson County businesses. And even after fifty years, the Council remains the premier business organization in Jefferson County, adapting to a rapidly changing economy. The council works with county government, cities, other economic development organizations, chambers of commerce, and the business community to create cooperation and common voice for business in the county.

Mr. Speaker, as the council is fond of saying, the greatest strength of any organization is its people. I believe that is true. The hard work and dedication of the members of this organization to improving the business climate and more generally building a better community over the last five decades have been invaluable contributions to the county that I—and many other Colorado residents and businesses—call home.

HONORING POPE BENEDICT XVI

HON. RAHM EMANUEL

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, April 25, 2005

Mr. EMANUEL. Mr. Speaker, as people of many faiths around the world celebrate the historic election of Pope Benedict XVI, we look toward His Holiness for faith and inspiration in addressing today's challenges and opportunities for peace and progress.

News of the Pontiff's election was greeted with great enthusiasm by many in the Fifth Congressional District of Illinois, home to St. Benedict Parish on Chicago's Northwest side. The dedicated parishioners of St. Benedict are delighted that the Pope has selected the name of their patron saint and thus feel a special connection to him.

Since the sixth century, the Benedictine tradition reflected austerity and continuous pursuit of knowledge. These principles formed the cornerstone of Saint Benedict Parish, which was founded on the Northwest side of Chicago in 1902. The new parish was created to serve as an educational center for the area's burgeoning German Catholic population. Pope Benedict XVI, a longtime and learned university professor, has demonstrated a life-long commitment to excellence, wholly fitting the tradition of his namesake.

The Fifth District is also home to many people who share German ancestry with Pope Benedict XVI, who was born in Marktl am Inn, Germany. The parishioners of St. Benedict, St. Alphonsus and others have reason to be proud of the first Pope of German ancestry in nearly a millennium.

Pope Benedict XVI is endowed with great vision, intellect, and knowledge of the Church's rich history and tradition. He is further blessed by long service and loyalty to His Holiness, the late Pope John Paul II, whose divine wisdom and charisma set a shining example of leadership and guidance for all who follow him.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the parishioners of St. Benedict, St. Alphonsus and indeed all of Chicago, I wish Pope Benedict XVI good health, longevity and success as the Bishop of Rome and leader of the Roman Catholic Church.

ASTAR AIR CARGO EARNS MILITARY HONORS

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, April 25, 2005

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the employees and management of ASTAR Air Cargo, which is headquartered in my congressional district in Miami.

In April, the U.S. Air Force Air Mobility Command presented awards to 102 ASTAR Air Cargo employees who operated missions for Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom in 2003. The all-American ASTAR team was put together by John Dasburg, the Chairman, CEO, and President who is a Vietnam veteran. ASTAR is dedicated to providing superior service, and the U.S. military has chosen to recognize that publicly.

U.S. Air Force Major General Mark Volcheff, Director of Operations of the Air Mobility Command, presented the awards to the ASTAR employees.

These awards highlight the dedication of ASTAR employees who are devoted to serving our country in a time of war. Eight loadmasters and three pilots will receive the Aerial Achievement Medals for meritorious achievement during cargo flight missions. These individuals—Harrow Clyde, Thomas Coleman, Anthony Estrella, Steven Garrett, Frank Haidet, Frank Richmond, Philippe Verbrugghen, John Winters, Captain Stan Kahan, First Officer James Huddleston, and Second Officer Bernard Richardson—are being honored for flying at least seven missions during the conflicts. In addition to those medals, the Air Force will present 91 Certificates of Appreciation to ASTAR operations and maintenance employees who performed critical functions in support of those missions.

The Air Mobility Command provides strategic airlift and aerial refueling for all of America's armed forces. The individuals honored displayed commendable efforts in the missions. Without their dedication, such missions would not be possible.

ASTAR flies Department of Defense missions and charters for the Air Mobility Command. The awards presented demonstrate that, in addition to ASTAR's regularly scheduled and special air charter services, ASTAR is committed to supporting U.S. Armed Forces missions and troops in harm's way. ASTAR is also a participant in the United States Civil Reserve Air Fleet program supporting our national defense.

TRIBUTE TO ROBERT RUSSELL

HON. DALE E. KILDEE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, April 25, 2005

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has become a source of inspiration for the citizens of Tuscola County, in my district. On May 13, the County's Human Development Commission will gather in Caro for their Annual Meeting, where they will also honor the accomplishments of one of their early pioneers, Mr. Robert Russell, for 35 years of dedicated service to the organization.

The Human Development Commission, which celebrates its 40th anniversary this year, represents the legacy of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964. Soon after its passage, Economic Opportunity Action Committees were established in Huron, Lapeer, Sanilac, and Tuscola Counties to explore the several possibilities made available by the Act. These committees formed the Human Development Commission on February 8, 1965, with a mission to "empower individuals and communities to identify their needs and secure resources necessary to achieve their goals of self-sufficiency and an improved quality of life.

Shortly after its inception, Bob Russell began his long and distinguished career with the HDC, highlighted by his leadership in various positions as a member of their Board of Directors, Advisory Council, and as a volunteer within various HDC programs. In addition, he represented his community as a member of the Vassar City Council for 10 years and the Tuscola County Commission for 18 years. Prior to this, he served his country proudly in the U.S. Air Force during World War II. All of the accomplishments aside, Bob is also, perhaps first and foremost, a loving husband, father and grandfather.

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.
Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

I am appreciative of Bob Russell's many years of leadership and for the untold number of individuals he has assisted, both personally and indirectly. He helped the agency and its customers overcome many obstacles and celebrate numerous successes. We will always be grateful for his willingness to be an original incorporator of the HDC and for his years of loyalty and dedication to its mission and vision.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to join me in honoring a true public servant, Robert Russell. His service to his community and fellow citizens is a testament to everyone aspiring to make this a better world. His selfless commitment to service has been a benefit to the people of Michigan and beyond.

TRIBUTE TO KATHLEEN SWANSON

HON. THOMAS G. TANCREDO

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, April 25, 2005

Mr. TANCREDO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Ms. Kathleen Swanson. Kathleen has been selected as one of the recipients of the Milken National Educator award. The award is presented for excellence in teaching elementary education, and is designed to help bring recognition to the teaching profession by highlighting the exceptional performance of individual teachers in supporting and promoting student achievement.

Ms. Swanson is a literacy instructional coach at Stein Elementary in Lakewood, Colorado, and she has been teaching for seventeen years. In the past six years, Stein Elementary has gone from being one of the lowest performing schools to one of the highest Title I schools in Jefferson County. This is in no small part to the dedication of educational professionals like Ms. Swanson.

The Milken folks presenting her with the award aren't the only ones who have seen fit to recognize Ms. Swanson's contributions. In fact, the Resource Center at Stein Elementary was recently renamed the "Kathleen Swanson Resource Room," and each class at Stein donated a book in her name to the library.

Mr. Speaker, I hope all of my colleagues will join me in thanking Ms. Swanson for her hard work, and congratulating her on being the recipient of this prestigious award.

GREENVILLE SAFE KIDS COALITION

HON. BOB INGLIS

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, April 25, 2005

Mr. INGLIS of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, be advised that this resolution is to express appreciation to the Greenville SAFE KIDS Coalition for ten years of distinguished service to the state of South Carolina and our Nation in its work to protect children from unintentional childhood injuries.

Whereas, only a decade ago, Greenville was much less safe for children. Eighty percent of kids rode their bicycles without helmets. About 40 percent of older children traveled in motor vehicles without using a safety belt and countless younger kids did not ride in approved car seats. One in five families went to sleep each night without the benefit of a smoke alarm. In fact, unintentional childhood injury was the leading killer of children 14 and under in Greenville in 1994. To address what was a little-recognized problem Greenville SAFE KIDS Coalition was created.

Whereas, I am pleased to report that since the inception of the Greenville SAFE KIDS Coalition, there has been a dramatic 24 percent decline in the unintentional injury death rate among children 14 and under. The combined efforts of Greenville SAFE KIDS Coalition, under the leadership of Greenville Hospital System's Children's Hospital, have led to remarkable achievements in preventing childhood death and injury. The Coalition's multifaceted effort includes public awareness, education, distribution of safety devices, enactment and enforcement of laws, and a grassroots partnership program that embodies the countywide strategy that accounts for the progress.

Whereas, in 10 years, there has been a 50 percent decline in the child pedestrian injury death rate, a 10 percent decline in the child motor vehicle related death rate, a 34 percent decline in the death rate from childhood drowning, a 53 percent decline in the death rate from bicycle injuries and a 56 percent decline in the residential fire-related injury death rate. Unfortunately, even with these impressive advances, unintentional injury is still the number one killer of Greenville's children. Each year, more than 10 children die and more than 8,000 are injured seriously enough to require medical attention. That is a staggering one of four children. The program works with Emergency Rooms, physicians, schools, and Greenville County's Child Fatality Review Task Force to track trends on how and why injuries occur. Programs are then developed in specific injury areas to increase awareness and ultimately prevent injuries. Examples of their activities include assisting high risk families in obtaining smoke detectors, hosting monthly car seat inspections, distributing thousands of bike helmets, and teaching children about home safety through the nationally recognized Buddy's Home Improvement House.

Whereas, Greenville SAFE KIDS first-ever "Progress Report on Preventing Unintentional Injuries" tracks a decade of work in prevention. It presents a detailed picture of the particular risks that kill and disable more children than disease, homicide or suicide. This report also maps out a strategy for the next 10 years and issues specific calls to action across injury areas.

Whereas, in their 10th anniversary year, Greenville SAFE KIDS Coalition looks forward to continued growth through strategic partnerships with sponsors, health professionals, schools, legislators, industry and sister communities. Through these partnerships, Greenville SAFE KIDS will lead important advocacy initiatives that will result in safer environments for children at home, at school, at play and on the way. Greenville SAFE KIDS Coalition remains committed to reducing unintentional childhood injuries and keeping children out of GHS Children's Hospital.

Now, therefore, be it resolved by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring:

That all members encourage parents, caregivers, schools, business leaders, legislators and health professionals to make preventing unintentional childhood injuries a priority and to continue supporting the efforts of Greenville SAFE KIDS Coalition to save and protect the lives of our children.

Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Greenville SAFE KIDS, South Carolina SAFE KIDS and National SAFE KIDS.

IN SUPPORT OF THE MEDICAL LABORATORY WEEK IN FLORIDA

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, April 25, 2005

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to commend and recognize the work of the health professionals who practice in medical laboratories. In Florida, we will be commemorating the "Medical Laboratory Week" from April 25 to April 29 of 2005.

These professionals include laboratory technicians, medical technologists, cytotechnologists, histotechnologists, pathologists, and phlebotomists. They are well educated and highly trained professionals who are an integral part of our healthcare system and vital for the provision of medical testing.

These professionals serve our communities with great dedication and perform an invaluable work that is essential for the diagnosis of medical conditions and monitoring of treatment. Their work is a great contribution to our society and serves to improve the quality of care that our patients receive and deserve.

Please join me in recognizing the professionals who work in laboratory medicine, who have an honorable profession and help to provide exceptional patient care in Florida and in our Nation.

TRIBUTE TO CH2M HILL

HON. THOMAS G. TANCREDO

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, April 25, 2005

Mr. TANCREDO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a local Colorado company, CH2M Hill. Since the December 26 Asian tsunami disaster, many Americans have looked into their hearts and reached their wallets in an effort to help alleviate suffering in Thailand, Indonesia, Sri Lanka, and other affected nations. The employees of CH2M Hill were no exception, quickly responding to the disaster not just with funds, but with critical know how and badly needed technical assistance.

CH2M Hill was one of the first companies on the scene, and one of the most active in providing critical services to victims. They partnered with other companies to provide clean drinking water to people in Indonesia, setting up a mobile water treatment unit that is providing safe drinking water to the bulk of the population in Banda Aceh. The quality of the water is equivalent to bottled water, and is currently being provided throughout the area, including to the U.N. compound and more than 10 refugee camps. It was the first privately donated system up and running in the region, purifying water at the rate of 600 gallons per minute, producing 864,000 gallons of purified water daily. This will help nearly a quarter-of-a-million people every day.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud of CEO Ralph Peterson and the employees of CH2M Hill. Their efforts are to be commended, and help demonstrate that the strength of America's compassion are always best measured by the efforts of individual citizens and private companies, not the number of government programs we create or the amount of federal money we appropriate.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Tuesday, April 26, 2005 may be found in the Daily Digest of today's RECORD.

SENATE—Tuesday, April 26, 2005

The Senate met at 9:45 a.m. and was called to order by the Hon. JIM TALENT, a Senator from the State of Missouri.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Eternal Spirit, we look to You for hope. Teach us the power of being quiet in Your presence. Shelter us from the noise, tension, sound, and fury that bewilder us. Remind us to be still in order to know Your wisdom. Help us to see that those who love You are never alone, for we are sustained by Your powerful companionship.

May we find our peace in the knowledge that You are always with us. Bless our Senators. Give them the wisdom to trust You without wavering. Make them constantly aware of Your unfailing love. Rescue them from danger and keep their feet from slipping.

We pray this in Your holy Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable JIM TALENT led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

> I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

> U.S. SENATE,
> PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
> Washington, DC, April 26, 2005.
>
> To the Senate:
>
> Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable JIM TALENT, a Senator from the State of Missouri, to perform the duties of the Chair.
>
> President pro tempore.

Mr. TALENT thereupon assumed the Chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, today we will begin our session with a 1-hour period of morning business. Following morning business, the Senate will have an hour for debate on the motion to proceed to the highway bill. Under the order, after the 60 minutes of debate, the Senate will begin a vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the motion to proceed to the highway legislation.

I do expect that cloture will be invoked and that we would be able to consider the substance of the bill during today's session. Once we are on the bill, Senators can expect amendments. Therefore, additional rollcall votes will occur today.

Today we will also recess from the hour of 12:30 to 2:15 to accommodate the weekly policy luncheons.

In addition to the highway bill, this week we will consider any conference reports that become available. We hope both the budget and the emergency supplemental conference reports will be ready for floor consideration before we conclude our business this week.

Finally, I would announce we have several district judges who should be cleared for Senate action. If votes are necessary on those nominations, we will be scheduling those votes periodically throughout the week.

I yield the floor.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will be time for the transaction of morning business for up to 60 minutes, with the first half hour under the control of the Democratic leader or his designee and the second half hour under the control of the majority leader or his designee.

The Senator from New York.

JUDICIAL NOMINATIONS

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise under morning business to discuss some events that occurred overnight. Most important, there is a story in today's USA Today, based on a direct interview, that Karl Rove rejected a compromise with Senate Democrats Monday on long-stalled nominations for the Federal judiciary and strongly defended President Bush's choice of John Bolton.

I am going to talk about the first matter.

It is disconcerting and surprising to see an aide to the President, an important aide, tell the Senate how to conduct itself. The Senate has conducted itself by its own rules for decades—for centuries. Those rules, by the design of the Founding Fathers, written into the Constitution, talk about the Senate as being a preserve of minority rights. The Founding Fathers called it the cooling saucer.

It is clear, if you read the Federalist Papers and look at the history of this Republic, that when a Senate minority of 45 rejects 10 out of 215 judges and supports 205 out of 215, that is the very way the Founding Fathers wanted the Senate to behave. After all, one of the very earliest nominations of President Washington, John Rutledge, was rejected by the Senate for the Supreme Court—rejected by the Senate. In that Senate were I believe eight Founding Fathers, the people who wrote the Constitution, rejecting the President's choice.

We have, in a certain sense, people way out of the mainstream, way over—a small group—telling the Republican Party in the Senate and telling the President that they must have all the judges, including the most extreme. Because, after all, it was only the most extreme we rejected, judges who believe, for instance, that the New Deal was a socialist revolution and should be undone; judges who believe zoning laws are unconstitutional; judges who believe the purpose of a woman should be to be subjugate herself to a man; judges who believe slavery was God's gift to white people.

These are some of the judges we have rejected. It was not based on any one particular issue. People say this is all code for abortion. It is not. I have voted for I believe it is about 190 of the judges. The overwhelming majority do not agree with me on abortion, but I believe they met the ultimate test, that they would interpret the law, not make law. Thus, even though they had strongly held beliefs on their own, they would be good judges. The 10 we rejected failed that test. They feel so passionately that they have to impose their views.

One of them, Priscilla Owen of Texas, was criticized repeatedly by conservative members of her own court, the Texas Supreme Court, for placing her interpretation of law ahead of the standard interpretation, the interpretation everybody accepted.

So we were proud to do our constitutional duty and reject these judges, judges we were not consulted about, judges who were way out of the mainstream.

Now, because of the demands of a few—way over, way out there—it seems the majority leader is pushing the so-called nuclear option. The problem is a large number, a good number of people on the other side, do not want to do the nuclear option. They know it would change the rules in the middle of the game. You don't change the rules in the middle of the game because you cannot get your way on every single judge. Our Constitution, our system of laws, is too hallowed, is too important to do that.

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

These wavering Republican Senators know the Senate has been the repository of checks and balances. That is why we have not done the nuclear option yet. I have to say I wish the majority leader would not be moving it. He should as a Senator stand up for the rights of the Senate. He should as an American stand up for the rights of the American people. But that has not happened.

Yesterday they had to call the heavy guns in. Karl Rove, a member of the executive branch, told the Senate Republicans there should be no compromise.

It is quite natural, by the way, that the White House would not want a Senate with checks and balances. This is not simply true of Republican Presidents, it is true of all Presidents, whether they be Democrat or Republican. They want to have their way. They regard the legislature, and particularly the Senate, as sort of a pesky obstacle to getting their way.

But the wisdom of our Republic has shown that when the Senate does slow things down, when the Senate does invoke checks and balances, the Republic is better off.

Now we have Karl Rove telling the Senate how they ought to act—how we ought to act—to change a tradition of 200 years.

Senator REID has said publicly that the President told him the White House would stay out of this. That is clearly not the case. The White House is not staying out of this and they are trying to aggrandize executive power. The American people, though, are not buying it. There is a story today in the Washington Post that shows " . . . by a 2 to 1 ratio"—that is pretty strong, that is more than the filibuster amount—> the public rejected easing the Senate rules in a way that would make it harder for Democratic Senators to prevent final action on Bush's nominees. Even many Republicans were reluctant to abandon current Senate confirmation procedures. Nearly half opposed any rule changes, joining eight in 10 Democrats and seven in 10 political independents. . . .

The American public may not follow minute to minute, day by day, what we do on this floor, but they have a pretty good nose to smell what is going on. What they smell is a whiff of extremism, a whiff of "I can't get my way so I change the rules in the middle of the game," a whiff of "not simply a fight of the moment over a particular judge but rather a desire not to live with the traditions of this body and this Republic, which involves compromise and mediation."

Honestly, when I recommended to our caucus early on that we filibuster a few of the judges and then later that we prevent and stand up to the nuclear option no matter what it took, I thought we would lose politically. I thought the argument: "Well, have 51 votes on everything" would prevail. But the American people's wisdom is large, deep, and hard to fool. The American people have said they understand what is going on. When the Republicans were in charge, they didn't allow judges to come out. We are not in charge now and the filibuster is a way of mitigating the President's desire to put whomever he wants on the bench and that the filibuster is appropriate.

I do not believe what some on the other side say, that the public is with the Democrats because they have gotten their message out ahead of us. Please. The public is with the Democrats in this case, not because they are Democratic and not because they may agree with the stand or disagree with the stand of each of the judges we have rejected—although I suspect that would be the case if they knew—the public is with us because they understand fundamentally the checks and balances that are so important in this Republic and that because a President gets 51½ percent of the vote he doesn't always have to get his way, particularly when it comes to choosing the third, unelected—only unelected branch of Government.

So Mr. Rove can order Senators not to compromise. I hope and pray the Senators will not take direction from the White House on something where the interests of the White House, whatever party the President might be, are different from those of the Senate and frankly different from the Republic's—and I believe they will not.

The wisdom of the American people is strong. I let my colleagues know, if they should try to invoke the nuclear option and it succeeds, we will have no choice but to enforce the Senate rules and try to bring up issues the American people want us to bring up: the high cost of energy and gasoline, health care, education. We do not usually do that because of comity in the Senate. After all, the other party is the majority party.

But if they are not respecting the rights of the minority, as a majority, they do not deserve that same deference. What we will do is not shut down the Senate, not not show up. We will, rather, use the remaining rules at our disposal to bring up issues the American people care about.

Again, my plea to my colleagues on the other side—I know many of them have doubts about this nuclear option but are under tremendous pressure—resist the entreaties of the executive branch, in this case in the personification of Mr. Rove, stand tall, stand firm. Do not change the rules in the middle of the game; protect the sacred checks and balances at the core of the Republic by rejecting this trampling on the rules, the so-called nuclear option.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VITTER). The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. How much time remains on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 18 minutes.

DANGEROUS POLITICAL INTERSECTION

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, everyone in this country knows what a dangerous intersection is. We all drive and understand the consequences of a dangerous intersection. We are coming to a dangerous intersection in American politics, especially in the Congress: first, by actions that are, on their face, wrong and are harmful to our country; and second, by inaction on matters that cry out for attention—but, again, get none in this Congress and by this administration.

We face a different kind of politics than most have experienced before when we see prominent members of the Congress participate in exercises with outside groups who suggest those who are not with them on the issues are people who lack faith, are people who are not people of faith. Those are dangerous grounds to tread on politically. Yet they do it and do it willingly.

As I was listening to my colleague, I remembered going to a puppet show my daughter participated in during grade school some years ago. Of course, in a puppet show you see only the puppet; you do not see who is behind the black cloth. There are puppet shows going on here in the Congress, of course, and in the administration. Perhaps today's USA Today tells us a little bit about who is behind the screen. The chief political adviser to the White House, Mr. Karl Rove, says there will be no compromise on this issue of judges. It seems to me, a White House that has said it is not involved in this issue is clearly neck deep in this issue, and perhaps is the one behind the screen in this case. Whether it is on this so-called nuclear option with respect to the vote on the judges in the Senate or the Social Security debate going on regarding whether we should privatize Social Security as recommended by the White House, Mr. Rove has played a very prominent role.

To take Social Security for a moment, the memorandum leaked in January from the White House by the chief strategist on this issue, who works for Mr. Rove, said that, for the first time in six decades, we have a chance to win on Social Security.

What does that mean? It means they have never liked Social Security. They want to take Social Security apart. That memorandum also said we have to claim there is a crisis and convince people there is a crisis in Social Security. Of course, it is not working because there is not a crisis in Social Security which has been and is an enormously important program, lifting tens of millions of senior citizens out of poverty in this country. The fact is that Social Security will be fully solvent until President George W. Bush is 106 years old. That is hardly a crisis.

People are living longer, and we may need to make adjustments in Social Security as we move along, but it does not require major surgery. And, the President's proposal to borrow $5 trillion and then stick it in the stock market and cut Social Security benefits and sit back and hope, is not much of a plan.

It is interesting to me that the American people, in poll after poll after poll, are rejecting this. I was at a Social Security forum over the weekend. We did them in several States. A fellow came up to us at the forum and said, I am 88 years old, I am blind, and Social Security is all I have. I think people are very concerned about this notion of sticking this money in private accounts and just hoping, after you have borrowed trillions, hoping somehow things will be better.

Whether it is Social Security and private accounts and the attempt to take the Social Security system apart or this issue of the nuclear option because the majority party and the President have gotten only 95 percent of the Federal judges they want, these intersections are dangerous.

Let me describe the danger of the intersection with respect to the so-called nuclear option. The Constitution of the United States is clear about judges. In fact, originally when they put this Constitution together, they felt perhaps they would have the Senate or the Congress appoint judges. Instead, there is a two-step process. The President decides who shall be nominated to the Senate for a lifetime appointment on the Federal bench to the Federal courts and then the Senate decides whether they will support that nomination. It is called advice and consent. This President, President Bush, has sent the Senate 215 nominees to serve for a lifetime on the Federal court. We have supported 205 of them. That is 95 percent. But that is not enough. The President and the majority party say we want it all.

I remember people like that on the playground when I was in school. They want it all. If they do not get it all, they are going to take their bat and ball and go home. In this case, if they do not get it all, they will violate the Senate rules in order to change the Senate rules. How will they violate the rules? They will overturn precedent in the Senate in terms of how the rules are changed. It takes 67 votes to change the rules of the Senate. The so-called nuclear option devised by the majority party is a strategy by which they will overturn the ruling of the Parliamentarian that the rules are being violated, and by a majority vote, overturn the rule and effectively change the rules of the Senate by violating the rules of the Senate. Some people do not care about that. That is fine. If you care a lot about the future of this country, if you care a lot about democracy, if you care about making a democratic government work by compromise, you ought to care a lot about this.

It is arrogant. It reflects the feeling of a party that controls the White House, the House, and the Senate, that they must get their way on everything.

The reason a 60-vote requirement—that is, a filibuster—is useful to the workings of democracy is because it requires compromise. It requires Members to reach a threshold of 60 votes in the Senate, which requires you to reach across the aisle and talk to people of the other party. That is a good thing, not a bad thing. Compromise is a good thing. Bipartisanship is a good thing, not a bad thing. We have people now who look at it as something that is awful. We want to take a partisan group that has 51 votes and is musclebound—it is politics on steroids—and ram it through the Congress and violate the rules in order to change the rules. It is not what this country should expect from the Congress.

Here is today's paper: "Filibuster Rule Change Opposed." It is interesting that there is a broad center of common sense. There always has been. Over two centuries, this country's political system moves one direction and then the other direction. But there is a strong magnetic pull back to the center. That magnetic pull comes from a reservoir of common sense all across this country of people who basically know what is the right thing. They know from their school days, from their civic organizations, they know from their everyday lives you do not violate the rules to change rules. We have certain rules. You do not violate rules to change rules. People know that inherently, and they also know the consequences of one-party rule that says it is our way and that is the only way and we refuse to compromise on anything.

For that reason, it is quite clear that two-thirds of the American people have that reservoir of common sense and are expressing it. I hope the majority party will listen. I especially hope Mr. Rove and the White House, who says there will be no compromise, will understand that compromise is what makes this Senate work.

In the McCullough book about John Adams, as I told my colleagues previously, he would write to Abigail—because John Adams was in Europe, representing our country in England and France as they tried to put this new country together—he would write to his wife, Abigail, and ask the question, plaintively: Who will be the leaders? Who will emerge as the leaders to help form this new country of ours? From where will the leadership come? And then in the next letter to Abigail, he would ask the question in different ways again: Who will be the leaders? Then he would say: It appears there is only us. There is me, there is George Washington, there is Thomas Jefferson, Ben Franklin, Mason, Madison.

In the rearview mirror of history, the only "us" is some of the greatest human talent that has ever been assembled that created quite a remarkable country. For 2 centuries, Americans have asked the same question: From where will the leadership come? How will the leadership emerge to steer this country and provide direction for this great democracy of ours? In almost every case, the American people have been surprised by those who step forward.

We have been enormously blessed by wonderful leaders—Republicans, Democrats, conservatives, liberals—leaders who step forward at the right time, at the right moment, to say: Here is where America needs to move. Here is how we need to improve and strengthen this great democracy of ours.

I ask again, and I think America asks again, with the backdrop of these questions, violating the Senate rules to change Senate rules, taking apart the most successful program we have had in this country's history, the Social Security Program, the American people are asking, as they answer these polls: Where is the leadership? Where will the leadership come from to put this country on track?

We do have crisis. It is not Social Security. We have a bona fide crisis in health care. Prescription drug costs, health care costs are going straight up, and no one is doing anything about it. We have a crisis in jobs. We have the biggest trade deficit in human history, and we are choking on it. We have massive numbers of American jobs moving every single day overseas. It is an epidemic because American workers are being told by their multinational employers: You either compete with 30-cent labor from China or we are sorry, it is over for you. That job goes to China for 30 cents an hour, working 7 days a week, 12 to 14 hours a day, often kids. We have an epidemic in jobs and trade. We have a serious problem with the largest budget deficits in the history of this country. Yes, that is a crisis.

Last week, we passed an $80 billion emergency supplemental bill to pay for the costs in Iraq and Afghanistan and not one penny was paid for. The administration that requested it did not suggest it be paid for. Congress did not suggest it be paid for. Just add it to the debt. Send the soldiers to Iraq and bring them back later and have them pay for the debt.

So, yes, we have some crises. Health care, jobs, trade deficit, fiscal policy, energy. Drive to the gas pumps and ask yourself whether there is a problem there. And then we have the Crown Prince of Saudi Arabia going to Texas yesterday to explain how much additional oil they will pump in order to help us with our energy problem. Sixty percent of our oil comes from off our shores, much of it from troubled parts of the world—Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Venezuela, Kuwait.

If, God forbid, tomorrow the pipeline for sending oil to this country from those troubled parts of the world were ruptured, this country's economy would be flat on its back. We are held hostage by oil from off our shores to the extent we have to have the Saudis come to Texas, to the ranch, to explain to us how they are going to help us solve our problems.

The fact is, we do have crises. The operative question is, Where is the leadership? Where is the leadership? Where will it come from to deal with these issues? No, I am not talking about the nuclear option. That is a specious approach, one that will injure this Senate and injure this country. I am not talking about taking Social Security apart—exactly the wrong thing. I am talking about the leadership for things that really matter to American families.

When people are in their homes, sitting at their tables, having supper, they talk about issues such as: Do I have a good job? Does it pay well? Do I have job security? Do grandpa and grandma have access to good health care? How about the kids, do they have access to doctors when they need it? Are our kids going to a school we are proud of? Do we live in safe neighborhoods? Those are things that are operative in the midst of families' interests about this country and where they live.

I hope very much the majority party will understand what the American people are telling them: Lay off the nuclear option. Accept that 95-percent support for judges nominated by this President, which is a pretty good record. Ninety-five percent, that is a good record. Accept and understand there is an opposition party. They, too, have rights. And accept and understand that compromise is not a bad word. Compromise recognizes that this democracy works when you have bipartisanship, when you reach across the aisle. That is what the 60-vote margin requires us to do, in my judgment. And answer the question, Where is the leadership? Just answer that question, Where is the leadership on issues that matter to American families? My hope is, in the coming days we will see some of that leadership both here in the Congress and also from this administration.

Last, and most importantly, let's not ever hear again that those with whom you disagree are not people of faith. What a shameless thing to be doing, to suggest that your political opponents are people who are not people of faith. This country is better than that. Political debate and dialog can be better than that. And the American people expect and deserve better.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

JUDICIAL NOMINATIONS

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I rise to talk about the broken confirmation process for Federal judges. The Senate faces an unprecedented crisis and is failing the Constitution and the American people.

For the first time in the Senate's history, a minority of Senators is twisting the rules of the Senate to block the will of the majority. They are taking for themselves a power granted only to the President of the United States, the power of nominating judges. Just as disturbing is the fact that the minority is also threatening to shut down the Senate and the people's business if the majority acts to restore Senate tradition and fulfill our constitutional responsibility.

Make no mistake about it, we will restore the Senate tradition of taking up-or-down votes on the President's nominees. Hopefully, the minority will support the nomination process the Senate has practiced for more than 200 years and end the filibuster of judicial nominations. But if the majority of the Senate must act to restore that tradition, we will do so.

Like many Senators, I spend a lot of time in my home State. I meet with constituents, give speeches to civic groups, and tour manufacturing plants. I have heard a lot about the war in Iraq and Social Security. People talk about gas prices and the economy, education, and health care. But the topic I hear about the most is the importance of confirming judges.

Last November, election day came and the American people spoke. President Bush won reelection by receiving the most votes ever cast for a Presidential candidate. A majority of the American people clearly endorsed his policies and his leadership. So when this Congress convened, I had high hopes that the crisis of judicial nominations was behind us.

I hoped the Senators who obstructed the Senate's business over the past 2 years realized the errors of their ways. After all, they lost seats in the Senate, and their minority leader also was defeated in the last election. I hoped we could turn to voting on President Bush's nominations to the Federal bench. I hoped we would return to the Senate tradition of giving nominees an up-or-down vote.

But it did not take long to realize that was not going to be the case. The minority proudly boasts about their filibustering the President's nominees. And if the majority acts to restore Senate tradition, they say they are going to expand their obstructionism to the entire business of the Senate and shut down the Government.

In article II, section 2 of the Constitution, the President is given the power to nominate judges. And upon advice and consent of the Senate, those nominees shall be placed on the bench.

So the President alone has the power to pick judges. And the Senate has the responsibility to render its advice and consent. That leads to the question of what does "advice and consent" mean? Fortunately, I am not a lawyer or a constitutional scholar. But I can read. And the Framers were pretty clear when they spoke.

First, they said the Senate as a whole is to give its advice and consent. When the Constitution speaks of the Senate as a whole body, it means a majority of the body. The Supreme Court has even stated as much.

Second, the Framers were pretty clear when they required more than a majority to act. For example, they required a two-thirds vote to amend the Constitution. They required a two-thirds vote to convict and remove from office an impeached President or Federal official. But even more telling, in the very same sentence of the Constitution that gives the Senate the duty to render advice and consent on nominations, the Framers also required a two-thirds vote to approve a treaty.

Now, if Framers meant that a supermajority vote was required to approve a nominee, they would have clearly stated so. The supermajority is something the Constitution rejects for nominees, but that is exactly what the minority is saying when they filibuster a nominee. The minority is attempting to shift the balance of power away from the executive to the legislative branch. That is nothing more than rewriting the Constitution and the separation of powers the Framers designed more than 200 years ago.

What the Constitution does give every Senator a right to do is to express his or her opinion on a nominee and on the nominee's qualifications. That right is to speak in support of or in opposition to, and vote for or against a nominee. But no Senator has the right to prevent the whole Senate from voting on judicial nominees if they are unable to convince enough Senators to join in their opposition.

It is the duty of Senators to speak their objections and then vote yes or no. They may make the ultimate statement against a nominee by voting against him or her, but they may not prevent the rest of the Senate from giving the same ultimate statement. They must not block an up-or-down vote on the nominee. In fact, for more than 200 years, this is how the Senate has considered nominations: with an up-or-down vote. Debate has taken place, and then the nominee has been given a vote.

Never before the 108th Congress was a nominee with majority support denied a vote on the Senate floor. Never before the last Congress had the rules of the Senate been twisted to prevent such a vote. Previous Senates had not even considered filibustering nominees as an option. The rules do not explicitly prohibit it because Senate tradition has always been to allow the nominee, no matter how controversial, an up-or-down vote.

I remember a situation in the 106th Congress. A group of Republicans opposed several of President Clinton's nominees to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Some Senators wanted to do everything within their power to stop those nominees from reaching the bench. But the majority leader at the time, Senator TRENT LOTT, said this was wrong and filed cloture himself to move the nominations forward. Cloture was invoked, and both nominees were confirmed, with many more Senators opposing the nominations than cloture.

Today, President Bush's nominees, who all have majority support, are being denied a vote by a partisan filibuster led by the Democratic Party leadership. That is unprecedented and must come to an end.

Just years ago, many Senators who now champion the filibuster of President Bush's nominees stated that judicial nominees should receive an up-or-down vote. Some even advocated abolishing the filibuster altogether. In fact, 19 members of the minority who are still serving today voted to abolish all filibusters. And now some of those Senators are the loudest voices in the Senate for filibustering President Bush's nominees.

Some of my colleagues across the aisle have spoken out against filibustering nominations. For example, the senior Senator from New York said, in 2000:

> We are charged with voting on the nominees.

The junior Senator from California said, in 1997:

> It is not the role of the Senate to obstruct the process and prevent numbers of highly qualified nominees from even being given the opportunity for a vote on the Senate floor.

The current minority whip said, in 1998:

> If, after 150 days languishing on the Executive Calendar that name has not been called for a vote, it should be. Vote the person up or down.

And the senior Senator from Massachusetts said, in 1998:

> We should resolve these disagreements by voting on these nominees—yes or no.

It is amazing how some easily forget their own words. Or maybe I should say, conveniently and selectively forget their own words.

Well, Republicans did give President Clinton's nominees an up-or-down vote. And now the minority should allow the same courtesy to President Bush's nominees.

Something we have heard over and over from the minority is how many of President Bush's nominees they have allowed to be confirmed. Let's talk about that. The minority likes to talk about all nominations, but all nominations are not equal in their impact within the judiciary. District court judges, while they are very important, are not as powerful as circuit court judges. President Bush's nominees to the circuit court have the lowest confirmation rate since the Roosevelt administration at 69 percent. President Clinton's circuit court nominees were confirmed at a rate of 77 percent, far above President Bush.

And not all circuit courts are equal. The DC Circuit is the most important. For that court, only 33 percent of President Bush's nominees have been confirmed. President Clinton's nominees were confirmed 78 percent of the time. Those differences are staggering and support the fact that our judicial confirmation system is broken because of the obstruction tactics of the minority.

Something must be done to fix this crisis. The solution can be up to our colleagues on the other side of the aisle. The simplest, fastest, and most desirable option is for the minority to agree to drop its obstructionist ways and allow an up-or-down vote on all judicial nominees. Unfortunately, that does not appear likely to happen.

Last Congress, the current minority leader was asked how much time his side needed to present their case against a nominee. He replied that there was "not a number in the universe" that they would accept.

So where does that leave us? The only answer I could see is to restore Senate tradition through a change in the rules of the Senate. Article I, section 5 of the Constitution reads:

> Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings . . .

That means a majority of the Senate can act to change the rules. It is the responsibility of the majority of Senators who want to fulfill the Senate's constitutional duty to take action necessary to do so. Majority action to set the rules of the Senate is not unprecedented, nor is it an assault on the body.

It cannot be an attack on the Senate to act to restore 200-plus years of Senate tradition and allow the Senate to fulfill its constitutional obligations. The senior member of the Senate Democratic caucus himself has taken such action. Not once, not twice, but four times in a 10-year period, the senior Senator from West Virginia changed the application of the Senate rules through a majority vote, and all four times his actions were aimed at limiting Senators' rights to debate or filibuster. Senate history is filled with other examples of majority action resulting in a change to the Senate rules to restrict the filibuster.

Let me make something very clear: We are not talking about changing the legislative filibuster. In fact, the only Senators I have heard advocating elimination of legislative filibusters are on the other side of the aisle. Not only does the legislative filibuster have a place in the Senate's tradition and history, it is fundamentally different from the filibuster of judicial nominees. Writing legislation is solely within the power of the legislative branch, and the Senate is empowered by the Constitution to set its own rules.

In the case of nominations, the nominating power is the power of the President, and the Senate can only accept or reject those nominees. The purpose of a legislative filibuster is to force changes in the legislation. However, no number of Senators can amend nominations; we can only accept or reject them. There is a place for the legislative filibuster within the Constitution, but there is not for the filibuster of judicial nominations.

So I urge my colleagues on the other side of the aisle to take a deep breath and step back from the line in the sand that they have drawn. Offer us a compromise that guarantees each nominee a vote. Give us a set of time for debate. Let's take a vote. This issue is too important for the majority of the Senate to ignore anymore. We cannot and will not let a minority of this body rewrite the Constitution and destroy the Senate's traditions. We must vote, and we will vote.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. At this time, morning business is closed.

TRANSPORTATION EQUITY ACT: A LEGACY FOR USERS—MOTION TO PROCEED

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of the motion to proceed to H.R. 3, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

Motion to proceed to the consideration of a bill (H.R. 3) to authorize funds for Federal aid highways, highway safety programs, and transit programs, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will be 60 minutes for debate equally divided between the two leaders or their designees.

The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I am glad this day is here and that we are proceeding. I certainly encourage my colleagues to vote for this motion to proceed. I have every expectation that it will pass overwhelmingly. It seems as though we are always in a lot of controversy when we talk about a highway reauthorization bill. It doesn't come along very often—about every 6 years. In my tenure here, I have been involved in four of them. This is the fourth, and it is very significant.

It is interesting that even though there is a lot of criticism, when it gets down to the vote, the vote is always overwhelming. I remind my colleagues that last year's bill was at $318 billion—that was contract authority—and there was about $303 billion in guaranteed spending. It passed by a margin of 76 to 21. It is something I know people are interested in, but there are always problems. First of all, let me just say how this is bipartisan. My good friend, the ranking member of the committee, Senator JEFFORDS—back when the Democrats were in the majority, he was chairman—and I always agreed on these highway issues. It is kind of interesting that those of us who are conservatives really believe this is something we are supposed to be doing here—building infrastructure, building roads. I am particularly concerned that our State Of Oklahoma has not had its fair share. We have been ranked as having the worst bridges in the Nation.

Anyway, we have the bill up. It is going to be essentially the same bill as we had last year. We passed it out of committee. There is always a problem. Let me mention this because it needs to come out in the beginning. There are two different ways to have a highway program. One is to do it—and essentially the other body does it more this way—by taking projects and adding them, and you pass this, so you know what projects will be there for the next 6 years. If you do that, then the people who are on the inside track would have the best opportunity to have theirs, and there is always an accusation of there being pork and having special projects.

In the Senate, we do it the hard way. We have a formula. When you have a formula, it takes into consideration so many different aspects. There is not one State that could not stand and say, my State is not being treated fairly because of this factor or the other factor. If you look at the formula factors, you have so many factors, such as interstate lane miles, vehicle miles traveled on interstates, contributions to the highway trust fund, the lane miles, principal arteries, VMT on principal arteries, diesel fuel, donee status, donor status, and low-income States. Oklahoma is a low-income State. That should be a consideration. You have a low-population State, such as the one of Senator BAUCUS, who has been in the leadership working on this issue. They still have to be able to drive even though they don't have a large population from which to get the funds. You have the high-fatality-rate States. You have a factor for the guaranteed minimum growth and the guaranteed minimum rate of return for donor States.

Oklahoma has been a donor State for as long as I can remember. I remember when we had written into the law we would get back 75 percent of what we have paid in. Now it is up to 90.5 percent. If we passed the bill last year at that funding level, it would be 95 percent. It looks like with the figure that we passed out of the committee on the floor that we will be considering today is one that will allow us to get to 92 percent.

I know the formula is not perfect. There are a lot of donor States that think they are not getting enough. A lot of donee States think they are not getting enough. The unhappy donee States complain about the growth rate, but they are ignoring the high rate of return. The unhappy donor States are complaining about the rate of return, but they are ignoring the high growth rates. I have seen unhappy donors trying to rewrite formulas. You cannot do that in a vacuum. I am sympathetic with unhappy States; however, they cannot change the formula in a vacuum and not affect every other State. One of the States is trying to do that right now, and that would adversely affect the rest of the States. It is something that is difficult to deal with. When we get to conference, there are things we can do that we cannot do on the Senate floor. Perhaps some of these things will be done.

With that, I will yield to Senator JEFFORDS, the ranking member on our Environment and Public Works Committee, for his comments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise today to add my voice to those calling for the approval of the motion to proceed that we will soon vote on.

For more than 3 years Congress has been trying to pass a highway bill. Today we are taking one more step in the long road toward passage of this important legislation.

Mr. President, our Nation needs this bill. We need this bill because it will make our roads and transit systems more efficient and safer.

This year it is estimated that 33 percent of America's major roads are in poor or mediocre condition; 27 percent of America's bridges are structurally deficient or functionally obsolete; 37 percent of America's major urban roads are congested; and 42,000 Americans will die in traffic accidents.

We need this bill because a fully funded bill is good for the economy.

The Department of Transportation says that for every $1 billion of Federal spending on highway construction nationwide, 47,500 jobs are generated annually; and that every dollar invested in the Nation's highway system yields $5.40 in economic benefits because of reduced delays, improved safety and reduced vehicle operating costs.

We need this bill to maintain our current highways and bridges than ever before, while demand for our roadways only increases.

The Federal Highway Administration says that 52 percent of highway funds spent by States went to preserving highway systems while just 19 percent went to building new roads and bridges.

At the same time, traffic congestion costs American motorists $69.5 billion a year in wasted time and fuel costs and we spend an additional 3.5 billion hours a year stuck in traffic.

This bill isn't perfect. In fact, I think it needs additional funding. The White House has suggested an overall funding level for surface transportation of $284 billion over 6 years.

This despite the President's own Transportation Department saying we need at least $300 billion to simply maintain the status quo, and something well above that level to make progress on conditions and performance.

Thankfully, calls for increased funding have come from Republicans, Democrats and Independents; Members of the House and Senate, Governors and Mayors. But we will address the funding issue in due time.

Today we must get cloture on this bill and move forward.

Once again, I would like to thank the Senate leadership on both sides for their support of this bill.

I would also like to pay tribute to Chairman INHOFE and Senators BOND and BAUCUS for their support and cooperation in helping get us to where we are today.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Vermont for his comments. At this time, I would like to recognize that we have four of the real star freshmen, the new Members of this body, on our committee. One, of course, is the presiding officer from Louisiana who made very clear to us the problem of beach erosion in the State of Louisiana. I appreciate his calling that to our attention. Then, of course, we have the new Senator from South Dakota, Mr. THUNE. Senator THUNE is also on the committee, and we yield to him at this time.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I also rise today to speak in support of moving forward with debate on reauthorization of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century. As many of my colleagues know, enactment of a long-term, robust Transportation bill is long overdue. I credit the distinguished chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, Senator INHOFE from Oklahoma, and the ranking member, Senator JEFFORDS, for their good work in bringing this to the floor.

It is important work that we are about to undertake. We are in the sixth extension of the current bill. We have another construction season that is going to be lost in the Northern States if we do not get a long-term bill put into place.

I appreciate very much the chairman's work in taking a very fair and evenhanded approach in how he has tried to distribute a certain amount of finite funding for this bill. As he mentioned in his remarks, this is a balance that must be struck between the large States and the small States. Frankly, passage of this legislation is critical not only to my home State, but to the Nation as a whole.

Since my service in the House of Representatives, I have long been a supporter of a strong federal role when it comes to transportation infrastructure funding. In fact, I believe the transportation infrastructure is one of the primary responsibilities of the federal government. After all, an adequate transportation infrastructure that is safe and affordable helps facilitate the movement of the goods and services on which our economy relies. Additionally, investing in our transportation infrastructure is a proven way to ease congestion and improve the safety of our highway system.

If we look at the economic impact of what we are talking about today, it is profound. For every $1 billion invested in federal highway and transit spending, 47,500 jobs and job opportunities are created or sustained. For every $1 billion in highway and transit expenditures, gross domestic product, GDP, will increase by $1.75 billion, a multiplier effect of 1.75.

So this is important to our economy in terms of the jobs it will create, the growth it will bring about in our Nation's economy, and it is critical that this legislation, which has been held up since the last Congress, move forward. It is one of the most important measures the House and Senate must resolve this year. And it is incredibly time sensitive as we look at the sixth extension we are operating with today and the need to get a permanent bill in place so this construction season will not be lost on many of those transportation departments in the Northern States.

I have heard regularly from officials from the South Dakota Department of Transportation who are concerned about the tremendous uncertainty they face as a result of not having a long-term bill. The business community, local officials, tribal leaders, and constituents across South Dakota continue to ask me why critical transportation projects are delayed from getting off the ground. I recognize that a handful of my colleagues from donor States are concerned that the bill, as reported by the Environment and Public Works Committee, does not go far enough to boost their overall rate of return. But the bill the Environment and Public Works Committee reported out last month, S. 732, does more to address the donor issue than the administration's reauthorization proposal or the bill as passed by the House of Representatives last month.

The clearest way to address the underlying concern that donor States have raised is to add more funding to this bill. In fact, I plan to support the amendment I understand Finance Committee Chairman GRASSLEY and Ranking Member BAUCUS intend to offer because boosting this bill's overall funding level is the straightforward way to increase the minimum guarantee donor States seek without unfairly reducing the funding for donee States, such as South Dakota.

I look forward to working with my colleagues and with the chairmen and the ranking members from the various Senate committees responsible for this legislation.

As I said earlier, time is of the essence. It is important we work together to pass this bill so that conference negotiations between the House and the Senate can get underway, especially in light of the extension that is slated to expire on May 31.

I again commend the leadership of our committee, and the leadership on both sides in the Senate for their desire to bring this bill to the floor to ensure we are taking the steps necessary, when this current extension expires at the end of May, to have a new permanent bill in place that will address the critical infrastructure needs of our Nation as we move into the future. Many of the highways, interstates, and roads across this country are in poor or mediocre condition. Mr. President, 27 percent of our bridges are structurally deficient or functionally obsolete. It is important we get to work on this legislation in the Senate so we can get to conference with the House, resolve any differences that exist, and get a permanent funding solution put in place for the States, the cities, the business community, and all the jobs and economic development that go with it.

Mr. President, I again urge my colleagues to support this motion to proceed to the legislation. I thank the chairman and the ranking member for their good work. I see Senator BOND, from Missouri, who has also been instrumental in crafting this legislation. I appreciate the leadership and work this committee has put in to get the bill to the floor. It is time we get it voted on and signed into law.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SUNUNU). The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, if there is time during the course of this debate, even though we are operating under 1 hour equally divided, I want to go over, so everybody understands, why it is necessary to pass this bill instead of going with another extension because we do not get all the reforms we need without passing this bill.

I have to agree with the Senator from South Dakota that in order to get up to a higher figure in terms of the donor States—and there are a lot of donee States that are supporting us in this effort—it is necessary to have a more robust bill. I am sure we will have an opportunity to debate that and get to conference and see what we can work out.

The chairman of the Subcommittee on Transportation has been such a strong, hard worker. The Senator from Missouri has been there every step of the way and has been a part of this great bipartisan effort. So we yield to him at this time for whatever time he wishes to use.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, my sincere thanks to the chairman of the committee, Senator INHOFE; to the ranking member, Senator JEFFORDS; and my colleague, the ranking member on the subcommittee, Senator BAUCUS. This is a job well done under the constraints we face. We have worked long and hard to get to this point, and I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of proceeding.

The bill, S. 732, the Safe Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act, is long overdue, 2 years past due. Our roads are deteriorating and safety is deteriorating unless and until we can get this bill up. My thanks to the leader for allowing us to call up the bill. It has a lot of moving parts. Every time you move one part, you make somebody slightly happy and several more very unhappy. But I believe it is a good step forward in attempting to meet our goal of completion prior to expiration of the current extension of the authorization on May 31. If we do not proceed to move to this debate, Senators should be aware we may not be able to pass a seventh extension, and our States may cease to let additional contracts, and thousands of jobs may be at stake.

We called up S. 1072 a little over a year ago, and final passage of that bill last year was 76 to 21. Today's bill, S. 732, is nearly identical to last year's bill, with one major problem: To comply with the President's budget request of $284 billion, we have taken a proportional cut across the board of approximately 10.7 percent.

During conference last year, we were presented with $299 billion in contract authority and $284 billion in guaranteed spending. Today, our obligation limit and contract authority numbers are both the same, at $284 billion. I do not think that will work.

Last year, $284 billion was not sufficient to meet the transportation and safety needs in my State and, I think, many other States. I thought then, and continue to believe, more money is necessary. I understand the Finance Committee will be offering an amendment which we on the Environment and Public Works Committee will be supporting. During the budget resolution debate, my colleague from Missouri, Senator TALENT, along with the Senator from Michigan, Senator STABENOW, offered an amendment that any revenue that does not add to the deficit should be spent. It passed with more than 80 Senators supporting it. I think the Senate will have a similar position when we provide for additional revenues with defendable efforts.

The bill we are bringing to the floor has several major goals.

First, equity. While previous authorizations have talked about equity, our bill carefully balances the needs of the donor States, while also recognizing the needs of the donee States. There are many sections of the bill I am proud of supporting, such as the fact that all donor States will receive, at the minimum, a 92-percent rate of return by the end of the authorization.

My State of Missouri is a donor State which essentially means that for every dollar we spend on transportation, we receive less than a dollar in return. In 2004, it was 92 cents.

There are many States that fall under the $1 rate of return—unfortunately, only about 20 of them, which means there were 30 votes for the donee States that got back more than a dollar, and that is where our problem was.

Last year, with the more robust funding, we were able to get all States up to 95 cents, but we were unable to achieve this rate of return as a result of going from $318 billion down to $284 billion.

Donor States that support additional revenue above $284 billion can expect an increase in their rate of return to bring the bill more in line with last year's bill, but I do not think anybody is talking about $318 billion anymore.

I worked diligently with Chairman INHOFE, Senator JEFFORDS, and Senator BAUCUS to ensure the bill remains as fair and equitable as possible among all States. I am aware some of the donor States, which we commonly refer to as superdonors—it is nice when you get to select the epithet by which you are called. I wish I had thought of being called a superdonor or a deserving donor. Senator INHOFE and I come from deserving donor States. We will add Senator THUNE into the deserving donor States. But superdonors are concerned they hit the growth caps and do not achieve a 92-cent return right away. But the average rate of growth from the highway trust fund for all States is about 24.38 percent. The average rate of growth of Texas and Arizona is 31.79 percent. Senators from States that are growing below average are the ones who, it seems to me, should be complaining. We were unable to bring up donor States as early as we might have wished due to budget constraints, as well as balancing the needs of the donor States with the needs of the donee States.

For this reason, as most donor States grow, the donee States see a gradual decline to bring greater equity between the States. Nevertheless, all States will grow at not less than 10 percent over the previous bill, TEA–21. We are hopeful that with additional revenue, we will be able to raise that floor.

Safety is another key feature. We will go a long way toward saving lives by providing funds to States to address safety needs at hazardous locations, sections, and elements.

Safety in this authorization is, for the first time, being elevated to a core program. Our bill mirrors the administration's proposal, continuing our commitment to our motoring public's safety. This is accomplished by providing much needed funding to reduce highway injuries and fatalities, all without the use of mandates.

In my State of Missouri, we know inadequate roads not only lead to congestion, pollution, lack of economic growth, and they delay, deny, and derail economic opportunity, but they also kill people. We have averaged more than three deaths a day on Missouri highways and probably close to 40 percent, if not more, can be attributable to inadequate roads.

I have driven all the Federal highways and all the State highways and a lot of the county roads in Missouri, and I can tell you we have Federal highways which are two-lane highways which have traffic that everybody agrees should be on four lanes. What happens? We have rear-end collisions, passing on blind curves and hills, and we have fatalities.

My home State of Missouri, as many other donor States, has some of the worst roads in the Nation. We are among, unfortunately, that distinguished group that has the highest fatalities per million miles driven on the roads.

That is a distinction we do not like. Recent reports say we have the fifth worst roads in the Nation, with 65 percent of our major roads in fair to poor condition requiring immediate attention. We also rank fourth from the bottom in deficient bridges in the Nation.

Our committee has heard voluminous testimony from the administration that nearly 43,000 people were killed on our roads and highways last year alone. I am glad this bill reflects a continued commitment making not only investments in infrastructure but for the general safety and welfare of our constituents.

The bill addresses several environmental issues, such as easing the transition under new air quality standards. The conformity process is better aligned with air quality planning, as well as streamlining the project delivery process by providing the necessary tools to reduce or eliminate unnecessary delays during environmental reviews.

Another accomplishment of our package will ensure transportation projects are built more quickly because environmental stakeholders will be brought to the table sooner. Environmental issues will be raised earlier and the public will have better opportunities to shape projects.

Projects more sensitive to environmental concerns will move through a more structured environmental review process, more efficiently, with fewer delays. The bill also ensures that transportation projects will not make air worse in areas with poor air quality while giving local transportation planners more tools and elbow room to meet their Federal air quality responsibilities.

The bill will put transportation planning on a regular 4-year cycle, require air quality checks with projects large enough to be regionally significant, and reduce current barriers that local officials face in adopting projects that improve air quality.

The final goal is jobs. The Department of Transportation estimates that every $1 billion in new Federal investment creates 47,500 jobs. To the Associated General Contractors, the same $1 billion investment yields half of that in new orders from manufacturing and half of that spread through other sectors of the economy. Construction pay averages $19 per hour, 23 percent higher than the private sector average.

This comprehensive package is a good step forward to creating jobs, but as a Governor of the State where we placed a high emphasis on economic development, it is not only the jobs that are created in construction, it is the jobs that are created by the existence of adequate, safe transportation that assures continued growth.

We have spent a lot of time in this body talking about how we get our economy to grow, how we create jobs. Passing this bill to create jobs now and facilitate the creation of jobs in the future is the best thing we can do. I am hopeful our colleagues in the Senate will agree to move this bill quickly in order to pass this legislation prior to the current May 31 expiration date.

I thank the Chair and I reserve the remainder of the time for the leader on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, first I thank the senior Senator from Missouri, Mr. BOND, for his hard work and for being so articulate. It is interesting that we have heard from Senator THUNE from South Dakota, a donee State, and Senator BOND from a donor State, and they are both equally enthusiastic about the fact that we have something that should work, and yet we know that any change in any part of a formula is going to have an effect on all the rest of the States. It does not happen in a vacuum.

I will yield the floor to Senator BOND to respond to a question. I ask the Senator, would he enlighten this body as to, according to HAWA, which two States in America have the worst bridges in terms of their state of disrepair?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Missouri will be permitted to answer the question.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, there have been some new factors that have come out. In the interest of full disclosure, Missouri has moved up to fifth worst in roads and fourth worst in bridges. As I understand, Oklahoma still occupies a place of dishonor with even worse roads and bridges.

I was hoping those new studies would not come out that we are still right at the bottom. As two States that are in the heart of the Nation with major interstates crossing our States and traffic going east, west, southwest, and northeast through our States we are essential arteries for transportation for the Nation.

Mr. INHOFE. If the Senator will yield for another question, he is a former Governor of the State of Missouri. He knows a little bit about how the construction season goes. What kind of problems would he see—as Senator THUNE mentioned, we are in our sixth extension right now—if we were merely to extend this rather than to pass this bill, from a State perspective?

Mr. BOND. Well, the States are absolutely frustrated beyond all means that we have not been able to reauthorize the bill. Merely extending the bill does not enable us to go forward with major planning. The extensions keep existing projects in line and allow the Department of Transportation to continue to operate, but if we have another extension it means the money that this bill would make available will now not be made available until the construction season. For most of the United States, the construction season is spring, summer, and fall. Not a lot of work can be done in the winter.

So with the necessary contract times, 90 days to let contracts, if we do not make the May 31 deadline with new authorization, we are going to lose a tremendous amount of road construction necessary for economic development and safety.

Mr. INHOFE. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, one of the comments was made by I believe it was Senator THUNE about the extensions. Let me make sure we all understand because this is very significant. We have been operating on extensions, and when we operate on extensions we cannot plan in advance. This bill has more provisions in it affecting safety, streamlining, and other factors than any bill of the four that I have been exposed to in reauthorization.

In the event we were to have to go ahead on another extension, there would be no chance of improvement on the donor State of return. In other words, donor State of return is going to stay at 90.5. It is not going to improve. If we were going on an extension as opposed to passing this new authorization bill, there would be no new safety core program to help the States respond to the thousands of deaths each year on our roadways.

I would say to the Senator from Vermont, this is a life-or-death type of a bill before us because more people are going to die if we do not pass the bill, if we just operate on extensions.

If we just do the extensions, there will be no real streamlining of environmental reviews, so critical projects will still be subject to avoidable delay. We see events that do not make any common sense in terms of how many miles can be paved per dollar. We have obstacles that are in the way. We have addressed those obstacles, and it has not been easy.

The Democrats and Republicans on this committee had to give and take. Frankly, there are some provisions in this bill I do not like too well, and I suggest to the Senator from Vermont there are a few he does not like, but one of the major things I think has to be done before we start any meaningful construction in America is to have these streamlining provisions. If we do not have a bill, if we go on with extensions, there will be no increased ability to use the innovative financing, thereby giving States more tools to advance. We are talking about public and private partnerships. We have been building roads the same way now for many years.

I have been notified that the time on our side has expired, and I ask unanimous consent that we be given an opportunity to share the minority time to whatever extent the Senator would like to give us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. JEFFORDS. I yield to the chairman such time as he desires from the time on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. I say to the Senator from Vermont, with that very generous offer, as soon as he has someone coming and they want time, I will cease on this side so they can be heard.

Mr. JEFFORDS. That is fair.

Mr. INHOFE. The bill offers an increased ability to use innovative financing methods. Out in California and in Texas, they have been able to do some things where they have convinced us they get many more miles and much more local participation by the public-private partnership, by the TIFIA rule, and it is something that we would not be able to do nationwide if we do not get this bill and we just operate on an extension.

There are a lot of people who are very concerned about a provision in our bill that is called the Safe Routes to School. I know the Senator from Vermont has been interested in that. This is something where we would be talking about saving young lives. Right now, the provision is not there. So if we have an extension, it is merely an extension of TEA–21, the one that we have been operating under for the last 7 years.

If we are not able to pass this bill, then the States will continue to have uncertainty in planning, thereby delaying projects and negatively impacting jobs.

The Senator from Missouri commented that for each $1 billion spent, it provides 47,000 new jobs. So this would easily be the biggest jobs bill probably in the history of America. But if we operate on an extension, there can be no planning. There is not going to be the construction.

The Senator from Missouri is from a northern State and so is the Senator from Vermont. In Oklahoma, though, our construction time is longer than it is in Vermont, and it is actually longer than it is in the State of Missouri. It is something that has to be considered because if we have those delays and they cannot plan in advance, we are not going to have the construction. We are not going to be able to correct these problems.

That is why I asked the question of the Senator from Missouri, who is a former Governor of the State. We need to have certainty in planning. I hear every day from Gary Ridley in our Department of Transportation in Oklahoma that we have things we need to do and we need to be planning right now. We can get so much more for each dollar if we do that, and I suggest that other States have the same situation.

If we do not have a new bill and we just operate on an extension, there is no new border program for border States to deal with NAFTA and other traffic. We hear a lot from the border States—California, Arizona, Texas, and Florida—that they like the borders and corridors program. We have a borders and corridors provision in this bill that will give consideration to the fact that through no fault of their own many border States have a lot of traffic that comes up through Mexico and other places that is all in conjunction with NAFTA.

I can recall 10 years ago when NAFTA was voted on I happened to have been the only member of the Oklahoma delegation that voted against NAFTA. I think I was right and they were wrong, but nonetheless when we look at what we are able to do with the borders and corridors program, it is something that is very critical for those States.

My State of Oklahoma is also affected by that because those corridors come through the State of Oklahoma. If we do not have the bill, we just have an extension, there is going to be a delay in the establishment of the national commission to explore how to fund transportation in the future. As motor vehicles become more fuel efficient, a tax collection system based solely on gas consumption becomes less practical. Right now the greatest problem we have is the cost of fuel. We have been very much concerned about that. If our taxes were based on a percentage as opposed to a number of cents or dollars, then we would not have that problem. But in Oklahoma if we are paying $2.20 a gallon for gas instead of what it was a short while ago, about $1.40, then people are not going to drive as far. When they do not drive as far, that means the tax revenues are going to come down.

There is no reason we have to continue to do business as we have done business for the last 50, 60, 70 years and not come up with new and innovative ways to pay for our system.

In this bill we have a provision for a national commission to look at different transportation funding in the future. One of my complaints when we talk about the highway trust fund is about how we should or should not pay for it. Every time this body has a new idea to encourage people to use fuel-efficient automobiles, either hybrid or electric cars, that ends up with less gallons of gas produced. Yet those cars still damage the highways with the wear and tear that another car does. I have complained if we are going to have a policy, it should not be paid for on the backs of the highway trust fund.

Anyway, those are issues they can look at. They can look at new ways of financing roads and new partnerships. This commission will come together and will perform for us.

If we do not have a new bill and we have an extension, there will be no increased opportunity to address chokepoints and intermodal connectors. This is not simply a highway bill but an intermodal bill, talking about how the highways, railroads, and airlines come together. It is a complicated transportation system.

There was a time in the beginning during the Eisenhower administration when we wanted to have a national highway system. I will share with my friend from Vermont, when President Eisenhower, during the war, was a major, Major Eisenhower, he was the one who realized our traffic system, our road system, our network, was not a transportation issue as much as a national security issue. He was trying to move his troops around from one place to another. So when he became President, one of the first things he wanted to do was set up the national transportation system. We have had it since that time. At that time we were looking at miles of paved roads in America. Now we are looking at the intermodal system that covers all transportation and brings all transportation together. But we won't be able to do that if we extend what we have today because those portions of the bill will not become law.

There are many other provisions we would lose if we do not pass a bill, if we only have an extension. The firewall protection of the highway trust fund would not be continued, thereby making the trust fund vulnerable to raids in order to pay for other programs.

One of the things we run into in Government I can relate to in the State of Oklahoma. In the State of Oklahoma we have had people, when you are looking the other way, come in and raid a trust fund. The impact aid is a good example. Impact aid was started way back in the 1950s. The idea was if Government comes along and takes the land off the tax rolls, you still have to educate those kids living there, so they are supposed to replenish that particular subdivision to the amount of money they lost in revenue. That was a good program. We all supported it.

In the 1960s, people realized there was a fund and no one was looking, so they took the money out of it. This has happened to other trust funds. This has happened to the highway trust fund. I see that as a moral issue.

In fact, when we had our bill out last year, we looked at it as if this is something we can afford to do because it was paid for almost entirely out of user taxes. Now, if you go to the pump and you pay a Federal tax on the gasoline you buy, you assume that will go to building roads and maintaining roads and people do not complain about it. I have never complained about it. I complain about every other tax, but I don't complain about the highway taxes because I know that is how we will pay for it. They have been diverting money out of the trust fund and putting it into other projects.

What we did in last year's bill, and it is in this year's bill also, is restore that so money will have to go to repairing roads that go into the highway system. If we do not pass this bill, it is not going to happen.

To reiterate, regarding the pending bill, 76 Senators voted for it last year. Very few changes have been made. We produced a solid project last year to go to conference with the House. I suggest that given a few changes we would have made, we would have been able to move it out and we would not be here today. This should have happened a year ago. This should not be happening now.

The bill managers are ready and willing to discuss Members' amendments. We want to work with you on your concerns. We hope you will come down and offer amendments. We will have this vote in 9 minutes. How quickly time flies when you are having fun. When we have this vote, I anticipate it will be a successful vote and we will be able to get on the bill and start with amendments. When that happens, I certainly hope all those individuals who have said negative things about this bill—they didn't like part of the formula, they didn't think they were treated fairly, they thought they were bumping up to the caps for States—come down and offer amendments.

I don't think any of us in terms of Senator JEFFORDS, myself, Senator BAUCUS, and Senator BOND, are going to complain. We may not like the amendments, but we want to have the amendments offered, if for no other reason than it is important so people realize you cannot make one change in a bill without affecting everyone else. I know formulas are different.

It would be easier if we had done the easy thing. That is, Senator JEFFORDS and I could go to 60 Members of this 100-Member body and make them sweetheart deals, give them what they wanted to get their vote, buy their votes, get 60 votes, and tell the rest of them, it is your problem. And we would have a bill today. That is not how we want to do business. We feel we can do it being fair to our colleagues and do it on the basis of a formula.

We had Members who were going to be heard on the motion to proceed and they have not arrived. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I thank the chairman and the ranking member for their work on this issue. I urge my colleagues to support invoking cloture on this important legislation.

I had a meeting yesterday morning with highway contractors in my State. They once again impressed upon me the urgency of passing new highway legislation.

In my part of the country—I represent North Dakota—our construction season is a short one. We urgently need action. There are contracts that are being held up, actions that need to be taken to improve the road network in my State that are being held because there is no new highway legislation passed.

We keep passing extenders. But that does not make adjustments for the increased needs across the country. We know much of our bridge system is deficient and in serious need of repair. We know many of the roads in our country need repair. New highways need to be constructed. Much of that activity will not occur unless new highway legislation passes the Congress.

I thank the chairman and the ranking member for the extraordinary efforts they have made to advance this legislation. We are being held up here because some are unhappy, some are not getting all they would like to get. That is pretty much the norm around here. None of us get quite what we would like. I would like much more for my State. But I know the reality we confront. I know the urgency of the need to act.

I ask my colleagues, please, let's invoke cloture. Let's proceed. We will still have opportunities to amend this bill. Members can come before the Senate and offer amendments to change this legislation. They can either prevail or lose, but they will have had their chance. I hope my colleagues will support the move to invoke cloture on this legislation so we can proceed, so the American people can know the important business of highway construction, highway repair, bridge construction, and bridge repair can move forward.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his good words. I hope the Senators viewing this will join so we can expedite passage of this bill.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, again I thank the ranking member, Senator JEFFORDS, who has put so much time and effort into this legislation so that all at the table are fairly represented. I thank the chairman, as well. The chairman has strived valiantly over an extended period of time. I remember last year as we moved, we hoped, toward conclusion, our House colleagues had a different point of view than the Senate. I thank the chairman and ranking member for their exceptional efforts.

Now we have a chance to do it, to move forward. We need this cloture vote to proceed.

I yield the floor.

Mr. INHOFE. I thank the Senator from North Dakota. It is not as great a problem in Oklahoma as the problem in North Dakota because your construction season is shorter than ours. Right now one of our major concerns is that we can get in there and get the contracts in a timely fashion so we can get under construction and do the work we are supposed to be doing.

Also, before the Senator from North Dakota came in, we commented this is somewhat of a life-and-death situation. Last year, nearly 43,000 people died on our Nation's highways. This represents the single greatest cause of accidental death in Americans ages 2 to 33.

The core safety programs will be corrected. According to the Department of Transportation, time in congestion increased from 31.7 percent in 1992 to 33 percent in 2000. We had several discussions yesterday about the cost of fuel and the fact that if you have all this congestion—certainly we know what this is in Washington, DC—the cars are out there idling, burning fuel, not getting anywhere. We need to get this country moving.

I appreciate the comments of the Senator from North Dakota.

We are at the time designated to have the vote. This could be one of the maybe two or three most significant votes we have this year. It will allow us to do all that we have been talking about for the last hour. It is rather refreshing during this time we did not have anyone coming down and opposing this motion to proceed.

The Senator from North Dakota is exactly right. We want to encourage people who have a problem to come down. Maybe we can make them better. We want to consider amendments. We want to get this done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, all time is yielded back.

CLOTURE MOTION

Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to a vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the motion to proceed to H.R. 3, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to proceed to Calendar No. 69, H.R. 3, a bill to authorize funds for Federal-aid highways, highway safety programs, and transit programs, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under unanimous consent, the mandatory quorum has been waived. The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the motion to proceed to H.R. 3, the Transportation Equity Act: A Legacy For Users, shall be brought to a close? The yeas and nays are mandatory under the rule. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 94, nays 6, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 94, the nays are 6. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn having voted in the affirmative, the motion is agreed to.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 7 minutes on the topic of the 15th anniversary of the Hubble telescope.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE HUBBLE SPACE TELESCOPE

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, this week marks the 15th anniversary of the launch of the Hubble space telescope. As we watched Hubble lift off 15 years ago, we had great hopes for the Hubble and great hopes for science. Guess what. We were not disappointed.

Hubble ushered in a new era of astronomy and science. Hubble has exceeded all expectations. It is the greatest tool for studying the universe since Galileo himself invented the telescope. Because of the Hubble, we are now living in what astronomers call the "golden age" of astronomy and physics. How incredible, how spectacular. It has been America's gift to the world. It has been one of the greatest acts of public diplomacy in history. Hubble has become a symbol of America's generosity of spirit. Whatever the Hubble sees in the world, it downloads for the rest of the world to have access. Hubble even has its own Web site. It gets e-mails from people all over the world. Some of them from the children are the most touching. There are e-mails that say: Dear Mr. Hubble, did you see God today? Have you met an angel? Is there another universe? What does it look like? They actually talk to Hubble, and it has inspired their curiosity and their desire to engage in science.

It is not surprising; just look at what it has accomplished.

The Hubble telescope has accounted for 35 percent of all of NASA's discoveries for the past 30 years. It has seen farther and sharper than any telescope in history. It has observed more than 14,000 objects in space. It has been the No. 1 producer of science for NASA over the past 10 years. Over 2,600 scientific papers have been written on the Hubble results. It has dramatically improved our understanding of the atmosphere of planets; the size of galaxies; the birth, life, and death of stars; the existence of black holes; the age of the universe and how the universe expands.

I have a photograph in my office of a swirling galaxy. They call it the "eye of God" because you literally see those spectacular pictures, and you feel in this one picture that God himself is staring down at us from the universe.

Hubble has rewritten the science textbooks almost every year. It has exceeded our wildest expectations. But it didn't start that way. Fifteen years ago, I was chairing the subcommittee that finances NASA, and we were so excited when Hubble took off. But no sooner was it in space when we saw that the Hubble did not work. Something was wrong with its mirror. Hubble could not see. I immediately had a hearing and said, oh my gosh, Hubble has a cataract. It needs space surgery. It needs a space contact lens. Well, I never saw myself as a space ophthalmologist, but, quite frankly, working with my dear friend from the other side of the aisle, Senator Jake Garn, we took a risk to finance the fix for Hubble.

Well, this country and this world, this big planet, was not disappointed. We took the risk because we believed in Hubble's potential. We believed in the engineers and the scientists at NASA to know how to fix it. We believed in our astronauts, that they could go to the Hubble and fix it and return safely to Earth. Thanks to those astronauts and engineers, Hubble was saved. We did fix it with a contact lens that has lasted now for many years. We have had to go back to space and give it new batteries. We have also had to give it new gyroscopes so it doesn't vibrate in space. We even improved its lens. Each year it gets better and better. From the brink of failure to extraordinary success, this has been the story of Hubble.

Now we are once again going to have to come to the rescue of Hubble. Last year, the NASA Administrator announced that he was terminating the final servicing mission to give Hubble new batteries and extend its life. The Administrator rejected it, saying that the Hubble would shut down in 4 years when its battery runs out. The reason he gave was astronaut safety. I was troubled by that because astronaut safety has been my No. 1 priority as an appropriator for the space program.

However, I was uncertain about that decision and, like any good scientist, I asked for a second opinion. First, I asked Admiral Gehman, who had done the study of what went wrong with Columbia, for his opinion. He said go to the National Academy of Sciences. I did that, and we found a study that concluded that a servicing mission was no more risky than going back to the space station.

Once again, Mr. President, our shuttle is going to start flying again, and our hearts and prayers will go with Colonel Collins as she takes astronauts back into space and, God willing and with the help of our engineers, returns to Earth safely.

The next mission needs to go up and fix the Hubble. I believe the American people want it. We have the will. Now we have to find the wallet. President George Bush, with poor advice from the NASA Administrator, canceled it out of the budget. I want the President to look at those NASA pictures. I want him to know what NASA has meant to the world and to America in space. I am going to work with him, on a bipartisan basis, to find the money to keep Hubble flying and seeing the universe. Who knows, maybe we will meet an angel and make some interesting new friends.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 12:30 p.m. having arrived, the Senate stands in recess until 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 12:25 p.m., recessed and, at 2:16 p.m., reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. VOINOVICH).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In my capacity as a Senator from the State of Ohio, I suggest the absence of a quorum. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRANSPORTATION EQUITY ACT: A LEGACY FOR USERS—MOTION TO PROCEED—Continued

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President. I rise today to talk about simple fairness and equity in this highway bill. I commend the chairman and managers of the bill for working hard to get it to the floor. Now that it is here, I have some serious concerns with the bill, as reported, that I would like to share with my colleagues.

This bill is not fair to the States called donor States that send more of their Federal gas tax dollar and get less of it in return. Those are called donor States. We donor States—and Florida is one of them—are, once again, being cheated out of our fair share of highway dollars. Florida and roughly 20 other donor States deserve true equity, not simply what the donee States think we should be happy with. They send in a dollar of gas tax but they get more than a dollar in return. Our States, called the donor States, send in a dollar of gas tax money, and we receive less than a dollar of gas tax money in return.

In the case of Florida over the years, it has been down in the seventies. Presently—although it is scored at 90 cents—return on the dollar, in reality, when all the formulas are plugged in, is more like 87 cents. So in Florida we send a dollar of gas tax money to Washington, and we get only 87 cents of that dollar back. That is not fair.

The argument I am making is not a new argument. These are arguments that the ones who send in a dollar and get back less of their gas tax money are pitted against the donee States. Approximately 30 of the donee States get back more than a dollar of the gas tax money. So there are 20 States that get less and approximately 30 States that get more. I am tired of hearing we should be happy with what we get. I am not happy with the formula on the redistribution of the gas tax money in the highway bill.

Last year's bill that we passed in the Senate got us a lot further toward equity than this year's bill. I was disappointed, even in that bill, because although we had a target to get us from 90 percent, which is really 87 percent, return on our gas tax dollar, all the way up to 95 percent, we did not get that 95 cents back on the dollar until the very last year of the 6-year authorization of the highway bill.

Florida is in the category with other States such as Arizona, California, and Texas. We were not going to get 90 cents on the dollar, boosted to 95 cents on the dollar, until the very last of 6 years in the bill. Those States that I just mentioned, mine included, are named superdonor States. In reality, it means we are the last in line to get our fair share.

As I look back at last year's bill, I yearn for it because that is not what this bill does. This bill gets the States only to 92 cents on the dollar, and large States such as Florida, California.

Texas, and Arizona only get there, again, at the end of the 6-year authorization on the highway bill.

So what am I forced to look at? I am looking at we were getting it up to 95 cents on the dollar last year, and under this bill we are only getting it up to 92 cents on the dollar. Well, this is unacceptable. There is clearly a push from both sides of the aisle to add more money to the bill. I support more money in the bill. What we passed in the Senate last year was $318 billion for highway construction authorized over a 6-year period. What is in this bill is $284 billion over a 6-year period. If we want to add more money to the bill for highways, I am certainly for that, but I support more money if there is an increase in the rate of the return for States that are giving more money than what they are getting in return.

It simply does my State and these other States no good to grow a pot of money if we are not getting our fair share of the pot.

I have been told by the 30 donee States—remember, those are the States that get more on their dollar of gas tax than they put in—I have been told by those States to look at how much money, in actual dollars, Florida will receive and how much Florida will grow in an overall percentage from the last authorization bill.

I am happy to know Florida, under the chairman's proposal, gets more dollars in this bill than it did in the last authorization, but Florida should be getting more money this time around because it is putting more money in. The number that is important, and the number that only donor States want to focus on, is the rate of return on our gas tax dollars. What percentage of Florida taxpayer dollars are actually being returned to Florida to build up our infrastructure, our highways, our bridges, and our transit? I asked that question not only for my State but for 20 other States that are not getting their fair share.

Why is this particularly sensitive to me? Look at all the folks that come to Florida and use our roads. The Orlando area is the No. 1 tourist destination in the world. We have a $50 billion-a-year tourism industry that, in large part, is as a result of our pristine and clear waters on the beaches. People go by car.

What other reasons? Florida is now one of the major growth States also because we are a destination during the twilight years of retirement. That means not only is our population growing at a rapid rate—1,000 people a day net growth in Florida—but on top of that, we get 80 million tourists a year, and they are all using those Florida roads. We desperately need those roads expanded and improved. I can take anyone to parts of Florida and show that if you think traffic jams are big in Washington, DC, they cannot hold a candle to some of the traffic jams in Florida. States such as mine are the States with the greatest need and we are the States that continue to get the least back on our highway tax dollars. Our populations are increasing by leaps and bounds, yet our highway rate of return is staying relatively the same in order to pay for the other States to invest in their roads, and those are States that are not growing like Florida, Texas, California, Arizona, and 15 other states. Florida is the third fastest growing State behind Nevada and Arizona. We will grow by 80 percent in the next 25 years, becoming the third largest State in the country behind California and Texas. Florida will bump New York into fourth place by 2011.

We have to have help on our highways. We need, but we also deserve, our fair share. States such as mine have, for the last half a century, given more than our share of highway funds. The interstate system is complete now. It has been for some time. This formula has been operating for over 50 years. It is past time that donor States get justice and equity and fair shares. We deserve to get 95 cents return on each one of our highway dollars.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COLEMAN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, in a moment we are going to make a motion to substitute H.R. 3 so we will be considering the Senate-passed bill as it was passed out of our committee on to the floor. I think it is appropriate to make a couple of comments—and, of course, invite Senator JEFFORDS to also comment if he wants to—on the time we have taken on this bill.

We have worked on this bill for some 2½ years. It has been bipartisan all the way, all of last year and this year. I think it is something that is a product we can be very proud of. It has provisions in it that if we do not pass will not be considered. If we are on another extension, we will not have the safety provisions. We will not have the streamlining provisions that will help us build more roads per dollar.

We are prepared now to proceed. I understand there is no further debate on the pending motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, without objection, the motion to proceed is agreed to.

The motion was agreed to.

TRANSPORTATION EQUITY ACT: A LEGACY FOR USERS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 3) to authorize funds for Federal aid for highways, highway safety programs, and transit programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 567

(Purpose: To provide a complete substitute)

Mr. INHOFE. I send a substitute to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. INHOFE] proposes an amendment numbered 567.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, we are now on the substitute. I understand there are some amendments that are either on their way down or are going to be presented at this time. If not, we will talk a little bit about the bill and where we are today. We are prepared now to go ahead and accept amendments. We are going to ask Members to bring their amendments to the desk. The majority and minority leaders have agreed to give us the floor time to consider these amendments. The sooner we get the amendments, the sooner we can get this passed and sent to conference. I would think the minority leader would agree with me that this is one of the three most significant bills of the year.

I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. I would like to give a short speech, if the distinguished manager of the bill would not mind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I say to my friend, I am not on the committee now, but I have been on the committee during a number of these highway bills. This highway bill is one of the most important pieces of legislation that the Senate considers. One reason it is such a good exercise is that it forces bipartisanship. It is extremely important legislation. This is one issue on which Democrats and Republicans work together. I certainly wish my friend well. It is an important bill, as he and I know. We worked so hard last year to get it done, and for a lot of reasons it did not happen, but the Senator from Oklahoma has my good wishes on this most important bill for not only Nevada but the country.

JUDICIAL NOMINATIONS

For the last several months, the Senate has operated under a cloud, a nuclear cloud. I would like to give just a brief history for those who are here today. Filibusters have been part of our history from the very beginning of our Republic. In the early years of our country, there were a number of filibusters, but there was no way to stop them. As a result of that, because of the filibuster, a lot of things were not accomplished that Senators wanted to accomplish. In fact, a number of very important Cabinet nominations did not happen because of the filibuster, and a number of judicial appointments in the early years of this Republic simply did not go anyplace because of the filibuster.

It was in 1917 that this body decided to change the rule so that there could be a way of ending filibusters. They decided that two-thirds of the Senators voting could stop a filibuster. Then, during the height of the civil rights movement in this country, the Senate decided to lower that threshold to 60, the way it has been since then.

We, of course, had filibusters of judges prior to 1917. We have had filibusters of judges since then. In recent years, we have had the person who was nominated to be Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Abe Fortas, who was a member of the Court, filibustered. He was not able to go forward. There are a number of other people who were nominated to be judges, specifically circuit court judges, and there were filibusters conducted by my friends, the Republicans. There were efforts made to stop those with cloture motions. The two that come to my mind are two judges from California.

I worked very hard on one of them—a man by the name of Richard Paez. The other was a woman by the name of Marsha Berzon. A cloture motion was filed, and cloture was granted as a result of 60 Senators voting for cloture.

My friend, the distinguished Republican leader, knows filibusters have been conducted because he voted against cloture. While he was a Member of the Senate, he voted against cloture on a circuit court judge. So for people to say there has never been a filibuster of a judge is simply wrong. Twenty-five percent of all Supreme Court Justices have been rejected—not always by filibuster, but for various reasons. More than half the filibusters have been conducted by Republican Senators. I do not think that was unconstitutional.

During the tenure of this President, we have had 215 requests to have his nominations approved. We have approved 205 of them. We have turned down 10. That is a 95- to 97-percent confirmation rate, 10 rejected judges, 7 of whom are currently before the Senate. This does not seem reason enough for me, and I think for most people, to think that longstanding rules in the Senate should be changed.

Remember, everyone has to understand that to change the rules as anticipated with the so-called nuclear option, the majority would have to break the rules. The only way a rule change can be stopped when people want to talk—and that is, in effect, what is being done—is to change the rule. If somebody wants to talk, there must be the votes to stop that. That is not what the majority is talking about doing. They are talking about doing something illegal. They are talking about breaking the rules to change the rules, and that is not appropriate.

That is not fair, and it is not right.

The claim that there have been no filibusters, as I indicated, ignores history, including recent history. Throughout the years, many judicial nominees have been denied up-or-down votes. As we know, during the Clinton administration, 69 judges never even got a hearing before the Judiciary Committee. They were dumped into this big dark hole and never saw the light of day. Some of them waited for a very long time, including Richard Paez, who waited for over 4 years. Some of the loudest proponents of the so-called nuclear option opposed cloture on the nominations of President Clinton's nominees.

America is paying attention to this hypocrisy. Citizens are alarmed about what the Republican majority is planning to do. According to a poll that was released yesterday, Americans oppose this—Democrats, Republicans, Independents—by a 2-to-1 margin. They oppose changing the rules to make it easier for the President to stack the courts with radical judges. The American people, in effect, reject the nuclear option because they see it for what it is—an abuse of power, arrogance of power. Lord Acton said power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely.

The American people need to understand what is going on here in our Congress. Across the way in the House of Representatives, the majority leader was censored three times within 1 year. He will not be censored again because they changed the rules in the middle of the game. That is what is going on. The rules are being changed in the middle of the game. They are breaking the rules to change the rules.

Regardless of one's political affiliation, Americans understand this is a partisan political grab. Nearly half the Republicans polled opposed any rules changes, joining 8 in 10 Democrats and 7 Independents.

Over the last several months, I have talked about a solution. We need to step forward and try to work something out. Before I came here, I tried cases before juries. I had more than 100 jury trials. Every time I had a jury trial was a failure. It was a failure because it indicated the participants could not work things out on their own. That is how I feel about this. We should be able to work this out. We should be able to work it out. My door has always been open to responsible Republicans who do not want the Senate to head down this unproductive path.

I wrote to the majority leader on March 15 and expressed a willingness to find a way out of this predicament we find ourselves in, to find a solution. My friend, the distinguished majority leader, replied 2 days later he would propose a compromise for resolving this issue. We are still waiting on that proposal.

Now, it appears maybe—and I hope this is untrue—that Republican leaders in the Senate do not want a compromise. Senator FRIST and I do not do our negotiations in public, but he and I had a nice conversation about a number of issues about 12:15 today. One of the issues we talked about was my proposal to try to resolve this. I thought it was a very constructive meeting. I walked into a conference at quarter to 1, and I was told he issued a statement that there would be no compromise. I don't believe that. The wires are crossed here somewhere. I hope that, in fact, is the case.

This is something that needs to be resolved. One of my concerns involves Karl Rove. I know Karl Rove was up here today. Karl Rove is world famous. He is from Nevada. I like Karl Rove. He has not been elected either to the executive branch of Government or to the legislative branch of Government. I believe in the separation of powers. I believe this legislative branch of Government is as strong as and as important as the executive branch and the judicial branch of Government. We should conduct our business, especially when it deals with procedures and rules of the Senate, without interference from the White House. In fact, I thought this is where we were headed.

I spoke to the President at the White House. My distinguished friend, the assistant majority leader, was there. I asked the President if he would step into this issue dealing with the nuclear option and help us resolve this, because we have lots of important legislative issues to accomplish.

The President, without any hesitation, said to me, in effect, that this is a legislative matter. He said he was not going to get involved in it at all.

I was dumbfounded to find that the Vice President, a few days later, was giving a speech—and I know under his constitutional role he has certain obligations, one of which is if we are in a tie, he breaks the tie; I have no qualms about his having the ability to do that—he gave a long speech on the history of the filibuster and how we were stopping this constitutional option. Frank Luntz gave nuclear option a new name. And bang, today we get Karl Rove telling everybody that there will be no compromise, saying that we want all of our judges, plus Bolton.

These are not positions that allow for compromise. I want to work this out. These are not positions that allow the Senate to proceed with the work of the American people. These are positions that force a confrontation. I don't think we need that. These are positions that divert attention from the real problems facing America today—gas prices, nearly $2.75 a gallon in Nevada. That is higher than in California. We have poor schools, problems with schools all over America. Minnesota is no different from Nevada. They have problems in their schools. They have inadequate health care coverage.

Again, 95 percent of the President's nominees have been confirmed. The majority leader has said he is willing to break the rules, to change the rules. He will be gone in 15 months and we will still be around. It would not be the right thing to do.

Ultimately, this is about removing the last check in Washington against complete abuse of power, the right to extended debate.

Ronald Reagan sent people to the Supreme Court. Richard Nixon sent people to the Supreme Court. There are still two men there who were nominated by Nixon. We have people whom George Bush No. 1 sent here. Seven of the nine members of the U.S. Supreme Court are Republican appointees. Yet there have been attacks on these people, vile things said about David Souter, vile things said about Justice Kennedy, and others.

The radical right, not representing the mainstream Republicans in this country, wants a different kind of Supreme Court, a different kind of judge—maybe that is the case—one who would roll back equality, liberty, and the rights of all Americans. I don't think that is why President Reagan put his appointees on the Supreme Court. I don't think that is why President Bush No. 1 put his appointees on the Supreme Court.

I think those who were elected to this body, the people who sent us here—not Karl Rove, not James Dobson, and not radical elements of our society—should work out a solution.

There is a way to avoid this nuclear shutdown. I have outlined a proposal for my collective colleagues in some detail in an effort to protect an independent judiciary and to preserve the Founding Fathers' vision of the Senate. I am not going to go into the details of my conversations with my friend Senator FRIST and other Members of the majority. I spoke in private. But I want to talk about why compromise is necessary.

We stand united against the constitutional or nuclear option, all 45 of us. We have a responsibility to protect checks and balances, not violate them; to protect the separation of power. My offer protects those checks and balances. My offer renews procedures to allow home State Senators to have a say in who sits on the Federal courts in their States. The procedures encourage consultation and will lead to the nomination of consensus judges, judges who will be confirmed unanimously in most cases.

As I indicated on more than one occasion this afternoon, we have approved 205 judges and turned down 10. The 10 were denied confirmation for a lot of reasons. I will not detail that here. We need to ensure the Senate remains as a check on the President's power, especially with respect to the Supreme Court. We were willing to compromise on this, which is hard to do. I believe my proposal strikes the right balance. I hope so because I tried. It protects our democracy and the independence of our Federal courts. The separation of powers doctrine means so much to our country. It protects the American people, lets us do our business, and can break partisan stalemates that are unnecessarily divisive. I emphasize that any potential compromise is of course contingent on a commitment that the nuclear option will not be exercised in this Congress or any Congress. It is very important to understand this is not all done in a vacuum.

What I have spoken to my Republican counterparts about is an effort to work our way through this. I always felt that a good settlement in all those cases I had, the best settlement was when both parties walked out saying, I am happy. We cannot make both parties happy. We will have to compromise. We will have to be statesmen and come up with something the American people will accept.

I recognize the same poll I talked about here, how people feel about the nuclear option—I know, reading these polls, that the present numbers are tumbling downward. I know that because of what has gone on, for a lot of different reasons, numbers for the Senate Republicans are falling. But the general view of the Congress is not that good.

I think it would be a good moment for the American people if Senator FRIST and I could walk out before the American people and say that we have been able to work out our differences. I think the American people would like that. If we do not do that, it is going to be a difficult situation, as I have indicated in great detail. This is not a Newt Gingrich threat. We are not going to shut down the Government. But we are going to work on a number of issues that we feel are important to the American people. In fact, our hours will probably be longer, rather than shorter.

Mr. President, I appreciate everyone's courtesy, and I especially thank my friend from Oklahoma.

If I could say this: During the Clinton years, and during the first 4 years of President Bush, we had a workhorse in the Judiciary Committee. He was chairman; he was ranking member; he was chairman. It went back and forth. He has taken a lot of spears for a lot of different people, standing up for what he believes is right for this country. So I want the record to reflect how much I appreciate the support and the advice and counsel that I have received from Senator PAT LEAHY during the years I have been in the Senate, but particularly during the last 5 months.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority whip.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky, inasmuch as I have been mentioned, allow me 2 minutes to refer to what the distinguished leader has been saying?

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, is the Senator from Vermont asking for 2 minutes?

Mr. LEAHY. Yes.

Mr. President, one, I compliment the Senator from Nevada. I appreciate the kind words he has said about me. I know how hard he has worked to work out this issue. I have been in numerous meetings with him. He has met with both me and the chairman of the committee. We have discussed ways we could work this out. Frankly, I have been in some of those same discussions with my friends on the other side of the aisle. All of us agree this is a reasonable way to work it out.

We should not be talking about judges under the question of nuclear options or religious tests or all the other red herrings that have been out here. It loses sight of what the Constitution is. It speaks of advice and consent. Both the President of the United States and the Senate have a role.

This begins at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue. The President cannot just simply say: I will send and you will consent. It says advice and consent. I think what the distinguished Senator from Nevada has said is something I have heard Republican Senators say over and over again in my 30 years here.

Let us work this out. And then let's work with the White House so we have both advice and consent. That is how we got 205 judges. That is why 95 percent of President Bush's judges have been confirmed. That is the way we can work on the remaining ones.

So I compliment the Senator from Nevada. I hope his discussions with the Senator from Tennessee work out. I know there is nothing the chairman of the committee and I would like better than to be able to go on with the work of the Judiciary Committee and not with parliamentary maneuvering.

Mr. SCHUMER addressed the chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky, the majority whip, has the floor.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, the Senator from New York approached me a few moments ago off the floor asking for 2 minutes prior to my response to the Democratic leader. I will be happy to grant him 2 minutes, provided that I be recognized as soon as the Senator from New York completes his 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Thank you, Mr. President. I thank my colleague from Kentucky for his usual graciousness.

I compliment our leader, HARRY REID, not only for his words but for his actions. The compromise he seeks is a vital one to the history of this body. Because if we do not reach compromise, the constitutional confrontation that will occur is something the likes of which the Senate has never seen. It could end up destroying whatever is left of comity in the Senate and undo our efforts to move forward on issues the American public cares about.

We are acting here out of strength, not out of weakness. The public is on our side. They realize the nuclear option is overreaching. As our minority leader said, it is not the first time we have seen overreaching here in the Congress in the last few months.

But the compromise is offered in the best of faith. We seriously love this body and wish to avoid ripping it apart. We plead with our colleagues on the other side—the Republican leadership but also those 10 or 12 Republican Members who know this is wrong but are under tremendous pressure to make it come about.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority whip.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, let me first join in the compliments that have been expressed toward the Democratic leader. He is new to his position. This new precedent, set in the Senate over the last Congress, in which we routinely saw filibustering for the purpose of defeating circuit judges, was not something introduced under Senator REID's majority leadership.

We have had numerous conversations. I have had conversations with Senator REID. He has had a number of conversations with the majority leader about how we might be able to get the Senate back to the way it operated for 214 years quite comfortably.

So far, a compromise has not been achieved. But I compliment the Democratic leader for his willingness to discuss the issue and his understanding that where the Senate is today is simply unacceptable.

So let's talk just for a moment about what is not in dispute. What is not in dispute is that for 214 years the filibuster was not used to kill a nomination for the judiciary when a majority of the Members of the Senate were for that nominee. When a majority of the Members of this body have been for a nominee, the filibuster has never been used to defeat a nominee in the history of the country.

It is true, we have had a few cloture votes. My good friend from Nevada, the Democratic leader, mentioned two that I think are illustrative of how the Senate should operate. Toward the end of the Clinton years, we had two nominations before this body, Paez and Berzon, both of whom were quite controversial and quite far to the left, for the Ninth Circuit, which some would argue did not need to be pushed any further to the left.

Senator LOTT was the majority leader then. Senator Daschle was the Democratic leader. There were people on this side of the aisle who did not want to see either of those nominees go forward and were prepared to filibuster those nominees for the purpose of defeating them. So our leader had to say to people on our side of the aisle: That is a bad idea. He joined with Senator Daschle and filed cloture not for the purpose of defeating the two nominations but for the purpose of advancing them because, you see, there was a core of Republicans on this side of the aisle prepared to filibuster for the purpose of defeating those nominations.

Responsible leadership on both sides conspired, filed cloture, and cloture was invoked. I was an example of somebody who was not keen on either of those nominees. I voted for cloture because I believed then, and believe now, that judges are entitled to an up-or-down vote here in the Senate, that any President is entitled to that courtesy. So cloture was invoked as a result of the leadership of Senator Daschle and Senator LOTT. We had the votes on the nominees. They both were confirmed—not with my vote but confirmed.

That is the way the Senate ought to operate when there are some Members on each side of the aisle who would go so far as to deny a judge an up-or-down vote. That was the status quo until the last Congress, when, for the first time in the history of the Senate, the filibuster was used for the purpose of defeating a nominee, even when the nominee had a majority of support in the Senate. So there have been no filibusters for the purpose of killing nominees until the last Congress.

Second, there is a lot of discussion about polls, particularly the unbelievable poll on the front page of the Washington Post today which might give some comfort to those who think filibustering judges for the purpose of defeating them is a good idea until you read the way the question was asked. The way the question was asked was almost guaranteed to get the answer.

A more appropriate way to ask the question was the way it was asked in a recent survey by Voter Consumer Research. In that survey, 81 percent of those tested agreed with the idea that "even if they disagree with a judge, Senate Democrats should at least allow the President's nomination to be voted on," and only 18 percent disagreed with that, an unbiased way of stating the question. Even if you disagree with the nominee, should the nominee get an up-or-down vote: 81 percent yes; 18 percent no. That is where the American people are on this issue.

With regard to the President's involvement, the President has not been involved in this, but the Vice President happens to be the President of the Senate. He is, because of his duties as President of the Senate, going to be called upon at some point, should we have to go so far as to exercise the Byrd option or constitutional option—and let me make the point that the constitutional option is simply a precedent interpreting a rule of the Senate. Senator BYRD did this not on one occasion, not on two occasions or three occasions, but on four occasions during the time that he was leader, interpreted the rules by a simple majority of the Senate. It has been done before and the Byrd option, of course, could be done again.

Let me say I think our good friends on the other side of the aisle may have a legitimate complaint with regard to the possibility that judicial nominees could be held in committee. I have heard it said on numerous occasions that what they have done out here on the floor of the Senate in the last Congress and are proposing to do in this Congress is no different from what the Republicans did in committee during the Clinton years. I would suggest that any solution to the problem include some kind of expedited procedure under which nominees could get out of committee in an orderly way and get voted on up or down on the Senate floor, thereby eliminating the possibility that the majority party could, in committee, in effect do the same thing the minority party did in the last Congress on the floor. We could level the playing field and make certain that any President's nominee is given fair consideration in committee and fair consideration on the floor.

These are the kinds of things we have been kicking around, discussing in good faith on both sides of the aisle. Again, I compliment the Democratic leader. He has certainly been willing to discuss the issue. I believe we both think where the Senate is today is unacceptable. There is a lot of finger-pointing going on on both sides. Democrats are pointing fingers at Republicans for what was done during the Clinton years; Republicans are pointing fingers at Democrats for what was done in the last Congress. There is a way to cure that, a way to fix it.

It would be a huge mistake for the Senate to get to the point where 41 Members of the Senate can dictate to any President of the United States who gets to be on a circuit court or the Supreme Court. Let me say that again.

Where this is headed, I would say to my good friend, the Democratic leader, and to our colleagues on the other side of the aisle, is in the direction of 41 Members of the Senate being able to dictate to any President who may be on the Supreme Court or a circuit court. That is a bad idea. Against the best efforts of myself and others on this side of the aisle, there could be a Democratic President again as soon as 3 or 4 years from now. I don't think our friends on the other side of the aisle are going to want to have a well-established notion that a mere 41 Members of the Senate are going to be able to dictate to the President who may be on the courts.

I conclude by saying we should continue our discussions—I do think they have been in good faith—to see if we can resolve this situation and get the Senate back to the way it operated prior to the last Congress when nominees were entitled to an up-or-down vote on the floor and, I would add, should be entitled to an up-or-down vote in committee, thereby leveling the playing field and guaranteeing that any President's nominations to the circuit courts and to the Supreme Court get a fair up-or-down vote.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTINEZ). The Democratic leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I appreciate the statement of my distinguished friend. We have worked together for I don't remember how many years because I had his job. A lot of my previous life has been blurred as a result of the past 5 months, but I enjoyed working with him then. He is a master of procedure, certainly understands the Senate. I appreciate not only what he said but the tone of it.

I would just like to say this to the Presiding Officer, being a new Senator, and some others here: One of the problems I have is the deference to the President. George Bush is my President. I didn't vote for him. When he was elected the first time, I didn't vote for him. But we are a country that is so unique. When his election was decided by the Supreme Court after that election, there wasn't a window broken. There wasn't a demonstration held. There were no fires set. He became President of the United States. He became my President and everybody else's. But the fact that he is President of the United States does not take away the fact that he is President, not king. With all the power that he has in that vast bureaucracy, he has no more power than we have in the legislative branch.

My distinguished friend, the Senator from Kentucky, said: We need to give deference to the President's nominations. Yes, I think we need to give deference to the President's nominations, but we are not a rubber stamp for the President. We have an advice and consent role. My friend said he doesn't think it is right to have 41 Members hold up a vote on his judicial nominations. I think it speaks volumes to a statement that was issued by the majority leader last week. Obviously, one of his Republican colleagues said: Is this rule that you are breaking to change the rules going to apply to legislative filibusters? He issued a one-paragraph statement and said: No, it won't apply to legislative filibusters.

But what it didn't say was anything about Cabinet officers, sub-Cabinet officers, people we have to confirm by law. Do we have a right to say the Senate rule should be in effect and we have a right to hold one of these up by filibuster? Using the logic of my friend from Kentucky and the statement issued by my friend, the distinguished majority leader, obviously they think he should get his choices there, too.

There have been would-be Cabinet officers from the very beginning of this country who never made it, Cabinet officers who were nominated but were never confirmed because people in the Senate, 100 years ago, 200 years ago, 50 years ago said: No thanks. They didn't have a majority but they had enough to filibuster. That is the Senate. If we continue on this path on which we are going, we will just be an extension of the House of Representatives. I have served there. With every matter that comes to the House floor, without exception, there is what they call a rule on it that comes from the Rules Committee. The Rules Committee is chosen by the Speaker. There are Democrats there, but they are only token because whatever the Committee on Rules says, that is what happens on the House floor.

You can bring a bill to the floor, and the Rules Committee can say: No amendments, debate time 20 minutes evenly divided. Or they can bring a piece of legislation to the floor and they can say: Five amendments, an hour each. They can do anything they want to do. They set a rule on every piece of legislation.

Mr. McCONNELL. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. REID. Not right now. When Senator INHOFE brings this bill to the floor, the highway bill, this bill is a free-for-all. That is what the Senate is. It is kind of a cluttered, clumsy procedure, but that is what the Senate is. I hope we are not an extension of the House of Representatives where everything we do here is like in the House—a rule is set on it. If people feel strongly enough to break the rules, to change the rules, as they will have to do here, they can change it as to the nominations I have also mentioned. And next, they can change it on legislation. The Senator from Florida has not been here long, but he is certainly an experienced man, a former Cabinet officer of this country. I know he came here a few weeks ago with an important piece of legislation. To him, it was very important because it was important, he believed, to the people of Florida. But you knew, because of Senate procedures, if we wanted to stop that with 41 votes, we could do that. It should apply to everything we do here.

I agree with my friend from Kentucky. I don't think we should be looking to pick fights and say that everybody the President sends up here has to be what we want. We know it is the President's prerogative. But for 214 years, the President consulted with the Senate on judicial nominations, and for many years the committee honored the blue slip, which ensured consultation. We know that during the last few years of the Clinton administration, Senator HATCH said: We are not going to approve anybody unless you run the names past me. That is how we came up with Ginsburg and Breyer. ORRIN HATCH and the Republicans, at that time in the majority, and in the minority other times, said that they liked Breyer and Ginsburg. These nominees flew right through here. Perhaps President Clinton would have liked to have had somebody else. Maybe they were not his first choice. They got out of this body quickly.

So we had this consultation for a long period of time. We honored the blue-slip policy, which ensured consultation. I haven't yet mentioned that one of the many positive things all the political writers talk about is that the filibuster brings about compromise and consultation. You are forced to come and talk about issues, whether it is a piece of legislation the Senator from Florida is trying to get through or whether it is a nomination. I got a call from a Senator today saying: I have a hold on a Senate Cabinet officer, and I want to talk to you about it and see if you can help me work something out. It brings people together. I am confident that on an important issue for the President, we can do that.

Mr. President, I very much thank my friend from Kentucky—not only what he said, but how he said it. I hope something can be resolved here. The right to unlimited debate is something this country has had and something that is needed. I don't think we should be filibustering a lot of judges unnecessarily, but a filibuster is sometimes warranted. There may be unusual situations in the future where we will need to rely on this procedure.

I am happy to yield to my friend from Kentucky.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I can make it in the form of a question.

Mr. REID. I am happy to answer a question.

Mr. McCONNELL. Basically, what I want to do is not ask him a question, but allay his concerns about this being a slippery slope that would lead to the end of the legislative filibuster. We had that vote in 1995. I remind my good friend from Nevada, to get rid of the filibuster, period. It got only 19 votes: all 19 of them were Democrats. Not a single Republican voted to get rid of the legislative filibuster. Interestingly enough, this was the first vote after my party came back to power in the Senate. So, arguably, we would have been the big beneficiaries of getting rid of the filibuster. We had just had a marvelously successful election in 1994. We were in the majority of the House for the first time in 40 years and in the Senate. Somebody on your side of the aisle offered an amendment to get rid of all filibusters. That was the first vote Senator FRIST cast after he was sworn into the Senate—to keep the filibuster. So I can reassure my good friend there is no sentiment that I am aware of anywhere in the Senate for getting rid of the filibuster.

Secondly, I am not aware of any sentiment about the filibuster being a problem with regard to Cabinet or sub-Cabinet appointments.

Third, I am not aware of the filibuster being a problem with regard to district court judges. Senators seem to be—your side has done a good job of confirming district court judges. That is not in dispute. We appreciate that. We think you have done it in a fair manner. What we are talking about here is this problem: for the first time in history the filibustering of circuit court nominees that have a majority of support in the Senate and, if allowed to have an up-or-down vote, all of these judges would be confirmed. They are for the first time in history denying them a vote when they have a majority of support in the Senate, and many of us have a suspicion this is precisely what our good friends on the other side of the aisle have in mind for any subsequent Supreme Court nominations. So why don't we just talk about the problem, which is circuit courts, and potentially the Supreme Court, and reach some kind of understanding that gets us back to the way we comfortably operated here for 214 years. That is what I would hope my good friend from Nevada, the Democratic leader, and ourselves could agree to at some point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader has the floor.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I say to my friend that if a filibuster is OK for a person who is going to serve 4 years as a member of the President's Cabinet, or some lesser period of time, which is usually the case, why would it be wrong, for someone who is going to get a lifetime appointment, to take a look at that person? Why in the world would that be any different? Don't we have an even higher obligation to look at somebody who is going to be appointed for life? Certainly, we have an obligation to do that. There is no reason in the world that the President should get all of his people. I would say that my friends in the majority should understand that we consider our position as Senators. It gives up power to the executive branch of Government.

I am happy to yield to my friend from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Senator. I will address a question to my friend from Nevada. I have two questions. I will ask them both. The first is this: Our good friend from Kentucky did speak of compromise, and we do want compromise. But you cannot call something a compromise and then say I want to win everything. To say that there would be no filibusters of any judges, to say that every judge could be discharged from a committee—you can call that a compromise; you can say the sky is green—it is not a compromise. That is totally the position of the other side. A compromise involves a little pain on each side to be a genuine compromise.

So my first question to my good friend and leader, whom I am proud to serve under, is: Would this side saying we will not filibuster any judge be any kind of compromise at all? The second question to my colleague—I will ask both at once—is this: My friend from Kentucky said: Well, we want an up-or-down vote. Majority rules. Are there not many instances where the Senate does not operate by majority rule, where 60 votes are called for, where 67 votes are called for? In fact, I argue it can be said that 51 Senators, representing only 21 percent of the population of this United States, can pass a law. Isn't it a fact that the Founding Fathers wanted the Senate to be something of a different animal, not a place where if you had 51 percent, you got your way 100 percent of the time but, rather, a place where the rules, the traditions, the way of thinking said come together for compromise; and, in fact, isn't it a fact that the time when this is most important, when the Senate plays its most important role, is when the President, the House, and the Senate are in the control of one party?

My two questions: Is it a compromise—so-called compromise—that says no filibuster on any judges and discharge petitions on all judges, any compromise at all, which my friend from Kentucky seems to think it was, even though it would be everything your side wants and nothing our side wants?

And second, is it not true that the Senate has been founded not on 51-to-49 rule governance all the time, but on a tradition of comity, checks and balances, and bipartisanship where a bare majority does not always rule?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I say to my friend, this was the Great Compromise during the Constitutional Convention, where these visionary men, our Founding Fathers, worked out the difference between the House and the Senate. They did this purposely and specifically.

I say to my friend, there are many issues here that are decided not by 51, not by 60, not by 67, but many issues take unanimous consent. In fact, most things we do in this body are by unanimous consent. All of us have to agree.

We cannot commit to not having any filibusters, but we will exercise to the very best of our ability discretion, judicious discretion, because we think we are in a new day. We believe this is a new Congress, and we want to show the American people we can work together. And I say to everyone listening that I think we have proven that this year. We have worked on issues that have taken 15 years to get to the Senate floor. We know that many people on this side of the aisle did not particularly like the class action bill. We know that many people on this side of the aisle did not particularly like the bankruptcy bill, but we took 15 years of history and came here and did things the old-fashioned way. We had a bill on the floor, we offered amendments—some failed, some passed—and moved on. Those bills are now law. People may not like that—some do not—but it shows we can work together here.

My plaintive plea to every one of my 99 friends in the Senate is, let's work something out. Let's try to get along. Let's set a picture that BILL FRIST and HARRY REID can walk out here not representing these special interest groups but representing the American people and trying to keep this body as it is and has been for over 200 years, and walk out here together and say: We have resolved our differences. We are going to move forward with the business of this country. That is my desire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority whip.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, briefly, before the Democratic leader leaves, what I fear is that the only thing that has really changed in recent years is the occupant of the White House. With all due respect to my good friend and colleague—and I thank him for his cooperation on class action and bankruptcy; I know that was not easy—here we have my good friend HARRY REID in June of 2001 saying:

> We should have up-or-down votes in the committees and on the floor.

We should have up-or-down votes in the committees and on the floor. June 2001.

My good friend Senator SCHUMER is, I believe, still here on the Senate floor. In March of 2000, he said:

> I also plead with my colleagues to move judges with alacrity—vote them up or down. . . . This delay makes a mockery of the Constitution.

That is the Democratic leader and our good Senator from New York in 2000, just a few years ago. What has changed between then and now? I suggest the only thing that has changed is the occupant of the White House. All we are pleading for—and again, I thank the Democratic leader. I think he has been gracious, he has been anxious to work with us to come up with some accommodation. But what was routine Senate procedure as late as 2000 and 2001 now has been turned on its head and night is day and day is night. I am having a hard time seeing that anything has changed except the occupant of the White House.

What we need to do is divorce ourselves from who the current occupant of the White House is, who the current majority is in the Senate, and think about the institution in the long term. It seems to me that where we are headed is that 41 Members of the Senate will, in effect, be able to dictate to whomever is in the White House who the nominees for appeals court judges and for Supreme Court Justices may be. I believe that is not where we need to end up. I do not think it is in their best interest. They may have the White House as soon as January of 2009.

Why can't we just pull back from the abyss, get back to the way we were operating in a way apparently the Democratic leader and the Senator from New York felt was quite appropriate as recently as 2000 and 2001? Why can't we just get back to that and settle this dispute once and for all for future Congresses?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, first of all, I have no problem with what I said. I believe we should have had some votes in the committee. Remember, 69 never even came before the committee. Following that, there should have been votes here on the floor. Remember, every one of these judges turned down had votes on the floor. They were cloture motions.

My distinguished friend says he does not know of any time in the history of this country where there has been a majority that favored somebody, that there was not cloture filed, or words to that effect. The point is, we do not need to relive history, but 69 of President Clinton's people never even got there, and that is what I was talking about in 2000 and 2001. I would never, ever consider breaking the rules to change the rules. I never suggested that at all.

I say to my friend, I want to work something out. I repeat that for probably the fifth time here today, but in the process we cannot give up the basic rights this country and this Senate have had for more than 200 years. We are willing to compromise, and, as my friend from New York said, compromise means just that. If we are seen as not acting appropriately, then people can respond to us at election time. It is interesting to note, I say to my friend, in talking to some of my Republican friends, of all the circuit nominees I have heard of, there are only a few that I have a problem with. My Republican friends have told me that they have a problem with a couple themselves.

We can work through this. Let's not have a hard-and-fast rule that the only way we are going to do this is through an up-or-down vote on judges because if that is the case, we are wasting our time here. They are going to have to break the rules.

Mr. BOND. Will the minority leader yield for a question?

Mr. SCHUMER. Will my colleague yield?

Mr. REID. I yield to my friend from Missouri—he has been patient—for a question without my losing my right to the floor.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I would like to ask the minority leader—I came down here to talk about the highway bill. Is it his understanding that we are on the highway bill?

Mr. REID. And my answer is yes, and I am going to get off the floor just as quickly as I can.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. REID. Yes.

Mr. SCHUMER. I will be brief, as I know my friend from Missouri has been patient. I want to augment, since my name was mentioned, what my colleague said. What we were talking about was bringing votes to the floor. We did not say majority vote, nor did we try to stop the filibusters that were going on for Mr. Paez and Ms. Berzon.

The bottom line is those two were not allowed to get votes for 4 years, 5½ years. The nominees here have come to the floor and, by the rules of the Senate, they did not garner sufficient support. It is a lot different not bringing them up at all, and that is what we were talking about, rather than bringing them up and then letting them be disposed of by the Senate rules. In fact, the quote, the first part of it I believe I was talking to my colleague from New Hampshire: You can debate this as long as you want, just bring it up.

I thank my colleague.

Mr. REID. I appreciate everyone's patience.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority whip.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I assure the Senator from Missouri, I am also about through. Listening to Senator SCHUMER, maybe we have parameters of an understanding here. I think it was probably before the Senator from New York came on the floor, but I suggested that we couple an assurance that we have an up-or-down vote on the floor of the Senate for appellate court judges and Supreme Court Justices with a guaranteed expedited procedure in committee, guarantee that some of the legitimate grievances his party may have had toward the end of the Clinton years could not be committed again. All of this seems to me presents the possibility for an understanding that might settle this issue once and for all.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, what is the regular order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The highway bill is the pending question.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, as we have said, we are on the substitute, our committee substitute. That will be the one that will receive amendments. We have invited Members to come to the floor with their amendments.

While we are waiting for those to come to the floor, I will go over what is before us section by section. Then when someone comes in for the purpose of offering an amendment, I will be glad to stop and then yield to that a person.

I first ask if the ranking minority member, Senator JEFFORDS, had any comments to make before we go on to amendments.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I thank the Senator for the opportunity but the answer is no.

Mr. INHOFE. First, I will start section by section. Section 1101 of the bill authorizes $283.9 billion in guaranteed spending and contract authority over a 6-year period. This level is consistent with levels adopted by the House and the White House. Subtracting authorizations for mass transit and safety and funding for fiscal year 2004, the bill provides $191 billion for maintenance and improvement to the Nation's roads and bridges over the 5-year period from fiscal year 2005 through 2009.

Let us keep in mind that this was essentially the same bill at a different funding level than we had a year ago this week, I believe. So we already have a year behind us. What we have done for this statement is to say what is there other than what has already been used for the first year, fiscal year 2005, and also mass transit and safety.

The link between a robust economy and a strong transportation infrastructure is undeniable. The movement of people and goods is one of the foremost indicators of a growing economy and job creation. At this point, we need to recognize that people have been concerned—were concerned a few years ago—about the economy, and we are recognizing that this administration actually inherited a recession and we are coming out of it now. But there is no single thing we could do that would provide more jobs and more economic activity. I suggest to the President that for each 1-percent increase in economic activity, it provides an additional 47,000 jobs. So do the math and we can see what a great boon this would be.

The bill before us today recognizes the realities of available revenues without the need for increasing gas taxes. It is designed to make the most of every available dollar for better and safer roads, while creating thousands of new jobs.

It probably is anticipated that there will be amendments to increase this amount. I anticipate there may be an amendment by the chairman and the ranking member of the Finance Committee, Senator GRASSLEY and Senator BAUCUS, and if not them then somebody else would probably do it. When this happens, they would, of course, be in a position to come up with the amount of money that would be necessary.

One of the things I commented about last year is that we were always within the amount of money that we could identify—in other words, the amount of money that was anticipated coming in from Federal revenues from gas purchases, along with other areas we could identify.

The total obligation authorized in this bill is $188 billion for a period from fiscal year 2005 to 2009.

In addition to the increases in funding for the overall program, the bill makes important changes to the apportionments of a few specific programs. Under TEA–21, which we adopted 7 years ago, the administrative expenses for the Federal Highway Administration were funded as a takedown from the various core programs. This bill recognizes the separate importance of costs associated with the administration of the overall highway program. Therefore, the bill funds Federal Highway Administration expenses at its own separate apportionment protecting the autonomy of the individual core programs and the administrative fund itself.

Of the amount designated for program administration, the Secretary of Transportation is also given the authority to transfer an appropriate amount to the administrative expenses of the Appalachian Highway Development System.

As a result of the 2000 census, 46 new metropolitan planning organizations, known as MPOs, have been established throughout the country and are now eligible for Federal transportation planning funding. To respond to this expanded need, we have increased the program set-asides for MPOs from 1 percent under TEA–21 to up to 1½ percent. This, along with the overall increase in program funds, will help to address the growing transportation planning needs.

Section 1104 is the equity bonus section. TEA–21 used the minimum guarantee calculation to guarantee that States receive back at least 90.5 percent of their percentage contributed to the highway trust fund. This is very significant. It has become quite controversial. Last week and this week we have talked for several hours on this bill about the various donor States. My State of Oklahoma has always been a donor State, since the programs began. I can remember that donor amount was 75 percent; that is to say, each State was guaranteed to get back 75 percent of the money that was sent in. Slowly that has crept up and it is currently at 90.5 percent.

Had we passed the bill that we had in conference last year—the bill that we sent to conference had $318 billion of authorization—then we would have everybody at the end of this 6-year period up to 95 percent. So it would have gone from 90.5 percent to 95 percent.

The minimum guarantee program is driven by a political distribution known as the 1104 table. The bill replaces the old minimum guarantee program and the 1104 table with a new equity bonus program that ensures a percentage return to States of 92 percent in each of the fiscal years 2005 through 2009.

At this point we can say it is very complicated, but the equity bonus program is just what it states: it is an equity program. The program does away with the table in TEA–21 which determined each State's percentage share of the total highway program. Rather than have a State's return be set by a politically driven table, the equity bonus program determines each State's return by first relying on the program distribution of formulas.

This is not the easy way of doing it; this is the hard way of doing it. I am sure Senator JEFFORDS joins me in saying it would be a lot easier to have a minimum guarantee for any State, work out their deal, make 60 Members of the Senate happy, and walk away. That would have been done a long time ago if we decided to do it that way. But that is not equitable, and I think that is the wrong way to do business.

In fact, I say to people who criticize this bill saying it has pork in it, there are only two projects in the entire bill. The bill before us right now in the form of a substitute only has two projects in it. That is not the case over in the other body. They have several hundred projects. It has been my philosophy, and I think it is shared by the ranking minority, that the closer one gets to home, the better these decisions are.

If we can determine an equitable formula, which I believe we have done, we can send it back to the States and let the local people make the determinations as to how that is going to be spent. Now, a lot of people in Washington do not agree with that. A lot of them think if the decision is not made in Washington, it is not a good decision. I believe we are doing it the right way.

The equity bonus calculation identifies a justifiable nexus in equity between the underlying formulas and responsible balanced growth for donor and donee States alike. If a State fails to reach the minimum return in any year based on the formulas, that State would receive an equity bonus apportionment in addition to their formula funds to bring them up to the required level.

While we allow the formulas to work under the new equity bonus program, we also recognize there would be some inequities if we allowed the formulas to be the sole factor in distributing dollars to the States. In order to increase the minimum rate of return for donor States while ensuring an equitable transition of donee States, rates of return are subject to an annual growth ceiling to smooth out the phase-in of increased minimum returns. This accomplishes two goals. First, it keeps the cost of the equity bonus program affordable; secondly, it ensures that donee States are still able to grow so no States grow less than 10 percent over their TEA–21 levels. Everyone is guaranteed an increase from their own levels, at least 10 percent.

There is a cap on equity bonus. No State may receive a portion more than a specific percentage of their average portion received under TEA–21. So you have two caps—a floor and a ceiling. That helps the formulas work.

There is a special rule to protect States with population densities less than 20 persons per square mile, a population of less than 1 million, a median household income of less than $35,000, or a State with a fatality rate during 2002 on the interstate highways greater than 1 fatality per 100 million vehicle miles traveled.

We said a lot in one paragraph. It shows the complications of a formula. First, we have to take care of the States that do not have a population. Look at Montana, Wyoming, some of the sparsely populated States. They still have to have roads. Second, we have said for the States that might have a lower per capita income, they can be considered poverty States, so there is a consideration. My State of Oklahoma is in a different situation than many other States and we would benefit from that. Or a State with a fatality rise during 2002. It is absolutely necessary to have part of the formula attributed to a consideration for money being made to States where the fatality rate is higher than average. That takes us through several of the sections.

At this point, if there are any Senators who would like to offer amendments, I encourage them to come to the Chamber and offer amendments, at the end of which time we will continue to go through the bill section by section.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota.

AMENDMENT NO. 572 TO AMENDMENT NO. 567

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. THUNE] proposes an amendment numbered 572.

Mr. THUNE. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To modify the section relating to National Scenic Byways to provide for the designation of Indian scenic byways)

Strike section 1602(a) and insert the following:

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 162 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking "the roads as" and all that follows and inserting "the roads as—

"(A) National Scenic Byways;

"(B) All-American Roads; or

"(C) America's Byways.";

(B) in paragraph (3)—

(i) by striking "To be considered" and inserting the following:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—To be considered";

(ii) in subparagraph (A) (as designated by clause (i))—

(I) by inserting ", an Indian tribe, " after "nominated by a State"; and

(II) by inserting ", an Indian scenic byway," after "designated as a State scenic byway"; and

(iii) by adding at the end the following:

"(B) NOMINATION BY INDIAN TRIBES.—An Indian tribe may nominate a road as a National Scenic Byway under subparagraph (A) only if a Federal land management agency (other than the Bureau of Indian Affairs), a State, or a political subdivision of a State does not have—

"(i) jurisdiction over the road; or

"(ii) responsibility for managing the road.

"(C) SAFETY.—Indian tribes shall maintain the safety and quality of roads nominated by the Indian tribe under subparagraph (A)."; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

"(4) RECIPROCAL NOTIFICATION.—States, Federal land management agencies, and Indian tribes shall notify each other regarding nominations under this subsection for roads that—

"(A) are within the jurisdictional boundary of the State, Federal land management agency, or Indian tribe; or

"(B) directly connect to roads for which the State, Federal land management agency, or Indian tribe is responsible.";

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) in paragraph (1)—

(i) by inserting "and Indian tribes" after "provide technical assistance to States";

(ii) in subparagraph (A), by striking "designated as" and all that follows and inserting "designated as—

"(i) National Scenic Byways;

"(ii) All-American Roads;

"(iii) America's Byways;

"(iv) State scenic byways; or

"(v) Indian scenic byways; and"; and

(iii) in subparagraph (B), by inserting "or Indian" after "State";

(B) in paragraph (2)—

(i) in subparagraph (A), by striking "Byway or All-American Road" and inserting "Byway, All-American Road, or 1 of America's Byways";

(ii) in subparagraph (B)—

(I) by striking "State-designated" and inserting "State or Indian"; and

(II) by striking "designation as a" and all that follows and inserting "designation as—

"(i) a National Scenic Byway;

"(ii) an All-American Road; or

"(iii) 1 of America's Byways; and"; and

(iii) in subparagraph (C), by inserting "or Indian" after "State";

(3) in subsection (c)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by inserting "or Indian" after "State";

(B) in paragraph (3)—

(i) by inserting "Indian scenic byway," after "improvements to a State scenic byway,"; and

(ii) by inserting "Indian scenic byway," after "designation as a State scenic byway,"; and

(C) in paragraph (4), by striking "passing lane,"; and

(4) in subsection (e), by inserting "or Indian tribe" after "State".

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I hope my amendment will be included as part of the final bill. I know the managers intend to offer a managers' amendment. I want my colleagues to know I have been working with the chairman, the Senator from Oklahoma, the ranking member, Senator JEFFORDS from Vermont, of the Committee on Environment and Public Works concerning this issue since we marked up the underlying bill in committee last month.

While Chairman INHOFE and Ranking Member JEFFORDS, Subcommittee Chair BOND, and Ranking Subcommittee Member BAUCUS initially had questions regarding my amendment in committee, I understand now the staff has been able to work through all of those concerns.

Simply put, my amendment seeks to allow Native American tribes the ability to nominate roads to the Secretary of Transportation for designation as scenic byways, All-American Roads, or America's Byways.

Currently, Indian tribes are only allowed to nominate roads for designation under the Scenic Byways Program if they first go through their respective State Department of Transportation or Federal land management agencies such as the National Park Service or the Bureau of Indian Affairs. My amendment allows tribes to designate those roads over which they have jurisdiction or management responsibility as tribal scenic byways which then allows them to directly nominate the road for national designation with the Secretary of Transportation.

Additionally, my amendment calls on tribes to ensure the safety and quality of the roads that are designated as scenic byways similar to the requirements States currently have. In no way does this amendment impact the funding available for scenic byways. It simply grants Indian tribes the same ability States and Federal land management agencies currently have to nominate roads.

In closing, this is an issue of fairness and something I hope the managers of the bill will be able to accept. It does not impact current levels of funding. It simply allows for more flexibility for the Native American tribes in this country to designate roads that are under their jurisdiction and management.

I hope the managers will be able to accept the amendment. As I said earlier today, I hope we can proceed to get this bill through the process, through the Senate, into conference with the House, and on the President's desk because it is so important to this Nation's future, to my State of South Dakota, and to all those tribes, local governments, State highway departments, business groups, and those who are awaiting final action on the highway bill.

I yield back the remainder of my time and ask for favorable consideration of this amendment.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his amendment and for working with us on this committee. I am sure he is aware the amendment concerns a large number of tribal communities in Oklahoma, as well as those in South Dakota. I believe right now we have the largest percentage of Native Americans per capita of any of the States.

This amendment has been cleared on both sides. I ask the Senator from Vermont if it is the Senator's wish to go ahead and accept this now, if this has been cleared on the minority side.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I am very pleased to concur in the amendment. The Senator has made an excellent presentation. I appreciate the work of the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 572) was agreed to.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished chairman, Senator INHOFE, and Senator JEFFORDS for their help.

Mr. INHOFE. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. THUNE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. THUNE. I thank the Senator from Oklahoma and the Senator from Vermont for their assistance and for their staffs' work. This will improve the way the roads are treated on the reservations and give our tribes more flexibility and discretion when it comes to how they treat the roads.

Mr. INHOFE. I appreciate the Senator from South Dakota coming down. He has submitted the first amendment to this bill, an amendment as meaningful to Oklahoma and other States as to South Dakota. We thank the Senator for his effort.

We invite other Members to offer their amendments. I am not implying they will all be that easy, but we invite our Senators to offer amendments.

I was going over section 1104, the most complicated section in the bill, the equity bonus section. We talked about the fact it does protect States that are of a lower income, densely populated States, States that have our donor status, States that are donee status. This is an important part of the bill.

The scope or percentage of funding included in the equity bonus and in the program remains the same, at 92.5 percent as TEA–21. This is significant. That means 92.5 percent of everything in this bill, whatever it ends up being, whether $284 billion or another amount, is done through this equitable manner. It minimizes what a lot of people would criticize as being pork for special projects.

In order to craft a successful formula, we have to balance the needs of donor and donee States. I will be the first to acknowledge this balance, as with any compromise, is not perfect. A few minutes ago we talked about compromises and they aren't perfect.

However, I can say with, I am sure, the agreement of the ranking minority member, there were many compromises made during the construction of this bill over the past 2½ years the Senator from Vermont disagreed with and with which I disagreed. But in the spirit of compromise we were able to get these things done.

My colleagues in representing donee and donor States that received lower rates of return or growth rates than they feel fair have made this fact very clear. I am sympathetic to the concerns of both donor and donees in this situation. They both have significant transportation needs that cannot be ignored. Addressing their concerns is more difficult in the last year due to the fact we have less money.

When we were dealing with the bill we passed out of the Senate and sent to conference last year, just at about this time, it was at a higher level, and that did guarantee every State would reach, at the end of the 6-year period, at least a 95-percent return. I know my people in the State of Oklahoma wanted a 95-percent return, and they were very disappointed when we were unable to get it out of conference, when I had every expectation we would get it out of conference.

So now, in order to get up to a higher amount, we have to be dealing with a different funding level. We have to wait and let the process take place and see what happens on that.

Section 1105 is the revenue aligned budget authority, the RABA. The huge 2003 negative adjustment in revenue aligned budget authority, or RABA, made it clear that some changes were needed to the RABA calculation in order to provide greater stability, more accurate predictions, and less fluctuation in coming years. As I have indicated before, I believe the underlying principle of RABA is an important fiscal policy and that highway expenditures should be tied to highway trust fund revenues.

This bill modifies the RABA calculation so that annual funding level adjustments are less dependent on future anticipated receipts and more dependent on actual receipts to the highway trust fund. If the RABA adjustment in a fiscal year is negative, the amount of contract authority apportioned to the States for that year will be reduced by an amount equal to the negative RABA.

Under TEA–21, negative adjustments were delayed until the succeeding fiscal year. Under the new method—the change we are making—no reduction to apportionments is made for RABA when the cash balance on the highway trust fund, other than the mass transit account, exceeds $6 billion.

Section 1201 is the Infrastructure Performance and Maintenance Program, the IPAM. The Infrastructure Performance and Maintenance Program is intended for ready-to-go projects that States can undertake and complete within a relatively short timeframe. This is very important because we are now—I anticipate we will pass this bill—into the construction season. Some of my friends from Northern States have much shorter construction seasons than some, such as the Presiding Officer. They have 12 months a year for construction. We are not quite that fortunate.

So this allows those projects that are ready to go, to go ahead—as soon as this bill is signed into law—and in a very short timeframe to be completed.

As a result, States are given 6 months to obligate IPAM funds. We designed this discretionary program to promote projects that result in immediate benefits for the highway system's condition and performance, while avoiding long-term commitments of funds. The program also provides further economic stimulus to the economy and provides a way to aid in spending down balances in the highway trust fund.

States may obligate funds for projects eligible under Interstate Maintenance; the National Highway System; the Surface Transportation Program; the Highway Safety Improvement Program; Congestion Mitigation and Air Quality Improvement, the CMAQ Program; and the Highway Bridge Program.

Eligible projects under the IPAM Program include the preservation, maintenance, and improvement of existing highway elements, including hurricane evacuation routes, operational improvements at points of recurring highway congestion, and systematic changes to manage or improve areas of congestion.

Section 1202 is the future of the surface transportation system. In order to be prepared for future reauthorizations of this legislation, we require the Secretary of Transportation to perform a long-term investigation into the surface transportation infrastructure needs of the Nation. Specifically, the bill directs the Secretary to look at, first, the current condition and performance of the interstate system; next, the future of the interstate system in 15, 30, and 50 years; third, the expected demographics and business uses that impact the surface transportation system; fourth, the effect of changing vehicle types, modes of transportation, traffic volumes, and fleet size and weights; fifth, possible design changes; sixth, urban, rural, interregional and national needs; seventh, improvements in emergency preparedness; eighth, real-time performance data collection; and, ninth, future funding needs and potential approaches to collect those funds.

Now, that concludes section 1202.

Mr. President, it is my understanding that a Senator is here who wants the floor for a purpose other than the highway bill.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I say to the Senator, I would like to make very brief comments on the Transportation bill, but I would also like to address the Senate on another subject matter. If there were Senators here who would like to talk on the highway bill, I would withhold. If there were not other Senators here on that legislation, I would hope to be able to address the Senate.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I would make the request of the Senator from Massachusetts to go ahead and proceed in terms of his comments on the highway bill. Then, since we do have others coming down, we have to get through this section by section. Can the Senator give us an idea about how much time he would like to have?

Mr. KENNEDY. Twenty minutes.

Mr. INHOFE. I would ask the Senator, if we were to go ahead and allow you 20 minutes on another subject, if someone came down, prior to that time being used, to offer an amendment, would you at that time yield the floor? It is highly unlikely that will happen, but we do want to stay on this bill.

Mr. KENNEDY. I would be glad to yield the floor for the purpose of a Senator offering an amendment, if I could retain the floor just to finish my remarks, but I would be glad to let the person offer their amendment.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I have no objection to the 20 minutes for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DEMINT). The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, first of all, I think all of us understand this Transportation bill is the No. 1 jobs bill the Senate will debate this year. Mr. President, 47,000 jobs are created for every $1 billion in this legislation. This bill would create 140,000 jobs in my own State of Massachusetts. But this bill has $34 billion less than last year's Senate bill, and, incredibly, a $1.7 billion cut in public transit. So the Senate must find a way to restore these cuts.

In my own State, we have a crucial need for this kind of help and assistance in terms of our roads and our bridges and also in terms of mass transit. It is one of the most important pieces of legislation. It is fundamental in terms of our economy. We are very conscious that there are many growth areas across this country. Those growth areas require additional kinds of investment in terms of the highway system.

But there are also other older areas where the roads are heavily used, and used much more than just by the people who inhabit that particular State. Generally, consideration is not given as to the amount of usage of many of these roads. So in many of the older States, in New England, for example, and the eastern seaboard, many of these roads are heavily used not only by those who live in those particular States but others as well. There is a very important need to make sure those roads are going to be safe for those who travel on the roads and also be safe and secure in order to add an additional dimension to our national economy.

So I am going to support this legislation. I do hope we will be able to find additional resources. I know those resources can make a major difference and be put to work effectively, in terms of strengthening and improving not only our interstate system but also the transportation systems in our States. It is a very solid investment that is paid back many times over by the returns in our economy.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE ABU GHRAIB SCANDAL

Mr. President, the sad anniversary of the Abu Ghraib torture scandal is now upon us. It is an appropriate time to reflect on how well we have responded as a nation.

The images of cruelty and perversion are still difficult to look at a year later: an Iraqi prisoner in a dark hood and cape, standing on a cardboard box with electrodes attached to his body; naked men forced to simulate sex acts on each other; a corpse of a man who had been beaten to death lying in ice next to soldiers smiling and giving a thumbs-up sign; a pool of blood from the wounds of a naked, defenseless prisoner attacked by a military dog. These images are seared in our collective memory.

The reports of widespread abuse by U.S. personnel were initially met with disbelief and then incomprehension. They stand in sharp contrast to the values America has always stood for, our belief in the dignity and worth of all people, our unequivocal stance against torture and abuse, our commitment to the rule of law. The images horrified us and severely damaged our reputation in the Middle East and around the world.

On December 4, 2003, President Bush had proclaimed to the world the capture of Saddam Hussein brought further assurance that the torture chambers and the secret police are gone forever. The photos of Abu Ghraib made all too clear that torture continued in occupied Iraq. Where are we a year later? Has this problem been resolved? Has the moral authority of the United States been restored? Have we recovered from what is perhaps the steepest and deepest fall from grace in our history?

Sadly the answer is no. Because at every opportunity, the administration has tried to minimize the problem and avoid responsibility for it. The tone was set at the very start. Senior level military commanders knew about the problems much earlier. They knew about Abu Ghraib photos as early as January 2004. General Taguba submitted his scathing report on February 26. Yet rather than deal with the problem honestly, Pentagon officials persuaded CBS News to delay its report while they developed a damage control plan.

The plan included an effort to minimize the abuse as the work of a few bad apples, all conveniently lower rank soldiers, in a desperate effort to emphasize the role of senior military officials in exposing the scandal and insulate the civilian leadership from responsibility. It was clear from the start that further investigation of the abuse was needed. The American people deserved a thorough review of all detention and interrogation policies used by military and intelligence personnel abroad and a full accounting of all officials responsible for the policies that allowed the abuses to take place.

What we got instead were nine incomplete and self-serving internal investigations by the Pentagon. None of the assigned investigators were given the authority to challenge the conduct of the civilian command. For example, the Schlesinger panel's report found that abuses were widespread and there was both institutional and personal responsibility at a higher level. But Secretary Rumsfeld did not authorize the panel to address matters of personal accountability.

The assigned investigators were also denied the cooperation of the CIA which had a central role in the torture scandal. General Fay found that CIA practices led to "a loss of accountability, abuse" and "poisoned the atmosphere at Abu Ghraib." His efforts to fully uncover the agency's role, however, were stymied by their refusal to respond to his requests for information. Indeed, no investigation, congressional or otherwise, has gotten full cooperation from the CIA.

With respect to matters under the Defense Department's control, the answers we received have been inconsistent and incomplete. In May 2004, General Sanchez categorically denied to the Senate Armed Services Committee that he had approved the use of sleep deprivation, excessive noise, and intimidation by guard dogs as interrogation techniques in Iraq. A memorandum uncovered last month by the ACLU, however, showed he had, in fact, approved the use of these techniques.

Secretary Rumsfeld told the committee the military received its first indication of trouble at Abu Ghraib when a low-ranking soldier came forward in January 2004. Only later did we learn from press reports that throughout 2003, the Red Cross had provided the military with detailed reports about torture and other abuses at the prison and elsewhere in Iraq. The State Department and the Coalition Provisional Authority also appealed to top military officials to stop the abuse during 2003.

The Church report, released last month, rejected any connection between the official interrogation policies in Iraq and the abuses that occurred. The Fay report, by contrast, blamed the abuses at Abu Ghraib on a number of "systemic problems" that included "inadequate interrogation doctrine and training" and "the lack of clear interrogation policy for the Iraq Campaign."

Other parts of the Church report, including those on the role of general counsel William Haynes in adopting the radical legal reasoning of the Justice Department's Bybee memoranda over the vigorous objections of experienced JAG officers, have been wrongly classified. In fact, the Defense Department has repeatedly abused its classification procedures to hide critical information from Congress and the public.

Similarly, the Justice Department has gone to extremes to withhold from public scrutiny legal memos it considers too embarrassing to reveal. Even Congress has been remiss in its responsibilities to oversee the scandal. As Senator ROCKEFELLER, the vice chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, said:

> More disturbingly, the Senate Intelligence Committee—the Committee charged with overseeing intelligence programs and the only one with the jurisdiction to investigate all aspects of this issue—is sitting on the sidelines and effectively abdicating its oversight responsibility to media investigative reporters.

A year after Abu Ghraib, new revelations about the abuse committed by United States personnel are still being reported frequently. The military has confirmed 28 acts of homicide committed against detainees in United States custody in Iraq and Afghanistan since 2002. Only one of these deaths took place at Abu Ghraib. The Red Cross has documented scores of abuses at United States facilities across Iraq, Afghanistan, and at the naval base at Guantanamo. FBI agents have reported "torture techniques" at Guantanamo, including techniques that senior Pentagon officials had specifically denied were being used.

Top officials in the administration have endorsed interrogation methods we have condemned in other countries, including binding prisoners in painful stress positions, threatening them with dogs, extended sleep deprivation, and simulated drownings. The administration has also increased the practice of rendering detainees to countries such as Syria, Egypt, and Jordan, countries the State Department condemned in its most recent human rights reports because of their use of torture. The practice of rendition—described by a former CIA official as "finding someone else to do your dirty work"—is a clear violation of our treaty obligations under the Convention Against Torture.

We know many of these harsh techniques are no more effective at obtaining reliable information than traditional law enforcement techniques. After considerable debate with the FBI, the military acknowledged its methods were no more successful during interrogations at Guantanamo Bay than the FBI's methods. General Miller, former commander at Guantanamo, testified the Army Field Manual provided sufficient tools for intelligence gathering.

As Ambassador Negroponte, our Nation's new intelligence czar, said:

> Not only is torture illegal and reprehensible, but even if it were not so, I don't think it's an effective way of producing useful information.

Stripped to its essence, torturing prisoners is morally wrong and unproductive. Yet political leaders made a deliberate decision to throw out the well-established legal framework that has long made America the gold standard for human rights throughout the world. The administration left our soldiers, case officers, and intelligence agents in a fog of ambiguity. They were told to take the gloves off without knowing what the limits were.

In a series of secret memos and correspondence, some of which have still not been provided to Congress, top level lawyers engaged in a wholesale rewriting of human rights laws. In rewriting our human rights laws, the administration consistently overruled the objection of experienced military personnel and diplomats.

As Secretary of State Colin Powell warned the White House:

> It will reverse over a century of U.S. policy and practice in supporting the Geneva Conventions and undermine the protections of the law of war for our troops.

Senior Defense officials were warned that changing the rules could lead to so-called "force drift," in which, without clearer guidance, the level of force applied to an uncooperative detainee might well result in torture.

When leaders didn't like what they heard, they cut off the criticism. When Secretary Powell raised concerns about the decision not to apply the Geneva Conventions to the conflict in Afghanistan, White House Counsel Gonzales cut him out of the process. When lawyers objected to the radical views in the Bybee Torture Memorandum, Defense Department General Counsel Haynes cut them out of the process and made the memo official policy for the entire military.

What happened here was not a reasoned response to 9/11—an objective reassessment of our rules and policies to account for the rise in terrorism. Instead, the leaders used 9/11 to undermine any constraints on the power of the President, and the country has been paying a high price for their arrogance ever since.

Dozens of administration memoranda involving post-9/11 detention and interrogation have come to light in the past year. Yet, in not one of these memos is there an appreciation of how well the existing rules served the Nation in past conflicts. Not one of them explains why the Army's interrogation manual, which discusses dozens of effective techniques that comply with domestic and international law, no longer serves America's interests. Not one of them comments on how compliance with the Geneva Conventions protects U.S. soldiers.

Clearly, the civilian lawyers in the Defense Department, the Justice Department, and the White House Counsel's office have been on an ideological mission. Their goal was not to reassess the current rules on detention and interrogation in light of the 9/11 attacks; their goal was to destroy them and, to a large extent, they succeeded.

The military was set adrift from its longstanding rules and traditions. The Bybee torture memorandum was eventually repudiated by the Justice Department, but the Pentagon's Working Group Report of April 2003, which incorporated the Bybee memorandum nearly verbatim, has still not been explicitly superseded, and no new guidance has gone to the field.

Our men and women in the military are still not clear whether and to what extent they should consider themselves bound by the Convention Against Torture, the Federal law prohibiting torture, or even the provisions of the Uniform Code of Military Justice that prohibit torture and cruel treatment. The basic validity of the military's "golden rule"—treat captured enemy forces as we would want our own prisoners of war to be treated—is in doubt.

The President has directed the military to treat detainees "humanely," but this directive has not provided adequate guidance to our troops. General Counsel Haynes himself advised Secretary Rumsfeld that simulated drowning, forced nudity, the use of dogs to create stress, threats to kill a detainee's family, and other extreme tactics all qualified as "humane." When the Pentagon's top civilian lawyer shows so little respect for human dignity, how can we expect more from our soldiers serving in the field?

As for the CIA, it was conspicuously excluded from the President's directive on humane treatment. More recently, we have learned that the administration does not believe that the prohibition against cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment applies to foreigners held by our government agencies abroad. The CIA concealed detainees from the Army and the Red Cross. It continues to send dozens of detainees to countries known to practice torture. It says it's conducting its own investigation into the abuses, but it refuses to provide a timetable or any preliminary findings. No agency should be above the law. The CIA must answer for its activities.

Accountability for the torture scandal continues to be lacking.

We know about the prosecutions of the low-level, "bad apple" soldiers involved in the abuse at Abu Ghraib. But prosecutions have been declined for other soldiers, including 17 implicated in the deaths of three prisoners in Iraq and Afghanistan. Not a single CIA official has been charged, although one private contractor is awaiting trial for the killing of a detainee in Afghanistan.

Even more disturbing, no action—criminal, administrative, or otherwise—has been taken against the high civilian officials responsible for the authorization of torture and mistreatment by U.S. officials in Iraq, Afghanistan, Guantanamo, and elsewhere. We know about the actions that have been taken against Charles Graner and Lynndie England. But what about William Haynes, Alberto Gonzales, Jay Bybee, John Yoo, David Addington, Douglas Feith?

These officials were warned of the consequences of undoing the rules before they changed them. They were informed of the objections to use of these harsh techniques. The FBI, the Naval Criminal Investigative Service, and the British all refused to participate in interrogations because they had such grave concerns about the brutal methods. Finally, one brave soldier, Joseph Darby, acknowledged that what was happening was wrong.

Far from being held accountable, some of these officials have been promoted. Bybee, who signed the notorious Justice Department memorandum redefining torture, was confirmed to a lifetime judgeship on a Federal appellate court. Haynes, the general counsel who made the Bybee memorandum official policy for the military, has been re-nominated for another appellate judgeship. Gonzales now serves as the Nation's Attorney General.

Last weekend, the Army's Inspector General revealed he had exonerated almost all of its top officers of any responsibility for abuse of detainees at Abu Ghraib, even though one of them, Lieutenant General Sanchez, explicitly approved the use of severe interrogation practices, and even though a review by former Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger found that General Sanchez and his deputy "failed to ensure proper staff oversight of" the operations at Abu Ghraib.

What signal does this pattern of prosecutions for low-ranking soldiers, exonerations for generals, and promotion for civilians send to our men and women in the Armed Services, and to our veterans?

The torture scandal is not going away on its own. Our Nation will continue to be harmed by the reports of abuse of detainees in U.S. custody, the failure by top officials to take action, and the abandonment of our basic rules and traditions on human rights.

The scandal directly endangers U.S. soldiers and U.S. civilians abroad. We no longer demand that those we capture in the war on terrorism be treated as we treat prisoners of other wars. What will we say to a country that justifies its torture of a U.S. soldier by citing our support for such treatment? How can we hold other nations accountable for their own human rights violations, when we continue to hold prisoners for years, without charging them or convicting them of anything?

The Nation's standing as a leader on human rights and respect for the rule of law has been severely undermined.

We cannot simply answer, as some have done, that the behavior is acceptable because terrorists do worse. By lowering our standards, we have reduced our moral authority in the world. The torture scandal has clearly set back our effort in the war on terrorism. It is fueling the current insurgency in Iraq. Even our closest allies, such as Great Britain, have raised objections to our treatment and rendition of detainees.

Al-Qaida is still the gravest threat we face. The widespread perception that the U.S. condones torture only strengthens the ability of al-Qaida and others to create a backlash of hatred against America around the world. If we do not act to locate official responsibility for Abu Ghraib, we will condone a new status quo in which our policy toward torture is technically one of zero tolerance, while de facto our officials tolerate and commit torture daily.

Many of us were struck by the rhetoric in President Bush's Inaugural Address. "From the day of our founding," he said, "we have proclaimed that every man and woman on this earth has rights, and dignity, and matchless value, because they bear the image of the Maker of Heaven and earth." Many of us would like to work with the President to develop a foreign policy that advances these important values. But rarely has the gulf between a President's rhetoric and his administration's actions been so wide. It is simply not possible to reconcile his claim that "America's belief in human dignity will guide our policies" with the barbaric acts that have been committed in America's name.

We must not allow inaction to undermine two bedrock principles of human rights law that we worked hard to establish at Nuremberg: that higher officials cannot escape command responsibility and lower officials cannot excuse their actions by claiming that they were "just following orders."

It is time to come to terms with the continuing costs of the torture scandal, and respond effectively. We need to fully restore the Nation's credibility and moral standing, so that we can more effectively pursue the Nation's interests in the future.

First, we must acknowledge that the rule of law is not a luxury to be abandoned in time of war, or bent or circumvented at the whim and convenience of the White House. It is a fundamental safeguard in our democracy and a continuing source of our country's strength throughout the world.

Sadly, a recent National Defense Strategy policy contained this remarkable statement: "Our strength as a nation state will continue to be challenged by those who employ a strategy of the weak using international fora, judicial processes, and terrorism." Who could have imagined that our Government would ever describe "judicial processes" as a challenge to our national security—much less mention it in the same breath as terrorism? Such statements do not reflect traditional conservative values, and they are clearly inconsistent with the ideals that America has always stood for here and around the world.

Second, we must acknowledge and apply the broad consensus that exists against torture and inhumane treatment.

Never before has torture been a Republican versus Democrat issue. Instead, it's always been an issue of broad consensus and ideals, reflecting the fundamental values of the Nation, and the ideals of the world.

President Reagan signed the Convention Against Torture in 1988. The first President Bush and President Clinton supported its ratification. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, led by Senator Jesse Helms, voted 10–0 in 1994 to recommend that the full Senate approve it. The Clinton administration adopted a "zero tolerance" policy on torture. Torture became something that Americans of all political affiliations agreed never to do.

And 9/11 didn't nullify this consensus. We did not resolve as a Nation to set aside our values and the Constitution after those vicious attacks. We did not decide as a Nation to stoop to the level of the terrorists, and those who did deserve to be held fully accountable.

Americans continue to be united in the belief that an essential part of winning the war on terrorism and protecting the country for the future is safeguarding the ideals and values that America stands for at home and around the world.

That includes the belief that torture is still beyond the pale. The vast majority of Americans strongly reject the cruel interrogation tactics used in Iraq, Afghanistan, and Guantanamo—including the use of painful stress positions, sexual humiliation, threatening prisoners with dogs, and shipping detainees to countries that practice torture. The American people hold fast to our most fundamental values. It is time for all branches of the Government to uphold those values as well. It is clear beyond a doubt that we cannot trust this Republican Congress or this Republican administration to conduct the full investigation that should have been conducted long before now. We have had enough whitewashes by the administration and Congressional committees.

Finally, to implement these values, we need a full and independent investigation of our current detention, rendition, and interrogation policies, including an honest assessment of what went wrong in Iraq, Afghanistan, and Guantanamo.

The investigation will require genuine candor and cooperation by all officials and agencies in the Bush administration, full accountability, a clear statement of respect for human rights, and a plan for protecting those rights throughout the Government. Only a truly independent and thorough investigation can restore America's reputation and put us back on the right path to the future.

The challenges we face in the post-9/11 world are obvious, and the stakes are very high. Working together, we have met such challenges before, and I am confident we can do so again. I urge all of my colleagues, on both sides of the aisle, to join to protect the rule of law, protect our soldiers serving abroad, and restore America's standing in the world.

Mr. President, this has never been a partisan issue. We have a number of conventions on torture and other commitments that this Nation has made under Republican Presidents and Republican leaders in the important committees of the Congress. We have had very clear leadership by Republicans and Democrats at other times in our history in terms of adhering to what they call the "golden rule." The golden rule is based on a very fundamental and important concept, which is we do not want others to treat our soldiers harshly and, therefore, we will not treat other soldiers harshly. The principal point underneath that is, even if we treated people harshly and went through the process of torture, the information that you gain as a result of torture is rarely as good as what interrogators who are using and conforming to the Geneva Conventions get.

It is time for the United States to return to its better hours on this issue, and it is time that we not hold the privates and corporals accountable. But after 9 investigations by the Defense Department without a single prosecution, after we have more than 20 individuals who have actually been beaten or tortured to death and a determination by the administration that not a single person is going to face discipline, it is time that we take action.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, the regular order of business is the Transportation bill. We will proceed now. It is our desire to discourage people from coming down to the Senate floor until we have started receiving these amendments. There is no more important piece of legislation that we will consider this year than the Transportation bill. I am prepared to go through it section by section. I will certainly yield to the ranking minority member, Senator JEFFORDS.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I thank the Chairman. I have a brief statement I would like to put in.

Mr. President, when you live in Vermont, you must endure a long, hard winter.

To keep spirits up, a Vermonter will look for signs of spring, sometimes in the most unlikely places.

One leading indicator of brighter days ahead is a phenomenon known as the frost heave.

As temperatures rise, highways begin to buckle, producing humps in the road that rattle your teeth and mangle your shocks. Highway workers post bright orange signs to warn drivers of upcoming frost heaves. To a Vermonter, these signs are like the first flowers in bloom.

As the seasonal changes unfold, the frost heaves recede and the paved roads return to their more normal state. Unfortunately, that is often a state of disrepair. Bridges share this sorry condition, due to effects of weather, wear and tear.

The cure is major maintenance, reconstruction or replacement. But that costs money, a lot of money.

For more than the 3 years now, we have been working to reauthorize the highway program—because our transportation challenges are many.

The bill before us is a good one. it may not include all the funding it deserves. but it does move us forward. This bill addresses many very important issues facing our roads and highways. Safety is my highest priority.

Last year, Vermont experienced the highest number of fatalities on its highways since 1998. Ninety-seven people died in automobile crashes, up from 69 in 2003.

Nationally, we have made real progress on highway safety over the last 10 years.

According to the U.S. Department of Transportation, the rate of fatalities has declined from 1.9 to 1.5 deaths per million vehicle miles traveled. But the number of fatalities has held steady at roughly 42,000 per year. That number is unacceptable.

This bill is not only an investment in our highways, it is an investment in public safety.

And we know congestion in this country is bad and getting worse. Congestion costs Americans more than $69.5 billion annually in lost time and productivity; 5.7 billion gallons of fuel are wasted each year while motorists sit in traffic.

One way to reduce congestion, is to move goods by freight and we are moving more freight in this country than ever before.

The forecast for future demand is daunting, with U.S. DOT projecting that the volume of freight will increase 70 percent by 2020.

This bill will expand freight capacity through new partnerships, investments and market financing techniques.

The highway program expired nearly 2 years ago, and the States have been operating under series of short-term extensions.

This has disrupted construction programs, delayed safety improvements and interrupted funding to transit operators.

It is time to act on this bill. The next sign of spring in Vermont after the frost heave is something known as mud season. You can tell from the name that it's not a lot of fun.

Moving a highway bill over the coming weeks will feel at times like mud season but at the other end a brighter day.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President. I thank the Senator and certainly agree with his remarks.

Once again, the ranking member and I request anyone who has amendments to come down to the floor. We are open for amendments at this time on this very significant piece of legislation.

Let me go through section by section and explain what we have in the bill.

Section 1203 is freight transportation gateways, freight intermodal connections. I think it is important we realize—and we said this earlier this morning—back when the first legislation came to our attention—that was back during the Eisenhower administration—they were talking about roads and highways. Now this has become intermodal, to take care of all the needs in transporting people and goods around the country.

Freight movement in America is expected to grow dramatically in both volume and value over the coming decades. Throughout reauthorization, the Environment and Public Works Committee heard concerns about inadequate freight facilities, insufficient capacity, and inefficient connections.

In December 2003, the GAO released a report on freight transportation that recommended strategies needed to address planning and financing limitations. The report noted that the major challenges to freight mobility all shared a common theme—congestion—including overcrowded highways and freight specific chokepoints. Additionally, the GAO reported two main limitations that stakeholders encounter in addressing these challenges. They first related to the limited visibility that freight projects receive in the planning and prioritization process. SAFETEA directly addresses this problem by creating a freight transportation coordinator at the State level to facilitate public and private collaboration in developing solutions to freight transportation and freight gateway problems. The bill also ensures that intermodal freight transportation needs are integrated into project development and planning processes.

The second limitation reported by the GAO was that Federal funding programs tend to dedicate funds to a single mode of transportation or nonfreight purpose, thus limiting freight project eligibility among some programs. SAFETEA, or the bill we have before us today, addresses this problem by making intermodal freight projects eligible for STP and NHS funding.

The Freight Gateways Program under this bill promotes intermodal improvements for freight movement through significant trade gateways, ports, hubs, and intermodal connectors to the National Highway System. States and localities are encouraged to adopt new financing strategies to leverage State, local, and private investments in freight transportation gateways, thus maximizing the impact of each Federal dollar. The Freight Gateway Program is funded from a set-aside of 2 percent of each State's NHS proportions. However, in the spirit of State flexibility and ensuring that funds go to the areas of the greatest need, a State is not required to spend 2 percent of the NHS apportionment if they can certify to the Secretary that their intermodal connectors are adequate.

I think my colleagues see all throughout this bill that we are granting more latitude for the States to determine their fate. It is a recognition that the States know their needs better than we know them in most cases. Consequently, if they can do something better, why dictate something from the Federal Government when they are able to do a better job themselves.

Section 1204 is construction of ferry boats and ferry terminal facilities. TEA-21 established a discretionary program for the construction of ferry boats and ferry terminal facilities. This bill creates a new permanent section in title 23 for this TEA-21 program. The program is designed to provide for the important construction of ferry boats, ferry terminals, and approaches to facilities that are part of the Nation's highway system and constitute "last mile" connections for ferries.

Section 1205 is designation of interstate highways. As part of this bill, Interstate Highway 86 in the State of New York is specifically designated as the Daniel Patrick Moynihan Interstate Highway in memory of our late colleague and friend who was not only a transportation safety expert but served his country in the House and Senate for many years.

It is important at this time to recognize that Daniel Patrick Moynihan was also the chairman of this committee that accomplished so much in the earlier years. And unbeknownst to most people on the committee, Daniel Patrick Moynihan was from my city of Tulsa, OK. So I am very supportive of this portion of the bill to make this designation for him.

This section also designates a segment of Interstate Highway 86 near towns of Painted Post and Corning in New York State as the Amo Houghton Bypass in recognition of the former Congressman's work in making I-86 possible. It is interesting, we have a Democrat and Republican getting these designations. It happens that I was elected in 1986 with Amo Houghton. He has made great contributions, and I am sure this is a very appropriate tribute to make to former Congressman Amo Houghton.

Section 1301, the Federal share. SAFETEA continues the statutory provisions that lay out what the Federal share for a highway project will be for different States based on the amount of Federal land within the States. The Federal share provisions of the current law use a sliding scale which permits States with large portions of Federal land to match Federal funds with fewer State dollars. This is understandable because the Federal lands would consume a good portion of some States, States such as New Mexico. Due to the decreasing taxing ability of States with high percentages of Federal lands, these States are given access to a higher Federal contribution for highway projects within their States.

The bill before us today modifies this provision slightly to simplify the calculation used to determine the Federal share rates that apply to each individual State. I might add, in this respect, this is something we found agreement with from both the States with large amounts of Federal land and States, such as my State of Oklahoma, that has a very small amount.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, as we go through section by section, we talked about congestion, but we neglected to elaborate because this is one of the more serious problems we have now. According to the Department of Transportation, time spent in congestion increased from 31.7 percent in 1992 to 33.1 percent in 2000. Based on this rate, a typical rush hour in an urbanized area is 5.3 hours a day. The problem is not simply in urban areas. Cities with populations less than 500,000 have experienced the greatest growth in travel delays, according to the DOT.

Very often we do not talk enough about the cost. Right now we are sensitive to the cost of fuel. Yet we can see traffic stopped, with engines idling. This is another factor that has to be entered into the equation.

Increase in capital investment is one way to address congestion. We must also consider ways to better manage existing systems. This bill proposes a national goal of real-time traffic information available for the entire Nation. This goal, while ambitious, is important because we need to reorient our thinking to recognize the importance of allowing users of the system to utilize the system more efficiently, specifically by providing travelers with usable information that will enable them to select the right travel alternative plans.

The biggest and fasting growing cause of congestion in our urban centers is bottlenecks around port and intermodal facilities. Frankly, traffic is expected to grow dramatically in volume in the coming decades with increased international trade. Movement toward the just-in-time economy, freight shipping, will take on heightened importance.

Recently I visited with representatives of the Alameda Corridor Transportation Authority and they shared with me that more than 40 percent of all waterborne freight container traffic in the U.S. ports is handled by the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach. My first thought was, how does this trade through the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach affect my constituents in Oklahoma? The answer surprised me. It is estimated that over 100,000 jobs in Oklahoma are attributable to the trade from these ports. That is one example of two ports. I suspect if I had statistics from other ports, I would find that economic development in Oklahoma is tied as closely to them, as well.

We are part of a global economy. This illustrates more than anything, goods and services produced in Oklahoma are being shipped all over the world. Likewise, Oklahomans are purchasing goods and services from countries all over the world. The simple fact is that trade is the engine driving our economy. We cannot ignore the infrastructure needs.

It is worthwhile stating that one of the best kept secrets is we have actually a port that goes all the way to Oklahoma, the port of Catoosa in my hometown. I remember many years ago when I was serving in the State Senate when we were trying to get the message out that we actually are navigable, we have a port that comes all the way up. No one knows it. They do not think about that in Oklahoma. It goes up the Mississippi River from the gulf and comes across the Arkansas River and into Oklahoma. At that time we decided we wanted to let people know of our great port and the navigation that cost billions of dollars to reach all the way to Oklahoma, the most inland port, only to find the way to do this is to demonstrate it. I actually arranged to take over from the Navy a very large World War II surplus submarine called the USS Batfish.

All my political adversaries were saying, we will sink INHOFE with this Batfish. It will never make it all the way to Oklahoma. We were able to bring it all the way. Now proudly displayed in Muskogee, OK, is a World War II submarine that came all the way up the navigation route. So I think it is important. I thought I would throw that out in case somebody did not know it.

Section 1302 is the transfer of highway funds and transit funds. In an effort to provide flexible transportation funding, SAFETEA clarifies—by the way, SAFETEA is what we will refer to during the consideration of this bill. This name could be subject to change when we get to conference. But this bill clarifies that title 23 funds may be transferred by the Secretary to the Federal Transit Authority for all projects except transit capital projects. It also allows States to transfer their funds to another State or a Federal agency at their request, if the funds are used in the same manner and for the same purpose as they were originally authorized.

Section 1303 is the Transportation Infrastructure Finance and Innovation

Act, or TIFIA. This is very significant. We talked about it a little bit earlier, that people come up with new ways of approaching the funding for transportation, and ways that are innovative, ways that are partnering with the private sector, that can be much better than the way we have been doing business for the last 40 years.

The Transportation Infrastructure Finance and Innovation Act, TIFIA, was established for the first time in TEA-21 to provide Federal credit assistance for major transportation investments. The TIFIA program has proven to be an innovative and successful addition to the conventional grant-reimbursable highway program. Following the success of the TIFIA program under TEA-21, and considering input from stakeholders and recommendations from the administration, the committee bill has made a few changes to the TIFIA program to expand its scope and increase its usability.

The amount of the Federal credit assistance cannot exceed 33 percent of the total project costs. TIFIA offers three types of financial assistance for these large projects: first, direct loans; second, loan guarantees; and, third, standby lines of credit. The bill also lowers the threshold cost for eligible projects from the TEA-21 level of $100 million to $50 million to make the TIFIA assistance accessible to a greater number of large highway projects.

Projects are also eligible for TIFIA assistance when costs are anticipated to equal or exceed 20 percent of the Federal highway funds apportioned to that particular State. With the increased emphasis this bill places on freight mobility, the definition of "eligible freight-related projects" is expanded to allow a group of freight-related projects to be eligible, each of which individually might not meet the threshold requirements for TIFIA credit assistance.

Section 1304 is facilitation of international registration plans and international fuel tax agreements. In response to issues surrounding commerce from Mexico, SAFETEA gives the Secretary of Transportation discretion to provide financial assistance to States participating in the International Registration Plan, the IRP, and the International Fuel Tax Agreement. These States incur certain administrative costs resulting from their service as a home jurisdiction for motor carriers from Mexico.

The International Fuel Tax Agreement and the International Regional Plan are agreements among various U.S. States and Canadian provinces that facilitate the efficient collection and distribution of fuel use taxes and apportioned registration fees among each member jurisdiction. Under both programs, each motor carrier designates its home State or province as the jurisdiction responsible for collecting fuel use taxes and fees.

Since the implementation of NAFTA, the Mexican Government imposes and collects fuel taxes and registration fees differently from the United States and Canada. The National Governors Association is currently evaluating Mexico and its participation in these two programs. In the interim, Mexican motor carriers may use individual U.S. States or Canadian provinces as their home jurisdiction.

Mr. President, I pause here to say to the majority leader and the minority leader, we appreciate very much our ability to go ahead and bring this bill to the floor. Again, we are asking Members, if they have amendments, bring them down. We are eventually going to run out of time, and we want to consider these amendments in a timely fashion. I think we are pressing it right now. We are going to try very hard to have this new bill passed before the expiration of the extension.

I might add, this is the sixth extension we have had, and it does expire on May 31. We want an opportunity to be able to handle this legislation so we will not have to ask for another extension.

It seems to me—and I have been asked a lot of questions as to what our timing looks like right now—we ought to be able to handle amendments through the remainder of the week. Then we will go into a 1-week recess. At the conclusion of that recess, on Monday, the 9th of May, we will continue to look at amendments. It would be my intention to file a cloture motion so we can get to a final vote. Certainly, we have had adequate time, and there does not seem to be that much interest right now in coming down to the floor and offering amendments. That would enable us to send this bill to conference sometime toward the end of that week of May 9. Then we would get to the conference.

It has been our experience in the past that if it is done properly, we ought to be able to get the conferees to agree to some compromises, if necessary, between the House bill and the Senate bill. They are quite different. We have explained the basic differences, and the philosophy of the House, the philosophy of the Senate. Ours, I believe, is a more responsible way of looking at it. Having served 8 years in the Transportation Committee over in the House, at that time that seemed to be something that was workable.

But we ultimately have to come to an agreement. We ultimately have to go to conference and iron out the differences. We have a lot to consider in conference. It is my expectation we will go to conference with an amount that will exceed the current limitation of the bill that is before us today, that amount being $284 billion over the remainder of the 6-year period. However, I do not know that to be the case. If it is the case, then we will have to handle that in conference and make that determination.

In conference, we are also going to have to be looking at the approach to a number of projects. You hear people talking quite often, saying this is a big highway bill, there is a lot of pork in it. I tell you, there is no pork in this bill. There are no projects in this bill. There are only two projects in the entire bill, which consists of hundreds and hundreds of pages. Consequently, it is done on formula. We have talked about the formula, all the considerations that are made by the formula: the donee status, the donor status, the growth factors that go into the various States, the densely populated States, the sparsely populated States. All make for a very equitable approach.

I believe we have a bill that will be able to be passed and sent to conference, and we will be able to come back from the conference and then have it signed into law by the of May 31. If we do not do that, and if we ask for another extension, we will be at the time of year for the peak construction season, which would merely mean we would lose very valuable time. I am sure in the States of Oklahoma, South Carolina, and other States, that is a very important consideration.

With that, I anticipate there may be more Senators who wish to come down and offer amendments. I am hoping they will at this time.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHAMBLISS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO MR. PEYTON HEADY

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a fellow Kentuckian who has done the important work of keeping a piece of the Commonwealth's history alive by chronicling the events of the county he is proud to call home, Union County.

Mr. Peyton Heady has written and published 25 books that cover some aspect of the county's history. He has a particular interest in how people from Union County were involved in the Civil War. One such story involves Tom Henry, a Union County native who managed to stop the notorious outlaws, Frank and Jesse James from robbing a bank in Morganfield. Mr. Henry convinced the James brothers that he had friends who had money in the bank and they wouldn't want to lose it. This story could have been lost in the annals of history, but it won't be because of Peyton Heady's thorough research and documentation.

Another piece of Union County history that Mr. Heady has taken an interest in is that of Camp Breckinridge. As a former clerk in the civil engineering division at the camp during World War II, Mr. Heady has first-hand experiences to share and draw from. Later this week he will be honored by the Earle C. Clements Job Corps Center, located on Camp Breckinridge property, for keeping a record of the history of Camp Breckinridge. The Center will name one of the camp administration buildings the Peyton Heady Building.

I urge my colleagues to join me in giving Mr. Heady the thanks of a grateful Commonwealth and a grateful Nation. Thanks to his dedication, the history of Kentucky shall be preserved. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article from The Henderson Gleaner "Making History: Chronicler of Union County Events Honored for Keeping Memories Alive," about Mr. Heady's contributions to his community.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Henderson Gleaner, Mar. 13, 2005]

MAKING HISTORY: CHRONICLER OF UNION COUNTY EVENTS HONORED FOR KEEPING MEMORIES ALIVE

(By Judy Jenkins)

Tom Henry was one of those bigger than life characters who would, if he were alive today, be gracing the cover of "People" magazine and artfully answering questions lobbed at him by Larry King.

Tom was a handsome Union County native who served as a captain in the Confederate army and, legend has it, managed to earn the respect of those infamous outlaws Frank and Jesse James. The James brothers spent a considerable amount of time in Morganfield during the Civil War, and at one point Frank—the story goes—was planning to rob a bank there.

Our hero Tom learned of those plans and convinced Frank to forego the robbery by telling him that he had some good friends who had money in that bank and he'd sure hate for them to lose it.

On another, darker occasion, a Yankee colonel was captured and tied to a tree. Apparently a couple of the captors were planning a short future for the Northerner, but Tom informed them they'd have to walk over his own dead body to harm the colonel.

In a twist that Hollywood would love, Tom was captured and after the war was taken to Louisville to stand trial for his life. The Yankee colonel, by amazing coincidence, walked into the courtroom, recognized Tom as the captain who saved his life, and got the Union Countian released.

That's just one of the many accounts in Peyton Heady's 1985 "Union County History in the Civil War." The 252-page book makes what could be dry, dusty descriptions of past events come alive for the reader.

Peyton, who wrote the history because he was concerned that little had been written about Union County's involvement in the Civil War, noted that about 60 percent of the county's population supported the Confederate cause and families were often divided.

There were, for instance, the Lambert brothers who fought in opposing armies, survived the war and never again spoke to each other—but are buried side by side in a Union County cemetery.

The book is one of 25 written and published by Peyton over the decades, and they all cover some aspect of Union County history. Some are genealogical volumes and some record the county's cemeteries, including obscure resting places. While surveying those cemeteries, the retired U.S. Postal Service employee found the graves of seven Revolutionary War soldiers with monuments intact.

Peyton, who was a clerk in the civil engineering division at Camp Breckinridge during World War II, also wrote the history of the sprawling camp that contained 36,000 acres, had housing for 30,000 troops and 10,000 additional personnel, boasted its own utility systems and airstrip, had 12 dispensaries and hospitals, nearly seven miles of railroad, a simulated "Japanese training village," four movie theaters and much, much more.

Four divisions from that Army post fought in the Battle of the Bulge; and the camp contributed a number of major units that played a significant role in breaking down the Nazi fortress.

It was at the camp that Peyton watched a young African American soldier named Jackie Robinson play baseball, and it was there he supervised 150 German prisoners of war.

For the price of a box of Cuban cigars, one of those prisoners painted Peyton's portrait. The painting hangs in the Morganfield home of Peyton and Cecilia, his wife of 53 years and mother of their two children, James Heady and Rebecca Heady Gough.

On April 28, Peyton no doubt will feel he's come full circle in his life. On that day, one of the camp administration facilities will be named the Peyton Heady Building. The 11 a.m. dedication ceremony is part of the 40th anniversary celebration of the Earle C. Clements Job Corps Center, which is on the Camp Breckinridge property.

Peyton, 79, is being saluted largely for his determination to keep the history of Camp Breckinridge from passing into obscurity. He opted to undertake that history when he learned that government archives contained a one- page description of the giant complex that was last used as a military installation in 1963.

He is touched by the upcoming honor, but he'll have you know that the thousands of hours of patient research and writing his books weren't for praise or glory. "I just think if you're going to live in a town and raise your children in a town you should do something to make it better," he says.

Things he's done include working with Morganfield's Little League program for more than two decades.

Peyton is on a walker now and doesn't often leave his home, but he isn't complaining. "I'm a happy man," he says. "I'm happy with my marriage (which naysayers said would never work because Cecilia's Catholic and he's Methodist), happy with my family and happy with my life."

His histories have sold well and seven or eight have been reprinted, but Peyton hasn't gotten rich from the sales.

"I didn't write them for profit," he says. "I wrote them for history."

TRIBUTE TO LUTHER DEATON, JR.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to commend an accomplished Kentuckian and good friend, Mr. Luther Deaton, Jr. A native of Breathitt County, KY, Mr. Deaton is an esteemed banker, revered community leader, inspiring mentor, and caring father.

Luther began his career in the banking industry as an assistant manager and teller with Central Bank & Trust Co. in Lexington in 1978. Little did he know that initial exposure would lead to a lifetime of professional achievements. Possessed with a resolute and unshakeable determination to advance his employer's cause, Luther rapidly rose through the company's ranks. In January 1996, the Board of Directors promoted Luther to president and CEO of Central Bank, and in March 2002, he was named chairman of the bank. He also serves as the chairman of Commerce Lexington, Inc., which seeks to expand and attract economic development in central Kentucky.

While Central Bank has flourished under Luther, it is his leadership presence in central Kentucky I admire most. His formidable array of accomplishments directly results from his passion to improve the quality of life for his fellow Kentuckians. In September 1997, the Lexington Theological Seminary named Luther as the second recipient of the John R. Wooden Award, an honor given to layman whose life shows commitment to, and active involvement in, a faith community and evidence of putting one's faith to work for the welfare of humankind. In 2001, he was the recipient of the Governor's Economic Development Leadership Award for the State of Kentucky. Additionally, the Junior Achievement of the Bluegrass inducted Luther into the 2004 Bluegrass Business Hall of Fame, due to his labor and vision to improve the quality of life in the Bluegrass area.

Later this month, Luther will be the honoree at the Volunteers of America Tribute Dinner in Lexington, KY. Here the community will have an opportunity to thank him for all of his contributions and honor his achievements.

Mr. President, today I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring and recognizing one of Kentucky's pre-eminent professionals, Mr. Luther Deaton, Jr.

ROSEMARY VITAVEC

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate Rosemary Vitavec, a third grade teacher at Walter Bracken

Magnet School in Las Vegas, who was selected as one of 95 winners from across the Nation for the Presidential Award for Mathematics and Science Teaching for 2004.

The awards were created in 1983 and are administered by the White House and the National Science Foundation. Each year the program recognizes outstanding mathematics and science teachers from across the United States and four U.S. jurisdictions for their contributions in the classroom and to their profession.

This distinction highlights the fundamental importance of math and science education in preparing our Nation's students for the global economy. It also highlights the outstanding work done at Bracken Magnet School in emphasizing math and science learning with technology.

Mrs. Vitavec, a 23-year veteran, has taught in the Clark County School District for 12 years.

I salute Rosemary Vitavec for her service and dedication to the students of Clark County, and extend my best wishes for a successful future.

SCHOOL SAFETY PATROLLERS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize several young people who were recently selected by the American Automobile Association to receive special awards for their work as school safety patrollers.

More than 500,000 students in 50,000 schools across the country participate in AAA's School Safety Patrol program. These young people have taken on the important responsibility of making the streets around their schools safer for their classmates. Though their responsibilities are often routine, the patrollers on occasion must place themselves in harm's way in order to save lives. It is my honor today to recognize six students who were selected to receive the AAA Lifesaver Award for their selfless and heroic actions in fulfilling their duties as patrollers as well as the National Patroller of the Year.

The first AAA Lifesaver Award recipient is Jessica Zeiter, a 10-year-old student at Huron Park Elementary School in Roseville, MI. On February 9, 2004, Jessica was on a patrol when a pickup truck driver sped on icy snow in heavy traffic. The driver probably could not have stopped even if he had seen the small first grade student step into the street, but fortunately Jessica quickly grabbed the student by the coat and pulled her back to safety. Others who were at the crosswalk that day thought the child was going to be hit and were shocked that she was saved.

The second AAA Lifesaver Award recipient is Michelle Grimm, a 12-year-old student at Weems Elementary School in Manassas, VA. On March 5, 2004, a kindergarten student fell off of the sidewalk and was lying directly in the path of a school bus. The student was struggling to get up but could not regain his balance because of his heavy book bag. The bus driver did not see the child lying in the street, but Michelle ran to the student's aid, helping him out of the way of the approaching bus.

The third AAA Lifesaver Award recipient is Estefan Santos, a 10-year-old student at Jackson Road Elementary School in Silver Spring, MD. On September 10, 2004, a 6-year-old child broke free from his sister's care and ran to cross the street towards her father who was waiting in his car. Estefan realized that the 6-year-old was not going to stop at the corner and held him back from the approaching traffic. Though bitten and kicked while holding the 6-year-old back, Estefan undoubtedly saved the child's life that day.

The fourth AAA Lifesaver Award recipient is also from Maryland. Her name is Pytrce Avonnia Farmer, and she is a student at Eva Turner Elementary School in Waldorf. On October 4, 2004, a 6-year-old child was waiting on the street curb under Pytrce's direction. The child's mother, however, moved her car forward into the second lane of traffic, and the child stepped into the street without noticing another car approaching. Pytrce acted quickly and bravely to pull the child from the path of the car. The child's mother has said that her son would not be alive today if not for Pytrce.

The fifth AAA Lifesaver Award recipient is Jared Smith, an 11-year-old student at Combee Elementary School in Lakeland, FL. On January 7, 2005, a 7-year-old student dashed past the group of children who were waiting for a van to pick them up, darting out into the path of the van. Fortunately, Jared stopped her before she was hit, though the van was only a few feet away.

The sixth AAA Lifesaver Award recipient is Naomi Wall, an 11-year-old student at Dan Emmett Elementary School in Mount Vernon, OH. On March 19, 2004, a 5-year-old student named Braden walked into the road, obeying a walk sign though against his sister Naomi's patrol flag telling him to stop. At the same time, a car had run a red light and was headed right for a car going through the intersection. Had Naomi not held her brother back by the arm, he would have been in the middle of the crash.

In addition to honoring these six brave patrollers, AAA also recognizes one student as National Patroller of the Year for demonstrating leadership qualities, strong academic performance, and civic involvement. This year, the National Patroller of the Year is Deanna Constantino, a fifth grader at Cross Street School in Williston Park, NY. Deanna is a member of the student council, serves on the school newspaper, has been a Girl Scout for 4 years, and participates in charitable fundraising activities through her school. Deanna, like all the other safety patrollers recognized by AAA, is clearly an impressive young person with tremendous potential.

I also thank AAA for making the school safety program possible. The program has helped save many lives over the years and has made our schools safer for our students, though, as the stories of the Lifesaver Award recipients demonstrate, the streets around our schools are not safe enough. That is why I have worked for the last 2 years to create a national Safe Routes to School program. This program would fund safety improvements on roads near schools so that children can safely walk or ride their bicycles to school. I hope Congress passes my program this year, but whether or not it does, I am comforted to know that 500,000 AAA patrollers across the Nation will be working hard to keep the streets around our schools safe.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR JEFFORDS

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I spoke on the floor last week to briefly recount some of the many reasons that Vermont and the Nation will miss the leadership, the independence and the decency of Senator JIM JEFFORDS when he chooses to retire from the Senate at the end of his current term.

Since then there have been many news articles and editorials that have also catalogued and described various aspects of JIM JEFFORDS' distinguished legacy. As is often the case when he writes about the events and issues of the day, Emerson Lynn, the publisher of the St. Albans Messenger in my home State of Vermont, did this particularly well. I would like to share his editorial with the members of the Senate.

I ask unanimous consent that Emerson Lynn's recent editorial about Senator JEFFORDS be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the St. Albans Messenger, Apr. 21, 2005]

JEFFORDS LEAVES BEFORE HIS TIME, ACCOMPLISHES MUCH

Senator Jim Jeffords, who turned Washington's political world upside down 4 years ago with his defection from the Republican Party, Wednesday turned Vermont's political world upside down with his announcement not to seek reelection.

He said it was time to begin a new chapter in a life that for 38 years has been dominated by an election cycle that began as a state senator from Rutland in 1967, to Attorney General in 1969, to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1974 to the United States Senate in 1988. He has represented Vermont in one office or another for almost four decades. If that is a chapter, most our lives can be explained in a paragraph.

Wednesday's announcement was the sad affirmation of what many of those close to the Senator had feared: his health is less than optimum and his wife, Liz, is battling cancer and about to undergo a third round of chemotherapy. At some point the question is more akin to the clap of thunder to our better senses: is being senator worth one's health; is it worth not being able to pay the proper attention to one's wife who is battling cancer, and, is the twilight of one's life best spent with one's children, and an expected grandchild, or with the churlish likes of Tom DeLay and the hard right that have stolen a sense of civility and class from the Senate? For anyone not suffering from the hubris that often comes attached to the position, the choice is clear and Jim Jeffords made that choice with grace and perspective.

He also did the honorable thing politically. He announced his retirement with sufficient time for both parties to give thoughtful consideration as to how to approach the November 2006 race. He could have waited. He didn't, and in so doing reinforced the integrity that has characterized his career.

And his has been a remarkable career. The history books will undoubtedly begin their biographies noting the impact of his May, 2001 decision to bolt from a Republican party he said had left its moorings. But the senator's accomplishments extend far beyond one's party allegiance. As Vermont's attorney general he played a pivotal role in the implementation of Act 250, and the law to outlaw billboards. No Vermont politician has had a greater impact on dairy farming, nor does any politician have a better understanding of the industry and its needs. There isn't a single bit of legislation dealing with special education [or education in general] that doesn't have his fingerprints on it in one fashion or another. The same can be said of his years in the Senate when dealing with the environment. He was also a passionate defender of the arts. What he has accomplished will endure beyond fame's notoriously short life.

It's axiomatic that this was not the choreographed conclusion of his choosing. His desire was to win reelection as an independent, thereby vindicating a personally wrenching decision to leave the Republican Party. Life's bows cannot be so neatly tied and those who try find them but ropes of sand that disintegrate in the twisting.

Sadly, we are in an age that exploits one's natural fissures as though they were fatal flaws of one's character. One's vulnerabilities are extrapolated into insurmountable deficiencies, as if there were only sun and no shadows, all light, no darkness. The senator knows only too well how that game is played. The Yale/Harvard educated man will be known more for a twisted tongue than a clear mind, as if being articulate were a higher calling than being thoughtful.

In the end, it's not what others think of you but the joy you carry in your toil. And, in the end, it is Mr. Jeffords that wears the smile, not his accusers. He is like Sisyphus in Albert Camus' "Myth of Sisyphus", the character in Greek mythology who was condemned for eternity to roll a boulder up a hill, only to have it roll back down again. Camus made the convincing argument that Sisyphus' lot was not tragic, but uplifting. He could smile at the absurd because he understood it as such.

Camus concluded by writing: "I leave Sisyphus at the foot of the mountain! One I always finds one's burden again. But Sisyphus teaches the higher fidelity that negates the gods and raises rocks. He too concludes that all is well. This universe henceforth without a master seems to him neither sterile nor futile. Each atom of that stone, each mineral flake of that night filled mountain, in itself forms a world. The struggle itself toward the heights is enough to fill a man's heart. One must imagine Sisyphus happy."

We imagine Mr. Jeffords' heart is full and that he is happy. He should be remembered as such.

The clamor to claim his political perch has begun and din, at times, will overwhelm. What Vermonters can hope for is that all followers choose Mr. Jeffords' path of integrity and independence.

90TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE ARMENIAN GENOCIDE

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President. I rise today to acknowledge and commemorate April 24, 2005, the 90th anniversary of the beginning of the Armenian Genocide and to urge all Americans to join together to ensure that these crimes never happen again.

On April 24, 1915, the Ottoman Empire began arresting hundreds of Armenian intellectuals, most of whom were subsequently executed. What soon followed can only be described as a tragedy that shocked the human conscience: by some estimates, over a million Armenians were killed, and another 500,000 were driven from their homes. These events marked the 20th century's first experience with such atrocities, and, sadly, they would not be the last.

Maya Angelou, the famous poet and civil rights activist once said:

> History, despite its wrenching pain, cannot be unlived, but if faced with courage, need not be lived again.

Indeed it is our duty to remember this horrific tragedy, and face the crimes of humanity with unflinching determination, courage, and moral fortitude so that they never happen again.

As a country founded on the principles of justice, equality, and liberty, the United States must take a leadership role in preventing genocide.

I am proud that the Armenian American community in my home State of California—over 500,000 strong—has taken such a leadership role in ensuring that the U.S. lives up to its values by acknowledging the crimes of the past and taking action against the crimes of the present and future. Their determination and perseverance is a testament to the human spirit and the ability to overcome injustice and build a better tomorrow.

Today, we stand with the Armenian American community in commemorating the start of the Armenian Genocide, and together we stand with those around the world who face persecution and even death simply because of who they are. They must know they are not alone and those who commit these crimes must know we are watching.

We will never forget the Armenian Genocide as we look to the future with courage and determination.

FEDERAL REFUSAL CLAUSE

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I oppose the Federal refusal clause. The Republican leadership was wrong to include such a broad refusal clause in the fiscal year 2005 Omnibus Appropriations bill. The clause was never voted on by the Senate Appropriations Committee; it was inserted into the bill behind closed doors.

The clause would allow health care firms to refuse to comply with existing Federal, State, and local laws and regulations that pertain to abortion services, counseling, and referrals.

Supporters of the clause claim it simply clarifies existing law. But far from clarifying it, sweeping new changes would be enacted that would be devastating to women's health.

The reality is that no Federal law forces individuals to provide abortion care. The Church amendment, adopted in 1973, enacted a new refusal clause. It explicitly protects individuals who object to providing abortion because of their religious beliefs or moral convictions. Broader refusal clauses, such as the Federal refusal clause, exempt a wide range of organizations, including health plans and hospitals, most of which not only have a secular purpose but also employ and serve individuals who do not share those organizations' religious beliefs.

The Federal refusal clause also discourages States from enforcing its own policies, laws and regulations to protect access to abortion services and information. Republicans continually attack Democrats as proponents of big government who undermine State rights. Yet that is exactly what the Federal refusal clause does.

Forty-six States, including Massachusetts, already have laws that permit certain medical personnel, health facilities, and institutions to refuse to participate in abortion because of their moral or religious beliefs.

We don't need the Federal refusal clause to protect individuals and health care organizations that oppose abortion, we already have that. It exists in both Federal and State laws. Proponents want the Federal refusal clause for one reason—to deny access and information to as many women as possible.

Health care corporations now have the right to gag their doctors and other health care providers. The clause defines "discrimination" as any requirement that a medical service provider inform a woman about her option to seek an abortion—or even refer her to another plan for that information. It's ridiculous to say that giving a woman full information about her medical options is discrimination.

The Federal refusal clause also restricts low-income women's access to abortion services, including information about abortion. It could prohibit the Federal Government from enforcing the requirement that Title X funded family planning clinics provide a woman facing an unintended pregnancy with an abortion referral when she requests one. We will be taking a giant step backward if we don't repeal this refusal clause.

In addition, under the "Hyde Amendment," States are required to provide Medicaid coverage for abortions in cases of rape, incest, or where pregnancy endangers a women's life. The Federal refusal clause, however, could prevent states from requiring that Medicaid HMOs provide or pay for these abortions.

Current law states that low-income women should not be denied critical medical care. Why do we want to change that? What kind of signal are we sending? Women who have suffered through the trauma of rape or incest deserve our help, not an extra burden.

The Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act guarantees that a woman who needs an emergency abortion procedure to save her life won't be turned away. Yet the Federal refusal clause could allow hospitals to turn away women in these dire circumstances. For a woman in a rural area, with only one hospital, her life itself may be in danger if the hospital refuses to admit her.

It is wrong to deny women access to necessary and urgently needed medical procedures. The Federal refusal clause should never have been included in the fiscal year 2005 Omnibus Appropriations bill, and I commend Senator BOXER for speaking against this provision.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

JUST BORN, INC.

• Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, today I would like to congratulate Just Born, Inc. in Bethlehem, PA, on an outstanding accomplishment, shipping Peanut Chews nationwide for the first time. Pennsylvanians should be honored to have a wonderful company such as Just Born in our State, and I join in congratulating Just Born on their recent accomplishment.

Until the Spring of 2003, Peanut Chews were produced by the Goldenberg Candy Company. The Goldenberg Candy Company was founded in Philadelphia in 1890 by David Goldenberg and called D. Goldenberg, Inc. Beginning as a retail confection business, which produced and sold fudge, marshmallow, lollipops, and chocolates, Goldenberg's also created a walnut molasses confection that later became the foundation for the Peanut Chews recipe.

As we all know, Peanut Chews offer a unique combination of a chewy peanut and molasses based center with a dark chocolate coating, making for a tasty candy. Just stop by my desk on the Senate floor to see for yourself.

Peanut Chews were developed during World War I and used by the U.S. military as a ration bar. The high energy, high protein recipe and unique taste made it popular with the troops. Following the war, Peanut Chews were first sold in the Philadelphia area of Pennsylvania. However, their popularity soon spread to New York, Baltimore, and Washington, DC.

In the 1930s, Peanut Chews were sold under the brand name Chew-ets and were often sold in movie theaters. The name stuck until 1999 when the Goldenberg's changed the packaging and the name of Chew-ets to Milk Chocolatey Peanut Chews.

Just Born purchased the Goldenberg Candy Company in 2003, adding the Goldenberg's 61 associates to the already growing Just Born family. Just Born produces two million Peanut Chews candy pieces every day.

This month, April 2005, Peanut Chews will be launched nationally, for the first time reaching beyond to the East Coast. This is quite an achievement, and I send Just Born my best wishes in the future as their company continues to expand.•

ONCOLOGY NURSING DAY AND MONTH

• Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to oncology nurses. May 1 marks the beginning of the 10th annual Oncology Nursing Day and Month and this year marks the 30th Anniversary of the Oncology Nursing Society.

As co-chair of the Senate Cancer Coalition, I know oncology nurses play an important and essential role in providing quality cancer care. These nurses are principally involved in the administration and monitoring of chemotherapy and the associated side effects patients experience. As anyone ever treated for cancer will tell you, oncology nurses are intelligent, well-trained, highly skilled, kind-hearted angels who provide quality clinical, psychosocial, and supportive care to patients and their families. In short, they are integral to our Nation's cancer care delivery system.

I congratulate the Oncology Nursing Society, ONS, on its 30th anniversary. ONS is the largest organization of oncology health professionals in the world, with more than 31,000 registered nurses and other health care professionals. Since 1975, ONS has been dedicated to excellence in patient care, teaching, research, administration, and education in the field of oncology. The society's mission is to promote excellence in oncology nursing and quality cancer care. To that end, ONS honors and maintains nursing's historical and essential commitment to advocate for the public good by providing nurses and health care professionals with access to the highest quality educational programs, cancer-care resources, research opportunities and networks for peer support. ONS has three chapters in my home State of Kansas, which help oncology nurses provide high-quality cancer care to patients and their families in our State.

Cancer is a complex, multifaceted, and chronic disease, and people with cancer are best served by a multidisciplinary health care team specialized in oncology care, including nurses who are certified in that specialty. Each year, in the United States, approximately 1.37 million people are diagnosed with cancer, another 570,000 lose their battles with this terrible disease, and more than 8 million Americans count themselves among a growing community known as cancer survivors. Every day, oncology nurses see the pain and suffering caused by cancer and understand the physical, emotional, and financial challenges that people with cancer face throughout their diagnosis and treatment.

Over the last 10 years, the setting where treatment for cancer is provided has changed dramatically. An estimated 80 percent of all cancer patients receive care in community settings, including cancer centers, physicians' offices, and hospital outpatient departments. Treatment regimens are as complex, if not more so, than regimens given in the inpatient setting a few short years ago. Oncology nurses are involved in the care of a cancer patient from the beginning through the end of treatment, and they are the front line providers of care by administering chemotherapy, managing patient therapies and side effects, working with insurance companies to ensure that patients receive the appropriate treatment, provide counseling to patients and family members, in addition to many other daily acts on behalf of cancer patients.

I thank all oncology nurses for their dedication to our Nation's cancer patients, and commend the Oncology Nursing Society for all of its efforts and leadership over the last 30 years. They have contributed immensely to the quality and accessibility of care for all cancer patients and their families, and I urge my colleagues to support them in their important endeavors.•

HONORING DANVILLE HIGH SCHOOL

• Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, it is with the greatest pleasure that I rise today to honor Danville High School which was recently selected to receive the 2005 GRAMMY Signature School Enterprise Award. The GRAMMY Signature School Program recognizes the top public high schools in the Nation that have made an outstanding commitment to music education during the school year. The GRAMMY Foundation will award Danville High School $20,000 to benefit its music program.

I commend the Danville Music Department personnel—Alana Smith, head band director and department head; Julianna Sommers, choir/elementary director; and Julie Rutherford, assistant band director, for their vision, but most of all for their commitment to provide such a quality music education to the young people of Danville.

I would also like to recognize the following students for their contributions to the Danville High School Music Program: Jessica Harris, Dana Mendoza, Jasimen Fedison, Jessica Bryant, Patrice Davis, Marlene Mendoza, Yvette Huerta, Daniel Melton, Aaron Sanders, Devon Essman, Nicholas Patterson, Joe Claudio, Baillie Villareal, Anna Garza, Jose Ojeda, Mayra Iracheta, Tiffaney Small, Ashley Hancock, Samantha Turner, Heather Gooch, Akoshua Davis, Janet Claudio, Jorge Mendoza, Vikki Xayadeth, and Margarita Dominguez.

I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating Danville High School and these outstanding teachers and students on receiving this well-deserved honor.●

IN RECOGNITION OF RACHEL SIMON

● Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, I rise today in recognition of Rachel Simon and her extraordinary book, Riding the Bus with my Sister. The book chronicles the time her developmentally disabled sister Beth spends riding the bus. It brings to light the world of adults with developmental disabilities, finds unlikely heroes in everyday life, and discovers unrealized inner strength.

Rachel Simon was born in 1959 in Newark, NJ, the second of four children. Her family moved around New Jersey and Pennsylvania several times when she was a child, and Rachel, who was always a very social, creative person, wrote mountains of letters to keep up with all her distant friends. She also wrote short stories, novels, and plays, which she enjoyed sharing with others.

Rachel graduated from Solebury School, a boarding school in New Hope, PA, in 1977. She then went on to Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania. During her years in college, she discovered the secrets of discipline and time management. She was also captivated by her courses in anthropology and graduated in 1981.

After college, Rachel moved to Philadelphia, where she spent the next 5 years at a variety of jobs, including paralegal, administrative assistant, and research supervisor for a television study. At 26, she entered a graduate program in creative writing.

In the next several years, Rachel wrote the story collection Little Nightmares, Little Dreams and the novel The Magic Touch. From her house in Abington, PA, she began teaching private classes in creative writing. In 1995, Rachel took a job running events at the Barnes & Noble in Princeton, NJ, and eventually moving to that area.

Around that time, Rachel also began writing commentary for the Philadelphia Inquirer and teaching at Bryn Mawr College, in addition to continuing with her private classes. In 1997, she published The Writer's Survival Guide and then worked on some long pieces of fiction.

As readers of Riding the Bus with my Sister know, Rachel's life changed when she wrote an article about her sister Beth's unusual lifestyle of riding the buses in the city where she lives. Over the course of riding with Beth for the next year, Rachel came to leave most of her jobs behind, found her way back to her sister, and rediscovered her friendships.

In May 2005, Riding the Bus with my Sister will be televised as a Hallmark Hall of Fame movie on CBS. Rosie O'Donnell is starring as Beth, Andie MacDowell is starring as Rachel, and Anjelica Huston is directing.

Both Rachel and her sister Beth are amazing women, and I rise today to honor them.●

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The following petition or memorial was laid before the Senate and was referred or ordered to lie on the table as indicated:

POM–56. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Maine relative to the Togus Veterans Affairs Medical Center; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

Joint Resolution

Whereas the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Togus, Maine, is the oldest facility operated by the United States Department of Veterans Affairs in the country, having been operated in 1866; and

Whereas the Togus Veterans Affairs Medical Center provides general medical, surgical and mental health services to our nation's veterans; and

Whereas the Togus Veterans Affairs Medical Center is the only United States Department of Veterans Affairs medical center in Maine, a large and rural state; and

Whereas the State of Maine has a large population of military veterans, with more returning from Iraq, Afghanistan and elsewhere around the globe every day; and

Whereas a cut in funding for the Togus Veterans Affairs Medical Center would be devastating to the medical center's ability to provide basic health care services to our nation's veterans: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, respectfully urge and request that the United States Congress support the Togus Veterans Affairs Medical Center as a vital resource in serving our nation's military veterans and providing veterans in Maine with much-needed and deserved health care services accessible from all points in the State; and be it further

Resolved, That suitable copies of this resolution, duly authenticated by the Secretary of State, be transmitted to the Honorable George W. Bush, President of the United States, to the President of the Senate of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and to each Member of the Maine Congressional Delegation.

At the request of Mr. WARNER, the name of the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. LIEBERMAN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 765, a bill to preserve mathematics- and science-based industries in the United States.

S. 852

At the request of Mr. SPECTER, the names of the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. VITTER) and the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM) were added as cosponsors of S. 852, a bill to create a fair and efficient system to resolve claims of victims for bodily injury caused by asbestos exposure, and for other purposes.

S. 881

At the request of Ms. CANTWELL, the names of the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN) and the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. DORGAN) were withdrawn as cosponsors of S. 881, a bill to provide for equitable compensation to the Spokane Tribe of Indians of the Spokane Reservation for the use of tribal land for the production of hydropower by the Grand Coulee Dam, and for other purposes.

S. RES. 117

At the request of Mrs. FEINSTEIN, the names of the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. SPECTER), the Senator from

AMENDMENT NO. 517

At the request of Mr. CORZINE, the names of the Senator from Ohio (Mr. DEWINE), the Senator from Florida (Mr. NELSON), the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY), the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHNSON), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. BINGAMAN), the Senator from New York (Mr. SCHUMER), the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. COLEMAN), the Senator from Vermont (Mr. LEAHY), the Senator from Oregon (Mr. WYDEN), the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN), the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. LAUTENBERG), the Senator from Washington (Mrs. MURRAY), the Senator from Vermont (Mr. JEFFORDS), the Senator from Illinois (Mr. OBAMA), the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. NELSON), the Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER), the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. SPECTER), the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. KOHL), the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU), the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. FEINGOLD), the Senator from Indiana (Mr. BAYH), the Senator from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN), the Senator from Illinois (Mr. DURBIN), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. LIEBERMAN), the Senator from New York (Mrs. CLINTON), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. SALAZAR) and the Senator from Missouri (Mr. TALENT) were added as cosponsors of amendment No. 517 proposed to H.R. 1268, an act making Emergency Supplemental Appropriations for Defense, the Global War on Terror, and Tsunami Relief, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2005, and for other purposes.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. MCCAIN (for himself, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. STEVENS, and Mr. SMITH):

S. 900. A bill to reinstate the Federal Communications Commission's rules for the description of video programming; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Television Information-Enhancement for the Visually Impaired (TIVI) Act of 2005. This bill would require television broadcasters, during at least 50 hours of their prime time or children's programming every quarter, to insert verbal descriptions of actions or settings not contained in the normal audio track of a program. This can be accomplished through technology commonly referred to as "video description services," which allows television programming to be more accessible and enjoyable for the visually impaired.

This bill is necessary due to a 2002 decision by District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals. In 2000, the Federal Communications Commission ("FCC" or "Commission"), recognizing the need to make television programming accessible to the visually impaired, promulgated rules that mandated television broadcast stations and their affiliates, which met certain market requirements, provide 50 hours of video descriptions during prime time or children's programming every calendar quarter. Television programmers challenged the Commission's authority to promulgate such rules. The Circuit Court held that the Commission did not have authority to issue the regulations.

This bill would provide the Commission the authority to promulgate such regulations and reinstate the FCC's video description rules issued in 2000. Additionally, the bill would require the FCC to consider whether it is economically and technically feasible and consistent with the public interest to include "accessible information" in its video description rules, which may include written information displayed on a screen, hazardous warnings and other emergency information, and local and national news bulletins.

Since the spectrum that television broadcasters utilize is a public asset, one would expect that programming over the public airwaves is accessible to all Americans. Unfortunately, that is not the case today and that is why we must pass the TIVI Act. I sincerely hope that television broadcasters will work with us to provide video descriptions for individuals with visual disabilities.

By Mr. LAUTENBERG (for himself and Mr. CORZINE):

S. 904. A bill to designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 1560 Union Valley Road in West Milford, New Jersey, as the "Brian P. Parrello Post Office Building"; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to and remember Lance Cpl Brian P. Parrello, a resident of West Milford, NJ, who died January 1, 2005, while serving with the U.S. Marines in Iraq. I was privileged to attend this brave young man's funeral in West Milford on January 8, 2005, and I was moved by the outpouring of grief for LCpl Parrello.

In honor of this young Marine's life, I have introduced a bill to rename the facility at 1560 Union Valley Road in West Milford, NJ as the "Brian P. Parrello Post Office Building." Senator CORZINE is a cosponsor of this legislation.

I would like to note that the renaming of this postal facility as the "Brian P. Parrello Post Office Building" was initiated by the West Milford Township Council, who wished to honor LCpl Parrello in this way. This is especially fitting since LCpl Parrello's father, Nino Parrello, is a letter carrier in West Milford. I am proud to be able to assist in the commemoration of his life by helping with the renaming process.

LCpl Parrello served in the Small Craft Company of the 2nd Marine Division's II Marine Expeditionary Force, which was based at Camp Lejeune, NC. During his service in Iraq, he was attached to a Marine Swift Boat unit that patrolled the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. He was killed New Year's Day as a result of hostile action in Hadithah, northwest of Baghdad.

During his too-short life, LCpl Parrello made a lasting impression on those around him. A graduate of West Milford High School in 2003, he was an athlete who played hockey and football, and he was voted to have "Most School Spirit" by his classmates. As those who knew him have attested, LCpl Parrello was a history buff who dreamed of becoming a history teacher.

LCpl Parrello's route to military service is the result of an admirable choice. He felt such a sense of duty after the September 11 attacks that he delayed going to college, and instead he enlisted in the Marines before his graduation from West Milford High School.

Tragically, LCpl Parrello died just a few days before his 19th birthday. We can commemorate the life of this extraordinary young man by quickly passing this bill to rename the postal facility in his hometown after him.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 904

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. BRIAN P. PARRELLO POST OFFICE BUILDING.

(a) DESIGNATION.—The facility of the United States Postal Service located at 1560 Union Valley Road in West Milford, New Jersey, shall be known and designated as the "Brian P. Parrello Post Office Building".

(b) REFERENCES.—Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the facility referred to in subsection (a) shall be deemed to be a reference to the "Brian P. Parrello Post Office Building".

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 905. A bill for the relief of Heilit Martinez; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a private relief bill for Miss Heilit Martinez. As my colleagues know, private relief is available in rare instances. I believe that the circumstances surrounding Miss Martinez's case are extraordinary and merit the introduction of private legislation. Therefore, I am pleased to introduce this legislation today.

Miss Martinez was brought into the U.S. with her parents when she was about two years of age and has lived in Utah since that time. It is important to note that Miss Martinez did not make the decision to enter this country as a young child nor did she decide to overstay a visa, and she was led to believe that she had legal status. Miss Martinez was raised and educated in the United States and is currently a straight A student at Utah State University.

Last year, Miss Martinez and a group of her college friends traveled into Mexico for a short day of sightseeing. When questioned at the port of entry, Miss Martinez declared that she had not been born in the United States but had legal immigration status. However, when she could not produce legal documentation, it was discovered that Miss Martinez was undocumented. She was detained for some days prior to her release.

For all intents and purposes, Miss Martinez does not have a country to which to return. The United States is her home. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to support the passage of this legislation to help Miss Martinez on the path of becoming a lawful, permanent resident.

Ms. CANTWELL (for herself and Mrs. MURRAY):

S. 906. A bill to promote wildland firefighter safety; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, Governor Gregoire has already declared a drought in Washington State and I know my colleagues and I remain very concerned about what appears to be yet another year of devastating drought throughout the West, and the hazards this could pose in terms of increased fire risk and threats to public safety.

But today, I want to focus the majority of my comments on a topic that I have focused on and hope my colleagues will pay close attention to as the 2005 fire season approaches. That's the issue of wildland firefighter safety.

Many of my colleagues are probably aware of the fact that every summer, we send thousands of our constituents—many of them brave young men and women, college students on summer break—into harm's way to protect our Nation's rural communities and public lands. These men and women serve our Nation bravely.

Since 1910, more than 900 wildland firefighters have lost their lives in the line of duty. These firefighters represented a mix of Federal and State employees, volunteers and independent contractors. And they lost their lives for an array of reasons. We all realize that fighting fires on our Nation's public lands is an inherently dangerous business. But what we cannot and must not abide are the preventable deaths—losing firefighters because rules were broken, policies ignored and no one was held accountable.

A number of my colleagues will recall that, in 2001, this issue was pushed to the fore in the State of Washington, because of a horrible tragedy. On July 10, 2001, near Winthrop in Okanogan County, in the midst of the second worst drought in the history of our State, the Thirtymile fire burned out of control.

Four courageous young firefighters were killed. Their names: Tom Craven, 30 years old; Karen FitzPatrick, 18; Jessica Johnson, 19; and Devin Weaver, 21.

Sadly, as subsequent investigations revealed, these young men and women did not have to die. In the words of the Forest Service's own report on the Thirtymile fire, the tragedy "could have been prevented." At that time, I said that I believe we in Congress and management within the firefighting agencies have a responsibility to ensure that no preventable tragedy like Thirtymile fire ever happened again.

I would like to thank my colleague Senator BINGAMAN, the distinguished Ranking Member of the Senate Energy Committee, as well as Senator WYDEN, who was then chair of the Subcommittee on Public Lands and Forests. In the wake of the Thirtymile fire, they agreed to convene hearings on precisely what went wrong that tragic day. We heard from the grief-stricken families.

In particular, the powerful testimony of Ken Weaver—the father of one of the lost firefighters—put into focus precisely what's at stake when we send these men and women into harm's way.

I can think of no worse tragedy than a parent confronting the loss of a child, especially when that loss could have been prevented by better practices on the part of federal agencies.

At the Senate Energy Committee hearing, we also discussed with experts and the Forest Service itself ways in which we could improve the agency's safety performance. And almost a year to the day after those young people lost their lives, we passed a bill—ensuring an independent review of tragic incidents such as Thirtymile that lead to unnecessary fatalities.

Based on subsequent briefings by the Forest Service, revisions to the agency's training and safety protocols, and what I've heard when I have visited with firefighters over the past 2 years, I do believe the courage of the Thirtymile families to stand up and demand change has had a positive impact on the safety of the young men and women who are preparing to battle blazes as wildland firefighters.

Yet, I'm deeply saddened by the fact that it's clear we haven't done nearly enough. In July 2003—2 years after Thirtymile—two more firefighters perished, this time at the Cramer fire within Idaho's Salmon-Challis National Forest. Jeff Allen and Shane Heath were killed when the fire burned over an area where they were attempting to construct a landing spot for firefighting helicopters.

After the Thirtymile fire, however, I told the Weavers and the Cravens, the families of Karen FitzPatrick and Jessica Johnson that I believed we owed it to their children to identify the causes and learn from the mistakes that were made in the Okanogan, to make wildland firefighting safer for those who would follow. That is why the findings associated with the Cramer fire simply boggle my mind.

We learned at Thirtymile that all ten of the agencies' Standing Fire Orders and many of the 18 Watch Out Situations—the most basic safety rules—were violated or disregarded. The same thing happened at Cramer, where Heath and Allen lost their lives 2 years later.

After the Thirtymile Fire, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) conducted an investigation and levied against the Forest Service five citations for Serious and Willful violations of safety rules. It was eerie, then, when just in March 2004 OSHA concluded its investigation of Cramer. The result: another five OSHA citations, for Serious, Willful and Repeat violations.

Reading through the list of causal and contributing factors for Cramer and putting them next to those associated with the Thirtymile fire, my colleagues would be struck by the many disturbing similarities. Even more haunting are the parallels between these lists and the factors cited in the investigation of 1994's South Canyon Fire on Storm King Mountain in Colorado.

It's been more than a decade since those 14 firefighters lost their lives on Storm King Mountain—and yet, the same mistakes are being made over and over again.

These facts have also been documented by an audit and memorandum issued last September by the Department of Agriculture's Inspector General. The IG found that "accidents on the South Canyon, Thirtymile, and Cramer Fires, all of which involved fatalities, could have been avoided if certain individuals had followed standard safety practices and procedures in place at the time."

The IG also noted that the Forest Service "has not timely implemented actions to improve its safety programs." Some 27 of 81 action items identified as a result of the Storm King and Thirtymile Fires—or roughly a third—had not been fully implemented years later. While I know that the IG is monitoring implementation of some of these items, the stark similarities between Storm King, Thirtymile, and

Cramer make it seem positively astounding that the Forest Service still finds my bill "not necessary."

I don't believe that's acceptable. The firefighters we send into harm's way this year—and the ones we've already lost—deserve better.

Training, leadership and management problems have been cited in all of the incidents I've discussed. Frankly, I have believed since the Thirtymile tragedy that the Forest Service has on its hands a cultural problem. What can we do, from the legislative branch, to provide this agency with enough motivation to change? I believe the first step we can take is to equip ourselves with improved oversight tools, so these agencies know that Congress is paying attention. Today I'm re-introducing legislation—the Wildland Firefighter Safety Act of 2005—that would do just that.

I believe this is a modest yet important proposal. It was already passed once by the Senate, as an amendment to the 2003 Healthy Forests legislation. However, I was disappointed that it was not included in the conference version of the bill. But it is absolutely clear to me—particularly in light of OSHA's review of the Cramer Fire—that these provisions are needed now more than ever.

First, the Wildland Firefighter Safety Act of 2005 will require the Secretaries of Agriculture and Interior to track the funds the agencies expend for firefighter safety and training.

Today, these sums are lumped into the agencies' "wildfire preparedness" account. But as I have discussed with various officials in hearings before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, it is difficult for Congress to play its rightful oversight role—ensuring that these programs are funded in times of wildfire emergency, and measuring the agencies' commitment to these programs over time—without a separate break-down of these funds.

Second, it will require the Secretaries to report to Congress annually on the implementation and effectiveness of its safety and training programs.

Congress has the responsibility to ensure needed reforms are implemented. As such, I believe that Congress and the agencies alike would benefit from an annual check-in on these programs. I would also hope that this would serve as a vehicle for an ongoing and healthy dialogue between the Senate and agencies on these issues.

Third, my bill would stipulate that federal contracts with private firefighting crews require training consistent with the training of federal wildland firefighters. It would also direct those agencies to monitor compliance with this requirement.

This is important not just for the private contractor employees' themselves—but for the Federal, State and tribal employees who stand shoulder-to-shoulder with them on the fire line.

The Wildland Firefighter Safety Act of 2005 is a modest beginning in addressing the challenges posed by integrating private and federal contract crews—and doing it in a manner that maximizes everyone's safety on the fire line.

I hope my colleagues will support this simple legislation. Ultimately, the safety of our Federal firefighters is a critical component of how well prepared our agencies are to deal with the threat of catastrophic wildfire.

Congress owes it to the families of those brave firefighters we send into harm's way to provide oversight of these safety and training programs.

We owe it to our Federal wildland firefighters, their families and their State partners—and to future wildland firefighters.

My bill will provide this body with the additional tools it needs to do the job.

S. 908. A bill to allow Congress, State legislatures, and regulatory agencies to determine appropriate laws, rules, and regulations to address the problems of weight gain, obesity, and health conditions associated with weight gain or obesity; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 908

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Commonsense Consumption Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS; PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the food and beverage industries are a significant part of our national economy;

(2) the activities of manufacturers and sellers of foods and beverages substantially affect interstate and foreign commerce;

(3) a person's weight gain, obesity, or a health condition associated with a person's weight gain or obesity is based on a multitude of factors, including genetic factors and the lifestyle and physical fitness decisions of individuals, such that a person's weight gain, obesity, or a health condition associated with a person's weight gain or obesity cannot be attributed solely to the consumption of any specific food or beverage; and

(4) because fostering a culture of acceptance of personal responsibility is one of the most important ways to promote a healthier society, lawsuits seeking to blame individual food and beverage providers for a person's weight gain, obesity, or a health condition associated with a person's weight gain or obesity are not only legally frivolous and economically damaging, but also harmful to a healthy America.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to allow Congress, State legislatures, and regulatory agencies to determine appropriate laws, rules, and regulations to address the problems of weight gain, obesity, and health conditions associated with weight gain or obesity.

SEC. 3. PRESERVATION OF SEPARATION OF POWERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A qualified civil liability action may not be brought in any Federal or State court.

(b) DISMISSAL OF PENDING ACTIONS.—A qualified civil liability action that is pending on the date of the enactment of this Act shall be dismissed immediately by the court in which the action was brought or is currently pending.

(c) DISCOVERY.—

(1) STAY.—In any action that is allegedly of the type described in section 4(5)(B) seeking to impose liability of any kind based on accumulative acts of consumption of a qualified product, the obligation of any party or non-party to make disclosures of any kind under any applicable rule or order, or to respond to discovery requests of any kind, as well as all proceedings unrelated to a motion to dismiss, shall be stayed prior to the time for filing a motion to dismiss and during the pendency of any such motion, unless the court finds upon motion of any party that a response to a particularized discovery request is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice to that party.

(2) RESPONSIBILITY OF PARTIES.—During the pendency of any stay of discovery under paragraph (1), the responsibilities of the parties with regard to the treatment of all documents, data compilations (including electronically recorded or stored data), and tangible objects shall be governed by applicable Federal or State rules of civil procedure. A party aggrieved by the failure of an opposing party to comply with this paragraph shall have the applicable remedies made available by such applicable rules, provided that no remedy shall be afforded that conflicts with the terms of paragraph (1).

(d) PLEADINGS.—In any action that is allegedly of the type described in section 4(5)(B) seeking to impose liability of any kind based on accumulative acts of consumption of a qualified product, the complaint initiating such action shall state with particularity—

(1) each element of the cause of action;

(2) the Federal and State statutes or other laws that were allegedly violated;

(3) the specific facts alleged to constitute the claimed violation of law; and

(4) the specific facts alleged to have caused the claimed injury.

(e) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—No provision of this Act shall be construed to create a public or private cause of action or remedy.

SEC. 4. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) ENGAGED IN THE BUSINESS.—The term "engaged in the business" means a person who manufactures, markets, distributes, advertises, or sells a qualified product in the person's regular course of trade or business.

(2) MANUFACTURER.—The term "manufacturer" means, with respect to a qualified product, a person who is lawfully engaged in the business of manufacturing the product.

(3) PERSON.—The term "person" means any individual, corporation, company, association, firm, partnership, society, joint stock company, or any other entity, including any governmental entity.

(4) QUALIFIED PRODUCT.—The term "qualified product" means a food (as defined in section 201(f) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 321(f)).

(5) QUALIFIED CIVIL LIABILITY ACTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), the term "qualified civil liability action" means a civil action brought by any person against a manufacturer, marketer, distributor, advertiser, or seller of a qualified product, or a trade association, for damages, penalties, declaratory judgment, injunctive or declaratory relief, restitution, or other relief arising out of, or related to a person's accumulated acts of consumption of a qualified product and weight gain, obesity, or a health condition that is associated with a person's weight gain or obesity, including an action brought by a person other than the person on whose weight gain, obesity, or health condition the action is based, and any derivative action brought by or on behalf of any person or any representative, spouse, parent, child, or other relative of that person.

(B) EXCEPTION.—A qualified civil liability action shall not include—

(i) an action based on allegations of breach of express contract or express warranty, provided that the grounds for recovery being alleged in such action are unrelated to a person's weight gain, obesity, or a health condition associated with a person's weight gain or obesity;

(ii) an action based on allegations that—

(I) a manufacturer or seller of a qualified product knowingly violated a Federal or State statute applicable to the marketing, advertisement, or labeling of the qualified product with intent for a person to rely on that violation;

(II) such person individually and justifiably relied on that violation; and

(III) such reliance was the proximate cause of injury related to that person's weight gain, obesity, or a health condition associated with that person's weight gain or obesity; or

(iii) an action brought by the Federal Trade Commission under the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.) or by the Federal Food and Drug Administration under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 301 et seq.).

(6) SELLER.—The term "seller" means, with respect to a qualified product, a person lawfully engaged in the business of marketing, distributing, advertising, or selling a qualified product.

(7) STATE.—The term "State" includes each of the several States of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and any other territory or possession of the United States, and any political subdivision of any such place.

(8) TRADE ASSOCIATION.—The term "trade association" means any association or business organization (whether or not incorporated under Federal or State law) that is not operated for profit, and 2 or more members of which are manufacturers, marketers, distributors, advertisers, or sellers of a qualified product.

By Mr. DODD:

S. 909. A bill to expand eligibility for governmental markers for marked graves of veterans at private cemeteries; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill that will restore the rights of all veterans and their families to receive an official grave marker of the Department of Veterans Affairs. This legislation addresses an unfortunate inequity that exists for veterans who passed away during the period between November 1, 1990 and September 11, 2001.

It may come as a shock to my colleagues to learn that while all other veterans are entitled to the VA's official grave markers, current law forbids veterans who passed away during this eleven year period from being so honored.

This situation is unacceptable and must be remedied.

Nearly one year ago today, the National World War II Memorial was unveiled to the public. Countless Americans who have passed its 50 stone pillars since that time have been reminded of the courage and sacrifice of the men and women who served our country, at its time of greatest need.

But as Senator Bob Dole stated at its dedication ceremony, the World War II Memorial is not a tribute to war and conflict. Rather, he said, "it's a tribute to the physical and moral courage that makes heroes out of farm and city boys and that inspires Americans in every generation to lay down their lives for people they will never meet, for ideals that make life itself worth living."

Indeed, monuments like the World War II Memorial serve as a reminder of the service, sacrifice and dedication of our veterans. The 4,000 stars resting on the Wall of Freedom remind us that too many paid the ultimate price.

Many Americans have a similar experience when they visit the grave of a former veteran—often a friend or relative. Most of these grave sites have markers paying tribute to the veteran's service. We place flags by their side on Memorial Day. Until 1990, moreover, the family of a deceased Veteran could receive reimbursement for a VA headstone, a VA marker, or a private headstone. However, in the name of cost-cutting, measures were taken to prevent the VA from providing markers to those families that had purchased gravestones out of their own pockets.

In my view, this measure was a serious injustice. Nearly all families today provide for some gravestone or other privately purchased marker following the death of a relative. Yet most were unaware of the new VA regulation. Many veterans were buried without any official recognition of their service to our country. As of 2001, the VA estimated that it was forced to deny nearly 20,000 requests for such markers every year.

This body first endorsed a provision restoring the right of every veteran to receive a grave marker as early as June 7, 2000 as part of the fiscal year 2001 Defense Authorization Bill. This body approved this language again on December 8, 2001. But it was not until December 6, 2002 that legislation was signed into law as part of the Veterans Improvement Act allowing VA markers to be provided to deceased veterans retroactively. Unfortunately, however, when the bill went to a conference with the House of Representatives, this benefit was only applied retroactively to September 11, 2001 rather than to November 1, 1990, the date at which the new VA regulation came into effect. Veterans who passed away between those two dates were cut out.

That decision has never satisfied me or many veterans and their families. Why should one veteran receive recognition, while the family of another is told that there is nothing our government can do simply because of the date of their passing?

My legislation will correct this inequity. This bill is simple. It ensures that all veterans who have passed away since 1990 are able to receive a VA grave marker.

It is inexpensive. In 2001, the Congressional Budget Office estimated that providing such a benefit to all veterans would cost no more than $3 million per year for the first 5 years. Since most of the families of veterans who passed away between 1990 and 2001 have already completed their burial plans, it is safe to assume that a substantially smaller number of individuals would require this benefit.

Today is the seventh anniversary of the passing of Agostino Guzzo, a Connecticut resident who bravely served in the United States Armed Forces in the Philippines during World War II. His family interred his body in a mausoleum at the Cedar Hill Cemetery in Hartford, Connecticut. The family was not aware of the VA's restrictions on grave markers, and was told by the VA that there was no way to receive an official recognition.

Agostino's son, Thomas Guzzo, brought the matter to my attention, and, along with Representative NANCY JOHNSON, we were able pass to legislation granting Agostino the memorial he deserves. But too many families are still denied such markers. This legislation honors the memory of Agostino Guzzo and all of the veterans who have served their country in war and in peace. Thomas Guzzo's commitment to this issue has not ended. The commitment of this Congress to the issue should continue as well.

I hope our colleagues will give this important legislation their favorable consideration.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 909

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. PROVISION OF GOVERNMENT MARKERS FOR MARKED GRAVES OF VETERANS AT PRIVATE CEMETERIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 502(d) of the Veterans Education and Benefits Expansion Act of 2001 (38 U.S.C. 2306 note) is amended by striking "September 11, 2001" and inserting "November 1, 1990".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect as if included in the enactment of section 502 of the Veterans Education and Benefits Expansion Act of 2001.

By Ms. SNOWE (for herself, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mrs. BOXER, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. CORZINE, Mr. DURBIN, and Mr. COCHRAN):

S. 910. A bill to require that health plans provide coverage for a minimum hospital stay for mastectomies, lumpectomies, and lymph node dissection for the treatment of breast cancer and coverage for secondary consultations; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Breast Cancer Patient Protection Act of 2005. I am pleased to be joined today by Senator LANDRIEU in introducing this legislation to assure women of a higher standard of breast cancer treatment. We are joined today by colleagues who have supported our efforts in the past—Senator FEINSTEIN, Senator BOXER, Senator MURRAY, Senator CORZINE, and Senator DURBIN. Today in the House, Representatives KELLY and DELAURO are introducing identical legislation. Working together in this bipartisan, bicameral effort—supported by so many breast cancer advocates—we should at last achieve for American women the protections they so deserve.

A woman in the United States has a 1 in 7 chance of developing breast cancer in her lifetime. This year over 216,000 women will receive a life-altering diagnosis of invasive breast cancer. At some point in their lives, nearly every American will have a family member or friend who must battle breast cancer. Yet current standards of health care coverage have created a situation in which thousands of women each year undergo mastectomies needlessly, and women have even undergone breast cancer surgery as an outpatient—the "drive through mastectomy" as it has been called—being sent home without critical support for their recovery.

Our legislation empowers women and their doctors to make treatment decisions based on what is medically prudent, not simply what will achieve short-term savings. The stress of a cancer diagnosis is debilitating. To compound that stress, to leave a woman with the knowledge that she must undergo a disfiguring procedure due only to her financial position, or to undergo surgery without proper hospitalization, is absolutely unconscionable.

This bill achieves three important objectives. First, it assures a patient of a second opinion for any cancer diagnosis. A cancer diagnosis simply must be reliable.

Second, this legislation assures a patient of a reasonable minimum length of hospital stay for invasive treatment of breast cancer. Many of us have heard of women receiving outpatient mastectomies, being sent home without the necessary support. Such treatment is unconscionable. This legislation establishes a 48 hour minimum stay assurance for mastectomy and lumpectomy. I must point out that this assurance does not require a woman remain hospitalized that long if she and her doctor concur that she goes home earlier—nor does it prevent a longer hospitalization if her medical condition warrants it.

However, this provision will protect women from that small fraction of insurance plans which will not allow such reasonable treatment. This assurance is offered regardless of whether the patient's plan is regulated by ERISA or State regulations.

Finally, this legislation does more than simply ensure a patient of reasonable hospitalization. It assures her of support in making the best choices about her treatment.

It is not hard to understand why the words "you have breast cancer" are some of the most frightening in the English language. For the woman who hears them, everything changes from that moment forward. No wonder, then, that it is a diagnosis not only accompanied by fear, but also by uncertainty. What will become of me? What will they have to do to me? What will I have to endure? What's the next step?

For many women, the answer to that last question is a mastectomy or lumpectomy. But despite the fact that studies are demonstrating that lumpectomy often is just as effective as mastectomy for treating breast cancer, an insurance coverage bias causes too many to unnecessarily undergo mastectomy. By ensuring a reasonable hospital stay, as well as coverage for radiation therapy, this legislation removes much of the financial incentive that has caused women to receive a mastectomy when a lumpectomy would have been just as effective.

In fact, when the pain, trauma, and cost of breast reconstruction is considered, together with the frequent need for follow-up surgeries, and when we consider the additional health risks which implants may pose, it is clear that mastectomy can entail greater health and economic costs. Decisions about treatment simply must be based on sound science and a long term view, not what is most financially expedient at that very moment. A woman must have the ability to make a choice with their physician which considers what is in her best long term interest. This legislation ensures that choice is not influenced by a short term outlook.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this bill and work towards passing it this year.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, approximately 211,300 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year. No doubt, you know one of these women. In fact, they may be your sister, mother, aunt, cousin or dear friend. In most cases, the doctor will prescribe immediate and often times aggressive treatment in the hopes of stalling further progression of the disease. The quality of care that breast cancer patients receive is critically important to their survival. Despite the urgent need for Federal protections to ensure that breast cancer sufferers receive appropriate treatment, very few exist.

It may shock you to learn that women who have undergone surgical treatments such as breast removal mastectomy—or lymph node dissections are being sent home within hours of having surgery because insurance companies are unwilling to reimburse recovery time in hospitals, a practice referred to as "Drive-Through Mastectomies." These women have reported being sent home still drowsy from anesthesia, weakened from hours of surgery, and with drainage tubes attached to their bodies, while simultaneously experiencing the immense emotional trauma associated with the removal of a breast or lymph nodes.

To this end, I am pleased to have worked with Senator SNOWE to introduce the Breast Cancer Patient Protection Act of 2005. This legislation will prevent insurance companies from restricting hospital stays resulting from mastectomies to less than 48 hours and hospital stays resulting from lymph node dissections to less than 24 hours. This bill does not prevent a doctor from discharging a woman prior to these minimum requirements, if he/she determines, in consultation with the patient, that this is the best treatment option. The Breast Cancer Patient Protection Act simply ensures that these types of medical decisions are made by doctors, not insurance companies. The legislation also prohibits insurance companies from circumventing the legislation through practices such as providing incentives to doctors or patients to reduce length of stays associated with mastectomies or lymph node dissections.

To be fair, we must acknowledge that this legislation will not change the nature of mastectomies and lymph node dissections for the majority of women. Over 19 States have already put State laws in place that work to the same end as the Breast Cancer Patient Protection Act, and the vast majority of insurance companies have already responded on their own to this problem. However, this is a case in which the injustice, while small in number of women it affects, is clear. And just as the injustice is apparent, the solution is simple. It is high time that the Federal Government took action. Yes, many states have already done so, and yes, many insurance companies have, too, but if even one woman is forced to go home too soon after such an invasive surgery, that is one woman too many. It is not the fact that this is happening to many women, it is the fact that it is happening to any women. For all of our sisters, mothers, daughters, aunts, friends, and loved ones, it is time for us to provide the needed protections. I ask for your support of the Breast Cancer Patient Protection Act of 2005.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 123—DESIGNATING APRIL 30, 2005, AS "DÍA DE LOS NIÑOS: CELEBRATING YOUNG AMERICANS," AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mr. CORNYN, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. MARTINEZ, and Ms. MURKOWSKI) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. RES. 123

Whereas many nations throughout the world, and especially within the Western hemisphere, celebrate "Día de los Niños", or "Day of the Children" on the 30th of April, in recognition and celebration of their country's future—their children;

Whereas children represent the hopes and dreams of the people of the United States;

Whereas children are the center of American families;

Whereas children should be nurtured and invested in to preserve and enhance economic prosperity, democracy, and the American spirit;

Whereas Hispanics in the United States, the youngest and fastest growing ethnic community in the Nation, continue the tradition of honoring their children on this day, and wish to share this custom with the rest of the Nation;

Whereas 1 in 4 Americans is projected to be of Hispanic descent by the year 2050, and as of 2003, approximately 12,300,000 Hispanic children live in the United States;

Whereas traditional Hispanic family life centers largely on children;

Whereas the primary teachers of family values, morality, and culture are parents and family members, and we rely on children to pass on these family values, morals, and culture to future generations;

Whereas more than 500,000 children drop out of school each year, and Hispanic dropout rates are unacceptably high;

Whereas the importance of literacy and education are most often communicated to children through family members;

Whereas families should be encouraged to engage in family and community activities that include extended and elderly family members and encourage children to explore, develop confidence, and pursue their dreams;

Whereas the designation of a day to honor the children of the United States will help affirm for the people of the United States the significance of family, education, and community;

Whereas the designation of a day of special recognition for the children of the United States will provide an opportunity for children to reflect on their future, to articulate their dreams and aspirations, and to find comfort and security in the support of their family members and communities;

Whereas the National Latino Children's Institute, serving as a voice for children, has worked with cities throughout the country to declare April 30 as "Día de los Niños: Celebrating Young Americans"—a day to bring together Hispanics and other communities nationwide to celebrate and uplift children; and

Whereas the children of a nation are the responsibility of all its people, and people should be encouraged to celebrate the gifts of children to society—their curiosity, laughter, faith, energy, spirit, hopes, and dreams: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates April 30, 2005, as "Día de los Niños: Celebrating Young Americans"; and

(2) calls on the people of the United States to join with all children, families, organizations, communities, churches, cities, and States across the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies, including activities that—

(A) center around children, and are free or minimal in cost so as to encourage and facilitate the participation of all our people;

(B) are positive and uplifting and that help children express their hopes and dreams;

(C) provide opportunities for children of all backgrounds to learn about one another's cultures and to share ideas;

(D) include all members of the family, and especially extended and elderly family members, so as to promote greater communication among the generations within a family, enabling children to appreciate and benefit from the experiences and wisdom of their elderly family members;

(E) provide opportunities for families within a community to get acquainted; and

(F) provide children with the support they need to develop skills and confidence, and to find the inner strength—the will and fire of the human spirit—to make their dreams come true.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to submit an important resolution designating the 30th day of April 2005 as "Día de los Niños: Celebrating Young Americans."

Nations throughout the world, and especially within Latin America, celebrate Día de los Niños on the 30th of April, in recognition and celebration of their country's future—their children. Many American Hispanic families continue the tradition of honoring their children on this day by celebrating Día de los Niños in their homes.

The designation of a day to honor the children of the Nation will help affirm for the people of the United States the significance of family, education, and community. This special recognition of children will provide us with an opportunity to reflect on their future, articulate their dreams and aspirations, and find comfort and security in the support of their family members and communities. This resolution calls on the American people to join with all children, families, organizations, communities, churches, cities, and states across the Nation to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

Joining me as original co-sponsors to this Resolution are JOHN CORNYN, CHARLES E. GRASSLEY, KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON, MEL MARTINEZ, and LISA MURKOWSKI.

I strongly urge my colleagues to join us in promptly passing this Resolution designating April 30, 2005 Día de los Niños: Celebrating Young Americans.

SENATE RESOLUTION 124—RECOGNIZING THE IMPORTANCE OF INCREASING AWARENESS OF AUTISM SPECTRUM DISORDERS, SUPPORTING PROGRAMS FOR INCREASED RESEARCH AND IMPROVED TREATMENT OF AUTISM, AND IMPROVING TRAINING AND SUPPORT FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH AUTISM AND THOSE WHO CARE FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH AUTISM

Mr. HAGEL (for himself, Mr. FEINGOLD, and Ms. STABENOW) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions:

S. RES. 124

Whereas the Autism Society of America, Cure Autism Now, the National Alliance for Autism Research, The Dan Marino Foundation, and numerous other organizations commemorate April as National Autism Awareness Month;

Whereas autism is a developmental disorder that is typically diagnosed during the first 3 years of life, robbing individuals of their ability to communicate and interact with others;

Whereas autism affects an estimated 1 in every 166 children in America;

Whereas autism is 4 times more likely in boys than in girls, and can affect anyone, regardless of race, ethnicity, or other factors;

Whereas the cost of specialized treatment in a developmental center for people with autism is approximately $80,000 per individual per year;

Whereas the cost of special education programs for school-aged children with autism is often more than $30,000 per individual per year;

Whereas the cost nationally of caring for persons affected by autism is estimated at upwards of $90,000,000,000 per year; and

Whereas despite the fact that autism is one of the most common developmental disorders, many professionals in the medical and educational fields are still unaware of the best methods to diagnose and treat the disorder: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) supports the establishment of April as National Autism Awareness Month;

(2) recognizes and commends the parents and relatives of children with autism for their sacrifice and dedication in providing for the special needs of children with autism and for absorbing significant financial costs for specialized education and support services;

(3) supports the goal of increasing Federal funding for aggressive research to learn the root causes of autism, identify the best methods of early intervention and treatment, expand programs for individuals with autism across their lifespan, and promote understanding of the special needs of people with autism;

(4) commends the Department of Health and Human Services for the swift implementation of the Children's Health Act of 2000, particularly for establishing 4 "Centers of Excellence" at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to study the epidemiology of autism and related disorders and the proposed "Centers of Excellence" at the National Institutes of Health for autism research;

(5) stresses the need to begin early intervention services soon after a child has been diagnosed with autism, noting that early intervention strategies are the primary therapeutic options for young people with autism, and early intervention significantly improves outcomes for people with autism and can reduce the level of funding and services needed later in life;

(6) supports the Federal Government's nearly 30-year-old commitment to provide States with 40 percent of the costs needed to educate children with disabilities under part B of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA);

(7) recognizes the shortage of appropriately trained teachers who have the skills and support necessary to teach, assist, and respond to special needs students, including those with autism, in our school systems; and

(8) recognizes the importance of worker training programs that are tailored to the needs of developmentally disabled persons, including those with autism, and notes that people with autism can be, and are, productive members of the workforce if they are given appropriate support, training, and early intervention services.

SENATE RESOLUTION 125—COMMENDING THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA GOLDEN GOPHERS WOMEN'S ICE HOCKEY TEAM FOR WINNING THE 2004-2005 NATIONAL COLLEGIATE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION DIVISION I WOMEN'S HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIP

Mr. COLEMAN (for himself and Mr. DAYTON) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 125

Whereas, on Sunday, March 27, 2005, the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers won the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division I Women's Hockey Championship for the second straight year;

Whereas the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers defeated Harvard University in the championship game by a score of 4 to 3, and defeated Dartmouth College by a score of 7 to 2 in the semifinals;

Whereas, during the 2004-2005 season, the Golden Gophers won an outstanding 36 out of 40 games;

Whereas Ms. Krissy Wendell was honored with the prestigious Patty Kazmaier Award, which is presented annually to the Nation's most outstanding women's collegiate hockey player;

Whereas Ms. Natalie Darwitz, Ms. Lyndsay Wall, and Ms. Krissy Wendell were selected for the 2004-2005 NCAA All-Tournament Team, and Ms. Darwitz was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player;

Whereas Ms. Lyndsay Wall, Ms. Krissy Wendell, and Ms. Natalie Darwitz were named to the CCM Women's University Division I Ice Hockey All-American First Team, and Ms. Jody Horak was named to the CCM Women's University Division I Ice Hockey All-American Second Team;

Whereas the team's seniors—Ms. Jody Horak, Ms. Brenda Reinen, Ms. Kelly Stephens, Ms. Noelle Sutton, and Ms. Stacy Troumbly—made tremendous contributions to the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers women's ice hockey program throughout their collegiate careers;

Whereas Ms. Ashley Albrecht, Ms. Chelsey Brodt, Ms. Natalie Darwitz, Ms. Whitney Graft, Ms. Jody Horak, Ms. Krista Johnson, Ms. Natalie Lammé, Ms. Erica McKenzie, Ms. Anya Miller, Ms. Andrea Nichols, Ms. Liz Palkie, Ms. Jenelle Philipczyk, Ms. Brenda Reinen, Ms. Bobbi Ross, Ms. Allie Sanchez, Ms. Maggie Souba, Ms. Kelly Stephens, Ms. Noelle Sutton, Ms. Stacy Troumbly, Ms. Becky Wacker, Ms. Lyndsay Wall, and Ms. Krissy Wendell demonstrated exceptional teamwork, selfless team spirit, and admirable sportswomanship throughout the season;

Whereas the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers women's ice hockey team Head Coach Laura Halldorson and Assistant Coaches Brad Frost, Charlie Burggraf, and Jeff Moen provided outstanding leadership and coaching to mold all of the talented young women into a championship team: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) commends the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers women's ice hockey team for winning the 2004-2005 National Collegiate Athletic Association's Division I Women's Ice Hockey Championship;

(2) recognizes the outstanding achievements of the team's players, coaches, and support staff; and

(3) directs the Secretary of the Senate to transmit an enrolled copy of this resolution to the president of the University of Minnesota.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 28—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE CONGRESS ON WORLD INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY DAY REGARDING THE IMPORTANCE OF PROTECTING INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS GLOBALLY

Mr. LUGAR (for himself, Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. HATCH, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. COLEMAN, Mr. LEAHY, and Mr. CHAFEE) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. CON. RES. 28

Whereas protection of intellectual property is critical to our nation's economic competitiveness, cultural diversity, health and scientific development;

Whereas the United States economy depends increasingly on the work of authors, artists, inventors, programmers, and many others who create intellectual products of high value;

Whereas theft of intellectual property results in competitive disadvantages to United States industries and job losses for American workers, and for the United States economy as a whole;

Whereas the copyright industries employ approximately 11,500,000 workers or 8.41 percent of total employment in the United States, a number that approaches the levels of employment in the health care and social assistance sector (15,300,000 employees) and the entire manufacturing sector (14,500,000 workers in 21 manufacturing industries);

Whereas there is great concern about the failure of many of our trading partners to live up to their international obligations in the area of intellectual property protection;

Whereas counterfeiting of copyrighted products in digital and other formats, as well as counterfeiting of all types of trademarked products, has grown to an enormous scale;

Whereas many of our trading partners, in particular Russia and China, have laws in place to prevent piracy and counterfeiting, but are failing to enforce the laws;

Whereas Russia and China alone are responsible for over $4,000,000,000 in losses a year to United States industries due to piracy;

Whereas piracy in Russia and China is open, notorious, and permitted to operate without meaningful hindrance from the governments of those countries;

Whereas China should be encouraged to meet its intellectual property protection obligations as a member of the World Trade Organization (WTO);

Whereas Russia should be encouraged to explore means to provide effective piracy protection enabling compliance with the rules set forth by the WTO;

Whereas the United States Government must convey to these countries that failure to act will have political and economic consequences for relationships with the United States; and

Whereas Congress has enacted legislation regarding the protection of intellectual property, including measures which direct the Administration to censure countries that fail to provide adequate and effective protection for intellectual property: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That—

(1) the Administration should utilize effective remedies and solutions in addressing the lack of intellectual property protection in China and Russia, using all available tools provided by Congress;

(2) the Administration should ensure that any country that enjoys benefits under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program, such as Russia, lives up to its obligations to provide adequate and effective protection for intellectual property rights, or lose its eligibility to participate in trade preference programs;

(3) the Administration should ensure that action is taken against any country with which the United States shares mutual commitments under the WTO, such as China, when the country fails to live up to its WTO commitments;

(4) the Administration should urge Russia to promote measures to enforce intellectual property protection which will enable compliance with the intellectual property commitments required by the WTO; and

(5) the President should take any additional action the President considers appropriate to protect the intellectual property rights of United States businesses.

"(E) other costs associated with transportation systems management and operations and the continuous operation of traffic control, such as—

"(i) an integrated traffic control system;

"(ii) an incident management program; and

"(iii) a traffic control center.

"(20) OPERATIONAL IMPROVEMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'operational improvement' means—

"(i) a capital improvement for installation or implementation of—

"(I) a transportation system management and operations program;

"(II) traffic and transportation security surveillance and control equipment;

"(III) a computerized signal system;

"(IV) a motorist information system;

"(V) an integrated traffic control system;

"(VI) an incident management program;

"(VII) equipment and programs for transportation response to manmade and natural disasters; or

"(VIII) a transportation demand management facility, strategy, or program; and

"(ii) such other capital improvements to a public road as the Secretary may designate by regulation.

"(B) EXCLUSIONS.—The term 'operational improvement' does not include—

"(i) a resurfacing, restorative, or rehabilitative improvement;

"(ii) construction of an additional lane, interchange, or grade separation; or

"(iii) construction of a new facility on a new location.

"(21) PARK ROAD.—The term 'park road' means a public road (including a bridge built primarily for pedestrian use, but with capacity for use by emergency vehicles) that is located within, or provides access to, an area in the National Park System with title and maintenance responsibilities vested in the United States.

"(22) PARKWAY.—The term 'parkway' means a parkway authorized by an Act of Congress on land to which title is vested in the United States.

"(23) PROJECT.—The term 'project' means—

"(A)(i) an undertaking to construct a particular portion of a highway; or

"(ii) if the context so implies, a particular portion of a highway so constructed; and

"(B) any other undertaking eligible for assistance under this title.

"(24) PROJECT AGREEMENT.—The term 'project agreement' means the formal instrument to be executed by the Secretary and recipient of funds under this title.

"(25) PUBLIC AUTHORITY.—The term 'public authority' means a Federal, State, county, town, or township, Indian tribe, municipal or other local government or instrumentality with authority to finance, build, operate, or maintain toll or toll-free facilities.

"(26) PUBLIC FOREST SERVICE ROAD.—The term 'public Forest Service road' means a classified forest road—

"(A) that is open to public travel;

"(B) for which title and maintenance responsibility is vested in the Federal Government; and

"(C) that has been designated a public road by the Forest Service.

"(27) PUBLIC LANDS DEVELOPMENT ROADS AND TRAILS.—The term 'public lands development roads and trails' means roads and trails that the Secretary of the Interior determines are of primary importance for the development, protection, administration, and use of public lands and resources under the control of the Secretary of the Interior.

"(28) PUBLIC LANDS HIGHWAY.—The term 'public lands highway' means—

"(A) a forest road that is—

"(i) under the jurisdiction of, and maintained by, a public authority; and

"(ii) open to public travel; and

"(B) any highway through unappropriated or unreserved public land, nontaxable Indian land, or any other Federal reservation (including a main highway through such land or reservation that is on the Federal-aid system) that is—

"(i) under the jurisdiction of, and maintained by, a public authority; and

"(ii) open to public travel.

"(29) PUBLIC ROAD.—The term 'public road' means any road or street that is—

"(A) under the jurisdiction of, and maintained by, a public authority; and

"(B) open to public travel.

"(30) RECREATIONAL ROAD.—The term 'recreational road' means a public road—

"(A) that provides access to a museum, lake, reservoir, visitors center, gateway to a major wilderness area, public use area, or recreational or historic site; and

"(B) for which title is vested in the Federal Government.

"(31) REFUGE ROAD.—The term 'refuge road' means a public road—

"(A) that provides access to or within a unit of the National Wildlife Refuge System or a national fish hatchery; and

"(B) for which title and maintenance responsibility is vested in the United States Government.

"(32) RURAL AREA.—The term 'rural area' means an area of a State that is not included in an urban area.

"(33) SECRETARY.—The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Transportation.

"(34) STATE.—The term 'State' means—

"(A) a State;

"(B) the District of Columbia; and

"(C) the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

"(35) STATE FUNDS.—The term 'State funds' includes funds that are—

"(A) raised under the authority of the State (or any political or other subdivision of a State); and

"(B) made available for expenditure under the direct control of the State transportation department.

"(36) STATE TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT.—The term 'State transportation department' means the department, agency, commission, board, or official of any State charged by the laws of the State with the responsibility for highway construction.

"(37) TERRITORIAL HIGHWAY SYSTEM.—The term 'territorial highway system' means the system of arterial highways, collector roads, and necessary interisland connectors in American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, and the United States Virgin Islands that have been designated by the appropriate Governor or chief executive officer of a territory, and approved by the Secretary, in accordance with section 215.

"(38) TRANSPORTATION ENHANCEMENT ACTIVITY.—The term 'transportation enhancement activity' means, with respect to any project or the area to be served by the project, any of the following activities as the activities relate to surface transportation:

"(A) Provision of facilities for pedestrians and bicycles.

"(B) Provision of safety and educational activities for pedestrians and bicyclists.

"(C) Acquisition of scenic easements and scenic or historic sites (including historic battlefields).

"(D) Scenic or historic highway programs (including the provision of tourist and welcome center facilities).

"(E) Landscaping and other scenic beautification.

"(F) Historic preservation.

"(G) Rehabilitation and operation of historic transportation buildings, structures, or facilities (including historic railroad facilities and canals).

"(H) Preservation of abandoned railway corridors (including the conversion and use of the corridors for pedestrian or bicycle trails).

"(I) Control and removal of outdoor advertising.

"(J) Archaeological planning and research.

"(K) Environmental mitigation—

"(i) to address water pollution due to highway runoff; or

"(ii) reduce vehicle-caused wildlife mortality while maintaining habitat connectivity.

"(L) Establishment of transportation museums.

"(39) TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS MANAGEMENT AND OPERATIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'transportation systems management and operations' means an integrated program to optimize the performance of existing infrastructure through the implementation of multimodal and intermodal, cross-jurisdictional systems, services, and projects designed to preserve capacity and improve security, safety, and reliability of the transportation system.

"(B) INCLUSIONS.—The term 'transportation systems management and operations' includes—

"(i) regional operations collaboration and coordination activities between transportation and public safety agencies; and

"(ii) improvements to the transportation system such as traffic detection and surveillance, arterial management, freeway management, demand management, work zone management, emergency management, electronic toll collection, automated enforcement, traffic incident management, roadway weather management, traveler information services, commercial vehicle operations, traffic control, freight management, and coordination of highway, rail, transit, bicycle, and pedestrian operations.

"(40) URBAN AREA.—The term 'urban area' means—

"(A) an urbanized area (or, in the case of an urbanized area encompassing more than 1 State, the portion of the urbanized area in each State); and

"(B) an urban place designated by the Bureau of the Census that—

"(i) has a population of 5,000 or more;

"(ii) is not located within any urbanized area; and

"(iii) is located within boundaries that—

"(I) are fixed cooperatively by responsible State and local officials, subject to approval by the Secretary; and

"(II) encompass, at a minimum, the entire urban place designated by the Bureau of the Census (except in the case of cities in the State of Maine and in the State of New Hampshire).

"(41) URBANIZED AREA.—The term 'urbanized area' means an area that—

"(A) has a population of 50,000 or more;

"(B) is designated by the Bureau of the Census; and

"(C) is located within boundaries that—

"(i) are fixed cooperatively by responsible State and local officials, subject to approval by the Secretary; and

"(ii) encompass, at a minimum, the entire urbanized area within a State as designated by the Bureau of the Census.".

SEC. 1102. OBLIGATION CEILING.

(a) GENERAL LIMITATION.—Subject to subsections (g) and (h), and notwithstanding any other provision of law, the obligations for Federal-aid highway and highway safety construction programs shall not exceed—

(1) $34,425,380,000 for fiscal year 2005;
(2) $37,154,999,523 for fiscal year 2006;
(3) $37,450,167,691 for fiscal year 2007;
(4) $38,816,364,417 for fiscal year 2008; and
(5) $40,321,257,845 for fiscal year 2009.

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—The limitations under subsection (a) shall not apply to obligations under or for—

(1) section 125 of title 23, United States Code;

(2) section 147 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1978 (23 U.S.C. 144 note; 92 Stat. 2714);

(3) section 9 of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1981 (Public Law 97–134; 95 Stat. 1701);

(4) subsections (b) and (j) of section 131 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (Public Law 97–424; 96 Stat. 2119);

(5) subsections (b) and (c) of section 149 of the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act of 1987 (Public Law 100–17; 101 Stat. 198);

(6) sections 1103 through 1108 of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102–240; 105 Stat. 2027);

(7) section 157 of title 23, United States Code (as in effect on June 8, 1998);

(8) section 105 of title 23, United States Code (as in effect for fiscal years 1998 through 2003, but only in an amount equal to $639,000,000 for each of those fiscal years);

(9) Federal-aid highway programs for which obligation authority was made available under the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (Public Law 105–178; 112 Stat. 107) or subsequent public laws for multiple years or to remain available until used, but only to the extent that the obligation authority has not lapsed or been used; and

(10) section 105 of title 23, United States Code (but, for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, only in an amount equal to $639,000,000 per fiscal year).

(c) DISTRIBUTION OF OBLIGATION AUTHORITY.—For each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, the Secretary—

(1) shall not distribute obligation authority provided by subsection (a) for the fiscal year for—

(A) amounts authorized for administrative expenses and programs by section 104(a) of title 23, United States Code;

(B) programs funded from the administrative takedown authorized by section 104(a)(1) of title 23, United States Code; and

(C) amounts authorized for the highway use tax evasion program and the Bureau of Transportation Statistics;

(2) shall not distribute an amount of obligation authority provided by subsection (a) that is equal to the unobligated balance of amounts made available from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) for Federal-aid highway and highway safety programs for previous fiscal years the funds for which are allocated by the Secretary;

(3) shall determine the ratio that—

(A) the obligation authority provided by subsection (a) for the fiscal year, less the aggregate of amounts not distributed under paragraphs (1) and (2); bears to

(B) the total of the sums authorized to be appropriated for the Federal-aid highway and highway safety construction programs (other than sums authorized to be appropriated for provisions of law described in paragraphs (1) through (9) of subsection (b) and sums authorized to be appropriated for section 105 of title 23, United States Code, equal to the amount referred to in subsection (b)(10) for the fiscal year), less the aggregate of the amounts not distributed under paragraphs (1) and (2);

(4) shall distribute the obligation authority provided by subsection (a) less the aggregate amounts not distributed under paragraphs (1) and (2), for section 14501 of title 40, United States Code, so that the amount of obligation authority available for that section is equal to the amount determined by multiplying—

(A) the ratio determined under paragraph (3); by

(B) the sums authorized to be appropriated for that section for the fiscal year;

(5) shall distribute among the States the obligation authority provided by subsection (a), less the aggregate amounts not distributed under paragraphs (1) and (2), for each of the programs that are allocated by the Secretary under this Act and title 23, United States Code (other than to programs to which paragraph (1) applies), by multiplying—

(A) the ratio determined under paragraph (3); by

(B) the amounts authorized to be appropriated for each such program for the fiscal year; and

(6) shall distribute the obligation authority provided by subsection (a), less the aggregate amounts not distributed under paragraphs (1) and (2) and the amounts distributed under paragraphs (4) and (5), for Federal-aid highway and highway safety construction programs (other than the amounts apportioned for the equity bonus program, but only to the extent that the amounts apportioned for the equity bonus program for the fiscal year are greater than $639,000,000, and the Appalachian development highway system program) that are apportioned by the Secretary under this Act and title 23, United States Code, in the ratio that—

(A) amounts authorized to be appropriated for the programs that are apportioned to each State for the fiscal year; bear to

(B) the total of the amounts authorized to be appropriated for the programs that are apportioned to all States for the fiscal year.

(d) Redistribution of Unused Obligation Authority.—Notwithstanding subsection (c), the Secretary shall, after August 1 of each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009—

(1) revise a distribution of the obligation authority made available under subsection (c) if an amount distributed cannot be obligated during that fiscal year; and

(2) redistribute sufficient amounts to those States able to obligate amounts in addition to those previously distributed during that fiscal year, giving priority to those States having large unobligated balances of funds apportioned under sections 104 and 144 of title 23, United States Code.

(e) Applicability of Obligation Limitations to Transportation Research Programs.—

(1) In general.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), obligation limitations imposed by subsection (a) shall apply to contract authority for transportation research programs carried out under—

(A) chapter 5 of title 23, United States Code; and

(B) title II of this Act.

(2) Exception.—Obligation authority made available under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) remain available for a period of 3 fiscal years; and

(B) be in addition to the amount of any limitation imposed on obligations for Federal-aid highway and highway safety construction programs for future fiscal years.

(f) Redistribution of Certain Authorized Funds.—

(1) In general.—Not later than 30 days after the date of distribution of obligation authority under subsection (c) for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, the Secretary shall distribute to the States any funds that—

(A) are authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year for Federal-aid highway programs; and

(B) the Secretary determines will not be allocated to the States, and will not be available for obligation, in the fiscal year due to the imposition of any obligation limitation for the fiscal year.

(2) Ratio.—Funds shall be distributed under paragraph (1) in the same ratio as the distribution of obligation authority under subsection (c)(6).

(3) Availability.—Funds distributed under paragraph (1) shall be available for any purpose described in section 133(b) of title 23, United States Code.

(g) Special Rule.—Obligation authority distributed for a fiscal year under subsection (c)(4) for the provision specified in subsection (c)(4) shall—

(1) remain available until used for obligation of funds for that provision; and

(2) be in addition to the amount of any limitation imposed on obligations for Federal-aid highway and highway safety construction programs for future fiscal years.

(h) Adjustment in Obligation Limit.—

(1) In general.—A limitation on obligations imposed by subsection (a) for a fiscal year shall be adjusted by an amount equal to the amount determined in accordance with section 251(b)(1)(B) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (2 U.S.C. 901(b)(1)(B)) for the fiscal year.

(2) Distribution.—An adjustment under paragraph (1) shall be distributed in accordance with this section.

(i) Limitations on Obligations for Administrative Expenses.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the total amount of all obligations under section 104(a) of title 23, United States Code, shall not exceed—

(1) $415,283,019 for fiscal year 2005;

(2) $428,679,245 for fiscal year 2006;

(3) $442,075,472 for fiscal year 2007;

(4) $455,471,698 for fiscal year 2008; and

(5) $468,867,925 for fiscal year 2009.

(j) National Highway System Component.—Section 104(b)(1) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking "$36,400,000" and insert "$44,654,088".

SEC. 1103. APPORTIONMENTS.

(a) Administrative Expenses.—

(1) In general.—Section 104 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking subsection (a) and inserting the following:

"(a) Administrative Expenses.—

"(1) In general.—There are authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to be made available to the Secretary of Transportation for administrative expenses of the Federal Highway Administration—

"(1) $415,283,019 for fiscal year 2005;

"(2) $428,679,245 for fiscal year 2006;

"(3) $442,075,472 for fiscal year 2007;

"(4) $455,471,698 for fiscal year 2008; and

"(5) $468,867,925 for fiscal year 2009.

"(2) Purposes.—The funds authorized by this subsection shall be used—

"(A) to administer the provisions of law to be financed from appropriations for the Federal-aid highway program and programs authorized under chapter 2; and

"(B) to make transfers of such sums as the Secretary determines to be appropriate to the Appalachian Regional Commission for administrative activities associated with the Appalachian development highway system.

"(3) Availability.—The funds made available under paragraph (1) shall remain available until expended.".

(2) Conforming amendments.—Section 104 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in the matter preceding paragraph (1) of subsection (b), by striking "the deduction authorized by subsection (a) and";

(B) in the first sentence of subsection (e)(1), by striking ", and also" and all that follows through "this section"; and

(C) in subsection (i), by striking "deducted" and inserting "made available".

(b) Metropolitan Planning.—Section 104(f) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

"(1) Set-aside.—On October 1 of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall set aside 1.5 percent of the funds authorized to be appropriated for the Interstate maintenance, national highway system, surface transportation, congestion mitigation and air quality improvement, highway safety improvement, and highway bridge programs authorized under this title to carry out the requirements of section 134.";

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking "per centum" and inserting "percent";

(3) in paragraph (3)—

(A) by striking "The funds" and inserting the following:

"(A) In general.—The funds"; and

(B) by striking "These funds" and all that follows and inserting the following:

"(B) Unused funds.—Any funds that are not used to carry out section 134 may be made available by a metropolitan planning organization to the State to fund activities under section 135."; and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

"(6) Federal share.—Funds apportioned to a State under this subsection shall be matched in accordance with section 120(b) unless the Secretary determines that the interests of the Federal-aid highway program would be best served without the match.".

(c) Alaska Highway.—Section 104(b)(1)(A) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking "1998 through 2002" and inserting "2005 through 2009".

SEC. 1104. EQUITY BONUS PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 105 of title 23, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 105. Equity bonus program

"(a) PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsections (c) and (d), for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, the Secretary shall allocate among the States amounts sufficient to ensure that no State receives a percentage of the total apportionments for the fiscal year for the programs specified in paragraph (2) that is less than the percentage calculated under subsection (b).

"(2) SPECIFIC PROGRAMS.—The programs referred to in subsection (a) are—

"(A) the Interstate maintenance program under section 119;

"(B) the national highway system program under section 103;

"(C) the bridge program under section 144;

"(D) the surface transportation program under section 133;

"(E) the highway safety improvement program under section 148;

"(F) the congestion mitigation and air quality improvement program under section 149;

"(G) metropolitan planning programs under section 104(f) (other than planning programs funded by amounts provided under the equity bonus program under this section);

"(H) the infrastructure performance and maintenance program under section 139;

"(I) the equity bonus program under this section;

"(J) the Appalachian development highway system program under subtitle IV of title 40;

"(K) the recreational trails program under section 206;

"(L) the safe routes to schools program under section 150; and

"(M) the rail-highway grade crossing program under section 130.

"(b) STATE PERCENTAGE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The percentage referred to in subsection (a) for each State shall be—

"(A) 92 percent of the quotient obtained by dividing—

"(i) the estimated tax payments attributable to highway users in the State paid into the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) in the most recent fiscal year for which data are available; by

"(ii) the estimated tax payments attributable to highway users in all States paid into the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) for the fiscal year; or

"(B) for a State with a total population density of less than 20 persons per square mile, as reported in the decennial census conducted by the Federal Government in 2000, a total population of less than 1,000,000, as reported in that decennial census, a median household income of less than $35,000, as reported in that decennial census, or a State with a fatality rate during 2002 on Interstate highways that is greater than 1 fatality for each 100,000,000 vehicle miles traveled on Interstate highways, the greater of—

"(i) the percentage under paragraph (1); or

"(ii) the average percentage of the State's share of total apportionments for the period of fiscal years 1998 through 2003 for the programs specified in paragraph (2).

"(2) SPECIFIC PROGRAMS.—The programs referred to in paragraph (1)(B)(ii) are (as in effect on the day before the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005)—

"(A) the Interstate maintenance program under section 119;

"(B) the national highway system program under section 103;

"(C) the bridge program under section 144;

"(D) the surface transportation program under section 133;

"(E) the recreational trails program under section 206;

"(F) the high priority projects program under section 117;

"(G) the minimum guarantee provided under this section;

"(H) revenue aligned budget authority amounts provided under section 110;

"(I) the congestion mitigation and air quality improvement program under section 149;

"(J) the Appalachian development highway system program under subtitle IV of title 40; and

"(K) metropolitan planning programs under section 104(f).

"(c) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) MINIMUM COMBINED ALLOCATION.—For each fiscal year, before making the allocations under subsection (a)(1), the Secretary shall allocate among the States amounts sufficient to ensure that no State receives a combined total of amounts allocated under subsection (a)(1), apportionments for the programs specified in subsection (a)(2), and amounts allocated under this subsection, that is less than 110 percent of the average for fiscal years 1998 through 2003 of the annual apportionments for the State for all programs specified in subsection (b)(2).

"(2) NO NEGATIVE ADJUSTMENT.—Notwithstanding subsection (d), no negative adjustment shall be made under subsection (a)(1) to the apportionment of any State.

"(3) MINIMUM SHARE OF TAX PAYMENTS.—Notwithstanding subsection (d), for each fiscal year, the Secretary shall allocate among the States amounts sufficient to ensure that no State receives a percentage of apportionments for the fiscal year for the programs specified in subsection (a)(2) that is less than 90.5 percent of the percentage share of the State of estimated tax payments attributable to highway users in the State paid into the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) in the most recent fiscal year for which data are available.

"(d) LIMITATION ON ADJUSTMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (c), no State shall receive, for any fiscal year, additional amounts under subsection (a)(1) if—

"(A) the total apportionments of the State for the fiscal year for the programs specified in subsection (a)(2); exceed

"(B) the percentage of the average, for the period of fiscal years 1998 through 2003, of the annual apportionments of the State for all programs specified in subsection (b)(2), as specified in paragraph (2).

"(2) PERCENTAGES.—The percentages referred to in paragraph (1)(B) are—

"(A) for fiscal year 2005, 119 percent;

"(B) for fiscal year 2006, 122 percent;

"(C) for fiscal year 2007, 123 percent;

"(D) for fiscal year 2008, 128 percent; and

"(E) for fiscal year 2009, 250 percent.

"(e) PROGRAMMATIC DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.—The Secretary shall apportion the amounts made available under this section so that the amount apportioned to each State under this section for each program referred to in subparagraphs (A) through (G) of subsection (a)(2) is equal to the amount determined by multiplying the amount to be apportioned under this section by the proportion that—

"(1) the amount of funds apportioned to each State for each program referred to in subparagraphs (A) through (G) of subsection (a)(2) for a fiscal year; bears to

"(2) the total amount of funds apportioned to each State for all such programs for the fiscal year.

"(f) METRO PLANNING SET ASIDE.—Notwithstanding section 104(f), no set aside provided for under that section shall apply to funds allocated under this section.

"(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) such sums as are necessary to carry out this section for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 105 and inserting the following:

"105. Equity bonus program."

SEC. 1105. REVENUE ALIGNED BUDGET AUTHORITY.

Section 110 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) in paragraphs (1) and (2), by striking "2000" and inserting "2006";

(B) in paragraph (1), by inserting "(as in effect on September 30, 2002)" after "(2 U.S.C. 901(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I)(cc))"; and

(C) in paragraph (2)—

(i) by striking "If the amount" and inserting the following:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), if the amount";

(ii) by inserting "(as in effect on September 30, 2002)" after "(2 U.S.C. 901(b)(1)(B)(ii)(I)(cc)";

(iii) by striking "the succeeding" and inserting "that";

(iv) by striking "and the motor carrier safety grant program"; and

(v) by adding at the end the following:

"(B) LIMITATION.—No reduction under subparagraph (A) shall be made for a fiscal year if, as of October 1 of the fiscal year, the cash balance in the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) exceeds $6,000,000,000.";

(2) in subsection (b)(1), by striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following:

"(A) the sums authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) for each of the Federal-aid highway and highway safety construction programs (other than the equity bonus program) and for which funds are allocated from the Highway Trust Fund by the Secretary under this title and the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005; bears to";

(3) in subsection (c), by inserting "the highway safety improvement program," after "the surface transportation program,"; and

(4) by striking subsections (e), (f), and (g).

Subtitle B—New Programs

SEC. 1201. INFRASTRUCTURE PERFORMANCE AND MAINTENANCE PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 138 the following:

"§ 139. Infrastructure performance and maintenance program

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish and implement an infrastructure performance and maintenance program in accordance with this section.

"(b) ELIGIBLE PROJECTS.—A State may obligate funds allocated to the State under this section only for projects eligible under the Interstate maintenance program under section 119, the National Highway System program under section 103, the surface transportation program under section 133, the highway safety improvement program under section 148, the highway bridge program under section 144, and the congestion mitigation and air quality improvement program under section 149 that will—

"(1) preserve, maintain, or otherwise extend, in a cost-effective manner, the useful life of existing highway infrastructure elements and hurricane evacuation routes on the Federal-aid system; or

"(2) provide operational improvements (including traffic management and intelligent transportation system strategies and limited capacity enhancements) at points of recurring highway congestion or through transportation systemic changes to manage or ameliorate congestion.

"(c) Period of Availability.—

"(1) Obligation within 180 days.—

"(A) In general.—Funds allocated to a State under this section shall be obligated by the State not later than 180 days after the date of apportionment.

"(B) Unobligated funds.—Any amounts that remain unobligated at the end of that period shall be allocated in accordance with subsection (d).

"(2) Obligation by end of fiscal year.—

"(A) In general.—All funds allocated or reallocated under this section shall remain available for obligation until the last day of the fiscal year for which the funds are apportioned.

"(B) Unobligated funds.—Any amounts allocated that remain unobligated at the end of the fiscal year shall lapse.

"(d) Redistribution of Allocated Funds and Obligation Authority.—

"(1) In general.—On the date that is 180 days after the date of allocation, or as soon thereafter as practicable, for each fiscal year, the Secretary shall—

"(A) withdraw—

"(i) any funds allocated to a State under this section that remain unobligated; and

"(ii) an equal amount of obligation authority provided for the use of the funds in accordance with section 1101(13) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005; and

"(B) reallocate the funds and redistribute the obligation authority to those States that—"(i) have fully obligated all amounts allocated under this section for the fiscal year; and

"(ii) demonstrate that the State is able to obligate additional amounts for projects eligible under this section before the end of the fiscal year.

"(2) Equity bonus.—The calculation and distribution of funds under section 105 shall be adjusted as a result of the allocation of funds under this subsection.

"(e) Federal Share Payable.—The Federal share payable for a project funded under this section shall be determined in accordance with section 120.".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The analysis for chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to section 138 the following:

"139. Infrastructure performance and maintenance program.".

SEC. 1202. FUTURE OF SURFACE TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM.

(a) Declaration of Policy.—Section 101 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "(b) It is hereby declared to be" and inserting the following:

"(b) Declaration of Policy.—

"(1) Acceleration of construction of Federal-aid highway systems.—Congress declares that it is";

(2) in the second paragraph, by striking "It is hereby declared" and inserting the following:

"(2) Completion of Interstate System.—Congress declares"; and

(3) by striking the last paragraph and inserting the following:

"(3) Transportation needs of 21st Century.—Congress declares that—

"(A) it is in the national interest to preserve and enhance the surface transportation system to meet the needs of the United States for the 21st Century;

"(B) the current urban and long distance personal travel and freight movement demands have surpassed the original forecasts and travel demand patterns are expected to change;

"(C) continued planning for and investment in surface transportation is critical to ensure the surface transportation system adequately meets the changing travel demands of the future;

"(D) among the foremost needs that the surface transportation system must meet to provide for a strong and vigorous national economy are safe, efficient, and reliable—

"(i) national and interregional personal mobility (including personal mobility in rural and urban areas) and reduced congestion;

"(ii) flow of interstate and international commerce and freight transportation; and

"(iii) travel movements essential for national security;

"(E) special emphasis should be devoted to providing safe and efficient access for the type and size of commercial and military vehicles that access designated National Highway System intermodal freight terminals;

"(F) it is in the national interest to seek ways to eliminate barriers to transportation investment created by the current modal structure of transportation financing;

"(G) the connection between land use and infrastructure is significant;

"(H) transportation should play a significant role in promoting economic growth, improving the environment, and sustaining the quality of life; and

"(I) the Secretary should take appropriate actions to preserve and enhance the Interstate System to meet the needs of the 21st Century.".

(b) National Surface Transportation System Study.—

(1) In general.—The Secretary shall—

(A) conduct a complete investigation and study of the current condition and future needs of the surface transportation system of the United States, including—

(i) the National Highway System;

(ii) the Interstate System;

(iii) the strategic highway network;

(iv) congressional high priority corridors;

(v) intermodal connectors;

(vi) freight facilities;

(vii) navigable waterways;

(viii) mass transportation;

(ix) freight and intercity passenger rail infrastructure and facilities; and

(x) surface access to airports; and

(B) develop a conceptual plan, with alternative approaches, for the future to ensure that the surface transportation system will continue to serve the needs of the United States, including specific recommendations regarding design and operational standards, Federal policies, and legislative changes.

(2) Specific issues.—In conducting the investigation and study, the Secretary shall specifically address—

(A) the current condition and performance of the Interstate System (including the physical condition of bridges and pavements and operational characteristics and performance), relying primarily on existing data sources;

(B) the future of the Interstate System, based on a range of legislative and policy approaches for 15-, 30-, and 50-year time periods;

(C) the expected demographics and business uses that impact the surface transportation system;

(D) the expected use of the surface transportation system, including the effects of changing vehicle types, modes of transportation, fleet size and weights, and traffic volumes;

(E) desirable design policies and standards for future improvements of the surface transportation system, including additional access points;

(F) the identification of urban, rural, national, and interregional needs for the surface transportation system;

(G) the potential for expansion, upgrades, or other changes to the surface transportation system, including—

(i) deployment of advanced materials and intelligent technologies;

(ii) critical multistate, urban, and rural corridors needing capacity, safety, and operational enhancements;

(iii) improvements to intermodal linkages;

(iv) security and military deployment enhancements;

(v) strategies to enhance asset preservation; and

(vi) implementation strategies;

(H) the improvement of emergency preparedness and evacuation using the surface transportation system, including—

(i) examination of the potential use of all modes of the surface transportation system in the safe and efficient evacuation of citizens during times of emergency;

(ii) identification of the location of critical bottlenecks; and

(iii) development of strategies to improve system redundancy, especially in areas with a high potential for terrorist attacks;

(I) alternatives for addressing environmental concerns associated with the future development of the surface transportation system;

(J) the evaluation and assessment of the current and future capabilities for conducting system-wide real-time performance data collection and analysis, traffic monitoring, and transportation systems operations and management; and

(K) a range of policy and legislative alternatives for addressing future needs for the surface transportation system, including funding needs and potential approaches to provide funds.

(3) Technical advisory committee.—The Secretary shall establish a technical advisory committee, in a manner consistent with the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.), to collect and evaluate technical input from—

(A) the Department of Defense;

(B) appropriate Federal, State, and local officials with responsibility for transportation;

(C) appropriate State and local elected officials;

(D) transportation and trade associations;

(E) emergency management officials;

(F) freight providers;

(G) the general public; and

(H) other entities and persons determined appropriate by the Secretary to ensure a diverse range of views.

(4) Report.—Not later than 4 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives, and make readily available to the public, a report on the results of the investigation and study conducted under this subsection.

SEC. 1203. FREIGHT TRANSPORTATION GATEWAYS; FREIGHT INTERMODAL CONNECTIONS.

(a) Freight Transportation Gateways.—Chapter 3 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 325. Freight transportation gateways

"(a) In General.—

"(1) Establishment.—The Secretary shall establish a freight transportation gateways program to improve productivity, security, and safety of freight transportation gateways, while mitigating congestion and community impacts in the area of the gateways.

"(2) Purposes.—The purposes of the freight transportation gateways program shall be—

"(A) to facilitate and support multimodal freight transportation initiatives at the State and local levels in order to improve freight transportation gateways and mitigate the impact of congestion on the environment in the area of the gateways;

"(B) to provide capital funding to address infrastructure and freight operational needs at freight transportation gateways;

"(C) to encourage adoption of new financing strategies to leverage State, local, and private investment in freight transportation gateways;

"(D) to facilitate access to intermodal freight transfer facilities; and

"(E) to increase economic efficiency by facilitating the movement of goods.

"(b) State Responsibilities.—

"(1) Project development process.—Each State, in coordination with metropolitan planning organizations, shall ensure that intermodal freight transportation, trade facilitation, and economic development needs are adequately considered and fully integrated into the project development process, including transportation planning through final design and construction of freight-related transportation projects.

"(2) Freight transportation coordinator.—

"(A) In general.—Each State shall designate a freight transportation coordinator.

"(B) Duties.—The coordinator shall—

"(i) foster public and private sector collaboration needed to implement complex solutions to freight transportation and freight transportation gateway problems, including—

"(I) coordination of metropolitan and statewide transportation activities with trade and economic interests;

"(II) coordination with other States, agencies, and organizations to find regional solutions to freight transportation problems; and

"(III) coordination with local officials of the Department of Defense and the Department of Homeland Security, and with other organizations, to develop regional solutions to military and homeland security transportation needs; and

"(ii) promote programs that build professional capacity to better plan, coordinate, integrate, and understand freight transportation needs for the State.

"(c) Innovative Finance Strategies.—

"(1) In general.—States and localities are encouraged to adopt innovative financing strategies for freight transportation gateway improvements, including—

"(A) new user fees;

"(B) modifications to existing user fees, including trade facilitation charges;

"(C) revenue options that incorporate private sector investment; and

"(D) a blending of Federal-aid and innovative finance programs.

"(2) Technical assistance.—The Secretary shall provide technical assistance to States and localities with respect to the strategies.

"(d) Intermodal Freight Transportation Projects.—

"(1) Use of surface transportation program funds.—A State may obligate funds apportioned to the State under section 104(b)(3) for publicly-owned intermodal freight transportation projects that provide community and highway benefits by addressing economic, congestion, system reliability, security, safety, or environmental issues associated with freight transportation gateways.

"(2) Eligible projects.—A project eligible for funding under this section—

"(A) may include publicly-owned intermodal freight transfer facilities, access to the facilities, and operational improvements for the facilities (including capital investment for intelligent transportation systems), except that projects located within the boundaries of port terminals shall only include the surface transportation infrastructure modifications necessary to facilitate direct intermodal interchange, transfer, and access into and out of the port; and

"(B) may involve the combining of private and public funds.".

(b) Eligibility for Surface Transportation Program Funds.—Section 133(b) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (11) the following:

"(12) Intermodal freight transportation projects in accordance with section 325(d)(2).".

(c) Freight Intermodal Connections to NHS.—Section 103(b) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(7) Freight intermodal connections to the NHS.—

"(A) Funding set-aside.—Of the funds apportioned to a State for each fiscal year under section 104(b)(1), an amount determined in accordance with subparagraph (B) shall only be available to the State to be obligated for projects on—

"(i) National Highway System routes connecting to intermodal freight terminals identified according to criteria specified in the report to Congress entitled 'Pulling Together: The National Highway System and its Connections to Major Intermodal Terminals' dated May 24, 1996, referred to in paragraph (1), and any modifications to the connections that are consistent with paragraph (4);

"(ii) strategic highway network connectors to strategic military deployment ports; and

"(iii) projects to eliminate railroad crossings or make railroad crossing improvements.

"(B) Determination of amount.—The amount of funds for each State for a fiscal year that shall be set aside under subparagraph (A) shall be equal to the greater of—

"(i) the product obtained by multiplying—

"(I) the total amount of funds apportioned to the State under section 104(b)(1); by

"(II) the percentage of miles that routes specified in subparagraph (A) constitute of the total miles on the National Highway System in the State; or

"(ii) 2 percent of the annual apportionment to the State of funds under 104(b)(1).

"(C) Exemption from set-aside.—For any fiscal year, a State may obligate the funds otherwise set aside by this paragraph for any project that is eligible under paragraph (6) and is located in the State on a segment of the National Highway System specified in paragraph (2), if the State certifies and the Secretary concurs that—

"(i) the designated National Highway System intermodal connectors described in subparagraph (A) are in good condition and provide an adequate level of service for military vehicle and civilian commercial vehicle use; and

"(ii) significant needs on the designated National Highway System intermodal connectors are being met or do not exist.".

(d) Federal Share Payable.—Section 120 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(m) Increased Federal Share for Connectors.—In the case of a project to support a National Highway System intermodal freight connection or strategic highway network connector to a strategic military deployment port described in section 103(b)(7), except as otherwise provided in section 120, the Federal share of the total cost of the project shall be 90 percent.".

(e) Length Limitations.—Section 31111(e) of title 49, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "The" and inserting the following:

"(1) In general.—The"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(2) Length limitations.—In the interests of economic competitiveness, security, and intermodal connectivity, not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this paragraph, States shall update the list of those qualifying highways to include—

"(A) strategic highway network connectors to strategic military deployment ports; and

"(B) National Highway System intermodal freight connections serving military and commercial truck traffic going to major intermodal terminals as described in section 103(b)(7)(A)(i).".

(f) Conforming Amendment.—The analysis of chapter 3 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"325. Freight transportation gateways.".

SEC. 1204. CONSTRUCTION OF FERRY BOATS AND FERRY TERMINAL AND MAINTENANCE FACILITIES; COORDINATION OF FERRY CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE.

(a) In General.—Section 147 of title 23, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 147. Construction of ferry boats and ferry terminal and maintenance facilities; coordination of ferry construction and maintenance

"(a) Construction of Ferry Boats and Ferry Terminal Facilities.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary shall carry out a program for construction of ferry boats and ferry terminal facilities in accordance with section 129(c).

"(2) Federal share.—The Federal share of the cost of construction of ferry boats and ferry terminals and maintenance facilities under this subsection shall be 80 percent.

"(3) Allocation of funds.—The Secretary shall give priority in the allocation of funds under this subsection to those ferry systems, and public entities responsible for developing ferries, that—

"(A) carry the greatest number of passengers and vehicles;

"(B) carry the greatest number of passengers in passenger-only service; or

"(C) provide critical access to areas that are not well-served by other modes of surface transportation.

"(b) NON-CONTRACT AUTHORITY AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established a commission to be known as the "National Commission on Future Revenue Sources to Support the Highway Trust Fund and Finance the Needs of the Surface Transportation System" (referred to in this section as the "Commission").

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—

(1) COMPOSITION.—The Commission shall be composed of 11 members, of whom—

(A) 3 members shall be appointed by the President;

(B) 2 members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(C) 2 members shall be appointed by the minority leader of the House of Representatives;

(D) 2 members shall be appointed by the majority leader of the Senate; and

(E) 2 members shall be appointed by the minority leader of the Senate.

(2) QUALIFICATIONS.—Members appointed under paragraph (1) shall have experience in or represent the interests of—

(A) public finance, including experience in developing State and local revenue resources;

(B) surface transportation program administration;

(C) organizations that use surface transportation facilities;

(D) academic research into related issues; or

(E) other activities that provide unique perspectives on current and future requirements for revenue sources to support the Highway Trust Fund.

(3) DATE OF APPOINTMENTS.—The appointment of a member of the Commission shall be made not later than 120 days after the date of establishment of the Commission.

(4) TERMS.—A member shall be appointed for the life of the Commission.

(5) VACANCIES.—A vacancy on the Commission—

(A) shall not affect the powers of the Commission; and

(B) shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment was made.

(6) INITIAL MEETING.—Not later than 30 days after the date on which all members of the Commission have been appointed, the Commission shall hold the initial meeting of the Commission.

(7) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairperson.

(8) QUORUM.—A majority of the members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number of members may hold hearings.

(9) CHAIRPERSON AND VICE CHAIRPERSON.—The Commission shall select a Chairperson and Vice Chairperson from among the members of the Commission.

(c) DUTIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Commission shall—

(A) conduct a comprehensive study of alternatives to replace or to supplement the fuel tax as the principal revenue source to support the Highway Trust Fund and suggest new or alternative sources of revenue to fund the needs of the surface transportation system over at least the next 30 years;

(B) conduct the study in a manner that builds on—

(i) findings, conclusions, and recommendations of the recent study conducted by the Transportation Research Board on alternatives to the fuel tax to support highway program financing; and

(ii) other relevant prior research;

(C) consult with the Secretary and the Secretary of the Treasury in conducting the study to ensure that the views of the Secretaries concerning essential attributes of Highway Trust Fund revenue alternatives are considered;

(D) consult with representatives of State Departments of Transportation and metropolitan planning organizations and other key interested stakeholders in conducting the study to ensure that—

(i) the views of the stakeholders on alternative revenue sources to support State transportation improvement programs are considered; and

(ii) any recommended Federal financing strategy takes into account State financial requirements; and

(E) based on the study, make specific recommendations regarding—

(i) actions that should be taken to develop alternative revenue sources to support the Highway Trust Fund; and

(ii) the time frame for taking those actions.

(2) SPECIFIC MATTERS.—The study shall address specifically—

(A) the advantages and disadvantages of alternative revenue sources to meet anticipated Federal surface transportation financial requirements;

(B) recommendations concerning the most promising revenue sources to support long-term Federal surface transportation financing requirements;

(C) development of a broad transition strategy to move from the current tax base to new funding mechanisms, including the time frame for various components of the transition strategy;

(D) recommendations for additional research that may be needed to implement recommended alternatives; and

(E) the extent to which revenues should reflect the relative use of the highway system.

(3) RELATED WORK.—To the maximum extent practicable, the study shall build on related work that has been done by—

(A) the Secretary of Transportation;

(B) the Secretary of Energy;

(C) the Transportation Research Board; and

(D) other entities and persons.

(4) FACTORS.—In developing recommendations under this subsection, the Commission shall consider—

(A) the ability to generate sufficient revenues from all modes to meet anticipated long-term surface transportation financing needs;

(B) the roles of the various levels of government and the private sector in meeting future surface transportation financing needs;

(C) administrative costs (including enforcement costs) to implement each option;

(D) the expected increase in non-taxed fuels and the impact of taxing those fuels;

(E) the likely technological advances that could ease implementation of each option;

(F) the equity and economic efficiency of each option;

(G) the flexibility of different options to allow various pricing alternatives to be implemented; and

(H) potential compatibility issues with State and local tax mechanisms under each alternative.

(5) REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS.—Not later than September 30, 2007, the Commission shall submit to Congress a final report that contains—

(A) a detailed statement of the findings and conclusions of the Commission; and

(B) the recommendations of the Commission for such legislation and administrative actions as the Commission considers appropriate.

(d) POWERS.—

(1) HEARINGS.—The Commission may hold such hearings, meet and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence as the Commission considers advisable to carry out this section.

(2) INFORMATION FROM FEDERAL AGENCIES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Commission may secure directly from a Federal agency such information as the Commission considers necessary to carry out this section.

(B) PROVISION OF INFORMATION.—On request of the Chairperson of the Commission, the head of the agency shall provide the information to the Commission.

(3) POSTAL SERVICES.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other agencies of the Federal Government.

(4) DONATIONS.—The Commission may accept, use, and dispose of donations of services or property.

(e) COMMISSION PERSONNEL MATTERS.—

(1) MEMBERS.—A member of the Commission shall serve without pay but shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for an employee of an agency under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, while away from the home or regular place of business of the member in the performance of the duties of the Commission.

(2) CONTRACTOR.—The Commission may contract with an appropriate organization, agency, or entity to conduct the study required under this section, under the strategic guidance of the Commission.

(3) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—On the request of the Commission, the Administrator of the Federal Highway Administration shall provide to the Commission, on a reimbursable basis, the administrative support and services necessary for the Commission to carry out the duties of the Commission under this section.

(4) DETAIL OF DEPARTMENT PERSONNEL.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—On the request of the Commission, the Secretary may detail, on a reimbursable basis, any of the personnel of the Department to the Commission to assist the Commission in carrying out the duties of the Commission under this section.

(B) CIVIL SERVICE STATUS.—The detail of the employee shall be without interruption or loss of civil service status or privilege.

(5) COOPERATION.—The staff of the Secretary shall cooperate with the Commission in the study required under this section, including providing such nonconfidential data and information as are necessary to conduct the study.

(f) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), funds made available to carry out this section shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code.

(2) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of the study and the Commission under this section shall be 100 percent.

(3) AVAILABILITY.—Funds made available to carry out this section shall remain available until expended.

(g) Authorization of Appropriations.—There is authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to carry out this section $2,679,245 for fiscal year 2005.

(h) Termination.—

(1) In general.—The Commission shall terminate on the date that is 180 days after the date on which the Commission submits the report of the Commission under subsection (c)(5).

(2) Records.—Not later than the termination date for the Commission, all records and papers of the Commission shall be delivered to the Archivist of the United States for deposit in the National Archives.

(c) Effective Date.—

(1) In general.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to wagers placed after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) Special taxes.—In the case of amendments made by this section relating to special taxes imposed by subchapter B of chapter 35, the amendments made by this section shall take effect on July 1, 2005.

Subtitle D—Safety

SEC. 1401. HIGHWAY SAFETY IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.

(a) Safety Improvement.—

(1) In general.—Section 148 of title 23, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 148. Highway safety improvement program

"(a) Definitions.—In this section:

"(1) Highway safety improvement program.—The term 'highway safety improvement program' means the program carried out under this section.

"(2) Highway safety improvement project.—

"(A) In general.—The term 'highway safety improvement project' means a project described in the State strategic highway safety plan that—

"(i) corrects or improves a hazardous road location or feature; or

"(ii) addresses a highway safety problem.

"(B) Inclusions.—The term 'highway safety improvement project' includes a project for—

"(i) an intersection safety improvement;

"(ii) pavement and shoulder widening (including addition of a passing lane to remedy an unsafe condition);

"(iii) installation of rumble strips or another warning device, if the rumble strips or other warning devices do not adversely affect the safety or mobility of bicyclists and pedestrians;

"(iv) installation of a skid-resistant surface at an intersection or other location with a high frequency of accidents;

"(v) an improvement for pedestrian or bicyclist safety;

"(vi)(I) construction of any project for the elimination of hazards at a railway-highway crossing that is eligible for funding under section 130, including the separation or protection of grades at railway-highway crossings;

"(II) construction of a railway-highway crossing safety feature; or

"(III) the conduct of a model traffic enforcement activity at a railway-highway crossing;

"(vii) construction of a traffic calming feature;

"(viii) elimination of a roadside obstacle;

"(ix) improvement of highway signage and pavement markings;

"(x) installation of a priority control system for emergency vehicles at signalized intersections;

"(xi) installation of a traffic control or other warning device at a location with high accident potential;

"(xii) safety-conscious planning;

"(xiii) improvement in the collection and analysis of crash data;

"(xiv) planning, integrated, interoperable emergency communications, equipment, operational activities, or traffic enforcement activities (including police assistance) relating to workzone safety;

"(xv) installation of guardrails, barriers (including barriers between construction work zones and traffic lanes for the safety of motorists and workers), and crash attenuators;

"(xvi) the addition or retrofitting of structures or other measures to eliminate or reduce accidents involving vehicles and wildlife; or

"(xvii) installation and maintenance of signs (including fluorescent, yellow-green signs) at pedestrian-bicycle crossings and in school zones.

"(3) SAFETY PROJECT UNDER ANY OTHER SECTION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'safety project under any other section' means a project carried out for the purpose of safety under any other section of this title.

"(B) INCLUSION.—The term 'safety project under any other section' includes a project to—

"(i) promote the awareness of the public and educate the public concerning highway safety matters; or

"(ii) enforce highway safety laws.

"(4) STATE HIGHWAY SAFETY IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.—The term 'State highway safety improvement program' means projects or strategies included in the State strategic highway safety plan carried out as part of the State transportation improvement program under section 135(f).

"(5) STATE STRATEGIC HIGHWAY SAFETY PLAN.—The term 'State strategic highway safety plan' means a plan developed by the State transportation department that—

"(A) is developed after consultation with—

"(i) a highway safety representative of the Governor of the State;

"(ii) regional transportation planning organizations and metropolitan planning organizations, if any;

"(iii) representatives of major modes of transportation;

"(iv) State and local traffic enforcement officials;

"(v) persons responsible for administering section 130 at the State level;

"(vi) representatives conducting Operation Lifesaver;

"(vii) representatives conducting a motor carrier safety program under section 31104 or 31107 of title 49;

"(viii) motor vehicle administration agencies; and

"(ix) other major State and local safety stakeholders;

"(B) analyzes and makes effective use of State, regional, or local crash data;

"(C) addresses engineering, management, operation, education, enforcement, and emergency services elements (including integrated, interoperable emergency communications) of highway safety as key factors in evaluating highway projects;

"(D) considers safety needs of, and high-fatality segments of, public roads;

"(E) considers the results of State, regional, or local transportation and highway safety planning processes;

"(F) describes a program of projects or strategies to reduce or eliminate safety hazards;

"(G) is approved by the Governor of the State or a responsible State agency; and

"(H) is consistent with the requirements of section 135(f).

"(b) PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall carry out a highway safety improvement program.

"(2) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the highway safety improvement program shall be to achieve a significant reduction in traffic fatalities and serious injuries on public roads.

"(c) ELIGIBILITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—To obligate funds apportioned under section 104(b)(5) to carry out this section, a State shall have in effect a State highway safety improvement program under which the State—

"(A) develops and implements a State strategic highway safety plan that identifies and analyzes highway safety problems and opportunities as provided in paragraph (2);

"(B) produces a program of projects or strategies to reduce identified safety problems;

"(C) evaluates the plan on a regular basis to ensure the accuracy of the data and priority of proposed improvements; and

"(D) submits to the Secretary an annual report that—

"(i) describes, in a clearly understandable fashion, not less than 5 percent of locations determined by the State, using criteria established in accordance with paragraph (2)(B)(ii), as exhibiting the most severe safety needs; and

"(ii) contains an assessment of—

"(I) potential remedies to hazardous locations identified;

"(II) estimated costs associated with those remedies; and

"(III) impediments to implementation other than cost associated with those remedies.

"(2) IDENTIFICATION AND ANALYSIS OF HIGHWAY SAFETY PROBLEMS AND OPPORTUNITIES.—As part of the State strategic highway safety plan, a State shall—

"(A) have in place a crash data system with the ability to perform safety problem identification and countermeasure analysis;

"(B) based on the analysis required by subparagraph (A)—

"(i) identify hazardous locations, sections, and elements (including roadside obstacles, railway-highway crossing needs, and unmarked or poorly marked roads) that constitute a danger to motorists, bicyclists, pedestrians, and other highway users; and

"(ii) using such criteria as the State determines to be appropriate, establish the relative severity of those locations, in terms of accidents, injuries, deaths, traffic volume levels, and other relevant data;

"(C) adopt strategic and performance-based goals that—

"(i) address traffic safety, including behavioral and infrastructure problems and opportunities on all public roads;

"(ii) focus resources on areas of greatest need; and

"(iii) are coordinated with other State highway safety programs;

"(D) advance the capabilities of the State for traffic records data collection, analysis, and integration with other sources of safety data (such as road inventories) in a manner that—

"(i) complements the State highway safety program under chapter 4 and the commercial vehicle safety plan under section 31102 of title 49;

"(ii) includes all public roads;

"(iii) identifies hazardous locations, sections, and elements on public roads that constitute a danger to motorists, bicyclists, pedestrians, and other highway users; and

"(iv) includes a means of identifying the relative severity of hazardous locations described in clause (iii) in terms of accidents, injuries, deaths, and traffic volume levels;

"(E)(i) determine priorities for the correction of hazardous road locations, sections, and elements (including railway-highway crossing improvements), as identified through crash data analysis;

"(ii) identify opportunities for preventing the development of such hazardous conditions; and

"(iii) establish and implement a schedule of highway safety improvement projects for hazard correction and hazard prevention; and

"(F)(i) establish an evaluation process to analyze and assess results achieved by highway safety improvement projects carried out in accordance with procedures and criteria established by this section; and

"(ii) use the information obtained under clause (i) in setting priorities for highway safety improvement projects.

"(d) ELIGIBLE PROJECTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A State may obligate funds apportioned to the State under section 104(b)(5) to carry out—

"(A) any highway safety improvement project on any public road or publicly owned bicycle or pedestrian pathway or trail; or

"(B) as provided in subsection (e), for other safety projects.

"(2) USE OF OTHER FUNDING FOR SAFETY.—

"(A) EFFECT OF SECTION.—Nothing in this section prohibits the use of funds made available under other provisions of this title for highway safety improvement projects.

"(B) USE OF OTHER FUNDS.—States are encouraged to address the full scope of their safety needs and opportunities by using funds made available under other provisions of this title (except a provision that specifically prohibits that use).

"(e) FLEXIBLE FUNDING FOR STATES WITH A STRATEGIC HIGHWAY SAFETY PLAN.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—To further the implementation of a State strategic highway safety plan, a State may use up to 25 percent of the amount of funds made available under this section for a fiscal year to carry out safety projects under any other section as provided in the State strategic highway safety plan.

"(2) OTHER TRANSPORTATION AND HIGHWAY SAFETY PLANS.—Nothing in this subsection requires a State to revise any State process, plan, or program in effect on the date of enactment of this section.

"(f) REPORTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A State shall submit to the Secretary a report that—

"(A) describes progress being made to implement highway safety improvement projects under this section;

"(B) assesses the effectiveness of those improvements; and

"(C) describes the extent to which the improvements funded under this section contribute to the goals of—

"(i) reducing the number of fatalities on roadways;

"(ii) reducing the number of roadway-related injuries;

"(iii) reducing the occurrences of roadway-related crashes;

"(iv) mitigating the consequences of roadway-related crashes; and

"(v) reducing the occurrences of roadway-railroad grade crossing crashes.

"(2) CONTENTS; SCHEDULE.—The Secretary shall establish the content and schedule for a report under paragraph (1).

"(3) TRANSPARENCY.—The Secretary shall make reports under subsection (c)(1)(D) available to the public through—

"(A) the Internet site of the Department; and

"(B) such other means as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(4) DISCOVERY AND ADMISSION INTO EVIDENCE OF CERTAIN REPORTS, SURVEYS, AND INFORMATION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, reports, surveys, schedules, lists, or data compiled or collected for any purpose directly relating to paragraph (1) or subsection (c)(1)(D), or published by the Secretary in accordance with paragraph (3), shall not be subject to discovery or admitted into evidence in a Federal or State court proceeding or considered for other purposes in any action for damages arising from any occurrence at a location identified or addressed in such reports, surveys, schedules, lists, or other data.

"(g) FEDERAL SHARE OF HIGHWAY SAFETY IMPROVEMENT PROJECTS.—Except as provided in sections 120 and 130, the Federal share of the cost of a highway safety improvement project carried out with funds made available under this section shall be 90 percent.

"(h) FUNDS FOR BICYCLE AND PEDESTRIAN SAFETY.—A State shall allocate for bicycle and pedestrian improvements in the State a percentage of the funds remaining after implementation of sections 130(e) and 150, in an amount that is equal to or greater than the percentage of all fatal crashes in the States involving bicyclists and pedestrians.

"(i) ROADWAY SAFETY IMPROVEMENTS FOR OLDER DRIVERS AND PEDESTRIANS.—For each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, $22,327,044 is authorized to be appropriated out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) for projects in all States to improve traffic signs and pavement markings in a manner consistent with the recommendations included in the publication of the Federal Highway Administration entitled 'Guidelines and Recommendations to Accommodate Older Drivers and Pedestrians (FHWA-RD-01-103)' and dated October 2001.".

(2) ALLOCATIONS OF APPORTIONED FUNDS.—Section 133(d) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking paragraph (1);

(B) by redesignating paragraphs (2) through (5) as paragraphs (1) through (4), respectively;

(C) in paragraph (2) (as redesignated by subparagraph (B))—

(i) in the first sentence of subparagraph (A)—

(I) by striking "subparagraphs (C) and (D)" and inserting "subparagraph (C)"; and

(II) by striking "80 percent" and inserting "90 percent";

(ii) in subparagraph (B), by striking "tobe" and inserting "to be";

(iii) by striking subparagraph (C);

(iv) by redesignating subparagraphs (D) and (E) as subparagraphs (C) and (D), respectively; and

(v) in subparagraph (C) (as redesignated by clause (iv)), by adding a period at the end; and

(D) in paragraph (4)(A) (as redesignated by subparagraph (B)), by striking "paragraph (2)" and inserting "paragraph (1)".

(3) ADMINISTRATION.—Section 133(e) of title 23, United States Code, is amended in each of paragraphs (3)(B)(i), (5)(A), and (5)(B) of subsection (e), by striking "(d)(2)" each place it appears and inserting "(d)(1)".

(4) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) The analysis for chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 148 and inserting the following:

"148. Highway safety improvement program.".

(B) Section 104(g) of title 23, United States Code, is amended in the first sentence by striking "sections 130, 144, and 152 of this title" and inserting "sections 130 and 144".

(C) Section 126 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(i) in subsection (a), by inserting "under" after "State's apportionment"; and

(ii) in subsection (b)—

(I) in the first sentence, by striking "the last sentence of section 133(d)(1) or to section 104(f) or to section 133(d)(3)" and inserting "section 104(f) or 133(d)(2)"; and

(II) in the second sentence, by striking "or 133(d)(2)".

(D) Sections 154, 164, and 409 of title 23, United States Code, are amended by striking "152" each place it appears and inserting "148".

(b) APPORTIONMENT OF HIGHWAY SAFETY IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM FUNDS.—Section 104(b) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by inserting after "Improvement program," the following: "the highway safety improvement program,"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(5) HIGHWAY SAFETY IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—For the highway safety improvement program, in accordance with the following formula:

"(i) 25 percent of the apportionments in the ratio that—

"(I) the total lane miles of Federal-aid highways in each State; bears to

"(II) the total lane miles of Federal-aid highways in all States.

"(ii) 40 percent of the apportionments in the ratio that—

"(I) the total vehicle miles traveled on lanes on Federal-aid highways in each State; bears to

"(II) the total vehicle miles traveled on lanes on Federal-aid highways in all States.

"(iii) 35 percent of the apportionments in the ratio that—

"(I) the estimated tax payments attributable to highway users in each State paid into the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) in the latest fiscal year for which data are available; bears to

"(II) the estimated tax payments attributable to highway users in all States paid into the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) in the latest fiscal year for which data are available.

"(B) MINIMUM APPORTIONMENT.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), each State shall receive a minimum of ½ of 1 percent of the funds apportioned under this paragraph.".

(c) ELIMINATION OF HAZARDS RELATING TO RAILWAY-HIGHWAY CROSSINGS.—

(1) FUNDS FOR RAILWAY-HIGHWAY CROSSINGS.—Section 130(e) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting before "At least" the following: "For each fiscal year, at least $178,616,352 of the funds authorized and expended under section 148 shall be available for the elimination of hazards and the installation of protective devices at railway-highway crossings.".

(2) BIENNIAL REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—Section 130(g) of title 23, United States Code, is amended in the third sentence—

(A) by inserting "and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation," after "Public Works"; and

(B) by striking "not later than April 1 of each year" and inserting "every other year".

(3) EXPENDITURE OF FUNDS.—Section 130 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(k) EXPENDITURE OF FUNDS.—Funds made available to carry out this section shall be—

"(1) available for expenditure on compilation and analysis of data in support of activities carried out under subsection (g); and

"(2) apportioned in accordance with section 104(b)(5).".

(d) TRANSITION.—

(1) IMPLEMENTATION.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary shall approve obligations of funds apportioned under section 104(b)(5) of title 23, United States Code (as added by subsection (b)) to carry out section 148 of that title, only if, not later than October 1 of the second fiscal year after the date of enactment of this Act, a State has developed and implemented a State strategic highway safety plan as required under section 148(c) of that title.

(2) INTERIM PERIOD.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Before October 1 of the second fiscal year after the date of enactment of this Act and until the date on which a State develops and implements a State strategic highway safety plan, the Secretary shall apportion funds to a State for the highway safety improvement program and the State may obligate funds apportioned to the State for the highway safety improvement program under section 148 for projects that were eligible for funding under sections 130 and 152 of that title, as in effect on the day before the date of enactment of this Act.

(B) NO STRATEGIC HIGHWAY SAFETY PLAN.—If a State has not developed a strategic highway safety plan by October 1 of the second fiscal year after the date of enactment of this Act, but certifies to the Secretary that progress is being made toward developing and implementing such a plan, the Secretary shall continue to apportion funds for 1 additional fiscal year for the highway safety improvement program under section 148 of title 23, United States Code, to the State, and the State may continue to obligate funds apportioned to the State under this section for projects that were eligible for funding under sections 130 and 152 of that title, as in effect on the day before the date of enactment of this Act.

(C) PENALTY.—If a State has not adopted a strategic highway safety plan by the date that is 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, funds made available to the State under section 1101(6) shall be redistributed to other States in accordance with section 104(b)(3) of title 23, United States Code.

SEC. 1402. OPERATION LIFESAVER.

Section 104(d)(1) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "subsection (b)(3)" and inserting "subsection (b)(5)"; and

(2) by striking "$500,000" and inserting "$535,849".

SEC. 1403. LICENSE SUSPENSION.

Section 164(a) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraph (3) and inserting the following:

"(3) LICENSE SUSPENSION.—The term 'license suspension' means—

"(A) the suspension of all driving privileges of an individual for the duration of the suspension period; or

"(B) a combination of suspension of all driving privileges of an individual for the first 90 days of the suspension period, followed by reinstatement of limited driving privileges requiring the individual to operate only motor vehicles equipped with an ignition interlock system or other device approved by the Secretary during the remainder of the suspension period.".

SEC. 1404. BUS AXLE WEIGHT EXEMPTION.

Section 1023 of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (23 U.S.C. 127 note; 105 Stat. 1951) is amended by striking subsection (h) and inserting the following:

"(h) OVER-THE-ROAD BUS AND PUBLIC TRANSIT VEHICLE EXEMPTION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The second sentence of section 127 of title 23, United States Code (relating to axle weight limitations for vehicles using the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways), shall not apply to—

“(A) any over-the-road bus (as defined in section 301 of the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12181)); or “(B) any vehicle that is regularly and exclusively used as an intrastate public agency transit passenger bus.

“(2) STATE ACTION.—No State or political subdivision of a State, or any political authority of 2 or more States, shall impose any axle weight limitation on any vehicle described in paragraph (1) in any case in which such a vehicle is using the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways.”.

SEC. 1405. SAFE ROUTES TO SCHOOLS PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter I of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 149 the following:

“§ 150. Safe routes to schools program

“(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) PRIMARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOL.—The term ‘primary and secondary school’ means a school that provides education to children in any of grades kindergarten through 12.

“(2) PROGRAM.—The term ‘program’ means the safe routes to schools program established under subsection (b).

“(3) VICINITY OF A SCHOOL.—The term ‘vicinity of a school’ means the area within 2 miles of a primary or secondary school.

“(b) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish and carry out a safe routes to school program for the benefit of children in primary and secondary schools in accordance with this section.

“(c) PURPOSES.—The purposes of the program shall be—

“(1) to enable and to encourage children to walk and bicycle to school;

“(2) to encourage a healthy and active lifestyle by making walking and bicycling to school safer and more appealing transportation alternatives; and

“(3) to facilitate the planning, development, and implementation of projects and activities that will improve safety in the vicinity of schools.

“(d) ELIGIBLE RECIPIENTS.—A State shall use amounts apportioned under this section to provide financial assistance to State, regional, and local agencies that demonstrate an ability to meet the requirements of this section.

“(e) ELIGIBLE PROJECTS AND ACTIVITIES.—

“(1) INFRASTRUCTURE-RELATED PROJECTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Amounts apportioned to a State under this section may be used for the planning, design, and construction of infrastructure-related projects to encourage walking and bicycling to school, including—

“(i) sidewalk improvements;

“(ii) traffic calming and speed reduction improvements;

“(iii) pedestrian and bicycle crossing improvements;

“(iv) on-street bicycle facilities;

“(v) off-street bicycle and pedestrian facilities;

“(vi) secure bicycle parking facilities;

“(vii) traffic signal improvements; and

“(viii) pedestrian-railroad grade crossing improvements.

“(B) LOCATION OF PROJECTS.—Infrastructure-related projects under subparagraph (A) may be carried out on—

“(i) any public road in the vicinity of a school; or “(ii) any bicycle or pedestrian pathway or trail in the vicinity of a school.

“(2) BEHAVIORAL ACTIVITIES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—In addition to projects described in paragraph (1), amounts apportioned to a State under this section may be used for behavioral activities to encourage walking and bicycling to school, including—

“(i) public awareness campaigns and outreach to press and community leaders;

“(ii) traffic education and enforcement in the vicinity of schools; and

“(iii) student sessions on bicycle and pedestrian safety, health, and environment.

“(B) ALLOCATION.—Of the amounts apportioned to a State under this section for a fiscal year, not less than 10 percent shall be used for behavioral activities under this paragraph.

“(f) FUNDING.—

“(1) SET ASIDE.—Before apportioning amounts to carry out section 148 for a fiscal year, the Secretary shall set aside and use $62,515,723 to carry out this section.

“(2) APPORTIONMENT.—Amounts made available to carry out this section shall be apportioned to States in accordance with section 104(b)(5).

“(3) ADMINISTRATION OF AMOUNTS.—Amounts apportioned to a State under this section shall be administered by the State transportation department.

“(4) FEDERAL SHARE.—Except as provided in sections 120 and 130, the Federal share of the cost of a project or activity funded under this section shall be 90 percent.

“(5) PERIOD OF AVAILABILITY.—Notwithstanding section 118(b)(2), amounts apportioned under this section shall remain available until expended.”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 149 the following:

“150. Safe routes to school program.”.

SEC. 1406. PURCHASES OF EQUIPMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 152 of title 23, United States Code is amended to read as follows:

“§ 152. Purchases of equipment

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), a State carrying out a project under this chapter shall purchase device, tool or other equipment needed for the project only after completing and providing a written analysis demonstrating the cost savings associated with purchasing the equipment compared with renting the equipment from a qualified equipment rental provider before the project commences

“(b) APPLICABILITY.—This section shall apply to—

“(1) earth moving, road machinery, and material handling equipment, or any other item, with a purchase price in excess of $75,000; and

“(2) aerial work platforms with a purchase price in excess of $25,000.”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 152 and inserting the following:

“152. Purchases of equipment.”.

SEC. 1407. WORKZONE SAFETY.

Section 358(b) of the National Highway System Designation Act of 1995 (109 Stat. 625) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(7) Recommending all federally-assisted projects in excess of $15,000,000 to enter into contracts only with work zone safety services contractors, traffic control contractors, and trench safety and shoring contractors that carry general liability insurance in an amount not less than $15,000,000.

“(8) Recommending federally-assisted projects the costs of which exceed $15,000,000 to include work zone intelligent transportation systems that are—

“(A) provided by a qualified vendor; and

“(B) monitored continuously.

“(9) Recommending federally-assisted projects to fully fund not less than 5 percent of project costs for work zone safety and temporary traffic control measures, in addition to the cost of the project, which measures shall be provided by a qualified work zone safety or traffic control provider.

“(10) Ensuring that any recommendation made under any of paragraphs (7) through (9) provides for an exemption for applicability to a State, with respect to a project or class of projects, to the extent that a State notifies the Secretary in writing that safety is not expected to be adversely affected by non-application of the requirement to the project or class of projects.”.

SEC. 1408. WORKER INJURY PREVENTION AND FREE FLOW OF VEHICULAR TRAFFIC.

Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall promulgate regulations—

(1) to decrease the probability of worker injury;

(2) to maintain the free flow of vehicular traffic by requiring workers whose duties place the workers on, or in close proximity to, a Federal-aid highway (as defined in section 101 of title 23, United States Code) to wear high-visibility clothing; and

(3) to require such other worker-safety measures for workers described in paragraph (2) as the Secretary determines appropriate.

SEC. 1409. IDENTITY AUTHENTICATION STANDARDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1824(a)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

“§ 179. Identity authentication standards

“(a) DEFINITION OF INFORMATION-BASED IDENTITY AUTHENTICATION.—In this section, the term ‘information-based identity authentication’ means the determination of the identity of an individual, through the comparison of information provided by a person, with other information pertaining to that individual with a system using scoring models and algorithms.

“(b) STANDARDS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Homeland Security and the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration, shall promulgate regulations establishing minimum standards for State departments of motor vehicles regarding the use of information-based identity authentication to determine the identity of an applicant for a commercial driver's license, or the renewal, transfer or upgrading, of a commercial driver's license.

“(c) MINIMUM STANDARDS.—The regulations shall, at a minimum, require State departments of motor vehicles to implement, and applicants for commercial driver's licenses, (or the renewal, transfer, or upgrading of commercial driver's licenses), to comply with, reasonable procedures for operating an information-based identity authentication program before issuing, renewing, transferring, or upgrading a commercial driver's license.

“(d) KEY FACTORS.—In promulgating regulations under this section, the Secretary shall require that an information-based identity authentication program carried out under this section establish processes that—

“(1) use multiple sources of matching information;

"(2) enable the measurement of the accuracy of the determination of an applicant's identity;

"(3) support continuous auditing of compliance with applicable laws, policies, and practices governing the collection, use, and distribution of information in the operation of the program; and

"(4) incorporate industry best practices to protect significant privacy interests in the information used in the program and the appropriate safeguarding of the storage of the information.".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter I of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1824(b)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"179. Identity authentication standards.".

SEC. 1410. OPEN CONTAINER REQUIREMENTS.

Section 154 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking subsection (c) and inserting the following:

"(c) Transfer of Funds.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary shall withhold the applicable percentage for the fiscal year of the amount required to be apportioned for Federal-aid highways to any State under each of paragraphs (1), (3), and (4) of section 104(b), if a State has not enacted or is not enforcing a provision described in subsection (b), as follows:

"For:	The applicable percentage is:
Fiscal year 2008	2 percent.
Fiscal year 2009	2 percent.
Fiscal year 2010	2 percent.
Fiscal year 2011 and each subsequent fiscal year	2 percent.

"(2) Restoration.—If (during the 4-year period beginning on the date the apportionment for any State is reduced in accordance with this subsection) the Secretary determines that the State has enacted and is enforcing a provision described in subsection (b), the apportionment of the State shall be increased by an amount equal to the amount of the reduction made during the 4-year period.".

Subtitle E—Environmental Planning and Review

CHAPTER 1—TRANSPORTATION PLANNING

SEC. 1501. INTEGRATION OF NATURAL RESOURCE CONCERNS INTO STATE AND METROPOLITAN TRANSPORTATION PLANNING.

(a) Metropolitan Planning.—Section 134(f) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) in subparagraph (D)—

(i) by inserting after "environment" the following: "(including the protection of habitat, water quality, and agricultural and forest land, while minimizing invasive species)"; and

(ii) by inserting before the semicolon the following: "(including minimizing adverse health effects from mobile source air pollution and promoting the linkage of the transportation and development goals of the metropolitan area)"; and

(B) in subparagraph (G), by inserting "and efficient use" after "preservation";

(2) by redesignating paragraph (2) as paragraph (3); and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following:

"(2) Selection of factors.—After soliciting and considering any relevant public comments, the metropolitan planning organization shall determine which of the factors described in paragraph (1) are most appropriate for the metropolitan area to consider.".

(b) Statewide Planning.—Section 135(c) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) in subparagraph (D)—

(i) by inserting after "environment" the following: "(including the protection of habitat, water quality, and agricultural and forest land, while minimizing invasive species)"; and

(ii) by inserting before the semicolon the following: "(including minimizing adverse health effects from mobile source air pollution and promoting the linkage of the transportation and development goals of the State)"; and

(B) in subparagraph (G), by inserting "and efficient use" after "preservation";

(2) by redesignating paragraph (2) as paragraph (3); and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following:

"(2) Selection of projects and strategies.—After soliciting and considering any relevant public comments, the State shall determine which of the projects and strategies described in paragraph (1) are most appropriate for the State to consider.".

SEC. 1502. CONSULTATION BETWEEN TRANSPORTATION AGENCIES AND RESOURCE AGENCIES IN TRANSPORTATION PLANNING.

(a) In General.—Section 134(g) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by redesignating subparagraphs (B) through (D) as subparagraphs (C) through (E), respectively; and

(B) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following:

"(B) Mitigation activities.—

"(i) In general.—A long-range transportation plan shall include a discussion of—

"(I) types of potential habitat, hydrological, and environmental mitigation activities that may assist in compensating for loss of habitat, wetland, and other environmental functions; and

"(II) potential areas to carry out these activities, including a discussion of areas that may have the greatest potential to restore and maintain the habitat types and hydrological or environmental functions affected by the plan.

"(ii) Consultation.—The discussion shall be developed in consultation with Federal, State, and tribal wildlife, land management, and regulatory agencies.";

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) as paragraphs (5), (6), and (7), respectively; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following:

"(4) Consultation.—

"(A) In general.—In each metropolitan area, the metropolitan planning organization shall consult, as appropriate, with State and local agencies responsible for land use management, natural resources, environmental protection, conservation, and historic preservation concerning the development of a long-range transportation plan.

"(B) Issues.—The consultation shall involve—

"(i) comparison of transportation plans with State conservation plans or with maps, if available;

"(ii) comparison of transportation plans to inventories of natural or historic resources, if available; or

"(iii) consideration of areas where wildlife crossing structures may be needed to ensure connectivity between wildlife habitat linkage areas.".

(b) Improved Consultation During State Transportation Planning.—

(1) In general.—Section 135(e)(2) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(D) Consultation, comparison, and consideration.—

"(i) In general.—The long-range transportation plan shall be developed, as appropriate, in consultation with State and local agencies responsible for—

"(I) land use management;

"(II) natural resources;

"(III) environmental protection;

"(IV) conservation; and

"(V) historic preservation.

"(ii) Comparison and consideration.—Consultation under clause (i) shall involve—

"(I) comparison of transportation plans to State conservation plans or maps, if available;

"(II) comparison of transportation plans to inventories of natural or historic resources, if available; or

"(III) consideration of areas where wildlife crossing structures may be needed to ensure connectivity between wildlife habitat linkage areas.".

(2) Additional requirements.—Section 135(e) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by redesignating paragraphs (4) and (5) as paragraphs (6) and (7), respectively; and

(B) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following:

"(4) Mitigation activities.—

"(A) In general.—A long-range transportation plan shall include a discussion of—

"(i) types of potential habitat, hydrological, and environmental mitigation activities that may assist in compensating for loss of habitat, wetlands, and other environmental functions; and

"(ii) potential areas to carry out these activities, including a discussion of areas that may have the greatest potential to restore and maintain the habitat types and hydrological or environmental functions affected by the plan.

"(B) Consultation.—The discussion shall be developed in consultation with Federal, State, and tribal wildlife, land management, and regulatory agencies.

"(5) Transportation strategies.—A long-range transportation plan shall identify transportation strategies necessary to efficiently serve the mobility needs of people.".

SEC. 1503. INTEGRATION OF NATURAL RESOURCE CONCERNS INTO TRANSPORTATION PROJECT PLANNING.

Section 109(c)(2) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "consider the results" and inserting "consider—

"(A) the results";

(2) by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(B) the publication entitled 'Flexibility in Highway Design' of the Federal Highway Administration;

"(C) 'Eight Characteristics of Process to Yield Excellence and the Seven Qualities of Excellence in Transportation Design' developed by the conference held during 1998 entitled 'Thinking Beyond the Pavement National Workshop on Integrating Highway Development with Communities and the Environment while Maintaining Safety and Performance'; and

"(D) any other material that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.".

SEC. 1504. PUBLIC INVOLVEMENT IN TRANSPORTATION PLANNING AND PROJECTS.

(a) METROPOLITAN PLANNING.—

(1) PARTICIPATION BY INTERESTED PARTIES.—Section 134(g)(5) of title 23, United States Code (as redesignated by section 1502(a)(1)), is amended—

(A) by striking "Before approving" and inserting the following:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Before approving"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"(B) METHODS.—In carrying out subparagraph (A), the metropolitan planning organization shall, to the maximum extent practicable—

"(i) hold any public meetings at convenient and accessible locations and times;

"(ii) employ visualization techniques to describe plans; and

"(iii) make public information available in electronically accessible format and means, such as the World Wide Web.".

(2) PUBLICATION OF LONG-RANGE TRANSPORTATION PLANS.—Section 134(g)(6)(i) of title 23, United States Code (as redesignated by section 1502(a)(1)), is amended by inserting before the semicolon the following: ", including (to the maximum extent practicable) in electronically accessible formats and means such as the World Wide Web".

(b) STATEWIDE PLANNING.—

(1) PARTICIPATION BY INTERESTED PARTIES.—Section 135(e)(3) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking subparagraph (B) and inserting the following:

"(B) METHODS.—In carrying out subparagraph (A), the State shall, to the maximum extent practicable—

"(i) hold any public meetings at convenient and accessible locations and times;

"(ii) employ visualization techniques to describe plans; and

"(iii) make public information available in electronically accessible format and means, such as the World Wide Web.".

(2) PUBLICATION OF LONG-RANGE TRANSPORTATION PLANS.—Section 135(e) of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1502(b)(2)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(8) PUBLICATION OF LONG-RANGE TRANSPORTATION PLANS.—Each long-range transportation plan prepared by a State shall be published or otherwise made available, including (to the maximum extent practicable) in electronically accessible formats and means, such as the World Wide Web.".

SEC. 1505. PROJECT MITIGATION.

(a) MITIGATION FOR NATIONAL HIGHWAY SYSTEM PROJECTS.—Section 103(b)(6)(M) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(i)" after "(M); and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(ii) State habitat, streams, and wetlands mitigation efforts under section 155.".

(b) MITIGATION FOR SURFACE TRANSPORTATION PROGRAM PROJECTS.—Section 133(b)(11) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(A)" after "(11)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(B) State habitat, streams, and wetlands mitigation efforts under section 155.".

(c) STATE HABITAT, STREAMS, AND WETLANDS MITIGATION FUNDS.—Section 155 of title 23, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 155. State habitat, streams, and wetlands mitigation funds

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—A State should establish a habitat, streams, and wetlands mitigation fund (referred to in this section as a 'State fund').

"(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of a State fund is to encourage efforts for habitat, streams, and wetlands mitigation in advance of or in conjunction with highway or transit projects to—

"(1) ensure that the best habitat, streams, and wetland mitigation sites now available are used; and

"(2) accelerate transportation project delivery by making high-quality habitat, streams, and wetland mitigation credits available when needed.

"(c) FUNDS.—A State may deposit into a State fund part of the funds apportioned to the State under—

"(1) section 104(b)(1) for the National Highway System; and

"(2) section 104(b)(3) for the surface transportation program.

"(d) USE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Amounts deposited in a State fund shall be used (in a manner consistent with this section) for habitat, streams, or wetlands mitigation related to 1 or more projects funded under this title, including a project under the transportation improvement program of the State developed under section 135(f).

"(2) ENDANGERED SPECIES.—In carrying out this section, a State and cooperating agency shall give consideration to mitigation projects, on-site or off-site, that restore and preserve the best available sites to conserve biodiversity and habitat for—

"(A) Federal or State listed threatened or endangered species of plants and animals; and

"(B) plant or animal species warranting listing as threatened or endangered, as determined by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with section 4(b)(3)(B) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1533(b)(3)(B)).

"(3) MITIGATION IN CLOSED BASINS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A State may use amounts deposited in the State fund for projects to protect existing roadways from anticipated flooding of a closed basin lake, including—

"(i) construction—

"(I) necessary for the continuation of roadway services and the impoundment of water, as the State determines to be appropriate; or

"(II) for a grade raise to permanently restore a roadway the use of which is lost or reduced, or could be lost or reduced, as a result of an actual or predicted water level that is within 3 feet of causing inundation of the roadway in a closed lake basin;

"(ii) monitoring, studies, evaluations, design, or preliminary engineering relating to construction; and

"(iii) monitoring and evaluations relating to proposed construction.

"(B) REIMBURSEMENT.—The Secretary may permit a State that expends funds under subparagraph (A) to be reimbursed for the expenditures through the use of amounts made available under section 125(c)(1).

"(e) CONSISTENCY WITH APPLICABLE REQUIREMENTS.—Contributions from the State fund to mitigation efforts may occur in advance of project construction only if the efforts are consistent with all applicable requirements of Federal law (including regulations).".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 155 and inserting the following:

"155. State habitat, streams, and wetlands mitigation funds.".

CHAPTER 2—TRANSPORTATION PROJECT DEVELOPMENT PROCESS

SEC. 1511. TRANSPORTATION PROJECT DEVELOPMENT PROCESS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 3 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1203(a)), is amended by inserting after section 325 the following:

"§ 326. Transportation project development process

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) AGENCY.—The term 'agency' means any agency, department, or other unit of Federal, State, local, or federally recognized tribal government.

"(2) ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STATEMENT.—The term 'environmental impact statement' means a detailed statement of the environmental impacts of a project required to be prepared under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

"(3) ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW PROCESS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'environmental review process' means the process for preparing, for a project—

"(i) an environmental impact statement; or

"(ii) any other document or analysis required to be prepared under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.)

"(B) INCLUSIONS.—The term 'environmental review process' includes the process for and completion of any environmental permit, approval, review, or study required for a project under any Federal law other than the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

"(4) PROJECT.—The term 'project' means any highway or transit project that requires the approval of the Secretary.

"(5) PROJECT SPONSOR.—The term 'project sponsor' means an agency or other entity (including any private or public-private entity), that seeks approval of the Secretary for a project.

"(6) STATE TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT.—The term 'State transportation department' means any statewide agency of a State with responsibility for transportation.

"(b) PROCESS.—

"(1) LEAD AGENCY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Department of Transportation shall be the lead Federal agency in the environmental review process for a project.

"(B) JOINT LEAD AGENCIES.—Nothing in this section precludes another agency from being a joint lead agency in accordance with regulations under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

"(C) CONCURRENCE OF PROJECT SPONSOR.—The lead agency may carry out the environmental review process in accordance with this section only with the concurrence of the project sponsor.

"(2) REQUEST FOR PROCESS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A project sponsor may request that the lead agency carry out the environmental review process for a project or group of projects in accordance with this section.

"(B) GRANT OF REQUEST; PUBLIC NOTICE.—The lead agency shall—

"(i) grant a request under subparagraph (A); and

"(ii) provide public notice of the request.

"(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The environmental review process described in this section may be applied to a project only after the date on which public notice is provided under subparagraph (B)(ii).

"(c) ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITY OF LEAD AGENCY.—With respect to the environmental review process for any project, the lead agency shall have authority and responsibility to—

“(A) identify and invite cooperating agencies in accordance with subsection (d);

“(B) develop an agency coordination plan with review, schedule, and timelines in accordance with subsection (e);

“(C) determine the purpose and need for the project in accordance with subsection (f);

“(D) determine the range of alternatives to be considered in accordance with subsection (g);

“(E) convene dispute-avoidance and decision resolution meetings and related efforts in accordance with subsection (h);

“(F) take such other actions as are necessary and proper, within the authority of the lead agency, to facilitate the expeditious resolution of the environmental review process for the project; and

“(G) prepare or ensure that any required environmental impact statement or other document required to be completed under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) is completed in accordance with this section and applicable Federal law.

“(d) ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF CO-OPERATING AGENCIES.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—With respect to a project, each Federal agency shall carry out any obligations of the Federal agency in the environmental review process in accordance with this section and applicable Federal law.

“(2) INVITATION.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The lead agency shall—

“(i) identify, as early as practicable in the environmental review process for a project, any other agencies that may have an interest in the project, including—

“(I) agencies with jurisdiction over environmentally-related matters that may affect the project or may be required by law to conduct an environmental-related independent review or analysis of the project or determine whether to issue an environmental-related permit, license, or approval for the project; and

“(II) agencies with special expertise relevant to the project;

“(ii) invite the agencies identified in clause (i) to become participating agencies in the environmental review process for that project; and

“(iii) grant requests to become cooperating agencies from agencies not originally invited.

“(B) RESPONSES.—The deadline for receipt of a response from an agency that receives an invitation under subparagraph (A)(ii)—

“(i) shall be 30 days after the date of receipt by the agency of the invitation; but “(ii) may be extended by the lead agency for good cause.

“(3) DECLINING OF INVITATIONS.—A Federal agency that is invited by the lead agency to participate in the environmental review process for a project shall be designated as a cooperating agency by the lead agency, unless the invited agency informs the lead agency in writing, by the deadline specified in the invitation, that the invited agency—

“(A) has no jurisdiction or authority with respect to the project;

“(B) has no expertise or information relevant to the project; and

“(C) does not intend to submit comments on the project.

“(4) EFFECT OF DESIGNATION.—Designation as a cooperating agency under this subsection shall not imply that the cooperating agency—

“(A) supports a proposed project; or

“(B) has any jurisdiction over, or special expertise with respect to evaluation of, the project.

“(5) DESIGNATIONS FOR CATEGORIES OF PROJECTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may invite other agencies to become cooperating agencies for a category of projects.

“(B) DESIGNATION.—An agency may be designated as a cooperating agency for a category of projects only with the consent of the agency.

“(6) CONCURRENT REVIEWS.—Each Federal agency shall, to the maximum extent practicable—

“(A) carry out obligations of the Federal agency under other applicable law concurrently, and in conjunction, with the review required under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.), unless doing so would impair the ability of the Federal agency to carry out those obligations; and

“(B) formulate and implement administrative, policy, and procedural mechanisms to enable the agency to ensure completion of the environmental review process in a timely, coordinated, and environmentally responsible manner.

“(e) DEVELOPMENT OF FLEXIBLE PROCESS AND TIMELINE.—

“(1) COORDINATION PLAN.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The lead agency shall establish a coordination plan, which may be incorporated into a memorandum of understanding, to coordinate agency and public participation in and comment on the environmental review process for a project or category of projects.

“(B) WORKPLAN.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—The lead agency shall develop, as part of the coordination plan, a workplan for completing the collection, analysis, and evaluation of baseline data and future impacts modeling necessary to complete the environmental review process, including any data, analyses, and modeling necessary for related permits, approvals, reviews, or studies required for the project under other laws.

“(ii) CONSULTATION.—In developing the workplan under clause (i), the lead agency shall consult with—

“(I) each cooperating agency for the project;

“(II) the State in which the project is located; and “(III) if the State is not the project sponsor, the project sponsor.

“(C) SCHEDULE.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—The lead agency shall establish as part of the coordination plan, after consultation with each cooperating agency for the project and with the State in which the project is located (and, if the State is not the project sponsor, with the project sponsor), a schedule for completion of the environmental review process for the project.

“(ii) FACTORS FOR CONSIDERATION.—In establishing the schedule, the lead agency shall consider factors such as—

“(I) the responsibilities of cooperating agencies under applicable laws;

“(II) resources available to the cooperating agencies;

“(III) overall size and complexity of a project;

“(IV) the overall schedule for and cost of a project; and “(V) the sensitivity of the natural and historic resources that could be affected by the project.

“(D) CONSISTENCY WITH OTHER TIME PERIODS.—A schedule under subparagraph (C) shall be consistent with any other relevant time periods established under Federal law.

“(E) MODIFICATION.—The lead agency may—

“(i) lengthen a schedule established under subparagraph (C) for good cause; and “(ii) shorten a schedule only with the concurrence of the affected cooperating agencies.

“(F) DISSEMINATION.—A copy of a schedule under subparagraph (C), and of any modifications to the schedule, shall be—

“(i) provided to all cooperating agencies and to the State transportation department of the State in which the project is located (and, if the State is not the project sponsor, to the project sponsor); and “(ii) made available to the public.

“(2) COMMENTS AND TIMELINES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—A schedule established under paragraph (1)(C) shall include—

“(i) opportunities for comment, deadline for receipt of any comments submitted, deadline for lead agency response to comments; and

“(ii) except as otherwise provided under paragraph (1)—

“(I) an opportunity to comment by agencies and the public on a draft or final environmental impact statement for a period of not more than 60 days longer than the minimum period required under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.); and

“(II) for all other comment periods established by the lead agency for agency or public comments in the environmental review process, a period of not more than the longer of—

“(aa) 30 days after the final day of the minimum period required under Federal law (including regulations), if available; or

“(B) EXTENSION OF COMMENT PERIODS.—The lead agency may extend a period of comment established under this paragraph for good cause.

“(C) LATE COMMENTS.—A comment concerning a project submitted under this paragraph after the date of termination of the applicable comment period or extension of a comment period shall not be eligible for consideration by the lead agency unless the lead agency or project sponsor determines there was good cause for the delay or the lead agency is required to consider significant new circumstances or information in accordance with sections 1501.7 and 1502.9 of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations.

“(D) DEADLINES FOR DECISIONS UNDER OTHER LAWS.—In any case in which a decision under any Federal law relating to a project (including the issuance or denial of a permit or license) is required to be made by the later of the date that is 180 days after the date on which the Secretary made all final decisions of the lead agency with respect to the project, or 180 days after the date on which an application was submitted for the permit or license, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives—

“(i) as soon as practicable after the 180-day period, an initial notice of the failure of the Federal agency to make the decision; and

“(ii) every 60 day thereafter until such date as all decisions of the Federal agency relating to the project have been made by the Federal agency, an additional notice that describes the number of decisions of the Federal agency that remain outstanding as of the date of the additional notice.

"(3) INVOLVEMENT OF THE PUBLIC.—Nothing in this subsection shall reduce any time period provided for public comment in the environmental review process under existing Federal law (including a regulation).

"(f) DEVELOPMENT OF PROJECT PURPOSE AND NEED STATEMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—With respect to the environmental review process for a project, the purpose and need for the project shall be defined in accordance with this subsection.

"(2) AUTHORITY.—The lead agency shall define the purpose and need for a project, including the transportation objectives and any other objectives intended to be achieved by the project.

"(3) INVOLVEMENT OF COOPERATING AGENCIES AND THE PUBLIC.—Before determining the purpose and need for a project, the lead agency shall solicit for 30 days, and consider, any relevant comments on the draft statement of purpose and need for a proposed project received from the public and cooperating agencies.

"(4) EFFECT ON OTHER REVIEWS.—For the purpose of compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) and any other law requiring an agency that is not the lead agency to determine or consider a project purpose or project need, such an agency acting, permitting, or approving under, or otherwise applying, Federal law with respect to a project shall adopt the determination of purpose and need for the project made by the lead agency.

"(5) SAVINGS.—Nothing in this subsection preempts or interferes with any power, jurisdiction, responsibility, or authority of an agency under applicable law (including regulations) with respect to a project.

"(6) CONTENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The statement of purpose and need shall include a clear statement of the objectives that the proposed project is intended to achieve.

"(B) EFFECT ON EXISTING STANDARDS.—Nothing in this subsection shall alter existing standards for defining the purpose and need of a project.

"(7) FACTORS TO CONSIDER.—The lead agency may determine that any of the following factors and documents are appropriate for consideration in determining the purpose of and need for a project:

"(A) Transportation plans and related planning documents developed through the statewide and metropolitan transportation planning process under sections 134 and 135.

"(B) Land use plans adopted by units of State, local, or tribal government (or, in the case of Federal land, by the applicable Federal land management agencies).

"(C) Economic development plans adopted by—

"(i) units of State, local, or tribal government; or

"(ii) established economic development planning organizations or authorities.

"(D) Environmental protection plans, including plans for the protection or treatment of—

"(i) air quality;

"(ii) water quality and runoff;

"(iii) habitat needs of plants and animals;

"(iv) threatened and endangered species;

"(v) invasive species;

"(vi) historic properties; and

"(vii) other environmental resources.

"(E) Any publicly available plans or policies relating to the national defense, national security, or foreign policy of the United States.

"(g) DEVELOPMENT OF PROJECT ALTERNATIVES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—With respect to the environmental review process for a project, the alternatives shall be determined in accordance with this subsection.

"(2) AUTHORITY.—The lead agency shall determine the alternatives to be considered for a project.

"(3) INVOLVEMENT OF COOPERATING AGENCIES AND THE PUBLIC.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Before determining the alternatives for a project, the lead agency shall solicit for 30 days and consider any relevant comments on the proposed alternatives received from the public and cooperating agencies.

"(B) ALTERNATIVES.—The lead agency shall consider—

"(i) alternatives that meet the purpose and need of the project; and

"(ii) the alternative of no action.

"(C) EFFECT ON EXISTING STANDARDS.—Nothing in this subsection shall alter the existing standards for determining the range of alternatives.

"(4) EFFECT ON OTHER REVIEWS.—Any other agency acting under or applying Federal law with respect to a project shall consider only the alternatives determined by the lead agency.

"(5) SAVINGS.—Nothing in this subsection preempts or interferes with any power, jurisdiction, responsibility, or authority of an agency under applicable law (including regulations) with respect to a project.

"(6) FACTORS TO CONSIDER.—The lead agency may determine that any of the following factors and documents are appropriate for consideration in determining the alternatives for a project:

"(A) The overall size and complexity of the proposed action.

"(B) The sensitivity of the potentially affected resources.

"(C) The overall schedule and cost of the project.

"(D) Transportation plans and related planning documents developed through the statewide and metropolitan transportation planning process under sections 134 and 135 of title 23 of the United States Code.

"(E) Land use plans adopted by units of State, local, or tribal government (or, in the case of Federal land, by the applicable Federal land management agencies).

"(F) Economic development plans adopted by—

"(i) units of State, local, or tribal government; or

"(ii) established economic development planning organizations or authorities.

"(G) environmental protection plans, including plans for the protection or treatment of—

"(i) air quality;

"(ii) water quality and runoff;

"(iii) habitat needs of plants and animals;

"(iv) threatened and endangered species;

"(v) invasive species;

"(vi) historic properties; and

"(vii) other environmental resources.

"(H) Any publicly available plans or policies relating to the national defense, national security, or foreign policy of the United States.

"(h) PROMPT ISSUE IDENTIFICATION AND RESOLUTION PROCESS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The lead agency, the project sponsor, and the cooperating agencies shall work cooperatively, in accordance with this section, to identify and resolve issues that could—

"(A) delay completion of the environmental review process; or

"(B) result in denial of any approvals required for the project under applicable laws.

"(2) LEAD AGENCY RESPONSIBILITIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The lead agency, with the assistance of the project sponsor, shall make information available to the cooperating agencies, as early as practicable in the environmental review process, regarding—

"(i) the environmental and socioeconomic resources located within the project area; and

"(ii) the general locations of the alternatives under consideration.

"(B) BASIS FOR INFORMATION.—Information about resources in the project area may be based on existing data sources, including geographic information systems mapping.

"(3) COOPERATING AGENCY RESPONSIBILITIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Based on information received from the lead agency, cooperating agencies shall promptly identify to the lead agency any major issues of concern regarding the potential environmental or socioeconomic impacts of a project.

"(B) MAJOR ISSUES OF CONCERN.—A major issue of concern referred to in subparagraph (A) may include any issue that could substantially delay or prevent an agency from granting a permit or other approval that is needed for a project, as determined by a cooperating agency.

"(4) ISSUE RESOLUTION.—On identification of a major issue of concern under paragraph (3), or at any time upon the request of a project sponsor or the Governor of a State, the lead agency shall promptly convene a meeting with representatives of each of the relevant cooperating agencies, the project sponsor, and the Governor to address and resolve the issue.

"(5) NOTIFICATION.—If a resolution of a major issue of concern under paragraph (4) cannot be achieved by the date that is 30 days after the date on which a meeting under that paragraph is convened, the lead agency shall provide notification of the failure to resolve the major issue of concern to—

"(A) the heads of all cooperating agencies;

"(B) the project sponsor;

"(C) the Governor involved;

"(D) the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate; and

"(E) the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives.

"(i) PERFORMANCE MEASUREMENT.—

"(1) PROGRESS REPORTS.—The Secretary shall establish a program to measure and report on progress toward improving and expediting the planning and environmental review process.

"(2) MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS.—The program shall include, at a minimum—

"(A) the establishment of criteria for measuring consideration of—

"(i) State and metropolitan planning, project planning, and design criteria; and

"(ii) environmental processing times and costs;

"(B) the collection of data to assess performance based on the established criteria; and

"(C) the annual reporting of the results of the performance measurement studies.

"(3) INVOLVEMENT OF THE PUBLIC AND COOPERATING AGENCIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall biennially conduct a survey of agencies participating in the environmental review process under this section to assess the expectations and experiences of each surveyed agency with regard to the planning and environmental review process for projects reviewed under this section.

"(B) PUBLIC PARTICIPATION.—In conducting the survey, the Secretary shall solicit comments from the public.

"(j) ASSISTANCE TO AFFECTED FEDERAL AND STATE AGENCIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may approve a request by a State or recipient to provide funds made available under this title for a highway project, or made available under chapter 53 of title 49 for a mass transit project, to agencies participating in the coordinated environmental review process established under this section in order to provide the resources necessary to meet any time limits established under this section.

"(2) AMOUNTS.—Such requests under paragraph (1) shall be approved only—

"(A) for such additional amounts as the Secretary determines are necessary for the affected Federal and State agencies to meet the time limits for environmental review; and

"(B) if those time limits are less than the customary time necessary for that review.

"(k) JUDICIAL REVIEW AND SAVINGS CLAUSE.—

"(1) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Nothing in this section shall affect the reviewability of any final Federal agency action in any United States district court or State court.

"(2) SAVINGS CLAUSE.—Nothing in this section shall affect—

"(A) the applicability of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) or any other Federal environmental statute; or

"(B) the responsibility of any Federal officer to comply with or enforce such a statute.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The analysis for chapter 3 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 325 (as added by section 1203(f)) the following:

"326. Transportation project development process.".

(2) Section 1309 of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (112 Stat. 232) is repealed.

SEC. 1512. ASSUMPTION OF RESPONSIBILITY FOR CATEGORICAL EXCLUSIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 3 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1511(a)), is amended by inserting after section 326 the following:

"§327. Assumption of responsibility for categorical exclusions

"(a) CATEGORICAL EXCLUSION DETERMINATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may assign, and a State may assume, responsibility for determining whether certain designated activities are included within classes of action identified in regulation by the Secretary that are categorically excluded from requirements for environmental assessments or environmental impact statements pursuant to regulations promulgated by the Council on Environmental Quality under part 1500 of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on October 1, 2003).

"(2) SCOPE OF AUTHORITY.—A determination described in paragraph (1) shall be made by a State in accordance with criteria established by the Secretary and only for types of activities specifically designated by the Secretary.

"(3) CRITERIA.—The criteria under paragraph (2) shall include provisions for public availability of information consistent with section 552 of title 5 and the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

"(b) OTHER APPLICABLE FEDERAL LAWS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If a State assumes responsibility under subsection (a), the Secretary may also assign and the State may assume all or part of the responsibilities of the Secretary for environmental review, consultation, or other related actions required under any Federal law applicable to activities that are classified by the Secretary as categorical exclusions, with the exception of government-to-government consultation with Indian tribes, subject to the same procedural and substantive requirements as would be required if that responsibility were carried out by the Secretary.

"(2) SOLE RESPONSIBILITY.—A State that assumes responsibility under paragraph (1) with respect to a Federal law shall be solely responsible and solely liable for complying with and carrying out that law, and the Secretary shall have no such responsibility or liability.

"(c) MEMORANDA OF UNDERSTANDING.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary and the State, after providing public notice and opportunity for comment, shall enter into a memorandum of understanding setting forth the responsibilities to be assigned under this section and the terms and conditions under which the assignments are made, including establishment of the circumstances under which the Secretary would reassume responsibility for categorical exclusion determinations.

"(2) TERM.—A memorandum of understanding—

"(A) shall have term of not more than 3 years; and

"(B) shall be renewable.

"(3) ACCEPTANCE OF JURISDICTION.—In a memorandum of understanding, the State shall consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts for the compliance, discharge, and enforcement of any responsibility of the Secretary that the State assumes.

"(4) MONITORING.—The Secretary shall—

"(A) monitor compliance by the State with the memorandum of understanding and the provision by the State of financial resources to carry out the memorandum of understanding; and

"(B) take into account the performance by the State when considering renewal of the memorandum of understanding.

"(d) TERMINATION.—The Secretary may terminate any assumption of responsibility under a memorandum of understanding on a determination that the State is not adequately carrying out the responsibilities assigned to the State.

"(e) STATE AGENCY DEEMED TO BE FEDERAL AGENCY.—A State agency that is assigned a responsibility under a memorandum of understanding shall be deemed to be a Federal agency for the purposes of the Federal law under which the responsibility is exercised.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 3 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1511(b)), is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 326 the following:

"327. Assumption of responsibility for categorical exclusions.".

SEC. 1513. SURFACE TRANSPORTATION PROJECT DELIVERY PILOT PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 3 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1512(a)), is amended by inserting after section 327 the following:

"§328. Surface transportation project delivery pilot program

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall carry out a surface transportation project delivery pilot program (referred to in this section as the 'program').

"(2) ASSUMPTION OF RESPONSIBILITY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the other provisions of this section, with the written agreement of the Secretary and a State, which may be in the form of a memorandum of understanding, the Secretary may assign, and the State may assume, the responsibilities of the Secretary with respect to 1 or more highway projects within the State under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

"(B) ADDITIONAL RESPONSIBILITY.—If a State assumes responsibility under subparagraph (A)—

"(i) the Secretary may assign to the State, and the State may assume, all or part of the responsibilities of the Secretary for environmental review, consultation, or other action required under any Federal environmental law pertaining to the review or approval of a specific project; but

"(ii) the Secretary may not assign—

"(I) responsibility for any conformity determination required under section 176 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7506); or

"(II) any responsibility imposed on the Secretary by section 134 or 135.

"(C) PROCEDURAL AND SUBSTANTIVE REQUIREMENTS.—A State shall assume responsibility under this section subject to the same procedural and substantive requirements as would apply if that responsibility were carried out by the Secretary.

"(D) FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITY.—Any responsibility of the Secretary not explicitly assumed by the State by written agreement under this section shall remain the responsibility of the Secretary.

"(E) NO EFFECT ON AUTHORITY.—Nothing in this section preempts or interferes with any power, jurisdiction, responsibility, or authority of an agency, other than the Department of Transportation, under applicable law (including regulations) with respect to a project.

"(b) STATE PARTICIPATION.—

"(1) NUMBER OF PARTICIPATING STATES.—The Secretary may permit not more than 5 States (including the State of Oklahoma) to participate in the program.

"(2) APPLICATION.—Not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall promulgate regulations that establish requirements relating to information required to be contained in any application of a State to participate in the program, including, at a minimum—

"(A) the projects or classes of projects for which the State anticipates exercising the authority that may be granted under the program;

"(B) verification of the financial resources necessary to carry out the authority that may be granted under the program; and

"(C) evidence of the notice and solicitation of public comment by the State relating to participation of the State in the program, including copies of comments received from that solicitation.

"(3) PUBLIC NOTICE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Each State that submits an application under this subsection shall give notice of the intent of the State to participate in the program not later than 30 days before the date of submission of the application.

"(B) METHOD OF NOTICE AND SOLICITATION.—The State shall provide notice and solicit public comment under this paragraph by publishing the complete application of the State in accordance with the appropriate public notice law of the State.

"(4) Selection criteria.—The Secretary may approve the application of a State under this section only if—

"(A) the regulatory requirements under paragraph (2) have been met;

"(B) the Secretary determines that the State has the capability, including financial and personnel, to assume the responsibility; and

"(C) the head of the State agency having primary jurisdiction over highway matters enters into a written agreement with the Secretary described in subsection (c).

"(5) Other federal agency views.—If a State applies to assume a responsibility of the Secretary that would have required the Secretary to consult with another Federal agency, the Secretary shall solicit the views of the Federal agency before approving the application.

"(c) Written Agreement.—A written agreement under this section shall—

"(1) be executed by the Governor or the top-ranking transportation official in the State who is charged with responsibility for highway construction;

"(2) be in such form as the Secretary may prescribe;

"(3) provide that the State—

"(A) agrees to assume all or part of the responsibilities of the Secretary described in subsection (a);

"(B) expressly consents, on behalf of the State, to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts for the compliance, discharge, and enforcement of any responsibility of the Secretary assumed by the State;

"(C) certifies that State laws (including regulations) are in effect that—

"(i) authorize the State to take the actions necessary to carry out the responsibilities being assumed; and

"(ii) are comparable to section 552 of title 5, including providing that any decision regarding the public availability of a document under those State laws is reviewable by a court of competent jurisdiction; and

"(D) agrees to maintain the financial resources necessary to carry out the responsibilities being assumed.

"(d) Jurisdiction.—

"(1) In general.—The United States district courts shall have exclusive jurisdiction over any civil action against a State for failure to carry out any responsibility of the State under this section.

"(2) Legal standards and requirements.—A civil action under paragraph (1) shall be governed by the legal standards and requirements that would apply in such a civil action against the Secretary had the Secretary taken the actions in question.

"(3) Intervention.—The Secretary shall have the right to intervene in any action described in paragraph (1).

"(e) Effect of Assumption of Responsibility.—A State that assumes responsibility under subsection (a)(2) shall be solely responsible and solely liable for carrying out, in lieu of the Secretary, the responsibilities assumed under subsection (a)(2), until the program is terminated as provided in subsection (i).

"(f) Limitations on Agreements.—Nothing in this section permits a State to assume any rulemaking authority of the Secretary under any Federal law.

"(g) Audits.—

"(1) In general.—To ensure compliance by a State with any agreement of the State under subsection (c)(1) (including compliance by the State with all Federal laws for which responsibility is assumed under subsection (a)(2)), for each State participating in the program under this section, the Secretary shall conduct—

"(A) semiannual audits during each of the first 2 years of State participation; and

"(B) annual audits during each subsequent year of State participation.

"(2) Public availability and comment.—

"(A) In general.—An audit conducted under paragraph (1) shall be provided to the public for comment.

"(B) Response.—Not later than 60 days after the date on which the period for public comment ends, the Secretary shall respond to public comments received under subparagraph (A).

"(h) Report to Congress.—The Secretary shall submit to Congress an annual report that describes the administration of the program.

"(i) Termination.—

"(1) In general.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the program shall terminate on the date that is 6 years after the date of enactment of this section.

"(2) Termination by secretary.—The Secretary may terminate the participation of any State in the program if—

"(A) the Secretary determines that the State is not adequately carrying out the responsibilities assigned to the State;

"(B) the Secretary provides to the State—

"(i) notification of the determination of noncompliance; and

"(ii) a period of at least 30 days during which to take such corrective action as the Secretary determines is necessary to comply with the applicable agreement; and

"(C) the State, after the notification and period provided under subparagraph (B), fails to take satisfactory corrective action, as determined by Secretary.".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The analysis for chapter 3 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1512(b)), is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 327 the following:

"328. Surface transportation project delivery pilot program.".

SEC. 1514. PARKS, RECREATION AREAS, WILDLIFE AND WATERFOWL REFUGES, AND HISTORIC SITES.

(a) Programs and Projects With de Minimis Impacts.—

(1) Title 23.—Section 138 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in the first sentence, by striking "It is hereby" and inserting the following:

"(a) Declaration of Policy.—It is"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"(b) De Minimis Impacts.—

"(1) Requirements.—

"(A) In general.—The requirements of this section shall be considered to be satisfied with respect to an area described in paragraph (2) or (3) if the Secretary determines, in accordance with this subsection, that a transportation program or project will have a de minimis impact on the area.

"(B) Criteria.—In making any determination under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider to be part of a transportation program or project any avoidance, minimization, mitigation, or enhancement measures that are required to be implemented as a condition of approval of the transportation program or project.

"(2) Historic sites.—With respect to historic sites, the Secretary may make a finding of de minimis impact only if—

"(A) the Secretary has determined, in accordance with the consultation process required under section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (16 U.S.C. 470f), that—

"(i) the transportation program or project will have no adverse effect on the historic site; or

"(ii) there will be no historic properties affected by the transportation program or project;

"(B) the finding of the Secretary has received written concurrence from the applicable State historic preservation officer or tribal historic preservation officer (and from the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, if participating in the consultation); and

"(C) the finding of the Secretary has been developed in consultation with parties consulting as part of the process referred to in subparagraph (A).

"(3) Parks, recreation areas, and wildlife and waterfowl refuges.—With respect to parks, recreation areas, and wildlife or waterfowl refuges, the Secretary may make a finding of de minimis impact only if—

"(A) the Secretary has determined, in accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) (including public notice and opportunity for public review and comment), that the transportation program or project will not adversely affect the activities, features, and attributes of the park, recreation area, or wildlife or waterfowl refuge eligible for protection under this section; and

"(B) the finding of the Secretary has received concurrence from the officials with jurisdiction over the park, recreation area, or wildlife or waterfowl refuge.".

(2) Title 49.—Section 303 of title 49, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking "(c) The Secretary" and inserting the following:

"(c) Approval of Programs and Projects.—Subject to subsection (d), the Secretary"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"(d) De Minimis Impacts.—

"(1) Requirements.—

"(A) In general.—The requirements of this section shall be considered to be satisfied with respect to an area described in paragraph (2) or (3) if the Secretary determines, in accordance with this subsection, that a transportation program or project will have a de minimis impact on the area.

"(B) Criteria.—In making any determination under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider to be part of a transportation program or project any avoidance, minimization, mitigation, or enhancement measures that are required to be implemented as a condition of approval of the transportation program or project.

"(2) Historic sites.—With respect to historic sites, the Secretary may make a finding of de minimis impact only if—

"(A) the Secretary has determined, in accordance with the consultation process required under section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (16 U.S.C. 470f), that—

"(i) the transportation program or project will have no adverse effect on the historic site; or

"(ii) there will be no historic properties affected by the transportation program or project;

"(B) the finding of the Secretary has received written concurrence from the applicable State historic preservation officer or tribal historic preservation officer (and from the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, if participating in the consultation); and

"(C) the finding of the Secretary has been developed in consultation with parties consulting as part of the process referred to in subparagraph (A).

"(3) Parks, Recreation Areas, and Wildlife and Waterfowl Refuges.—With respect to parks, recreation areas, and wildlife or waterfowl refuges, the Secretary may make a finding of de minimis impact only if—

"(A) the Secretary has determined, in accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) (including public notice and opportunity for public review and comment), that the transportation program or project will not adversely affect the activities, features, and attributes of the park, recreation area, or wildlife or waterfowl refuge eligible for protection under this section; and

"(B) the finding of the Secretary has received concurrence from the officials with jurisdiction over the park, recreation area, or wildlife or waterfowl refuge.".

(b) Clarification of Existing Standards.—

(1) In general.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall (in consultation with affected agencies and interested parties) promulgate regulations that clarify the factors to be considered and the standards to be applied in determining the prudence and feasibility of alternatives under section 138 of title 23 and section 303 of title 49, United States Code.

(2) Requirements.—The regulations—

(A) shall clarify the application of the legal standards to a variety of different types of transportation programs and projects depending on the circumstances of each case; and

(B) may include, as appropriate, examples to facilitate clear and consistent interpretation by agency decisionmakers.

(c) Implementation Study.—

(1) In general.—The Secretary and the Transportation Research Board of the National Academy of Sciences shall jointly conduct a study on the implementation of this section and the amendments made by this section.

(2) Components.—In conducting the study, the Secretary and the Transportation Research Board shall evaluate—

(A) the processes developed under this section and the amendments made by this section and the efficiencies that may result;

(B) the post-construction effectiveness of impact mitigation and avoidance commitments adopted as part of projects conducted under this section and the amendments made by this section; and

(C) the quantity of projects with impacts that are considered de minimis under this section and the amendments made by this section, including information on the location, size, and cost of the projects.

(3) Report requirement.—The Secretary and the Transportation Research Board shall prepare—

(A) not earlier than the date that is 4 years after the date of enactment of this Act, a report on the results of the study conducted under this subsection; and

(B) not later than September 30, 2009, an update on the report required under subparagraph (A).

(4) Report recipients.—The Secretary and the Transportation Research Board shall—

(A) submit the report and update required under paragraph (3) to—

(i) the appropriate committees of Congress;

(ii) the Secretary of the Interior; and

(iii) the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation; and

(B) make the report and update available to the public.

SEC. 1515. REGULATIONS.

Except as provided in section 1513, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall promulgate regulations necessary to implement the amendments made by chapter 1 and this chapter.

CHAPTER 3—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 1521. CRITICAL REAL PROPERTY ACQUISITION.

Section 108 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(d) Critical Real Property Acquisition.—

"(1) In general.—Subject to paragraph (2), funds apportioned to a State under this title may be used to pay the costs of acquiring any real property that is determined to be critical under paragraph (2) for a project proposed for funding under this title.

"(2) Reimbursement.—The Federal share of the costs referred to in paragraph (1) shall be eligible for reimbursement out of funds apportioned to a State under this title if, before the date of acquisition—

"(A) the Secretary determines that the property is offered for sale on the open market;

"(B) the Secretary determines that in acquiring the property, the State will comply with the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 4601 et seq.); and

"(C) the State determines that immediate acquisition of the property is critical because—

"(i) based on an appraisal of the property, the value of the property is increasing significantly;

"(ii) there is an imminent threat of development or redevelopment of the property; and

"(iii) the property is necessary for the implementation of the goals stated in the proposal for the project.

"(3) Applicable law.—An acquisition of real property under this section shall be considered to be an exempt project under section 176 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7506).

"(4) Environmental review.—

"(A) In general.—A project proposed to be conducted under this title shall not be conducted on property acquired under paragraph (1) until all required environmental reviews for the project have been completed.

"(B) Effect on consideration of project alternatives.—The number of critical acquisitions of real property associated with a project shall not affect the consideration of project alternatives during the environmental review process.

"(5) Proceeds from the sale or lease of real property.—Section 156(c) shall not apply to the sale, use, or lease of any real property acquired under paragraph (1).".

SEC. 1522. PLANNING CAPACITY BUILDING INITIATIVE.

Section 104 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(m) Planning Capacity Building Initiative.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary shall carry out a planning capacity building initiative to support enhancements in transportation planning to—

"(A) strengthen the processes and products of metropolitan and statewide transportation planning under this title;

"(B) enhance tribal capacity to conduct joint transportation planning under chapter 2;

"(C) participate in the metropolitan and statewide transportation planning programs under this title; and

"(D) increase the knowledge and skill level of participants in metropolitan and statewide transportation.

"(2) Priority.—The Secretary shall give priority to planning practices and processes that support—

"(A) the transportation elements of homeland security planning, including—

"(i) training and best practices relating to emergency evacuation;

"(ii) developing materials to assist areas in coordinating emergency management and transportation officials; and

"(iii) developing training on how planning organizations may examine security issues;

"(B) performance-based planning, including—

"(i) data and data analysis technologies to be shared with States, metropolitan planning organizations, local governments, and nongovernmental organizations that—

"(I) participate in transportation planning;

"(II) use the data and data analysis to engage in metropolitan, tribal, or statewide transportation planning;

"(III) involve the public in the development of transportation plans, projects, and alternative scenarios; and

"(IV) develop strategies to avoid, minimize, and mitigate the impacts of transportation facilities and projects; and

"(ii) improvement of the quality of congestion management systems, including the development of—

"(I) a measure of congestion;

"(II) a measure of transportation system reliability; and

"(III) a measure of induced demand;

"(C) safety planning, including—

"(i) development of State strategic safety plans consistent with section 148;

"(ii) incorporation of work zone safety into planning; and

"(iii) training in the development of data systems relating to highway safety;

"(D) operations planning, including—

"(i) developing training of the integration of transportation system operations and management into the transportation planning process; and

"(ii) training and best practices relating to regional concepts of operations;

"(E) freight planning, including—

"(i) modeling of freight at a regional and statewide level; and

"(ii) techniques for engaging the freight community with the planning process;

"(F) air quality planning, including—

"(i) assisting new and existing nonattainment and maintenance areas in developing the technical capacity to perform air quality conformity analysis;

"(ii) providing training on areas such as modeling and data collection to support air quality planning and analysis;

"(iii) developing concepts and techniques to assist areas in meeting air quality performance timeframes; and

"(iv) developing materials to explain air quality issues to decisionmakers and the public; and

"(G) integration of environment and planning.

"(3) Use of funds.—The Secretary shall use amounts made available under paragraph (4) to make grants to, or enter into contracts, cooperative agreements, and other transactions with, a Federal agency, State agency, local agency, federally recognized Indian tribal government or tribal consortium, authority, association, nonprofit or for-profit corporation, or institution of higher education for research, program development, information collection and dissemination, and technical assistance.

"(4) SET-ASIDE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—On October 1 of each fiscal year, of the funds made available under subsection (a), the Secretary shall set aside $3,572,327 to carry out this subsection.

"(B) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of an activity carried out using funds made available under subparagraph (A) shall be 100 percent.

"(C) AVAILABILITY.—Funds made available under subparagraph (A) shall remain available until expended.".

SEC. 1523. INTERMODAL PASSENGER FACILITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 55 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SUBCHAPTER III—INTERMODAL PASSENGER FACILITIES

§ 5571. Policy and purposes

"(a) DEVELOPMENT AND ENHANCEMENT OF INTERMODAL PASSENGER FACILITIES.—It is in the economic interest of the United States to improve the efficiency of public surface transportation modes by ensuring their connection with and access to intermodal passenger terminals, thereby streamlining the transfer of passengers among modes, enhancing travel options, and increasing passenger transportation operating efficiencies.

"(b) GENERAL PURPOSES.—The purposes of this subchapter are to accelerate intermodal integration among North America's passenger transportation modes through—

"(1) ensuring intercity public transportation access to intermodal passenger facilities;

"(2) encouraging the development of an integrated system of public transportation information; and

"(3) providing intercity bus intermodal passenger facility grants.

§ 5572. Definitions

"In this subchapter—

"(1) 'capital project' means a project for—

"(A) acquiring, constructing, improving, or renovating an intermodal facility that is related physically and functionally to intercity bus service and establishes or enhances coordination between intercity bus service and transportation, including aviation, commuter rail, intercity rail, public transportation, seaports, and the National Highway System, such as physical infrastructure associated with private bus operations at existing and new intermodal facilities, including special lanes, curb cuts, ticket kiosks and counters, baggage and package express storage, employee parking, office space, security, and signage; and

"(B) establishing or enhancing coordination between intercity bus service and transportation, including aviation, commuter rail, intercity rail, public transportation, and the National Highway System through an integrated system of public transportation information.

"(2) 'commuter service' means service designed primarily to provide daily work trips within the local commuting area.

"(3) 'intercity bus service' means regularly scheduled bus service for the general public which operates with limited stops over fixed routes connecting two or more urban areas not in close proximity, which has the capacity for transporting baggage carried by passengers, and which makes meaningful connections with scheduled intercity bus service to more distant points, if such service is available and may include package express service, if incidental to passenger transportation, but does not include air, commuter, water or rail service.

"(4) 'intermodal passenger facility' means passenger terminal that does, or can be modified to, accommodate several modes of transportation and related facilities, including some or all of the following: intercity rail, intercity bus, commuter rail, intracity rail transit and bus transportation, airport limousine service and airline ticket offices, rent-a-car facilities, taxis, private parking, and other transportation services.

"(5) 'local governmental authority' includes—

"(A) a political subdivision of a State;

"(B) an authority of at least one State or political subdivision of a State;

"(C) an Indian tribe; and

"(D) a public corporation, board, or commission established under the laws of the State.

"(6) 'owner or operator of a public transportation facility' means an owner or operator of intercity-rail, intercity-bus, commuter-rail, commuter-bus, rail-transit, bus-transit, or ferry services.

"(7) 'recipient' means a State or local governmental authority or a nonprofit organization that receives a grant to carry out this section directly from the Federal government.

"(8) 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Transportation.

"(9) 'State' means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Virgin Islands.

"(10) 'urban area' means an area that includes a municipality or other built-up place that the Secretary, after considering local patterns and trends of urban growth, decides is appropriate for a local public transportation system to serve individuals in the locality.

"§ 5573. Assurance of access to intermodal passenger facilities

"Intercity buses and other modes of transportation shall, to the maximum extent practicable, have access to publicly funded intermodal passenger facilities, including those passenger facilities seeking funding under section 5574.

"§ 5574. Intercity bus intermodal passenger facility grants

"(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Transportation may make grants under this section to recipients in financing a capital project only if the Secretary finds that the proposed project is justified and has adequate financial commitment.

"(b) COMPETITIVE GRANT SELECTION.—The Secretary shall conduct a national solicitation for applications for grants under this section. Grantees shall be selected on a competitive basis.

"(c) SHARE OF NET PROJECT COSTS.—A grant shall not exceed 50 percent of the net project cost, as determined by the Secretary.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may promulgate such regulations as are necessary to carry out this section.

"§ 5575. Funding

"(a) HIGHWAY ACCOUNT.—

"(1) There is authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to carry out this subchapter $8,930,818 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009.

"(2) The funding made available under paragraph (1) shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if such funds were apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23 and shall be subject to any obligation limitation imposed on funds for Federal-aid highways and highway safety construction programs.

"(b) PERIOD OF AVAILABILITY.—Amounts made available under subsection (a) shall remain available until expended.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 55 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SUBCHAPTER III—INTERMODAL PASSENGER FACILITIES

Sec.
"5571. Policy and Purposes.
"5572. Definitions.
"5573. Assurance of access to intermodal facilities.
"5574. Intercity bus intermodal facility grants.

Subtitle F—Environment

SEC. 1601. ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION AND POLLUTION ABATEMENT; CONTROL OF INVASIVE PLANT SPECIES AND ESTABLISHMENT OF NATIVE SPECIES.

(a) MODIFICATION TO NHS/STP FOR ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION, POLLUTION ABATEMENT, AND INVASIVE SPECIES.—

(1) MODIFICATIONS TO NATIONAL HIGHWAY SYSTEM.—Section 103(b)(6) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(Q) Environmental restoration and pollution abatement in accordance with section 165.

"(R) Control of invasive plant species and establishment of native species in accordance with section 166.".

(2) MODIFICATIONS TO SURFACE TRANSPORTATION PROGRAM.—Section 133(b) of title 23, is amended by striking paragraph (14) and inserting the following:

"(14) Environmental restoration and pollution abatement in accordance with section 165.

"(15) Control of invasive plant species and establishment of native species in accordance with section 166.".

(b) ELIGIBLE ACTIVITIES.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 165. Eligibility for environmental restoration and pollution abatement

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), environmental restoration and pollution abatement to minimize or mitigate the impacts of any transportation project funded under this title (including retrofitting and construction of storm water treatment systems to meet Federal and State requirements under sections 401 and 402 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1341, 1342)) may be carried out to address water pollution or environmental degradation caused wholly or partially by a transportation facility.

"(b) MAXIMUM EXPENDITURE.—In a case in which a transportation facility is undergoing reconstruction, rehabilitation, resurfacing, or restoration, the expenditure of funds under this section for environmental restoration or pollution abatement described in subsection (a) shall not exceed 20 percent of the total cost of the reconstruction, rehabilitation, resurfacing, or restoration of the facility.

"§ 166. Control of invasive plant species and establishment of native species

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) INVASIVE PLANT SPECIES—The term 'invasive plant species' means a nonindigenous species the introduction of which causes or is likely to cause economic or environmental harm or harm to human health.

"(2) NATIVE PLANT SPECIES.—The term 'native plant species' means, with respect to a particular ecosystem, a species that, other than as result of an introduction, historically occurred or currently occurs in that ecosystem.

"(b) Control of Species.—

"(1) In general.—In accordance with all applicable Federal law (including regulations), funds made available to carry out this section may be used for—

"(A) participation in the control of invasive plant species; and

"(B) the establishment of native species;

if such efforts are related to transportation projects funded under this title.

"(2) Included activities.—The participation and establishment under paragraph (1) may include—

"(A) participation in statewide inventories of invasive plant species and desirable plant species;

"(B) regional native plant habitat conservation and mitigation;

"(C) native revegetation;

"(D) elimination of invasive species to create fuel breaks for the prevention and control of wildfires; and

"(E) training.

"(3) Contributions.—

"(A) In general.—Subject to subparagraph (B), an activity described in paragraph (1) may be carried out concurrently with, in advance of, or following the construction of a project funded under this title.

"(B) Condition for activities conducted in advance of project construction.—An activity described in paragraph (1) may be carried out in advance of construction of a project only if the activity is carried out in accordance with all applicable requirements of Federal law (including regulations) and State transportation planning processes.".

(c) Conforming Amendment.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1406(b)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"165. Eligibility for environmental restoration and pollution abatement.

"166. Control of invasive plant species and establishment of native species.".

SEC. 1602. NATIONAL SCENIC BYWAYS PROGRAM.

(a) In General.—Section 162 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(1), by striking "the roads as" and all that follows and inserting "the roads as—

"(A) National Scenic Byways;

"(B) All-American Roads; or

"(C) America's Byways.";

"(i) National Scenic Byways;

"(ii) All-American Roads; or

"(iii) America's Byways; and";

(B) in paragraph (2)—

(i) in subparagraph (A), by striking "Byway or All-American Road" and inserting "Byway, All-American Road, or 1 of America's Byways"; and

(ii) in subparagraph (B), by striking "designation as a" and all that follows and inserting "designation as—

"(i) a National Scenic Byway;

"(ii) an All-American Road; or

"(iii) 1 of America's Byways; and"; and

(3) in subsection (c)(4), by striking "passing lane,".

(b) Research, Technical Assistance, Marketing, and Promotion.—Section 162 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (d), (e), and (f) as subsections (e), (f), and (g), respectively;

(2) by inserting after subsection (c) the following:

"(d) Research, Technical Assistance, Marketing, and Promotion.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary may carry out technical assistance, marketing, market research, and promotion with respect to State Scenic Byways, National Scenic Byways, All-American Roads, and America's Byways.

"(2) Cooperation, grants, and contracts.—The Secretary may make grants to, or enter into contracts, cooperative agreements, and other transactions with, any Federal agency, State agency, authority, association, institution, for-profit or nonprofit corporation, organization, or person, to carry out projects and activities under this subsection.

"(3) Funds.—The Secretary may use not more than $1,786,164 for each fiscal year of funds made available for the National Scenic Byways Program to carry out projects and activities under this subsection.

"(4) Priority.—The Secretary shall give priority under this subsection to partnerships that leverage Federal funds for research, technical assistance, marketing and promotion."; and

(3) in subsection (g) (as redesignated by paragraph (1)), by striking "80 percent" and inserting "the share applicable under section 120, as adjusted under subsection (d) of that section".

SEC. 1603. RECREATIONAL TRAILS PROGRAM.

(a) Recreational Trails Program Formula.—Section 104(h)(1) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "Whenever" and inserting the following:

"(A) In general.—In any case in which";

(2) by striking "research and technical assistance under the recreational trails program and for administration of the National Recreational Trails Advisory Committee" and inserting "research, technical assistance, and training under the recreational trails program"; and

(3) by striking "The Secretary" and inserting the following:

"(B) Contracts and agreements.—The Secretary".

(b) Recreational Trails Program Administration.—Section 206 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (d)—

(A) by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(2) Permissible uses.—Permissible uses of funds apportioned to a State for a fiscal year to carry out this section include—

"(A) maintenance and restoration of recreational trails;

"(B) development and rehabilitation of trailside and trailhead facilities and trail linkages for recreational trails;

"(C) purchase and lease of recreational trail construction and maintenance equipment;

"(D) construction of new recreational trails, except that, in the case of new recreational trails crossing Federal land, construction of the trails shall be—

"(i) permissible under other law;

"(ii) necessary and recommended by a statewide comprehensive outdoor recreation plan that is—

"(I) required under the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (16 U.S.C. 460l-4 et seq.); and

"(II) in effect;

"(iii) approved by the administering agency of the State designated under subsection (c)(1)(A); and

"(iv) approved by each Federal agency having jurisdiction over the affected land, under such terms and conditions as the head of the Federal agency determines to be appropriate, except that the approval shall be contingent on compliance by the Federal agency with all applicable laws, including—

"(I) the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.);

"(II) the Forest and Rangeland Renewable Resources Planning Act of 1974 (16 U.S.C. 1600 et seq.); and

"(III) the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.);

"(E) acquisition of easements and fee simple title to property for recreational trails or recreational trail corridors;

"(F) assessment of trail conditions for accessibility and maintenance;

"(G) use of trail crews, youth conservation or service corps, or other appropriate means to carry out activities under this section;

"(H) development and dissemination of publications and operation of educational programs to promote safety and environmental protection, as those objectives relate to the use of recreational trails, supporting non-law enforcement trail safety and trail use monitoring patrol programs, and providing trail-related training, but in an amount not to exceed 5 percent of the apportionment made to the State for the fiscal year; and

"(I) payment of costs to the State incurred in administering the program, but in an amount not to exceed 7 percent of the apportionment made to the State for the fiscal year to carry out this section."; and

(B) in paragraph (3)—

(i) in subparagraph (D), by striking "(2)(F)" and inserting "(2)(I)"; and

(ii) by adding at the end the following:

"(E) Use of youth conservation or service corps.—A State shall make available not less than 10 percent of the apportionments of the State to provide grants to, or to enter into cooperative agreements or contracts with, qualified youth conservation or service corps to perform recreational trails program activities.";

(2) in subsection (f)—

(A) in paragraph (1)—

(i) by inserting "and the Federal share of the administrative costs of a State" after "project"; and

(ii) by striking "not exceed 80 percent" and inserting "be determined in accordance with section 120";

(B) in paragraph (2)—

(i) in subparagraph (A), by striking "80 percent of" and inserting "the amount determined in accordance with section 120 for"; and

(ii) in subparagraph (B), by inserting "sponsoring the project" after "Federal agency";

(C) by striking paragraph (5);

(D) by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (5);

(E) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following:

"(4) Use of recreational trails program funds to match other Federal program funds.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds made available under this section may be used to pay the non-Federal matching share for other Federal program funds that are—

"(A) expended in accordance with the requirements of the Federal program relating to activities funded and populations served; and

"(B) expended on a project that is eligible for assistance under this section."; and

(F) in paragraph (5) (as redesignated by subparagraph (D)), by striking "80 percent" and inserting "the Federal share as determined in accordance with section 120"; and

(3) in subsection (h)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following:

"(C) PLANNING AND ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT COSTS INCURRED PRIOR TO PROJECT APPROVAL.—A project funded under any of subparagraphs (A) through (H) of subsection (d)(2) may permit preapproval planning and environmental compliance costs incurred not more than 18 months before project approval to be credited toward the non-Federal share in accordance with subsection (f)."; and

(B) by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(2) WAIVER OF HIGHWAY PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—A project funded under this section—

"(A) is intended to enhance recreational opportunity;

"(B) is not considered to be a highway project; and

"(C) is not subject to—

"(i) section 112, 114, 116, 134, 135, 138, 217, or 301 of this title; or

"(ii) section 303 of title 49.".

SEC. 1604. EXEMPTION OF INTERSTATE SYSTEM.

Subsection 103(c) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(5) EXEMPTION OF INTERSTATE SYSTEM.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the Interstate System shall not be considered to be a historic site under section 303 of title 49 or section 138 of this title, regardless of whether the Interstate System or portions of the Interstate System are listed on, or eligible for listing on, the National Register of Historic Places.

"(B) INDIVIDUAL ELEMENTS.—A portion of the Interstate System that possesses an independent feature of historic significance, such as a historic bridge or a highly significant engineering feature, that would qualify independently for listing on the National Register of Historic Places, shall be considered to be a historic site under section 303 of title 49 or section 138 of this title, as applicable.".

SEC. 1605. STANDARDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 109(a) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "and" at the end;

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(3) consider the preservation, historic, scenic, natural environmental, and community values.".

(b) CONTEXT SENSITIVE DESIGN.—Section 109 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking subsection (p) and inserting the following:

"(p) CONTEXT SENSITIVE DESIGN.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall encourage States to design projects funded under this title that—

"(A) allow for the preservation of environmental, scenic, or historic values;

"(B) ensure the safe use of the facility;

"(C) provide for consideration of the context of the locality;

"(D) encourage access for other modes of transportation; and

"(E) comply with subsection (a).

"(2) APPROVAL BY SECRETARY.—Notwithstanding subsections (b) and (c), the Secretary may approve a project described in paragraph (1) for the National Highway System if the project is designed to achieve the criteria specified in that paragraph.".

SEC. 1606. USE OF HIGH OCCUPANCY VEHICLE LANES.

Section 102 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking subsection (a) and inserting the following:

"(a) HIGH OCCUPANCY VEHICLE LANE PASSENGER REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection:

"(A) RESPONSIBLE AGENCY.—The term 'responsible agency' means—

"(i) a State transportation department;

"(ii) a local agency in a State that is responsible for transportation matters; and

"(iii) a public authority, or a public or private entity designated by a State, to collect a toll from motor vehicles at an eligible toll facility.

"(B) SERIOUSLY DEGRADED.—The term 'seriously degraded', with respect to a high occupancy vehicle lane, means, in the case of a high occupancy vehicle lane, the minimum average operating speed, performance threshold, and associated time period of the high occupancy vehicle lane, calculated and determined jointly by all applicable responsible agencies and based on conditions unique to the roadway, are unsatisfactory.

"(2) REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), for each State, 1 or more responsible agencies shall establish the occupancy requirements of vehicles operating on high occupancy vehicle lanes.

"(B) MINIMUM NUMBER OF OCCUPANTS.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), an occupancy requirement established under subparagraph (A) shall—

"(i) require at least 2 occupants per vehicle for a vehicle operating on a high occupancy vehicle lane; and

"(ii) in the case of a high occupancy vehicle lane that traverses an adjacent State, be established in consultation with the adjacent State.

"(3) EXCEPTIONS TO HOV OCCUPANCY REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) MOTORCYCLES.—For the purpose of this subsection, a motorcycle—

"(i) shall not be considered to be a single occupant vehicle; and

"(ii) shall be allowed to use a high occupancy vehicle lane unless a responsible agency—

"(I) certifies to the Secretary the use of a high occupancy vehicle lane by a motorcycle would create a safety hazard; and

"(II) restricts that the use of the high occupancy vehicle lane by motorcycles.

"(B) LOW EMISSION AND ENERGY-EFFICIENT VEHICLES.—

"(i) DEFINITION OF LOW EMISSION AND ENERGY-EFFICIENT VEHICLE.—In this subparagraph, the term 'low emission and energy-efficient vehicle' means a vehicle that has been certified by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency—

"(I)(aa) to have a 45-mile per gallon or greater fuel economy highway rating; or

"(bb) to qualify as an alternative fueled vehicle under section 301 of the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 13211); and

"(II) as meeting Tier II emission level established in regulations promulgated by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency under section 202(i) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7521(i)) for that make and model year vehicle.

"(ii) EXEMPTION FOR LOW EMISSION AND ENERGY-EFFICIENT VEHICLES.—A responsible agency may permit qualifying low emission and energy-efficient vehicles that do not meet applicable occupancy requirements (as determined by the responsible agency) to use high occupancy vehicle lanes if the responsible agency—

"(I) establishes a program that addresses how those qualifying low emission and energy-efficient vehicles are selected and certified;

"(II) establishes requirements for labeling qualifying low emission and energy-efficient vehicles (including procedures for enforcing those requirements);

"(III) continuously monitors, evaluates, and reports to the Secretary on performance; and

"(IV) imposes such restrictions on the use on high occupancy vehicle lanes by vehicles that do not satisfy established occupancy requirements as are necessary to ensure that the performance of individual high occupancy vehicle lanes, and the entire high occupancy vehicle lane system, will not become seriously degraded.

"(C) TOLLING OF VEHICLES.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—A responsible agency may permit vehicles, in addition to the vehicles described in paragraphs (A), (B), and (D) that do not satisfy established occupancy requirements, to use a high occupancy vehicle lane only if the responsible agency charges those vehicles a toll.

"(ii) APPLICABLE AUTHORITY.—In imposing a toll under clause (i), a responsible agency shall—

"(I) be subject to section 129;

"(II) establish a toll program that addresses ways in which motorists may enroll and participate in the program;

"(III) develop, manage, and maintain a system that will automatically collect the tolls from covered vehicles;

"(IV) continuously monitor, evaluate, and report on performance of the system;

"(V) establish such policies and procedures as are necessary—

"(aa) to vary the toll charged in order to manage the demand for use of high occupancy vehicle lanes; and

"(bb) to enforce violations; and

"(VI) establish procedures to impose such restrictions on the use of high occupancy vehicle lanes by vehicles that do not satisfy established occupancy requirements as are necessary to ensure that the performance of individual high occupancy vehicle lanes, and the entire high occupancy vehicle lane system, will not become seriously degraded.

"(D) DESIGNATED PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION VEHICLES.—

"(i) DEFINITION OF DESIGNATED PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION VEHICLE.—In this subparagraph, the term 'designated public transportation vehicle' means a vehicle that—

"(I) provides designated public transportation (as defined in section 221 of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12141)); and

"(II)(aa) is owned or operated by a public entity; or

"(bb) is operated under a contract with a public entity.

"(ii) USE OF HIGH OCCUPANCY VEHICLE LANES.—A responsible agency may permit designated public transportation vehicles that do not satisfy established occupancy requirements to use high occupancy vehicle lanes if the responsible agency—

"(I) requires the clear and identifiable labeling of each designated public transportation vehicle operating under a contract with a public entity with the name of the public entity on all sides of the vehicle;

"(II) continuously monitors, evaluates, and reports on performance of those designated public transportation vehicles; and

"(III) imposes such restrictions on the use of high occupancy vehicle lanes by designated public transportation vehicles as are necessary to ensure that the performance of individual high occupancy vehicle lanes, and the entire high occupancy vehicle lane system, will not become seriously degraded.

"(E) HOV lane management, operation, and monitoring.—

"(i) In general.—A responsible agency that permits any of the exceptions specified in this paragraph shall comply with clauses (ii) and (iii).

"(ii) Performance monitoring, evaluation, and reporting.—A responsible agency described in clause (i) shall establish, manage, and support a performance monitoring, evaluation, and reporting program under which the responsible agency continuously monitors, assesses, and reports on the effects that any vehicle permitted to use a high occupancy vehicle lane under an exception under this paragraph may have on the operation of—

"(I) individual high occupancy vehicle lanes; and

"(II) the entire high occupancy vehicle lane system.

"(iii) Operation of HOV lane or system.—A responsible agency described in clause (i) shall limit use of, or cease to use, any of the exceptions specified in this paragraph if the presence of any vehicle permitted to use a high occupancy vehicle lane under an exception under this paragraph seriously degrades the operation of—

"(I) individual high occupancy vehicle lanes; and

"(II) the entire high occupancy vehicle lane system.".

SEC. 1607. BICYCLE TRANSPORTATION AND PEDESTRIAN WALKWAYS.

(a) In General.—Section 217 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by inserting "pedestrian and" after "safe";

(2) in subsection (e), by striking "bicycles" each place it appears and inserting "pedestrians or bicyclists";

(3) by striking subsection (f) and inserting the following:

"(f) Federal Share.—The Federal share of the construction of bicycle transportation facilities and pedestrian walkways, and for carrying out nonconstruction projects relating to safe pedestrian and bicycle use, shall be determined in accordance with section 120(b).";

(4) by redesignating subsection (j) as subsection (k);

(5) by inserting after subsection (i) the following:

"(j) Bicycle and Pedestrian Safety Grants.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary shall select and make grants to a national, nonprofit organization engaged in promoting bicycle and pedestrian safety—

"(A) to operate a national bicycle and pedestrian clearinghouse;

"(B) to develop information and educational programs regarding walking and bicycling; and

"(C) to disseminate techniques and strategies for improving bicycle and pedestrian safety.

"(2) Funding.—The Secretary may use funds set aside under section 104(n) to carry out this subsection.

"(3) Applicability of title 23.—Funds authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under section 104, except that the funds shall remain available until expended."; and

(6) in subsection (k) (as redesignated by paragraph (4))—

(A) by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (5); and

(B) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following:

"(4) Shared use path.—The term 'shared use path' means a multiuse trail or other path that is—

"(A) physically separated from motorized vehicular traffic by an open space or barrier, either within a highway right-of-way or within an independent right-of-way; and

"(B) usable for transportation purposes (including by pedestrians, bicyclists, skaters, equestrians, and other nonmotorized users).".

(b) Reservation of Funds.—Section 104 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1522), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(n) Bicycle and Pedestrian Safety Grants.—On October 1 of each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, the Secretary, after making the deductions authorized by subsections (a) and (f), shall set aside $446,541 of the remaining funds apportioned under subsection (b)(3) for use in carrying out the bicycle and pedestrian safety grant program under section 217.".

SEC. 1608. IDLING REDUCTION FACILITIES IN INTERSTATE RIGHTS-OF-WAY.

Section 111 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(d) Idling Reduction Facilities in Interstate Rights-of-Way.—

"(1) In general.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), a State may—

"(A) permit electrification or other idling reduction facilities and equipment, for use by motor vehicles used for commercial purposes, to be placed in rest and recreation areas, and in safety rest areas, constructed or located on rights-of-way of the Interstate System in the State, so long as those idling reduction measures do not—

"(i) reduce the existing number of designated truck parking spaces at any given rest or recreation area; or

"(ii) preclude the use of those spaces by trucks employing alternative idle reduction technologies; and

"(B) charge a fee, or permit the charging of a fee, for the use of those parking spaces actively providing power to a truck to reduce idling.

"(2) Purpose.—The exclusive purpose of the facilities described in paragraph (1) (or similar technologies) shall be to enable operators of motor vehicles used for commercial purposes—

"(A) to reduce idling of a truck while parked in the rest or recreation area; and

"(B) to use installed or other equipment specifically designed to reduce idling of a truck, or provide alternative power for supporting driver comfort, while parked.".

SEC. 1609. TOLL PROGRAMS.

(a) Interstate System Reconstruction and Rehabilitation Pilot Program.—Section 1216(b) of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (23 U.S.C. 129 note; 112 Stat. 212)—

(1) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1)—

(i) by striking "The Secretary" and inserting "Notwithstanding section 301, the Secretary"; and

(ii) by striking "that could not otherwise be adequately maintained or functionally improved without the collection of tolls";

(B) in paragraph (2), by inserting after the first sentence the following: "One such facility shall be located in Virginia.";

(C) in paragraph (3), by striking subparagraph (C) and inserting the following:

"(C) An analysis demonstrating that financing the reconstruction or rehabilitation of the facility with the collection of tolls under this pilot program is the most efficient, economical, or expeditious way to advance the project."; and

(D) in paragraph (4)—

(i) by striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following:

"(A) the State's analysis showing that financing the reconstruction or rehabilitation of a facility with the collection of tolls under the pilot program is the most efficient, economical, or expeditious way to advance the project;";

(ii) by striking subparagraph (B) and inserting the following:

"(B) the facility needs reconstruction or rehabilitation, including major work that may require replacing sections of the existing facility on new alignment;";

(iii) by striking subparagraph (C); and

(iv) by redesignating subparagraphs (D) and (E) as subparagraphs (C) and (D), respectively;

(2) is redesignated as subsection (d) of section 129 of title 23, United States Code, and moved to appear at the end of that section; and

(3) by striking "of title 23, United States Code" each place it appears.

(b) Fast and Sensible Toll (FAST) Lanes Program.—Section 129 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by subsection (a)(2)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(e) Fast and Sensible Toll (FAST) Lanes Program.—

"(1) Definitions.—In this subsection:

"(A) Eligible toll facility.—The term 'eligible toll facility' includes—

"(i) a facility in existence on the date of enactment of this subsection that collects tolls;

"(ii) a facility in existence on the date of enactment of this subsection that serves high occupancy vehicles;

"(iii) a facility modified or constructed after the date of enactment of this subsection to create additional tolled capacity (including a facility constructed by a private entity or using private funds); and

"(iv) in the case of a new lane added to a previously non-tolled facility, only the new lane.

"(B) Nonattainment area.—The term 'nonattainment area' has the meaning given the term in section 171 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7501).

"(2) Establishment.—Notwithstanding sections 129 and 301, the Secretary shall permit a State, public authority, or a public or private entity designated by a State, to collect a toll from motor vehicles at an eligible toll facility for any highway, bridge, or tunnel, including facilities on the Interstate System—

"(A) to manage high levels of congestion;

"(B) to reduce emissions in a nonattainment area or maintenance area; or

"(C) to finance the expansion of a highway, for the purpose of reducing traffic congestion, by constructing 1 or more additional lanes (including bridge, tunnel, support, and other structures necessary for that construction) on the Interstate System.

“(3) LIMITATION ON USE OF REVENUES.—

“(A) USE.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Toll revenues received under paragraph (2) shall be used by a State, public authority, or private entity designated by a State, for—

“(I) debt service for debt incurred on 1 or more highway or transit projects carried out under this title or title 49;

“(II) a reasonable return on investment of any private financing;

“(III) the costs necessary for proper operation and maintenance of any facilities under paragraph (2) (including reconstruction, resurfacing, restoration, and rehabilitation); or “(IV) if the State, public authority, or private entity annually certifies that the tolled facility is being adequately operated and maintained, any other purpose relating to a highway or transit project carried out under this title or title 49.

“(B) REQUIREMENTS.—

“(i) VARIABLE PRICE REQUIREMENT.—A facility that charges tolls under this subsection may establish a toll that varies in price according to time of day or level of traffic, as appropriate to manage congestion or improve air quality.

“(ii) HOV VARIABLE PRICING REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall require, for each high occupancy vehicle facility that charges tolls under this subsection, that the tolls vary in price according to time of day or level of traffic, as appropriate to manage congestion or improve air quality.

“(iii) HOV PASSENGER REQUIREMENTS.—In addition to the exceptions to the high occupancy vehicle passenger requirements established under section 102(a)(2), a State may permit motor vehicles with fewer than 2 occupants to operate in high occupancy vehicle lanes as part of a variable toll pricing program established under this subsection.

“(C) AGREEMENT.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Before the Secretary may permit a facility to charge tolls under this subsection, the Secretary and the applicable State, public authority, or private entity designated by a State shall enter into an agreement for each facility incorporating the conditions described in subparagraphs (A) and (B).

“(ii) TERMINATION.—An agreement under clause (i) shall terminate with respect to a facility upon the decision of the State, public authority, or private entity designated by a State to discontinue the variable tolling program under this subsection for the facility.

“(iii) DEBT.—

“(I) IN GENERAL.—If there is any debt outstanding on a facility at the time at which the decision is made to discontinue the program under this subsection with respect to the facility, the facility may continue to charge tolls in accordance with the terms of the agreement until such time as the debt is retired.

“(II) NOTICE.—On retirement of the debt of a tolled facility, the applicable State, public authority, or private entity designated by a State shall provide notice to the public of that retirement.

“(D) LIMITATION ON FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of a project on a facility tolled under this subsection, including a project to install the toll collection facility shall be a percentage, not to exceed 80 percent, determined by the applicable State.

“(4) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible to participate in the program under this subsection, a State, public authority, or private entity designated by a State shall provide to the Secretary—

“(A) a description of the congestion or air quality problems sought to be addressed under the program;

“(B) a description of—

“(i) the goals sought to be achieved under the program; and

“(ii) the performance measures that would be used to gauge the success made toward reaching those goals; and

“(C) such other information as the Secretary may require.

“(5) AUTOMATION.—Fees collected from motorists using a FAST lane shall be collected only through the use of noncash electronic technology that optimizes the free flow of traffic on the tolled facility.

“(6) INTEROPERABILITY.—

“(A) RULE.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this paragraph, the Secretary shall promulgate a final rule specifying requirements, standards, or performance specifications for automated toll collection systems implemented under this section.

“(ii) DEVELOPMENT.—In developing that rule, which shall be designed to maximize the interoperability of electronic collection systems, the Secretary shall, to the maximum extent practicable—

“(I) seek to accelerate progress toward the national goal of achieving a nationwide interoperable electronic toll collection system;

“(II) take into account the use of noncash electronic technology currently deployed within an appropriate geographical area of travel and the noncash electronic technology likely to be in use within the next 5 years; and

“(III) seek to minimize additional costs and maximize convenience to users of toll facility and to the toll facility owner or operator.

“(B) FUTURE MODIFICATIONS.—As the state of technology progresses, the Secretary shall modify the rule promulgated under subparagraph (A), as appropriate.

“(7) REPORTING.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in cooperation with State and local agencies and other program participants and with opportunity for public comment, shall—

“(i) develop and publish performance goals for each FAST lane project;

“(ii) establish a program for regular monitoring and reporting on the achievement of performance goals, including—

“(I) effects on travel, traffic, and air quality;

“(II) distribution of benefits and burdens;

“(III) use of alternative transportation modes; and

“(IV) use of revenues to meet transportation or impact mitigation needs.

“(B) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives—

“(i) not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this subsection, and annually thereafter, a report that describes in detail the uses of funds under this subsection in accordance with paragraph (8)(D); and

“(ii) not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this subsection, and every 3 years thereafter, a report that describes any success of the program under this subsection in meeting congestion reduction and other performance goals established for FAST lane programs.

“(8) FUNDING.—

“(A) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to carry out pre-implementation studies and post-implementation evaluations of projects planned or implemented under this subsection $9,823,899 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009.

“(B) AVAILABILITY.—Funds allocated by the Secretary to a State under this subsection shall remain available for obligation by the State for a period of 3 years after the last day of the fiscal year for which the funds were authorized.

“(C) CONTRACT AUTHORITY.—Funds authorized to be appropriated under this paragraph shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under this chapter, except that the Federal share of the cost of any project carried out under this subsection and the availability of funds authorized by this paragraph shall be determined in accordance with this subsection.

“(D) PROGRAM PROMOTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the Secretary shall use an amount not to exceed 2 percent of the funds made available under subparagraph (A)—

“(i) to make grants to promote the purposes of the program under this subsection;

“(ii) to provide technical support to State and local governments or other public or private entities involved in implementing or considering FAST lane programs; and “(iii) to conduct research on variable pricing that will support State or local efforts to initiate those pricing requirements.

“(E) EFFECT ON OTHER APPORTIONMENTS AND ALLOCATIONS.—Revenues collected from tolls established under this subsection shall not be taken into account in determining the apportionments and allocations that any State or transportation district within a State shall be entitled to receive under or in accordance with this chapter.

“(9) COMPLIANCE.—The Secretary shall ensure that any project or activity carried out under this section complies with requirements under section 106 of this title and section 307 of title 49.

“(10) VOLUNTARY USE.—Nothing in this subsection requires any highway user to use a FAST lane.

“(11) ENVIRONMENTAL REQUIREMENTS.—Nothing in this subsection affects any environmental requirement applicable to the construction or operation of an eligible toll facility under this title or any other provision of law.”.

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 1012 of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (23 U.S.C. 149 note; 105 Stat. 1938; 112 Stat. 211) is amended by striking subsection (b).

(2) CONTINUATION OF PROGRAM.—Notwithstanding the amendment made by paragraph (1), the Secretary shall monitor and allow any value pricing program established under a cooperative agreement in effect on the day before the date of enactment of this Act to continue.

SEC. 1610. FEDERAL REFERENCE METHOD.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6102 of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (42 U.S.C. 7407 note; 112 Stat. 464) is amended by striking subsection (e) and inserting the following:

“(e) FIELD STUDY.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, the Administrator shall—

“(1) conduct a field study of the ability of the $PM_{2.5}$ Federal Reference Method to differentiate those particles that are larger than 2.5 micrometers in diameter;

"(2) develop a Federal reference method to measure directly particles that are larger than 2.5 micrometers in diameter without reliance on subtracting from coarse particle measurements those particles that are equal to or smaller than 2.5 micrometers in diameter;

"(3) develop a method of measuring the composition of coarse particles; and

"(4) submit a report on the study and responsibilities of the Administrator under paragraphs (1) through (3) to—

"(A) the Committee on Commerce of the House of Representatives; and

"(B) the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate.".

SEC. 1611. ADDITION OF PARTICULATE MATTER AREAS TO CMAQ.

Section 104(b)(2) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B)—

(A) in the matter preceding clause (i), by striking "ozone or carbon monoxide" and inserting "ozone, carbon monoxide, or fine particulate matter ($PM_{2.5}$)";

(B) by striking clause (i) and inserting the following:

"(i) 1.0, if at the time of apportionment, the area is a maintenance area;";

(C) in clause (vi), by striking "or" after the semicolon; and

(D) in clause (vii)—

(i) by striking "area as described in section 149(b) for ozone," and inserting "area for ozone (as described in section 149(b) or for PM-2.5"; and

(ii) by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon;

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(viii) 1.0 if, at the time of apportionment, any county that is not designated as a nonattainment or maintenance area under the 1-hour ozone standard is designated as nonattainment under the 8-hour ozone standard; or

"(ix) 1.2 if, at the time of apportionment, the area is not a nonattainment or maintenance area as described in section 149(b) for ozone or carbon monoxide, but is an area designated nonattainment under the PM-2.5 standard.";

(3) by striking subparagraph (C) and inserting the following:

"(C) ADDITIONAL ADJUSTMENT FOR CARBON MONOXIDE AREAS.—If, in addition to being designated as a nonattainment or maintenance area for ozone as described in section 149(b), any county within the area was also classified under subpart 3 of part D of title I of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7512 et seq.) as a nonattainment or maintenance area described in section 149(b) for carbon monoxide, the weighted nonattainment or maintenance area population of the county, as determined under clauses (i) through (vi) or clause (viii) of subparagraph (B), shall be further multiplied by a factor of 1.2.";

(4) by redesignating subparagraph (D) and (E) as subparagraphs (E) and (F) respectively; and

(5) by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following:

"(D) ADDITIONAL ADJUSTMENT FOR PM 2.5 AREAS.—If, in addition to being designated as a nonattainment or maintenance area for ozone or carbon monoxide, or both as described in section 149(b), any county within the area was also designated under the PM-2.5 standard as a nonattainment or maintenance area, the weighted nonattainment or maintenance area population of those counties shall be further multiplied by a factor of 1.2.".

SEC. 1612. ADDITION TO CMAQ-ELIGIBLE PROJECTS.

(a) ELIGIBLE PROJECTS.—Section 149(b) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (4), by striking "or" at the end;

(2) in paragraph (5), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(6) if the project or program is for the purchase of alternative fuel (as defined in section 301 of the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 13211)) or biodiesel; or

"(7) if the project or program involves the purchase of integrated, interoperable emergency communications equipment.".

(b) STATES RECEIVING MINIMUM APPORTIONMENT.—Section 149(c) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "for any project eligible under the surface transportation program under section 133." and inserting the following: "for any project in the State that—

"(A) would otherwise be eligible under this section as if the project were carried out in a nonattainment or maintenance area; or

"(B) is eligible under the surface transportation program under section 133."; and

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking "for any project in the State eligible under section 133." and inserting the following: "for any project in the State that—

"(A) would otherwise be eligible under this section as if the project were carried out in a nonattainment or maintenance area; or

"(B) is eligible under the surface transportation program under section 133.".

(c) RESPONSIBILITY OF STATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Each State shall be responsible for ensuring that subrecipients of Federal funds within the State under section 149 of title 23, United States Code, have emission reduction strategies for fleets that are—

(A) used in construction projects located in nonattainment and maintenance areas; and

(B) funded under title 23, United States Code.

(2) EMISSION REDUCTION STRATEGIES.—The Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, in consultation with the Secretary, shall develop a nonbinding list of emission-reduction strategies and supporting technical information for each strategy, including—

(A) contract preferences;

(B) requirements for the use of anti-idling equipment;

(C) diesel retrofits; and

(D) such other matters as the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, in consultation with the Secretary, determine to be appropriate.

(3) USE OF CMAQ FUNDS.—A State may use funds made available under this title and title 23, United States Code, for the congestion mitigation and air quality program under section 149 of title 23, United States Code, to ensure the deployment of the emission reduction strategies described in paragraph (1).

SEC. 1613. IMPROVED INTERAGENCY CONSULTATION.

Section 149 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(g) INTERAGENCY CONSULTATION.—The Secretary shall encourage States and metropolitan planning organizations to consult with State and local air quality agencies in nonattainment and maintenance areas on the estimated emission reductions from proposed congestion mitigation and air quality improvement programs and projects.".

SEC. 1614. EVALUATION AND ASSESSMENT OF CMAQ PROJECTS.

Section 149 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(h) EVALUATION AND ASSESSMENT OF PROJECTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall evaluate and assess a representative sample of projects funded under the congestion mitigation and air quality program to—

"(A) determine the direct and indirect impact of the projects on air quality and congestion levels; and

"(B) ensure the effective implementation of the program.

"(2) DATABASE.—Using appropriate assessments of projects funded under the congestion mitigation and air quality program and results from other research, the Secretary shall maintain and disseminate a cumulative database describing the impacts of the projects.

"(3) CONSIDERATION.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall consider the recommendations and findings of the report submitted to Congress under section 1110(e) of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (112 Stat. 144), including recommendations and findings that would improve the operation and evaluation of the congestion mitigation and air quality improvement program under section 149.".

SEC. 1615. SYNCHRONIZED PLANNING AND CONFORMITY TIMELINES, REQUIREMENTS, AND HORIZON.

(a) METROPOLITAN PLANNING.—

(1) DEVELOPMENT OF LONG-RANGE TRANSPORTATION PLAN.—Section 134(g)(1) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking "periodically, according to a schedule that the Secretary determines to be appropriate." and inserting "every 4 years (or more frequently, in a case in which the metropolitan planning organization elects to update a transportation plan more frequently) in areas designated as nonattainment, as defined in section 107(d) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7407(d)), and in areas that were nonattainment that have been redesignated to attainment in accordance with section 107(d)(3) of that Act (42 U.S.C. 7407(d)(3)), with a maintenance plan under section 175A of that Act (42 U.S.C. 7505a), or every 5 years (or more frequently, in a case in which the metropolitan planning organization elects to update a transportation plan more frequently) in areas designated as attainment (as defined in section 107(d) of that Act (42 U.S.C. 7407(d))).".

(2) METROPOLITAN TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.—Section 134(h) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1)(D), by striking "2 years" and inserting "4 years"; and

(B) in paragraph (2)(A), by striking "3-year" and inserting "4-year".

(3) STATEWIDE TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.—Section 135(f)(1)(A) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting after "program" the following: "(which program shall cover a period of 4 years and be updated every 4 years)".

(4) FINAL REGULATIONS.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, the Secretary shall promulgate regulations that are consistent with the amendments made by this subsection.

(b) SYNCHRONIZED CONFORMITY DETERMINATION.—Section 176(c) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7506(c)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by striking "(2) Any transportation plan" and inserting the following:

"(2) TRANSPORTATION PLANS AND PROGRAMS.—Any transportation plan";

(B) in subparagraph (C)(iii), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon;

(C) in subparagraph (D)—

(i) by striking "Any project" and inserting "any transportation project"; and

(ii) by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(D) by adding at the end the following:

"(E) the appropriate metropolitan planning organization shall redetermine conformity of existing transportation plans and programs not later than 2 years after the date on which the Administrator—

"(i) finds a motor vehicle emissions budget to be adequate in accordance with section 93.118(e)(4) of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on October 1, 2003);

"(ii) approves an implementation plan that establishes a motor vehicle emissions budget, if that budget has not yet been used in a conformity determination prior to approval; or

"(iii) promulgates an implementation plan that establishes or revises a motor vehicle emissions budget.";

(2) in paragraph (4)(B)(ii), by striking "but in no case shall such determinations for transportation plans and programs be less frequent than every 3 years; and" and inserting "but the frequency for making conformity determinations on updated transportation plans and programs shall be every 4 years, except in a case in which—

"(I) the metropolitan planning organization elects to update a transportation plan or program more frequently; or

"(II) the metropolitan planning organization is required to determine conformity in accordance with paragraph (2)(E); and";

(3) in paragraph (4)(B)—

(A) in clause (ii), by striking "and" at the end;

(B) in clause (iii), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

"(iv) address the effects of the most recent population, economic, employment, travel, transit ridership, congestion, and induced travel demand information in the development and application of the latest travel and emissions models."; and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

"(7) CONFORMITY HORIZON FOR TRANSPORTATION PLANS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—For the purposes of this section, a transportation plan in a nonattainment or maintenance area shall be considered to be a transportation plan or a portion of a transportation plan that extends for the longest of the following periods:

"(i) The first 10-year period of any such transportation plan.

"(ii) The latest year in the implementation plan applicable to the area that contains a motor vehicle emission budget.

"(iii) The year after the completion date of a regionally significant project, if the project requires approval before the subsequent conformity determination.

"(B) EXCEPTION.—In a case in which an area has a revision to an implementation plan under section 175A(b) and the Administrator has found the motor vehicle emissions budgets from that revision to be adequate in accordance with section 93.118(e)(4) of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on October 1, 2003), or has approved the revision, the transportation plan shall be considered to be a transportation plan or portion of a transportation plan that extends through the last year of the implementation plan required under section 175A(b).

"(8) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection:

"(A) REGIONALLY SIGNIFICANT PROJECT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The term 'regionally significant project' means a transportation project that is on a facility that serves a regional transportation need, including—

"(I) access to and from the area outside of the region;

"(II) access to and from major planned developments, including new retail malls, sports complexes, or transportation terminals; and

"(III) most transportation terminals.

"(ii) PRINCIPAL ARTERIALS AND FIXED GUIDEWAYS.—The term 'regionally significant project' includes, at a minimum—

"(I) all principal arterial highways; and

"(II) all fixed guideway transit facilities that offer an alternative to regional highway travel.

"(iii) ADDITIONAL PROJECTS.—The interagency consultation process and procedures described in section 93.105(c) of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on October 1, 2003), shall be used to make determinations as to whether minor arterial highways and other transportation projects should be considered 'regionally significant projects'.

"(iv) EXCLUSIONS.—The term 'regionally significant project' does not include any project of a type listed in sections 93.126 or 127 of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on October 1, 2003).

"(B) SIGNIFICANT REVISION.—The term 'significant revision' means—

"(i) with respect to a regionally significant project, a significant change in design concept or scope to the project; and

"(ii) with respect to any other kind of project, a change that converts a project that is not a regionally significant project into a regionally significant project.

"(C) TRANSPORTATION PROJECT.—The term 'transportation project' includes only a project that is—

"(i) a regionally significant project; or

"(ii) a project that makes a significant revision to an existing project.".

SEC. 1616. TRANSITION TO NEW AIR QUALITY STANDARDS.

Section 176(c) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7506(c)) is amended by striking paragraph (3) and inserting the following:

"(3) METHODS OF CONFORMITY DETERMINATION BEFORE BUDGET IS AVAILABLE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Until such time as a motor vehicle emission budget from an implementation plan submitted for a national ambient air quality standard is determined to be adequate in accordance with section 93.118(e)(4) of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on October 1, 2003), or the submitted implementation plan is approved, conformity of such a plan, program, or project shall be demonstrated, in accordance with clauses (i) and (ii) and as selected through the consultation process required under paragraph (4)(D)(i), with—

"(i) a motor vehicle emission budget that has been found adequate in accordance with section 93.118(e)(4) of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on October 1, 2003), or that has been approved, from an implementation plan for the most recent prior applicable national ambient air quality standard addressing the same pollutant; or

"(ii) other such tests as the Administrator shall determine to ensure that—

"(I) the transportation plan or program—

"(aa) is consistent with the most recent estimates of mobile source emissions;

"(bb) provides for the expeditious implementation of transportation control measures in the applicable implementation plan; and

"(cc) with respect to an ozone or carbon monoxide nonattainment area, contributes to annual emissions reductions consistent with sections 182(b)(1) and 187(a)(7); and

"(II) the transportation project—

"(aa) comes from a conforming transportation plan and program described in this subparagraph; and

"(bb) in a carbon monoxide nonattainment area, eliminates or reduces the severity and number of violations of the carbon monoxide standards in the area substantially affected by the project.

"(B) DETERMINATION FOR A TRANSPORTATION PROJECT IN A CARBON MONOXIDE NONATTAINMENT AREA.—A determination under subparagraph (A)(ii)(II)(bb) may be made as part of either the conformity determination for the transportation program or for the individual transportation project taken as a whole during the environmental review phase of transportation project development.".

SEC. 1617. REDUCED BARRIERS TO AIR QUALITY IMPROVEMENTS.

Section 176(c) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7506(c)) (as amended by section 1615(b)(4)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (8) as paragraph (9); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (7) the following:

"(8) SUBSTITUTION FOR TRANSPORTATION CONTROL MEASURES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Transportation control measures that are specified in an implementation plan may be replaced or added to the implementation plan with alternate or additional transportation control measures if—

"(i) the substitute measures achieve equivalent or greater emissions reductions than the control measure to be replaced, as demonstrated with an analysis that is consistent with the current methodology used for evaluating the replaced control measure in the implementation plan;

"(ii) the substitute control measures are implemented—

"(I) in accordance with a schedule that is consistent with the schedule provided for control measures in the implementation plan; or

"(II) if the implementation plan date for implementation of the control measure to be replaced has passed, as soon as practicable after the implementation plan date but not later than the date on which emission reductions are necessary to achieve the purpose of the implementation plan;

"(iii) the substitute and additional control measures are accompanied with evidence of adequate personnel, funding, and authority under State or local law to implement, monitor, and enforce the control measures;

"(iv) the substitute and additional control measures were developed through a collaborative process that included—

"(I) participation by representatives of all affected jurisdictions (including local air pollution control agencies, the State air pollution control agency, and State and local transportation agencies);

"(II) consultation with the Administrator; and

"(III) reasonable public notice and opportunity for comment; and

"(v) the metropolitan planning organization, State air pollution control agency, and the Administrator concur with the equivalency of the substitute or additional control measures.

"(B) Adoption.—After carrying out subparagraph (A), a State shall adopt the substitute or additional transportation control measure in the applicable implementation plan.

"(C) No requirement for express permission.—The substitution or addition of a transportation control measure in accordance with this paragraph shall not be contingent on there being any provision in the implementation plan that expressly permits such a substitution or addition.

"(D) No requirement for new conformity determination.—The substitution or addition of a transportation control measure in accordance with this paragraph shall not require—

"(i) a new conformity determination for the transportation plan; or

"(ii) a revision of the implementation plan.

"(E) Continuation of control measure being replaced.—A control measure that is being replaced by a substitute control measure under this paragraph shall remain in effect until the substitute control measure is adopted by the State pursuant to subparagraph (B).

"(F) Effect of adoption.—Adoption of a substitute control measure shall constitute rescission of the previously applicable control measure.".

SEC. 1618. AIR QUALITY MONITORING DATA INFLUENCED BY EXCEPTIONAL EVENTS.

(a) In General.—Section 319 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7619) is amended—

(1) by striking the section heading and all that follows through "after notice and opportunity for public hearing" and inserting the following:

"SEC. 319. AIR QUALITY MONITORING.

"(a) In General.—After notice and opportunity for public hearing"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(b) Air Quality Monitoring Data Influenced by Exceptional Events.—

"(1) Definition of exceptional event.—In this section:

"(A) In general.—The term 'exceptional event' means an event that—

"(i) affects air quality;

"(ii) is not reasonably controllable or preventable;

"(iii) is—

"(I) a natural event; or

"(II) an event caused by human activity that is unlikely to recur at a particular location; and

"(iv) is determined by the Administrator through the process established in the regulations promulgated under paragraph (2) to be an exceptional event.

"(B) Exclusions.—The term 'exceptional event' does not include—

"(i) stagnation of air masses or meteorological inversions;

"(ii) a meteorological event involving high temperatures or lack of precipitation; or

"(iii) air pollution relating to source noncompliance.

"(2) Regulations.—

"(A) Proposed regulations.—Not later than March 1, 2005, after consultation with Federal land managers and State air pollution control agencies, the Administrator shall publish in the Federal Register proposed regulations governing the review and handling of air quality monitoring data influenced by exceptional events.

"(B) Final regulations.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which the Administrator publishes proposed regulations under subparagraph (A), and after providing an opportunity for interested persons to make oral presentations of views, data, and arguments regarding the proposed regulations, the Administrator shall promulgate final regulations governing the review and handling or air quality monitoring data influenced by an exceptional event that are consistent with paragraph (3).

"(3) Principles and requirements.—

"(A) Principles.—In promulgating regulations under this section, the Administrator shall follow—

"(i) the principle that protection of public health is the highest priority;

"(ii) the principle that timely information should be provided to the public in any case in which the air quality is unhealthy;

"(iii) the principle that all ambient air quality data should be included in a timely manner, an appropriate Federal air quality database that is accessible to the public;

"(iv) the principle that each State must take necessary measures to safeguard public health regardless of the source of the air pollution; and

"(v) the principle that air quality data should be carefully screened to ensure that events not likely to recur are represented accurately in all monitoring data and analyses.

"(B) Requirements.—Regulations promulgated under this section shall, at a minimum, provide that—

"(i) the occurrence of an exceptional event must be demonstrated by reliable, accurate data that is promptly produced and provided by Federal, State, or local government agencies;

"(ii) a clear causal relationship must exist between the measured exceedances of a national ambient air quality standard and the exceptional event to demonstrate that the exceptional event caused a specific air pollution concentration at a particular air quality monitoring location;

"(iii) there is a public process for determining whether an event is exceptional; and

"(iv) there are criteria and procedures for the Governor of a State to petition the Administrator to exclude air quality monitoring data that is directly due to exceptional events from use in determinations by the Environmental Protection Agency with respect to exceedances or violations of the national ambient air quality standards.

"(4) Interim provision.—Until the effective date of a regulation promulgated under paragraph (2), the following guidance issued by the Administrator shall continue to apply:

"(A) Guidance on the identification and use of air quality data affected by exceptional events (July 1986).

"(B) Areas affected by PM-10 natural events, May 30, 1996.

"(C) Appendices I, K, and N to part 50 of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations.".

SEC. 1619. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

Section 176(c)(4) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7506(c)(4) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subparagraphs (B) through (D) as subparagraphs (D) through (F), respectively;

(2) by striking "(4)(A) No later than one year after the date of enactment of the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990, the Administrator shall promulgate" and inserting the following:

"(4) Criteria and procedures for determining conformity.—

"(A) In general.—The Administrator shall promulgate, and periodically update,";

(3) in subparagraph (A)—

(A) in the second sentence, by striking "No later than one year after such date of enactment, the Administrator, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Transportation, shall promulgate" and inserting the following:

"(B) Transportation plans, programs, and projects.—The Administrator, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Transportation, shall promulgate, and periodically update,"; and

(B) in the third sentence, by striking "A suit" and inserting the following:

"(C) Civil action to compel promulgation.—A civil action"; and

(4) by striking subparagraph (E) (as redesignated by paragraph (1)) and inserting the following:

"(E) Inclusion of criteria and procedures in sip.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, the procedures under subparagraph (A) shall include a requirement that each State include in the State implementation plan criteria and procedures for consultation in accordance with the Administrator's criteria and procedures for consultation required by subparagraph (D)(i).".

SEC. 1620. HIGHWAY STORMWATER DISCHARGE MITIGATION PROGRAM.

(a) Highway Stormwater Mitigation Projects.—Section 133(d) of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1401(a)(2)(B)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(5) Highway stormwater discharge mitigation projects.—Of the amount apportioned to a State under section 104(b)(3) for a fiscal year, 2 percent shall be available only for projects and activities carried out under section 167.".

(b) Highway Stormwater Discharge Mitigation Program.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1601(a)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 167. Highway stormwater discharge mitigation program

"(a) Definitions.—In this section:

"(1) Administrator.—The term 'Administrator' means the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

"(2) Eligible mitigation project.—The term 'eligible mitigation project' means a practice or technique that—

"(A) improves stormwater discharge water quality;

"(B) attains preconstruction hydrology;

"(C) promotes infiltration of stormwater into groundwater;

"(D) recharges groundwater;

"(E) minimizes stream bank erosion;

"(F) promotes natural filters;

"(G) otherwise mitigates water quality impacts of highway stormwater discharges, improves surface water quality, or enhances groundwater recharge; or

"(H) reduces flooding caused by highway stormwater discharge.

"(3) Federal-aid highway and associated facility.—The term 'Federal-aid highway and associated facility' means—

"(A) a Federal-aid highway; or

"(B) a facility or land owned by a State (or political subdivision of a State) that is directly associated with the Federal-aid highway.

"(4) Highway stormwater discharge.—The term 'highway stormwater discharge' means stormwater discharge from a Federal-aid highway, or a Federal-aid highway and associated facility, that was constructed before the date of enactment of this section.

"(5) HIGHWAY STORMWATER DISCHARGE MITIGATION.—The term 'highway stormwater discharge mitigation' means—

"(A) the reduction of water quality impacts of stormwater discharges from Federal-aid highways or Federal-aid highways and associated facilities; or

"(B) the enhancement of groundwater recharge from stormwater discharges from Federal-aid highways or Federal-aid highways and associated facilities.

"(6) PROGRAM.—The term 'program' means the highway stormwater discharge mitigation program established under subsection (b).

"(b) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish a highway stormwater discharge mitigation program—

"(1) to improve the quality of stormwater discharge from Federal-aid highways or Federal-aid highways and associated facilities; and

"(2) to enhance groundwater recharge.

"(c) PRIORITY OF PROJECTS.—For projects funded from the allocation under section 133(d)(6), a State shall give priority to projects sponsored by a State or local government that assist the State or local government in complying with the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1251 et seq.).

"(d) GUIDANCE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary, in consultation with the Administrator, shall issue guidance to assist States in carrying out this section.

"(2) REQUIREMENTS FOR GUIDANCE.—The guidance issued under paragraph (1) shall include information concerning innovative technologies and nonstructural best management practices to mitigate highway stormwater discharges.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1601(b), is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 166 the following:

"167. Highway stormwater discharge mitigation program.".

SEC. 1621. EXEMPTION FROM CERTAIN HAZARDOUS MATERIALS TRANSPORTATION REQUIREMENTS.

(a) DEFINITION OF ELIGIBLE PERSON.—In this section, the term "eligible person" means an agricultural producer that has gross agricultural commodity sales that do not exceed $446,541.

(b) EXEMPTION.—Subject to subsection (c), part 172 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations, shall not apply to an eligible person that transports a fertilizer, pesticide, propane, gasoline, or diesel fuel for agricultural purposes, to the extent determined by the Secretary.

(c) APPLICABILITY.—Subsection (b) applies to security plan requirements under subpart I of part 172 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations (or a successor regulation).

SEC. 1622. FUNDS FOR REBUILDING FISH STOCKS.

Section 105 of the Miscellaneous Appropriations and Offsets Act, 2004 (Division H of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2004 (Public Law 108–199)) is repealed.

Subtitle G—Operations

SEC. 1701. TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS MANAGEMENT AND OPERATIONS.

(a) SURFACE TRANSPORTATION PROGRAM ELIGIBILITY.—Section 133(b) of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1601(a)(2)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(16) Regional transportation operations collaboration and coordination activities that are associated with regional improvements, such as traffic incident management, technology deployment, emergency management and response, traveler information, and regional congestion relief.

"(17) RUSH HOUR CONGESTION RELIEF.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), a State may spend the funds apportioned under this section to reduce traffic delays caused by motor vehicle accidents and breakdowns on highways during peak driving times.

"(B) USE OF FUNDS.—A State, metropolitan planning organization, or local government may use the funds under subparagraph (A)—

"(i) to develop a region-wide coordinated plan to mitigate traffic delays caused by motor vehicle accidents and breakdowns;

"(ii) to purchase or lease telecommunications equipment for first responders;

"(iii) to purchase or lease towing and recovery services;

"(iv) to pay contractors for towing and recovery;

"(v) to rent vehicle storage areas adjacent to roadways;

"(vi) to fund service patrols, equipment, and operations;

"(vii) to purchase incident detection equipment;

"(viii) to carry out training.".

(b) CONGESTION MITIGATION AND AIR QUALITY IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM ELIGIBILITY.—Section 149(b)(5) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting "improve transportation systems management and operations," after "intersections,".

(c) TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS MANAGEMENT AND OPERATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1620(b)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 168. Transportation systems management and operations

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall carry out a transportation systems management and operations program to—

"(1) ensure efficient and effective management and operation of transportation systems through collaboration, coordination, and real-time information sharing at a regional and Statewide level among—

"(A) managers and operators of major modes of transportation;

"(B) public safety officials; and

"(C) the general public; and

"(2) manage and operate transportation systems in a coordinated manner to preserve the capacity and maximize the performance of transportation facilities for travelers and carriers.

"(b) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In carrying out the program under subsection (a), the Secretary may carry out activities to—

"(A) encourage managers and operators of major modes of transportation, public safety officials, and transportation planners in urbanized areas that are responsible for conducting the day-to-day management, operations, public safety, and planning of transportation facilities and services to collaborate on and coordinate, on a regional level and in a continuous and sustained manner, improved transportation systems management and operations; and

"(B) encourage States to—

"(i) establish a system of basic real-time monitoring for the surface transportation system; and

"(ii) provide the means to share the data gathered under clause (i) among—

"(I) highway, transit, and public safety agencies;

"(II) jurisdictions (including States, cities, counties, and metropolitan planning organizations);

"(III) private-sector entities; and

"(IV) the general public.

"(2) ACTIVITIES.—Activities to be carried out under paragraph (1) include—

"(A) developing a regional concept of operations that defines a regional strategy shared by all transportation and public safety participants with respect to the manner in which the transportation systems of the region should be managed, operated, and measured;

"(B) the sharing of information among operators, service providers, public safety officials, and the general public; and

"(C) guiding, in a regionally-coordinated manner and in a manner consistent with and integrated into the metropolitan and statewide transportation planning processes and regional intelligent transportation system architecture, the implementation of regional transportation system management and operations initiatives, including—

"(i) emergency evacuation and response;

"(ii) traffic incident management;

"(iii) technology deployment; and

"(iv) traveler information systems delivery.

"(c) COOPERATION.—In carrying out the program under subsection (a), the Secretary may assist and cooperate with other Federal agencies, State and local governments, metropolitan planning organizations, private industry, and other interested parties to improve regional collaboration and real-time information sharing between managers and operators of major modes of transportation, public safety officials, emergency managers, and the general public to increase the security, safety, and reliability of Federal-aid highways.

"(d) GUIDANCE; REGULATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In carrying out the program under subsection (a), the Secretary may issue guidance or promulgate regulations for the procurement of transportation system management and operations facilities, equipment, and services, including—

"(A) equipment procured in preparation for natural disasters, disasters caused by human activity, and emergencies;

"(B) system hardware;

"(C) software; and

"(D) software integration services.

"(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—In developing the guidance or regulations under paragraph (1), the Secretary may consider innovative procurement methods that support the timely and streamlined execution of transportation system management and operations programs and projects.

"(3) FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary may authorize the use of funds made available under section 104(b)(3) to provide assistance for regional operations collaboration and coordination activities that are associated with regional improvements, such as—

"(A) traffic incident management;

"(B) technology deployment;

"(C) emergency management and response;

"(D) traveler information; and

"(E) congestion relief.".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1620(c)), is amended by adding at the end:

"168. Transportation systems management and operations.".

SEC. 1702. REAL-TIME SYSTEM MANAGEMENT INFORMATION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1701(c)(1)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§169. Real-time system management information program

"(a) In General.—The Secretary shall carry out a real-time system management information program to—

"(1) provide a nationwide system of basic real-time information for managing and operating the surface transportation system;

"(2)(A) identify long-range real-time highway and transit monitoring needs; and

"(B) develop plans and strategies for meeting those needs;

"(3) provide the capability and means to share the basic real-time information with State and local governments and the traveling public; and

"(4) provide the nationwide capability to monitor, in real-time, the traffic and travel conditions of major highways in the United States, and to share that information with State and local governments and the traveling public, to—

"(A) improve the security of the surface transportation system;

"(B) address congestion problems;

"(C) support improved response to weather events; and

"(D) facilitate the distribution of national and regional traveler information.

"(b) Data Exchange Formats.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall establish data exchange formats to ensure that the data provided by highway and transit monitoring systems (including statewide incident reporting systems) can readily be exchanged between jurisdictions to facilitate the nationwide availability of information on traffic and travel conditions.

"(c) Statewide Incident Reporting System.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this section, or not later than 5 years after the date of enactment of this section if the Secretary determines that adequate real-time communications capability will not be available within 2 years after the date of enactment of this section, each State shall establish a statewide incident reporting system to facilitate the real-time electronic reporting of highway and transit incidents to a central location for use in—

"(1) monitoring an incident;

"(2) providing accurate traveler information on the incident; and

"(3) responding to the incident as appropriate.

"(d) Regional ITS Architecture.—

"(1) In general.—In developing or updating regional intelligent transportation system architectures under section 940.9 of title 23, Code of Federal Regulations (or any successor regulation), States and local governments shall address—

"(A) the real-time highway and transit information needs of the State or local government, including coverage, monitoring systems, data fusion and archiving, and methods of exchanging or sharing information; and

"(B) the systems needed to meet those needs.

"(2) Data exchange formats.—In developing or updating regional intelligent transportation system architectures, States and local governments are encouraged to incorporate the data exchange formats developed by the Secretary under subsection (b) to ensure that the data provided by highway and transit monitoring systems can readily be—

"(A) exchanged between jurisdictions; and

"(B) shared with the traveling public.

"(e) Eligible Funding.—Subject to project approval by the Secretary, a State may—

"(1) use funds available to the State under section 505(a) to carry out activities relating to the planning of real-time monitoring elements; and

"(2) use funds apportioned to the State under paragraphs (1) and (3) of section 104(b) to carry out activities relating to the planning and deployment of real-time monitoring elements.".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1701(c)(2)), is amended adding at the end the following:

"169. Real-time system management information program.".

SEC. 1703. CONTRACTING FOR ENGINEERING AND DESIGN SERVICES.

Section 112(b)(2) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking "title 40" and all that follows through the period and inserting "title 40.";

(2) by striking subparagraph (B);

(3) by redesignating subparagraphs (C) through (F) as subparagraphs (B) through (E), respectively; and

(4) by striking subparagraph (G).

SEC. 1704. OFF-DUTY TIME FOR DRIVERS OF COMMERCIAL VEHICLES.

Section 345(a)(2) of the National Highway System Designation Act of 1995 (49 U.S.C. 31136 note; 109 Stat. 613) is amended by adding at the end the following: "No additional off-duty time for a driver of such a vehicle shall be required in order for the driver to operate the vehicle.".

SEC. 1705. DESIGNATION OF TRANSPORTATION MANAGEMENT AREAS.

(a) Funding.—Section 134(d)(3)(C)(ii) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking subclause (II) and inserting the following:

"(II) Funding.—In addition to funds made available to the metropolitan planning organization for the Lake Tahoe Region under this title and chapter 53 of title 49, 1 percent of all funds distributed under section 202 shall be used to carry out the transportation planning process for the Lake Tahoe region under this subparagraph.".

(b) Special Designation.—Section 134(i)(1) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(C) Special designation.—

"(i) In general.—The urbanized areas of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and Norman, Oklahoma, shall be designated as a single transportation management area.

"(ii) Allocation.—The allocation of funds to the Oklahoma City-Norman Transportation Management Area designated under clause (i) shall be based on the aggregate population of the 2 urbanized areas referred to in that clause, as determined by the Bureau of the Census.".

Subtitle H—Federal-Aid Stewardship

SEC. 1801. FUTURE INTERSTATE SYSTEM ROUTES.

Section 103(c)(4)(B) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in clause (ii), by striking "12" and inserting "20"; and

(2) in clause (iii)—

(A) in subclause (I), by striking "in the agreement between the Secretary and the State or States"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"(III) Existing agreements.—An agreement described in clause (ii) that is entered into before the date of enactment of this subparagraph shall be deemed to include the 20-year time limitation described in that clause, regardless of any earlier construction completion date in the agreement.".

SEC. 1802. STEWARDSHIP AND OVERSIGHT.

(a) In General.—Section 106 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking subsection (e) and inserting the following:

"(e) Value Engineering Analysis.—

"(1) Definition of value engineering analysis.—

"(A) In general.—In this subsection, the term 'value engineering analysis' means a systematic process of review and analysis of a project, during the concept and design phases, by a multidisciplined team of persons not involved in the project, that is conducted to provide recommendations such as those described in subparagraph (B) for—

"(i) providing the needed functions safely, reliably, and at the lowest overall cost;

"(ii) improving the value and quality of the project; and

"(iii) reducing the time to complete the project.

"(B) Inclusions.—The recommendations referred to in subparagraph (A) include, with respect to a project—

"(i) combining or eliminating otherwise inefficient use of costly parts of the original proposed design for the project; and

"(ii) completely redesigning the project using different technologies, materials, or methods so as to accomplish the original purpose of the project.

"(2) Analysis.—The State shall provide a value engineering analysis or other cost-reduction analysis for—

"(A) each project on the Federal-Aid System with an estimated total cost of $25,000,000 or more;

"(B) a bridge project with an estimated total cost of $20,000,000 or more; and

"(C) any other project the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(3) Major projects.—The Secretary may require more than 1 analysis described in paragraph (2) for a major project described in subsection (h).

"(4) Requirements.—Analyses described in paragraph (1) for a bridge project shall—

"(A) include bridge substructure requirements based on construction material; and

"(B) be evaluated—

"(i) on engineering and economic bases, taking into consideration acceptable designs for bridges; and

"(ii) using an analysis of life-cycle costs and duration of project construction."; and

(2) by striking subsections (g) and (h) and inserting the following:

"(g) Oversight Program.—

"(1) Program.—

"(A) In general.—The Secretary shall establish an oversight program to monitor the effective and efficient use of funds made available under this title.

"(B) Minimum requirements.—At a minimum, the program shall monitor and respond to all areas relating to financial integrity and project delivery.

"(2) Financial integrity.—

"(A) Financial management systems.—

"(i) In general.—The Secretary shall perform annual reviews of the financial management systems of State transportation departments that affect projects approved under subsection (a).

"(ii) Review areas.—In carrying out clause (i), the Secretary shall use risk assessment procedures to identify areas to be reviewed.

"(B) Project costs.—The Secretary shall—

"(i) develop minimum standards for estimating project costs; and "(ii) periodically evaluate practices of the States for—

"(I) estimating project costs;

"(II) awarding contracts; and

"(III) reducing project costs.

"(C) Responsibility of the States.—

"(i) In general.—Each State shall be responsible for ensuring that subrecipients of Federal funds within the State under this section have—

"(I) sufficient accounting controls to properly manage the Federal funds; and

"(II) adequate project delivery systems for projects approved under this section.

"(ii) Review by Secretary.—The Secretary shall periodically review monitoring by the States of those subrecipients.

"(3) Project delivery.—The Secretary shall—

"(A) perform annual reviews of the project delivery system of each State, including analysis of 1 or more activities that are involved in the life cycle of a project; and

"(B) employ risk assessment procedures to identify areas to be reviewed.

"(4) Specific oversight responsibilities.—Nothing in this section discharges or otherwise affects any oversight responsibility of the Secretary—

"(A) specifically provided for under this title or other Federal law; or

"(B) for the design and construction of all Appalachian development highways under section 14501 of title 40 or section 170 of this title.

"(h) Major Projects.—

"(1) In general.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a recipient of Federal financial assistance for a project under this title with an estimated total cost of $1,000,000,000 or more, and recipients for such other projects as may be identified by the Secretary, shall submit to the Secretary for each project—

"(A) a project management plan; and

"(B) an annual financial plan.

"(2) Project management plan.—A project management plan shall document—

"(A) the procedures and processes that are in effect to provide timely information to the project decisionmakers to effectively manage the scope, costs, schedules, and quality of, and the Federal requirements applicable to, the project; and

"(B) the role of the agency leadership and management team in the delivery of the project.

"(3) Financial plan.—A financial plan shall—

"(A) be based on detailed estimates of the cost to complete the project; and

"(B) provide for the annual submission of updates to the Secretary that are based on reasonable assumptions, as determined by the Secretary, of future increases in the cost to complete the project.

"(i) Other Projects.—A recipient of Federal financial assistance for a project under this title that receives $100,000,000 or more in Federal assistance for the project, and that is not covered by subsection (h), shall prepare, and make available to the Secretary at the request of the Secretary, an annual financial plan for the project.".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Section 114(a) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in the first sentence by striking "highways or portions of highways located on a Federal-aid system" and inserting "Federal-aid highway or a portion of a Federal-aid highway"; and

(B) by striking the second sentence and inserting "The Secretary shall have the right to conduct such inspections and take such corrective action as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.".

(2) Section 117 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking subsection (d); and

(B) by redesignating subsections (e) through (h) as subsections (d) through (g), respectively.

(c) Contractor Suspension and Debarment Policy; Sharing Fraud Monetary Recoveries.—

(1) In general.—Section 307 of title 49, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 307. Contractor suspension and debarment policy; sharing fraud monetary recoveries

"(a) Mandatory Enforcement Policy.—

"(1) In general.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary—

"(A) shall debar any contractor or subcontractor convicted of a criminal or civil offense involving fraud relating to a project receiving Federal highway or transit funds for such period as the Secretary determines to be appropriate; and

"(B) subject to approval by the Attorney General—

"(i) except as provided in paragraph (2), shall suspend any contractor or subcontractor upon indictment for criminal or civil offenses involving fraud; and

"(ii) may exclude nonaffiliated subsidiaries of a debarred business entity.

"(2) National security exception.—If the Secretary finds that mandatory debarment or suspension of a contractor or subcontractor under paragraph (1) would be contrary to the national security of the United States, the Secretary—

"(A) may waive the debarment or suspension; and

"(B) in the instance of each waiver, shall provide notification to Congress of the waiver with appropriate details.

"(b) Sharing of Monetary Recoveries.—

"(1) In general.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law—

"(A) monetary judgments accruing to the Federal Government from judgments in Federal criminal prosecutions and civil judgments pertaining to fraud in highway and transit programs shall be shared with the State or local transit agency involved; and

"(B) the State or local transit agency shall use the funds for transportation infrastructure and oversight activities relating to programs authorized under title 23 and this title.

"(2) Amount.—The amount of recovered funds to be shared with an affected State or local transit agency shall be—

"(A) determined by the Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary; and

"(B) considered to be Federal funds to be used in compliance with other relevant Federal transportation laws (including regulations).

"(3) Fraudulent activity.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply in any case in which a State or local transit agency is found by the Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary, to have been involved or negligent with respect to the fraudulent activities.".

(2) Conforming amendment.—The analysis for chapter 3 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 307 and inserting the following:

"307. Contractor suspension and debarment policy; sharing fraud monetary recoveries.".

SEC. 1803. DESIGN-BUILD CONTRACTING.

Section 112(b)(3) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking subparagraph (C) and inserting the following:

"(C) Qualified projects.—A qualified project referred to in subparagraph (A) is a project under this chapter (including intermodal projects) for which the Secretary has approved the use of design-build contracting under criteria specified in regulations promulgated by the Secretary.".

SEC. 1804. PROGRAM EFFICIENCIES—FINANCE.

(a) Advance Construction.—Section 115 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d);

(2) by redesignating subsections (a)(2), (a)(2)(A), and (a)(2)(B) as subsections (c), (c)(1), and (c)(2), respectively, and indenting appropriately;

(3) by striking "(a) Congestion" and all that follows through subsection (a)(1)(B);

(4) by striking subsection (b); and

(5) by inserting after the section heading the following:

"(a) In General.—The Secretary may authorize a State to proceed with a project authorized under this title—

"(1) without the use of Federal funds; and

"(2) in accordance with all procedures and requirements applicable to the project other than those procedures and requirements that limit the State to implementation of a project—

"(A) with the aid of Federal funds previously apportioned or allocated to the State; or

"(B) with obligation authority previously allocated to the State.

"(b) Obligation of Federal Share.—The Secretary, on the request of a State and execution of a project agreement, may obligate all or a portion of the Federal share of the project authorized under this section from any category of funds for which the project is eligible.".

(b) Obligation and Release of Funds.—Section 118 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking subsection (d) and inserting the following:

"(d) Obligation and Release of Funds.—

"(1) In general.—Funds apportioned or allocated to a State for a particular purpose for any fiscal year shall be considered to be obligated if a sum equal to the total of the funds apportioned or allocated to the State for that purpose for that fiscal year and previous fiscal years is obligated.

"(2) Released funds.—Any funds released by the final payment for a project, or by modifying the project agreement for a project, shall be—

"(A) credited to the same class of funds previously apportioned or allocated to the State; and

"(B) immediately available for obligation.

"(3) Net obligations.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law (including a regulation), obligations recorded against funds made available under this section shall be recorded and reported as net obligations.".

SEC. 1805. SET-ASIDES FOR INTERSTATE DISCRETIONARY PROJECTS.

Section 118(c)(1) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "$50,000,000" and all that follows through "2003" and inserting "$89,308,176 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009"; and

(2) by striking "Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century" and inserting "Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005".

SEC. 1806. FEDERAL LANDS HIGHWAYS PROGRAM.

(a) FEDERAL SHARE PAYABLE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 120(k) of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking "Federal-aid highway"; and

(B) by striking "section 104" and inserting "this title or chapter 53 of title 49".

(2) TECHNICAL REFERENCES.—Section 120(l) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking "section 104" and inserting "this title or chapter 53 of title 49".

(b) PAYMENTS TO FEDERAL AGENCIES FOR FEDERAL-AID PROJECTS.—Section 132 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking the first 2 sentences and inserting the following:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In a case in which a proposed Federal-aid project is to be undertaken by a Federal agency in accordance with an agreement between a State and the Federal agency, the State may—

"(1) direct the Secretary to transfer the funds for the Federal share of the project directly to the Federal agency; or

"(2) make such deposit with, or payment to, the Federal agency as is required to meet the obligation of the State under the agreement for the work undertaken or to be undertaken by the Federal agency.

"(b) REIMBURSEMENT.—On execution of a project agreement with a State described in subsection (a), the Secretary may reimburse the State, using any available funds, for the estimated Federal share under this title of the obligation of the State deposited or paid under subsection (a)(2)."; and

(2) in the last sentence, by striking "Any sums" and inserting the following:

"(c) RECOVERY AND CREDITING OF FUNDS.—Any sums".

(c) ALLOCATIONS.—Section 202 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking "(a) On October 1" and all that follows through "Such allocation" and inserting the following:

"(a) ALLOCATION BASED ON NEED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—On October 1 of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall allocate sums authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year for forest development roads and trails according to the relative needs of the various national forests and grasslands.

"(2) PLANNING.—The allocation under paragraph (1)";

(2) by striking subsection (b) and inserting the following:

"(b) ALLOCATION FOR PUBLIC LANDS HIGHWAYS.—

"(1) PUBLIC LANDS HIGHWAYS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—On October 1 of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall allocate 33⅓ percent of the sums authorized to be appropriated for that fiscal year for public lands highways among those States having unappropriated or unreserved public lands, or nontaxable Indian lands or other Federal reservations, on the basis of need in the States, respectively, as determined by the Secretary, on application of the State transportation departments of the respective States.

"(B) PREFERENCE.—In making the allocation under subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall give preference to those projects that are significantly impacted by Federal land and resource management activities that are proposed by a State that contains at least 3 percent of the total public land in the United States.

"(2) FOREST HIGHWAYS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—On October 1 of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall allocate 66⅔ percent of the funds authorized to be appropriated for public lands highways for forest highways in accordance with section 134 of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1987 (23 U.S.C. 202 note; 101 Stat. 173).

"(B) PUBLIC ACCESS TO AND WITHIN NATIONAL FOREST SYSTEM.—In making the allocation under subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall give equal consideration to projects that provide access to and within the National Forest System, as identified by the Secretary of Agriculture through—

"(i) renewable resource and land use planning; and

"(ii) assessments of the impact of that planning on transportation facilities.";

(3) in subsection (c)—

(A) by striking "(c) On" and inserting the following:

"(c) PARK ROADS AND PARKWAYS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—On"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"(2) PRIORITY.—

"(A) DEFINITION OF QUALIFYING NATIONAL PARK.—In this paragraph, the term "qualifying national park" means a National Park that is used more than 1,000,000 recreational visitor days per year, based on an average of the 3 most recent years of available data from the National Park Service.

"(B) PRIORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, with respect to funds authorized for park roads and parkways, the Secretary shall give priority in the allocation of funds to projects for highways that—

"(i) are located in, or provide access to, a qualifying National Park; and

"(ii) were initially constructed before 1940.

"(C) PRIORITY CONFLICTS.—If there is a conflict between projects described in subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall give highest priority to projects that—

"(i) are in, or that provide access to, parks that are adjacent to a National Park of a foreign country; or

"(ii) are located in more than 1 State;";

(4) in subsection (d)—

(A) in paragraph (1)—

(i) in the paragraph heading, by striking "1999" and inserting "2005"; and

(ii) by striking "1999" and inserting "2005";

(ii) in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (D), by striking "2000" each place it appears and inserting "2005";

(iii) in subparagraph (B), by striking "1999" each place it appears and inserting "2005"; and

(iv) by adding at the end the following:

"(E) TRANSFERRED FUNDS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after the date on which funds are made available to the Secretary of the Interior under this paragraph, the funds shall be distributed to, and available for immediate use by, the eligible Indian tribes, in accordance with the formula applicable for each fiscal year.

"(ii) FORMULA.—If the Secretary of the Interior has not promulgated final regulations for the distribution of funds under clause (i) for a fiscal year by the date on which the funds for the fiscal year are required to be distributed under that clause, the Secretary of the Interior shall distribute the funds under clause (i) in accordance with the applicable funding formula for the preceding year.

"(iii) USE OF FUNDS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, funds available to Indian tribes for Indian reservation roads shall be expended on projects identified in a transportation improvement program approved by the Secretary.";

(C) in paragraph (3)—

(i) in subparagraph (A), by striking "under this title" and inserting "under this chapter and section 125(e)"; and

(ii) by adding at the end the following:

"(C) FEDERAL LANDS HIGHWAY PROGRAM DEMONSTRATION PROJECT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish a demonstration project under which all funds made available under this chapter for Indian reservation roads and for highway bridges located on Indian reservation roads as provided for in subparagraph (A) shall be made available, on the request of an affected Indian tribal government, to the Indian tribal government for use in carrying out, in accordance with the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450b et seq.), contracts and agreements for the planning, research, engineering, and construction described in that subparagraph.

"(ii) EXCLUSION OF AGENCY PARTICIPATION.—In accordance with subparagraph (B), all funds for Indian reservation roads and for highway bridges located on Indian reservation roads to which clause (i) applies shall be paid without regard to the organizational level at which the Federal lands highway program has previously carried out the programs, functions, services, or activities involved.

"(iii) SELECTION OF PARTICIPATING TRIBES.—

"(I) PARTICIPANTS.—

"(aa) IN GENERAL.—In addition to Indian tribes or tribal organizations that, as of the date of enactment of this subparagraph, are contracting or compacting for any Indian reservation road function or program, for each fiscal year, the Secretary may select up to 15 Indian tribes from the applicant pool described in subclause (II) to participate in the demonstration project carried out under clause (i).

"(bb) CONSORTIA.—Two or more Indian tribes that are otherwise eligible to participate in a program or activity to which this title applies may form a consortium to be considered as a single Indian tribe for the purpose of becoming part of the applicant pool under subclause (II).

"(cc) FUNDING.—An Indian tribe participating in the pilot program under this subparagraph shall receive funding in an amount equal to the sum of the funding that the Indian tribe would otherwise receive in accordance with the funding formula established under the other provisions of this subsection, and an additional percentage of that amount equal to the percentage of funds withheld during the applicable fiscal year for the road program management costs of the Bureau of Indian Affairs under subsection (f)(1).

"(II) APPLICANT POOL.—The applicant pool described in this subclause shall consist of each Indian tribe (or consortium) that—

"(aa) has successfully completed the planning phase described in subclause (IV);

"(bb) has requested participation in the demonstration project under this subparagraph through the adoption of a resolution or other official action by the tribal governing body; and

"(cc) has demonstrated financial stability and financial management capability in accordance with subclause (III) during the 3-fiscal-year period immediately preceding the fiscal year for which participation under this subparagraph is being requested.

"(III) CRITERIA FOR DETERMINING FINANCIAL STABILITY AND FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT CAPACITY.—For the purpose of subclause (II), evidence that, during the 3-year period referred to in subclause (II)(cc), an Indian tribe had no uncorrected significant and material audit exceptions in the required annual audit of the Indian tribe's self-determination contracts or self-governance funding agreements with any Federal agency shall be conclusive evidence of the required stability and capability.

"(IV) PLANNING PHASE.—

"(aa) IN GENERAL.—An Indian tribe (or consortium) requesting participation in the demonstration project under this subparagraph shall complete a planning phase that shall include legal and budgetary research and internal tribal government and organization preparation.

"(bb) ELIGIBILITY.—An Indian tribe (or consortium) described in item (aa) shall be eligible to receive a grant under this subclause to plan and negotiate participation in a project described in that item.

"(V) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than September 30, 2006, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report describing the implementation of the demonstration project and any recommendations for improving the project."; and

(D) in paragraph (4)—

(i) in subparagraph (B)—

(I) by striking "(B) RESERVATION.—Of the amounts" and all that follows through "to replace," and inserting the following:

"(B) FUNDING.—

"(i) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—In addition to any other funds made available for Indian reservation roads for each fiscal year, there is authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) $13,396,226 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 to carry out planning, design, engineering, preconstruction, construction, and inspection of projects to replace,"; and

(II) by adding at the end the following:

"(ii) AVAILABILITY.—Funds made available to carry out this subparagraph shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under chapter 1."; and

(ii) by striking subparagraph (D) and inserting the following:

"(D) APPROVAL REQUIREMENT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Subject to clause (ii), on request by an Indian tribe or the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary may make funds available under this subsection for preliminary engineering for Indian reservation road bridge projects.

"(ii) CONSTRUCTION AND CONSTRUCTION ENGINEERING.—The Secretary may make funds available under clause (i) for construction and construction engineering only after approval by the Secretary of applicable plans, specifications, and estimates."; and

(5) by adding at the end the following:

"(f) ADMINISTRATION OF INDIAN RESERVATION ROADS.—

"(1) CONTRACT AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, for any fiscal year, not more than 6 percent of the contract authority amounts made available from the Highway Trust Fund to the Bureau of Indian Affairs under this title shall be used to pay the expenses incurred by the Bureau in administering the Indian reservation roads program (including the administrative expenses relating to individual projects associated with the Indian reservation roads program).

"(2) HEALTH AND SAFETY ASSURANCES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, an Indian tribe or tribal organization may commence road and bridge construction under the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (Public Law 105-178) or the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 that is funded through a contract or agreement under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450b et seq.) if the Indian tribe or tribal organization—

"(A) provides assurances in the contract or agreement that the construction will meet or exceed applicable health and safety standards;

"(B) obtains the advance review of the plans and specifications from a licensed professional that has certified that the plans and specifications meet or exceed the applicable health and safety standards; and

"(C) provides a copy of the certification under subparagraph (B) to the Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs.".

(d) PLANNING AND AGENCY COORDINATION.—Section 204 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(1), by inserting "refuge roads, recreation roads," after "parkways,";

(2) by striking subsection (b) and inserting the following:

"(b) USE OF FUNDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Funds available for public lands highways, recreation roads, park roads and parkways, forest highways, and Indian reservation roads shall be used by the Secretary and the Secretary of the appropriate Federal land management agency to pay the cost of transportation planning, research, engineering, operation and maintenance of transit facilities, and construction of the highways, roads, parkways, forest highways, and transit facilities located on public land, national parks, and Indian reservations.

"(2) CONTRACT.—In connection with an activity described in paragraph (1), the Secretary and the Secretary of the appropriate Federal land management agency may enter into a construction contract or other appropriate agreement with—

"(A) a State (including a political subdivision of a State); or

"(B) an Indian tribe.

"(3) INDIAN RESERVATION ROADS.—In the case of an Indian reservation road—

"(A) Indian labor may be used, in accordance with such rules and regulations as may be promulgated by the Secretary of the Interior, to carry out any construction or other activity described in paragraph (1); and

"(B) funds made available to carry out this section may be used to pay bridge preconstruction costs (including planning, design, and engineering).

"(4) FEDERAL EMPLOYMENT.—No maximum on Federal employment shall be applicable to construction or improvement of Indian reservation roads.

"(5) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Funds available under this section for each class of Federal lands highway shall be available for any kind of transportation project eligible for assistance under this title that is within or adjacent to, or that provides access to, the areas served by the particular class of Federal lands highway.

"(6) RESERVATION OF FUNDS.—The Secretary of the Interior may reserve funds from administrative funds of the Bureau of Indian Affairs that are associated with the Indian reservation road program to finance the Indian technical centers authorized under section 504(b)."; and

(3) in subsection (k)(1)—

(A) in subparagraph (B)—

(i) by striking "(2), (5)," and inserting "(2), (3), (5),"; and

(ii) by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(B) in subparagraph (C), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

"(D) maintenance of public roads in national fish hatcheries under the jurisdiction of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service;

"(E) the non-Federal share of the cost of any project funded under this title or chapter 53 of title 49 that provides access to or within a wildlife refuge; and

"(F) maintenance and improvement of recreational trails (except that expenditures on trails under this subparagraph shall not exceed 5 percent of available funds for each fiscal year).".

(e) MAINTENANCE OF INDIAN RESERVATION ROADS.—Section 204(c) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking the second and third sentences and inserting the following: "Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, of the amount of funds apportioned for Indian reservation roads from the Highway Trust Fund, an Indian tribe may expend for the purpose of maintenance not more than the greater of $250,000 or 25 percent of the apportioned amount. The Bureau of Indian Affairs shall continue to retain primary responsibility, including annual funding request responsibility, for road maintenance programs on Indian reservations. The Secretary shall ensure that funding made available under this subsection for maintenance of Indian reservation roads for each fiscal year is supplementary to and not in lieu of any obligation of funds by the Bureau of Indian Affairs for road maintenance programs on Indian reservations.".

(f) SAFETY.—

(1) ALLOCATIONS.—Section 202 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by subsection (c)(5)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(g) SAFETY.—Subject to paragraph (2), on October 1 of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall allocate the sums authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year for safety as follows:

"(1) 12 percent to the Bureau of Reclamation.

"(2) 18 percent to the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

"(3) 17 percent to the Bureau of Land Management.

"(4) 17 percent to the Forest Service.

"(5) 7 percent to the United States Fish and Wildlife Service.

"(6) 17 percent to the National Park Service.

"(7) 12 percent to the Corps of Engineers.".

(2) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Section 203 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting "safety projects or activities," after "refuge roads," each place it appears.

(3) USE OF FUNDING.—Section 204 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(l) SAFETY ACTIVITIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, funds made available for safety under this title shall be used by the Secretary and the head of the appropriate Federal land management agency only to pay the costs of carrying out—

"(A) transportation safety improvement activities;

"(B) activities to eliminate high-accident locations;

"(C) projects to implement protective measures at, or eliminate, at-grade railway-highway crossings;

"(D) collection of safety information;

"(E) transportation planning projects or activities;

"(F) bridge inspection;

"(G) development and operation of safety management systems;

"(H) highway safety education programs; and

"(I) other eligible safety projects and activities authorized under chapter 4.

"(2) CONTRACTS.—In carrying out paragraph (1), the Secretary and the Secretary of the appropriate Federal land management agency may enter into contracts or agreements with—

"(A) a State;

"(B) a political subdivision of a State; or

"(C) an Indian tribe.

"(3) EXCEPTION.—The cost sharing requirements under the Federal Water Project Recreation Act (16 U.S.C. 4601-12 et seq.) shall not apply to funds made available to the Bureau of Reclamation under this subsection.".

(g) RECREATION ROADS.—

(1) AUTHORIZATIONS.—Section 201 of title 23, United States Code, is amended in the first sentence by inserting "recreation roads," after "public lands highways,".

(2) ALLOCATIONS.—Section 202 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by subsection (f)(1)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(h) RECREATION ROADS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), on October 1 of each fiscal year, the Secretary, after completing the transfer under subsection 204(i), shall allocate the sums authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year for recreation roads as follows:

"(A) 8 percent to the Bureau of Reclamation.

"(B) 9 percent to the Corps of Engineers.

"(C) 13 percent to the Bureau of Land Management.

"(D) 70 percent to the Forest Service.

"(2) ALLOCATION WITHIN AGENCIES.—Recreation road funds allocated to a Federal agency under paragraph (1) shall be allocated for projects and activities of the Federal agency according to the relative needs of each area served by recreation roads under the jurisdiction of the Federal agency, as indicated in the approved transportation improvement program for each Federal agency.".

(3) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Section 203 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in the first sentence, by inserting "recreation roads," after "Indian reservation roads,"; and

(B) in the fourth sentence, by inserting ", recreation roads," after "Indian roads".

(4) USE OF FUNDING.—Section 204 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by subsection (e)(3)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(m) RECREATION ROADS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, funds made available for recreation roads under this title shall be used by the Secretary and the Secretary of the appropriate Federal land management agency only to pay the cost of—

"(A) maintenance or improvements of existing recreation roads;

"(B) maintenance and improvements of eligible projects described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), (5), or (6) of subsection (h) that are located in or adjacent to Federal land under the jurisdiction of—

"(i) the Department of Agriculture; or

"(ii) the Department of the Interior;

"(C) transportation planning and administrative activities associated with those maintenance and improvements; and

"(D) the non-Federal share of the cost of any project funded under this title or chapter 53 of title 49 that provides access to or within Federal land described in subparagraph (B).

"(2) CONTRACTS.—In carrying out paragraph (1), the Secretary and the Secretary of the appropriate Federal land management agency may enter into contracts or agreements with—

"(A) a State;

"(B) a political subdivision of a State; or

"(C) an Indian tribe.

"(3) NEW ROADS.—No funds made available under this section shall be used to pay the cost of the design or construction of new recreation roads.

"(4) COMPLIANCE WITH OTHER ENVIRONMENTAL LAWS.—A maintenance or improvement project that is funded under this subsection, and that is consistent with or has been identified in a land use plan for an area under the jurisdiction of a Federal agency, shall not require any additional environmental reviews or assessments under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) if—

"(A) the Federal agency that promulgated the land use plan analyzed the specific proposal for the maintenance or improvement project under that Act; and

"(B) as of the date on which the funds are to be expended, there are—

"(i) no significant changes to the proposal bearing on environmental concerns; and

"(ii) no significant new information.

"(5) EXCEPTION.—The cost sharing requirements under the Federal Water Project Recreation Act (16 U.S.C. 4601–12 et seq.) shall not apply to funds made available to the Bureau of Reclamation under this subsection.".

(h) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Sections 120(e) and 125(e) of title 23, United States Code, are amended by striking "public lands highways," each place it appears and inserting "public lands highways, recreation roads,".

(2) Sections 120(e), 125(e), 201, 202(a), and 203 of title 23, United States Code, are amended by striking "forest development roads" each place it appears and inserting "National Forest System roads".

(3) Section 202(e) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking "Refuge System," and inserting "Refuge System and the various national fish hatcheries,".

(4) Section 204 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in subsection (a)(1), by striking "public lands highways," and inserting "public lands highways, recreation roads, forest highways,"; and

(B) in subsection (i), by striking "public lands highways" each place it appears and inserting "public lands highways, recreation roads, and forest highways".

(5) Section 205 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking the section heading and inserting the following:

"§ 205. National Forest System roads and trails";

and

(B) in subsections (a) and (d), by striking "forest development roads" each place it appears and inserting "National Forest System roads".

(6) The analysis for chapter 2 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 205 and inserting the following:

"205. National Forest System roads and trails.".

(7) Section 217(c) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting "refuge roads," after "Indian reservation roads,".

SEC. 1807. HIGHWAY BRIDGE PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 144 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking the section heading and all that follows through subsection (a) and inserting the following:

"§ 144. Highway bridge program

"(a) CONGRESSIONAL STATEMENT.—Congress finds and declares that it is in the vital interest of the United States that a highway bridge program be established to enable States to improve the condition of their bridges through replacement, rehabilitation, and systematic preventative maintenance on highway bridges over waterways, other topographical barriers, other highways, or railroads at any time at which the States and the Secretary determine that a bridge is unsafe because of structural deficiencies, physical deterioration, or functional obsolescence.";

(2) by striking subsection (d) and inserting the following:

"(d) PARTICIPATION IN PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—On application by a State to the Secretary for assistance in replacing or rehabilitating a highway bridge that has been determined to be eligible for replacement or rehabilitation under subsection (b) or (c), the Secretary may approve Federal participation in—

"(A) replacing the bridge with a comparable bridge; or

"(B) rehabilitating the bridge.

"(2) SPECIFIC KINDS OF REHABILITATION.—On application by a State to the Secretary for assistance in painting, seismic retrofit, or preventative maintenance of, or installation of scour countermeasures or applying calcium magnesium acetate, sodium acetate/formate, or other environmentally acceptable, minimally corrosive anti-icing and deicing compositions to, the structure of a highway bridge, the Secretary may approve Federal participation in the painting, seismic retrofit, or preventative maintenance of, or installation of scour countermeasures or application of acetate or sodium acetate/formate or such anti-icing or de-icing composition to, the structure.

"(3) ELIGIBILITY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall determine the eligibility of highway bridges for replacement or rehabilitation for each State based on the number of unsafe highway bridges in the State.

"(B) PREVENTATIVE MAINTENANCE.—A State may carry out a project for preventative maintenance on a bridge, seismic retrofit of a bridge, or installation of scour countermeasures to a bridge under this section without regard to whether the bridge is eligible for replacement or rehabilitation under this section.";

(3) in subsection (e)—

(A) in the third sentence, by striking "square footage" and inserting "area";

(B) in the fourth sentence—

(i) by striking "by the total cost of any highway bridges constructed under subsection (m) in such State, relating to replacement of destroyed bridges and ferryboat services, and,"; and

(ii) by striking "1997" and inserting "2003"; and

(C) in the seventh sentence, by striking "the Federal-aid primary system" and inserting "Federal-aid highways";

(4) by striking subsections (f) and (g) and inserting the following:

"(f) SET ASIDES.—

"(1) DISCRETIONARY BRIDGE PROGRAM.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated to carry out the bridge program under this section for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, all but $133,962,264 shall be apportioned as provided in subsection (e).

"(B) AVAILABILITY.—The $133,962,264 referred to in subparagraph (A) shall be available at the discretion of the Secretary, except that not to exceed $22,327,044 of that amount shall be available only for projects for the seismic retrofit of bridges.

"(C) SET ASIDES.—For fiscal year 2005, the Secretary shall provide—

"(i) $44,654,088 to the State of Nevada for construction of a replacement of the federally-owned bridge over the Hoover Dam in the Lake Mead National Recreation Area; and

"(ii) $44,654,088 to the State of Missouri for construction of a structure over the Mississippi River to connect the city of St. Louis, Missouri, to the State of Illinois.

"(2) OFF-SYSTEM BRIDGES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Not less than 15 percent of the amount apportioned to each State in each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be expended for projects to replace, rehabilitate, perform systematic preventative maintenance or seismic retrofit, or apply calcium magnesium acetate, sodium acetate/formate, or other environmentally acceptable, minimally corrosive anti-icing and de-icing compositions or install scour countermeasures to highway bridges located on public roads, other than those on a Federal-aid highway, or to complete the Warwick Intermodal Station (including the construction of a people mover between the Station and the T.F. Green Airport).

"(B) REDUCTION OF EXPENDITURES.—The Secretary, after consultation with State and local officials, may, with respect to the State, reduce the requirement for expenditure for bridges not on a Federal-aid highway if the Secretary determines that the State has inadequate needs to justify the expenditure.";

(5) in subsection (i)—

(A) in paragraph (3), by striking "and";

(B) in paragraph (4), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and";

(C) by striking "Such reports" and all that follows through "to Congress."; and

(D) by adding at the end the following:

"(5) biennially submit such reports as are required under this subsection to the appropriate committees of Congress simultaneously with the report required by section 502(g).";

(6) in the first sentence of subsection (n), by striking "all standards" and inserting "all general engineering standards";

(7) in subsection (o)—

(A) in paragraph (3)—

(i) by striking "title (including this section)" and inserting "section"; and

(ii) by inserting "200 percent of" after "shall not exceed"; and

(B) in paragraph (4)(B)—

(i) in the second sentence, by inserting "200 percent of" after "not to exceed"; and

(ii) in the last sentence, by striking "title" and inserting "section";

(8) by redesignating subsections (h) through (q) as subsections (g) through (p), respectively; and

(9) by adding at the end the following:

"(q) CONTINUATION OF ANNUAL MATERIALS REPORT ON NEW BRIDGE CONSTRUCTION AND BRIDGE REHABILITATION.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this subsection, and annually thereafter, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a report describing construction materials used in new Federal-aid bridge construction and bridge rehabilitation projects.

"(r) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of a project payable from funds made available to carry out this section shall be the share applicable under section 120(b), as adjusted under subsection (d) of that section.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 144 and inserting the following:

"144. Highway bridge program.".

SEC. 1808. APPALACHIAN DEVELOPMENT HIGHWAY SYSTEM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1702(a)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 170. Appalachian development highway system

"(a) APPORTIONMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall apportion funds made available under section 1101(7) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 for fiscal years 2005 through 2009 among States based on the latest available estimate of the cost to construct highways and access roads for the Appalachian development highway system program prepared by the Appalachian Regional Commission under section 14501 of title 40.

"(2) AVAILABILITY.—Funds described in paragraph (1) shall be available to construct highways and access roads under chapter 145 of title 40.

"(b) APPLICABILITY OF TITLE.—Funds made available under section 1101(7) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 for the Appalachian development highway system shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under this chapter, except that—

"(1) the Federal share of the cost of any project under this section shall be determined in accordance with subtitle IV of title 40; and

"(2) the funds shall remain available until expended.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) USE OF TOLL CREDITS.—Section 120(j)(1) of title 23, United States Code is amended by inserting "and the Appalachian development highway system program under subtitle IV of title 40" after "(other than the emergency relief program authorized by section 125".

(2) ANALYSIS.—The analysis of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1702(b)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"170. Appalachian development highway system.".

SEC. 1809. MULTISTATE CORRIDOR PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by 1808(a)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 171. Multistate corridor program

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT AND PURPOSE.—The Secretary shall carry out a program to—

"(1) support and encourage multistate transportation planning and development; and

"(2) facilitate transportation decisionmaking and coordinate project delivery involving multistate corridors.

"(b) ELIGIBLE RECIPIENTS.—A State transportation department and a metropolitan planning organization may receive and administer funds provided under this section.

"(c) ELIGIBLE ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary shall make allocations under this program for multistate highway and multimodal planning studies and construction.

"(d) OTHER PROVISIONS REGARDING ELIGIBILITY.—

"(1) STUDIES.—All studies funded under this program shall be consistent with the continuing, cooperative, and comprehensive planning processes required by sections 134 and 135.

"(2) CONSTRUCTION.—All construction funded under this program shall be consistent with section 133(b)(1).

"(e) SELECTION CRITERIA.—The Secretary shall select studies and projects to be carried out under the program based on—

"(1) the existence and significance of signed and binding multijurisdictional agreements;

"(2) endorsement of the study or project by applicable elected State and local representatives;

"(3) prospects for early completion of the study or project; or

"(4) whether the projects to be studied or constructed are located on corridors identified by section 1105(c) of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-240; 105 Stat. 2032).

"(f) PROGRAM PRIORITIES.—In administering the program, the Secretary shall—

"(1) encourage and enable States and other jurisdictions to work together to develop plans for multimodal and multijurisdictional transportation decisionmaking; and

"(2) give priority to studies or projects that emphasize multimodal planning, including planning for operational improvements that—

"(A) increase—

"(i) mobility;

"(ii) freight productivity;

"(iii) access to marine or inland ports;

"(iv) safety and security; and

"(v) reliability; and

"(B) enhance the environment.

"(g) FEDERAL SHARE.—Except as provided in section 120, the Federal share of the cost of a study or project carried out under the program, using funds from all Federal sources, shall be 80 percent.

"(h) APPLICABILITY.—Funds authorized to be appropriated under section 1101(10) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 to carry out this section shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under this chapter.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1809(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"171. Multistate corridor program.".

SEC. 1810. BORDER PLANNING, OPERATIONS, TECHNOLOGY, AND CAPACITY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1809(a)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 172. Border planning, operations, technology, and capacity program

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) BORDER STATE.—The term 'border State' means any of the States of Alaska, Arizona, California, Idaho, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Texas, Vermont, and Washington.

"(2) PROGRAM.—The term 'program' means the border planning, operations, technology, and capacity program established under subsection (b).

"(b) ESTABLISHMENT AND PURPOSE.—The Secretary shall establish and carry out a border planning, operations, technology, and capacity improvement program to support coordination and improvement in bi-national transportation planning, operations, efficiency, information exchange, safety, and security at the international borders of the United States with Canada and Mexico.

"(c) ELIGIBLE ACTIVITIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make allocations under the program for projects to carry out eligible activities described in paragraph (2) at or near international land borders in border States.

"(2) ELIGIBLE ACTIVITIES.—A border State may obligate funds apportioned to the border State under this section for—

"(A) highway and multimodal planning or environmental studies;

"(B) cross-border port of entry and safety inspection improvements, including operational enhancements and technology applications;

"(C) technology and information exchange activities; and

"(D) right-of-way acquisition, design, and construction, as needed—

"(i) to implement the enhancements or applications described in subparagraphs (B) and (C);

"(ii) to decrease air pollution emissions from vehicles or inspection facilities at border crossings; or

"(iii) to increase highway capacity at or near international borders.

"(d) OTHER PROVISIONS REGARDING ELIGIBILITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each project funded under the program shall be carried out in accordance with the continuing, cooperative, and comprehensive planning processes required by sections 134 and 135.

"(2) REGIONALLY SIGNIFICANT PROJECTS.—To be funded under the program, a regionally significant project shall be included on the applicable transportation plan and program required by sections 134 and 135.

"(e) PROGRAM PRIORITIES.—Border States shall give priority to projects that emphasize—

"(1) multimodal planning;

"(2) improvements in infrastructure; and

"(3) operational improvements that—

"(A) increase safety, security, freight capacity, or highway access to rail, marine, and air services; and

"(B) enhance the environment.

"(f) MANDATORY PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For each fiscal year, the Secretary shall allocate among border States, in accordance with the formula described in paragraph (2), funds to be used in accordance with subsection (d).

"(2) FORMULA.—Subject to paragraph (3), the amount allocated to a border State under this paragraph shall be determined by the Secretary, as follows:

"(A) 25 percent in the ratio that—

"(i) the average annual weight of all cargo entering the border State by commercial vehicle across the international border with Canada or Mexico, as the case may be; bears to

"(ii) the average annual weight of all cargo entering all border States by commercial vehicle across the international borders with Canada and Mexico.

"(B) 25 percent in the ratio that—

"(i) the average trade value of all cargo imported into the border State and all cargo exported from the border State by commercial vehicle across the international border with Canada or Mexico, as the case may be; bears to

"(ii) the average trade value of all cargo imported into all border States and all cargo exported from all border States by commercial vehicle across the international borders with Canada and Mexico.

"(C) 25 percent in the ratio that—

"(i) the number of commercial vehicles annually entering the border State across the international border with Canada or Mexico, as the case may be; bears to

"(ii) the number of all commercial vehicles annually entering all border States across the international borders with Canada and Mexico.

"(D) 25 percent in the ratio that—

"(i) the number of passenger vehicles annually entering the border State across the international border with Canada or Mexico, as the case may be; bears to

"(ii) the number of all passenger vehicles annually entering all border States across the international borders with Canada and Mexico.

"(3) DATA SOURCE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The data used by the Secretary in making allocations under this subsection shall be based on the Bureau of Transportation Statistics Transborder Surface Freight Dataset (or other similar database).

"(B) BASIS OF CALCULATION.—All formula calculations shall be made using the average values for the most recent 5-year period for which data are available.

"(4) MINIMUM ALLOCATION.—Notwithstanding paragraph (2), for each fiscal year, each border State shall receive at least ½ of 1 percent of the funds made available for allocation under this paragraph for the fiscal year.

"(g) FEDERAL SHARE.—Except as provided in section 120, the Federal share of the cost of a project carried out under the program shall be 80 percent.

"(h) OBLIGATION.—Funds made available under section 1101(11) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 to carry out the program shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under this chapter.

"(i) INFORMATION EXCHANGE.—No individual project the scope of work of which is limited to information exchange shall receive an allocation under the program in an amount that exceeds $500,000 for any fiscal year.

"(j) PROJECTS IN CANADA OR MEXICO.—A project in Canada or Mexico, proposed by a border State to directly and predominantly facilitate cross-border vehicle and commercial cargo movements at an international gateway or port of entry into the border region of the State, may be constructed using funds made available under the program if, before obligation of those funds, Canada or Mexico, or the political subdivision of Canada or Mexico that is responsible for the operation of the facility to be constructed, provides assurances satisfactory to the Secretary that any facility constructed under this subsection will be—

"(1) constructed in accordance with standards equivalent to applicable standards in the United States; and

"(2) properly maintained and used over the useful life of the facility for the purpose for which the Secretary allocated funds to the project.

"(k) TRANSFER OF FUNDS TO THE GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION.—

"(1) STATE FUNDS.—At the request of a border State, funds made available under the program may be transferred to the General Services Administration for the purpose of funding 1 or more specific projects if—

"(A) the Secretary determines, after consultation with the State transportation department of the border State, that the General Services Administration should carry out the project; and

"(B) the General Services Administration agrees to accept the transfer of, and to administer, those funds.

"(2) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A border State that makes a request under paragraph (1) shall provide directly to the General Services Administration, for each project covered by the request, the non-Federal share of the cost of each project described in subsection (f).

"(B) NO AUGMENTATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Funds provided by a border State under subparagraph (A)—

"(i) shall not be considered to be an augmentation of the appropriations made available to the General Services Administration; and

"(ii) shall be—

"(I) administered in accordance with the procedures of the General Services Administration; but

"(II) available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under this chapter.

"(C) OBLIGATION AUTHORITY.—Obligation authority shall be transferred to the General Services Administration in the same manner and amount as the funds provided for projects under subparagraph (A).

"(3) DIRECT TRANSFER OF AUTHORIZED FUNDS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In addition to allocations to States and metropolitan planning organizations under subsection (c), the Secretary may transfer funds made available to carry out this section to the General Services Administration for construction of transportation infrastructure projects at or near the border in border States, if—

"(i) the Secretary determines that the transfer is necessary to effectively carry out the purposes of this program; and

"(ii) the General Services Administration agrees to accept the transfer of, and to administer, those funds.

"(B) NO AUGMENTATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Funds transferred by the Secretary under subparagraph (A)—

"(i) shall not be considered to be an augmentation of the appropriations made available to the General Services Administration; and

"(ii) shall be—

"(I) administered in accordance with the procedures of the General Services Administration; but

"(II) available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under this chapter.

"(C) OBLIGATION AUTHORITY.—Obligation authority shall be transferred to the General Services Administration in the same manner and amount as the funds transferred under subparagraph (A).".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1809(b)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"172. Border planning, operations, and technology program.".

SEC. 1811. PUERTO RICO HIGHWAY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1810(a)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 173. Puerto Rico highway program

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall allocate funds authorized by section 1101(15) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 to the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico to carry out a highway program in the Commonwealth.

"(b) APPLICABILITY OF TITLE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Amounts made available by section 1101(15) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if such funds were apportioned under this chapter.

"(2) LIMITATION ON OBLIGATIONS.—The amounts shall be subject to any limitation on obligations for Federal-aid highway and highway safety construction programs.

"(c) TREATMENT OF FUNDS.—Amounts made available to carry out this section for a fiscal year shall be administered as follows:

"(1) APPORTIONMENT.—For the purpose of imposing any penalty under this title or title 49, the amounts shall be treated as being apportioned to Puerto Rico under sections 104(b) and 144, for each program funded under those sections in an amount determined by multiplying—

"(A) the aggregate of the amounts for the fiscal year; by

"(B) the ratio that—

"(i) the amount of funds apportioned to Puerto Rico for each such program for fiscal year 1997; bears to

"(ii) the total amount of funds apportioned to Puerto Rico for all such programs for fiscal year 1997.

"(2) PENALTY.—The amounts treated as being apportioned to Puerto Rico under each section referred to in paragraph (1) shall be deemed to be required to be apportioned to Puerto Rico under that section for purposes of the imposition of any penalty under this title and title 49.

"(3) EFFECT ON ALLOCATIONS AND APPORTIONMENTS.—Subject to paragraph (2), nothing in this section affects any allocation under section 105 and any apportionment under sections 104 and 144.".

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1811(a)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 174. National historic covered bridge preservation

"(a) DEFINITION OF HISTORIC COVERED BRIDGE.—In this section, the term 'historic covered bridge' means a covered bridge that is listed or eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places.

"(b) HISTORIC COVERED BRIDGE PRESERVATION.—Subject to the availability of appropriations, the Secretary shall—

"(1) collect and disseminate information on historic covered bridges;

"(2) conduct educational programs relating to the history and construction techniques of historic covered bridges;

"(3) conduct research on the history of historic covered bridges; and

"(4) conduct research on, and study techniques for, protecting historic covered bridges from rot, fire, natural disasters, or weight-related damage.

"(c) GRANTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the availability of appropriations, the Secretary shall make a grant to a State that submits an application to the Secretary that demonstrates a need for assistance in carrying out 1 or more historic covered bridge projects described in paragraph (2).

"(2) ELIGIBLE PROJECTS.—A grant under paragraph (1) may be made for a project—

"(A) to rehabilitate or repair a historic covered bridge; or

"(B) to preserve a historic covered bridge, including through—

"(i) installation of a fire protection system, including a fireproofing or fire detection system and sprinklers;

"(ii) installation of a system to prevent vandalism and arson; or

"(iii) relocation of a bridge to a preservation site.

"(3) AUTHENTICITY REQUIREMENTS.—A grant under paragraph (1) may be made for a project only if—

"(A) to the maximum extent practicable, the project—

"(i) is carried out in the most historically appropriate manner; and

"(ii) preserves the existing structure of the historic covered bridge; and

"(B) the project provides for the replacement of wooden components with wooden components, unless the use of wood is impracticable for safety reasons.

"(4) FEDERAL SHARE.—Except as provided in section 120, the Federal share of the cost of a project carried out with a grant under this subsection shall be 80 percent.

"(d) FUNDING.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $12,503,145 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, to remain available until expended.".

"174. National historic covered bridge preservation.".

SEC. 1813. TRANSPORTATION AND COMMUNITY AND SYSTEM PRESERVATION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1812(a)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 175. Transportation and community and system preservation program

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish a comprehensive program to facilitate the planning, development, and implementation of strategies by States, metropolitan planning organizations, federally-recognized Indian tribes, and local governments to integrate transportation, community, and system preservation plans and practices that address the goals described in subsection (b).

"(b) GOALS.—The goals of the program are to—

"(1) improve the efficiency of the transportation system in the United States;

"(2) reduce the impacts of transportation on the environment;

"(3) reduce the need for costly future investments in public infrastructure;

"(4) provide efficient access to jobs, services, and centers of trade; and

"(5) examine development patterns, and to identify strategies, to encourage private sector development patterns that achieve the goals identified in paragraphs (1) through (4).

"(c) ALLOCATION OF FUNDS FOR IMPLEMENTATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall allocate funds made available to carry out this subsection to States, metropolitan planning organizations, and local governments to carry out projects to address transportation efficiency and community and system preservation.

"(2) CRITERIA.—In allocating funds made available to carry out this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to applicants that—

"(A) have instituted preservation or development plans and programs that—

"(i) meet the requirements of this title and chapter 53 of title 49, United States Code; and

"(ii)(I) are coordinated with State and local adopted preservation or development plans;

"(II) are intended to promote cost-effective and strategic investments in transportation infrastructure that minimize adverse impacts on the environment; or

"(III) are intended to promote innovative private sector strategies.

"(B) have instituted other policies to integrate transportation and community and system preservation practices, such as—

"(i) spending policies that direct funds to high-growth areas;

"(ii) urban growth boundaries to guide metropolitan expansion;

"(iii) 'green corridors' programs that provide access to major highway corridors for areas targeted for efficient and compact development; or

"(iv) other similar programs or policies as determined by the Secretary;

"(C) have preservation or development policies that include a mechanism for reducing potential impacts of transportation activities on the environment;

"(D) examine ways to encourage private sector investments that address the purposes of this section; and

"(E) propose projects for funding that address the purposes described in subsection (b)(2).

"(3) EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION.—In allocating funds to carry out this subsection, the Secretary shall ensure the equitable distribution of funds to a diversity of populations and geographic regions.

"(4) USE OF ALLOCATED FUNDS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—An allocation of funds made available to carry out this subsection shall be used by the recipient to implement the projects proposed in the application to the Secretary.

"(B) TYPES OF PROJECTS.—The allocation of funds shall be available for obligation for—

"(i) any project eligible for funding under this title or chapter 53 of title 49, United States Code; or

"(ii) any other activity relating to transportation and community and system preservation that the Secretary determines to be appropriate, including corridor preservation activities that are necessary to implement—

"(I) transit-oriented development plans;

"(II) traffic calming measures; or

"(III) other coordinated transportation and community and system preservation practices.

"(d) FUNDING.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to carry out this section $44,654,088 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009.

"(2) CONTRACT AUTHORITY.—Funds authorized under this subsection shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under this chapter.".

(b) ELIGIBLE PROJECTS.—Section 133(b) of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1701(a)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(18) Transportation and community system preservation to facilitate the planning, development, and implementation of strategies of metropolitan planning organizations and local governments to integrate transportation, community, and system preservation plans and practices that address the following:

"(A) Improvement of the efficiency of the transportation system in the United States.

"(B) Reduction of the impacts of transportation on the environment.

"(C) Reduction of the need for costly future investments in public infrastructure.

"(D) Provision of efficient access to jobs, services, and centers of trade.

"(E) Examination of development patterns, and identification of strategies to encourage private sector development patterns, that achieve the goals identified in subparagraphs (A) through (D).

"(19) Projects relating to intersections, including intersections—

"(A) that—

"(i) have disproportionately high accident rates;

"(ii) have high levels of congestion, as evidenced by—

"(I) interrupted traffic flow at the intersection; and

"(II) a level of service rating, issued by the Transportation Research Board of the National Academy of Sciences in accordance with the Highway Capacity Manual, that is not better than 'F' during peak travel hours; and

"(iii) are directly connected to or located on a Federal-aid highway; and

"(B) improvements that are approved in the regional plan of the appropriate local metropolitan planning organization.".

(c) Conforming Amendment.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1812(b)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"175. Transportation and community and system preservation pilot program.".

SEC. 1814. PARKING PILOT PROGRAMS.

(a) In General.—Subchapter I of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1813(a)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 176. Parking pilot programs

"(a) Commercial Truck Parking Pilot Program.—

"(1) Establishment.—In cooperation with appropriate State, regional, and local governments, the Secretary shall establish a pilot program to address the shortage of long-term parking for drivers of commercial motor vehicles on the National Highway System.

"(2) Allocation of funds.—

"(A) In general.—The Secretary shall allocate funds made available under this subsection to States, metropolitan planning organizations, and local governments.

"(B) Criteria.—In allocating funds under this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to an applicant that—"(i) demonstrates a severe shortage of commercial vehicle parking capacity on the corridor to be addressed;

"(ii) consults with affected State and local governments, community groups, private providers of commercial vehicle parking, and motorist and trucking organizations; and

"(iii) demonstrates that the project proposed by the applicant is likely to have a positive effect on highway safety, traffic congestion, or air quality.

"(3) Use of allocated funds.—

"(A) In general.—A recipient of funds allocated under this subsection shall use the funds to carry out the project proposed in the application submitted by the recipient to the Secretary.

"(B) Types of projects.—Funds under this subsection shall be available for obligation for projects that serve the National Highway System, including—

"(i) construction of safety rest areas that include parking for commercial motor vehicles;

"(ii) construction of commercial motor vehicle parking facilities that are adjacent to commercial truck stops and travel plazas;

"(iii) costs associated with the opening of facilities (including inspection and weigh stations and park-and-ride facilities) to provide commercial motor vehicle parking;

"(iv) projects that promote awareness of the availability of public or private commercial motor vehicle parking on the National Highway System, including parking in connection with intelligent transportation systems and other systems;

"(v) construction of turnouts along the National Highway System for commercial motor vehicles;

"(vi) capital improvements to public commercial motor vehicle truck parking facilities closed on a seasonal basis in order to allow the facilities to remain open year-around; and

"(vii) improvements to the geometric design at interchanges on the National Highway System to improve access to commercial motor vehicle parking facilities.

"(4) Report.—Not later than 5 years after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the pilot program carried out under this subsection.

"(5) Federal share.—The Federal share of the cost of a project carried out under this subsection shall be consistent with section 120.

"(6) Funding.—

"(A) In general.—There is authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to carry out this subsection $8,930,818 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009.

"(B) Contract authority.—Funds authorized under this paragraph shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under this chapter.

"(b) Corridor and Fringe Parking Pilot Program.—

"(1) Establishment.—

"(A) In general.—In cooperation with appropriate State, regional, and local governments, the Secretary shall carry out a pilot program to provide corridor and fringe parking facilities.

"(B) Primary function.—The primary function of a corridor and fringe parking facility funded under this subsection shall be to provide parking capacity to support car pooling, van pooling, ride sharing, commuting, and high occupancy vehicle travel.

"(C) Overnight parking.—A State may permit a facility described in subparagraph (B) to be used for the overnight parking of commercial vehicles if the use does not foreclose or unduly limit the primary function of the facility described in subparagraph (B).

"(2) Allocation of funds.—

"(A) In general.—The Secretary shall allocate funds made available to carry out this subsection to States.

"(B) Criteria.—In allocating funds under this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to a State that—"(i) demonstrates demand for corridor and fringe parking on the corridor to be addressed;

"(ii) consults with affected metropolitan planning organizations, local governments, community groups, and providers of corridor and fringe parking; and

"(iii) demonstrates that the project proposed by the State is likely to have a positive effect on ride sharing, traffic congestion, or air quality.

"(3) Use of allocated funds.—

"(A) In general.—A recipient of funds allocated under this subsection shall use the funds to carry out the project proposed in the application submitted by the recipient to the Secretary.

"(B) Types of projects.—Funds under this subsection shall be available for obligation for projects that serve the Federal-aid system, including—

"(i) construction of corridor and fringe parking facilities;

"(ii) costs associated with the opening of facilities;

"(iii) projects that promote awareness of the availability of corridor and fringe parking through the use of signage and other means;

"(iv) capital improvements to corridor and fringe parking facilities closed on a seasonal basis in order to allow the facilities to remain open year-around; and

"(v) improvements to the geometric design on adjoining roadways to facilitate access to, and egress from, corridor and fringe parking facilities.

"(4) Report.—Not later than 5 years after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the pilot program carried out under this subsection.

"(5) Federal share.—The Federal share of the cost of a project carried out under this subsection shall be consistent with section 120.

"(6) Funding.—

"(A) In general.—There is authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to carry out this subsection $8,930,818 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009.

"(B) Contract authority.—Funds authorized under this paragraph shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under this chapter.".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter I of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 1813(c)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"176. Parking pilot programs.".

"(2) Form and terms of assistance.—Technical assistance provided under paragraph (1), and the terms for the sharing of information among territories receiving the technical assistance, shall be included in the agreement required by subsection (e).

"(d) Nonapplicability of Certain Provisions.—

"(1) In general.—Except to the extent that provisions of chapter 1 are determined by the Secretary to be inconsistent with the needs of the territories and the intent of the program, chapter 1 (other than provisions of chapter 1 relating to the apportionment and allocation of funds) shall apply to funds authorized to be appropriated for the program.

"(2) Applicable provisions.—The specific sections of chapter 1 that are applicable to each territory, and the extent of the applicability of those section, shall be identified in the agreement required by subsection (e).

"(e) Agreement.—

"(1) In general.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), none of the funds made available for the program shall be available for obligation or expenditure with respect to any territory until the Governor or chief executive officer of the territory enters into a new agreement with the Secretary (which new agreement shall be entered into not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005), providing that the government of the territory shall—

"(A) implement the program in accordance with applicable provisions of chapter 1 and subsection (d);

"(B) design and construct a system of arterial and collector highways, including necessary inter-island connectors, in accordance with standards that are—

"(i) appropriate for each territory; and

"(ii) approved by the Secretary;

"(C) provide for the maintenance of facilities constructed or operated under this section in a condition to adequately serve the needs of present and future traffic; and

"(D) implement standards for traffic operations and uniform traffic control devices that are approved by the Secretary.

"(2) Technical assistance.—The new agreement required by paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) specify the kind of technical assistance to be provided under the program;

"(B) include appropriate provisions regarding information sharing among the territories; and

"(C) delineate the oversight role and responsibilities of the territories and the Secretary.

"(3) Review and revision of agreement.—The new agreement entered into under paragraph (1) shall be reevaluated and, as necessary, revised, at least every 2 years.

"(4) Existing agreements.—With respect to an agreement between the Secretary and the Governor or chief executive officer of a territory that is in effect as of the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005—

"(A) the agreement shall continue in force until replaced by a new agreement in accordance with paragraph (1); and

"(B) amounts made available for the program under the agreement shall be available for obligation or expenditure so long as the agreement, or a new agreement under paragraph (1), is in effect.

"(f) Permissible Uses of Funds.—

"(1) In general.—Funds made available for the program may be used only for the following projects and activities carried out in a territory:

"(A) Eligible surface transportation program projects described in section 133(b).

"(B) Cost-effective, preventive maintenance consistent with section 116.

"(C) Ferry boats, terminal facilities, and approaches, in accordance with subsections (b) and (c) of section 129.

"(D) Engineering and economic surveys and investigations for the planning, and the financing, of future highway programs.

"(E) Studies of the economy, safety, and convenience of highway use.

"(F) The regulation and equitable taxation of highway use.

"(G) Such research and development as are necessary in connection with the planning, design, and maintenance of the highway system.

"(2) Prohibition on use of funds for routine maintenance.—None of the funds made available for the program shall be obligated or expended for routine maintenance.

"(g) Location of Projects.—Territorial highway projects (other than those described in paragraphs (1), (3), and (4) of section 133(b)) may not be undertaken on roads functionally classified as local.".

(c) Eligible Activities.—The Secretary shall make allocations under this program for any activity eligible for funding under title 23, United States Code, including multistate highway and multistate multimodal planning and project construction.

(d) Other Provisions Regarding Eligibility.—All activities funded under this program shall be consistent with the continuing, cooperative, and comprehensive planning processes required by sections 134 and 135 of title 23, United States Code.

(e) Selection Criteria.—The Secretary shall only select projects for corridors—

(1) that have significant levels or increases in truck and traffic volume relating to international freight movement;

(2) connect to at least 1 international terminus or inland port;

(3) traverse at least 3 States; and

(4) are identified by section 1105(c) of the Intermodal Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-240; 105 Stat. 2032).

(f) Program Priorities.—In administering the program, the Secretary shall—

(1) encourage and enable States and other jurisdictions to work together to develop plans for multimodal and multijurisdictional transportation decisionmaking; and

(2) give priority to studies that emphasize multimodal planning, including planning for operational improvements that increase mobility, freight productivity, access to marine ports, safety, and security while enhancing the environment.

(g) Federal Share.—The Federal share required for any study carried out under this section shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code.

SEC. 1826. AUTHORIZATION OF CONTRACT AUTHORITY FOR STATES WITH INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

Section 1214(d)(5)(A) of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (23 U.S.C. 202 note; 112 Stat. 206) is amended by striking "$1,500,000 for each of fiscal years 1998 through 2003" and inserting "$1,607,547 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009".

Subtitle I—Technical Corrections

SEC. 1901. REPEAL OR UPDATE OF OBSOLETE TEXT.

(a) Letting of Contracts.—Section 112 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking subsection (f); and

(2) by redesignating subsection (g) as subsection (f).

(b) Fringe and Corridor Parking Facilities.—Section 137(a) of title 23, United States Code, is amended in the first sentence by striking "on the Federal-aid urban system" and inserting "on a Federal-aid highway".

SEC. 1902. CLARIFICATION OF DATE.

Section 109(g) of title 23, United States Code, is amended in the first sentence by striking "The Secretary" and all that follows through "of 1970" and inserting "Not later than January 30, 1971, the Secretary shall issue".

SEC. 1903. INCLUSION OF REQUIREMENTS FOR SIGNS IDENTIFYING FUNDING SOURCES IN TITLE 23.

(a) In General.—Section 154 of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1987 (23 U.S.C. 101 note; 101 Stat. 209) is—

(1) transferred to title 23, United States Code;

(2) redesignated as section 321;

(3) moved to appear after section 320 of that title; and

(4) amended by striking the section heading and inserting the following:

"§ 321. Signs identifying funding sources".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The analysis for chapter 3 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 320 the following:

"321. Signs identifying funding sources.".

SEC. 1904. INCLUSION OF BUY AMERICA REQUIREMENTS IN TITLE 23.

(a) In General.—Section 165 of the Highway Improvement Act of 1982 (23 U.S.C. 101 note; 96 Stat. 2136) is—

(1) transferred to title 23, United States Code;

(2) redesignated as section 313;

(3) moved to appear after section 312 of that title; and

(4) amended by striking the section heading and inserting the following:

"§ 313. Buy America".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) The analysis for chapter 3 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 312 the following:

"313. Buy America.".

(2) Section 313 of title 23, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), is amended—

(A) in subsection (a), by striking "by this Act" the first place it appears and all that follows through "of 1978" and inserting "to carry out the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 2097) or this title";

(B) in subsection (b), by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (3);

(C) in subsection (d), by striking "this Act," and all that follows through "Code, which" and inserting "the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 2097) or this title that";

(D) by striking subsection (e); and

(E) by redesignating subsections (f) and (g) as subsections (e) and (f), respectively.

SEC. 1905. TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS TO NONDISCRIMINATION SECTION.

Section 140 of title 23, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) in the first sentence, by striking "subsection (a) of section 105 of this title" and inserting "section 135";

(B) in the second sentence, by striking "He" and inserting "The Secretary";

(C) in the third sentence, by striking "where he considers it necessary to assure" and inserting "if necessary to ensure"; and

(D) in the last sentence—

(i) by striking "him" and inserting "the Secretary" and

(ii) by striking "he" and inserting "the Secretary";

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) in the first sentence, by striking "highway construction" and inserting "surface transportation"; and

(B) in the second sentence—

(i) by striking "as he may deem necessary" and inserting "as necessary"; and

(ii) by striking "not to exceed $2,500,000 for the transition quarter ending September 30, 1976, and";

(3) in the second sentence of subsection (c)—

(A) by striking "subsection 104(b)(3) of this title" and inserting "section 104(b)(3)"; and

(B) by striking "he may deem"; and

(4) in the heading of subsection (d), by striking "AND CONTRACTING".

TITLE II—TRANSPORTATION RESEARCH

Subtitle A—Funding

SEC. 2001. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) In General.—The following sums are authorized to be appropriated out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account):

(1) Surface transportation research.—

(A) In general.—For carrying out sections 502, 503, 506, 507, 508, and 511 of title 23, United States Code—

(i) $188,440,252 for fiscal year 2005;

(ii) $192,012,579 for fiscal year 2006;

(iii) $194,691,824 for fiscal year 2007;

(iv) $196,477,987 for fiscal year 2008; and

(v) $199,157,233 for fiscal year 2009.

(B) Surface transportation-environmental cooperative research program.—For each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, the Secretary shall set aside $17,861,635 of the funds authorized under subparagraph (A) to carry out the surface transportation-environmental cooperative research program under section 507 of title 23, United States Code.

(2) Training and education.—For carrying out section 504 of title 23, United States Code—

(A) $25,006,289 for fiscal year 2005;

(B) $25,899,371 for fiscal year 2006;

(C) $26,792,453 for fiscal year 2007;

(D) $27,685,535 for fiscal year 2008; and

(E) $28,578,616 for fiscal year 2009.

(3) Bureau of transportation statistics.—For the Bureau of Transportation Statistics to carry out section 111 of title 49, United States Code, $25,006,289 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009.

(4) ITS standards, research, operational tests, and development.—For carrying out sections 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, and 529 of title 23, United States Code—

(A) $109,849,057 for fiscal year 2005;

(B) $112,528,302 for fiscal year 2006;

(C) $115,207,547 for fiscal year 2007;

(D) $117,886,792 for fiscal year 2008; and

(E) $120,566,038 for fiscal year 2009.

(5) University transportation centers.—For carrying out section 510 of title 23, United States Code $40,188,679 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009.

(b) Applicability of Title 23, United States Code.—Funds authorized to be appropriated by subsection (a)—

(1) shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, except that the Federal share of the cost of a project or activity carried out using the funds shall be the share applicable under section 120(b) of title 23, United States Code, as adjusted under subsection (d) of that section (unless otherwise specified or otherwise determined by the Secretary); and

(2) shall remain available until expended.

(c) Allocations.—

(1) Surface transportation research.—Of the amounts made available under subsection (a)(1)—

(A) $24,113,208 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be available to carry out advanced, high-risk, long-term research under section 502(d) of title 23, United States Code;

(B) $16,075,472 for fiscal year 2005, $15,182,390 for fiscal year 2006, $13,396,226 for fiscal year 2007, $10,716,981 for fiscal year 2008, and $8,930,818 for fiscal year 2009 shall be available to carry out the long-term pavement performance program under section 502(e) of that title;

(C) $5,358,491 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be available to carry out the high-performance concrete bridge research and technology transfer program under section 502(i) of that title, of which $893,082 for each fiscal year shall be used by the Secretary to carry out demonstration projects involving the use of ultra-high-performance concrete with ductility;

(D) $5,358,491 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be made available to carry out research on asphalt used in highway pavements;

(E) $5,358,491 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be made available to carry out research on concrete pavements;

(F) $2,679,245 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be made available to carry out research on aggregates used in highway pavements;

(G) $4,242,138 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be made available for further development and deployment of techniques to prevent and mitigate alkali silica reactivity;

(H) $1,786,164 for fiscal year 2005 shall be remain available until expended for asphalt and asphalt-related reclamation research at the South Dakota School of Mines; and

(I) $2,679,245 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be made available to carry out section 502(f)(3) of title 23, United States Code.

(2) Technology application program.—Of the amounts made available under subsection (a)(1), $53,584,906 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be available to carry out section 503 of title 23, United States Code.

(3) TRAINING AND EDUCATION.—Of the amounts made available under subsection (a)(2)—

(A) $11,163,522 for fiscal year 2005, $11,610,063 for fiscal year 2006, $12,056,604 for fiscal year 2007, $12,503,145 for fiscal year 2008, and $12,949,686 for fiscal year 2009 shall be available to carry out section 504(a) of title 23, United States Code (relating to the National Highway Institute);

(B) $13,396,226 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be available to carry out section 504(b) of that title (relating to local technical assistance); and

(C) $2,679,245 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be available to carry out section 504(c)(2) of that title (relating to the Eisenhower Transportation Fellowship Program).

(4) INTERNATIONAL HIGHWAY TRANSPORTATION OUTREACH PROGRAM.—Of the amounts made available under subsection (a)(1), $446,541 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be available to carry out section 506 of title 23, United States Code.

(5) NEW STRATEGIC HIGHWAY RESEARCH PROGRAM.—For each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, to carry out section 509 of title 23, United States Code, the Secretary shall set aside—

(A) $13,396,226 of the amounts made available to carry out the interstate maintenance program under section 119 of title 23, United States Code, for the fiscal year;

(B) $16,968,553 of the amounts made available for the National Highway System under section 101 of title 23, United States Code, for the fiscal year;

(C) $11,610,063 of the amounts made available to carry out the bridge program under section 144 of title 23, United States Code, for the fiscal year;

(D) $17,861,635 of the amounts made available to carry out the surface transportation program under section 133 of title 23, United States Code, for the fiscal year;

(E) $4,465,409 of the amounts made available to carry out the congestion mitigation and air quality improvement program under section 149 of title 23, United States Code, for the fiscal year; and

(F) $2,679,245 of the amounts made available to carry out the highway safety improvement program under section 148 of title 23, United States Code, for the fiscal year.

(6) COMMERCIAL VEHICLE INTELLIGENT TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM INFRASTRUCTURE PROGRAM.—Of the amounts made available under subsection (a)(4), not less than $26,792,453 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 shall be available to carry out section 527 of title 23, United States Code.

(d) TRANSFERS OF FUNDS.—The Secretary may transfer—

(1) to an amount made available under paragraphs (1), (2), or (4) of subsection (c), not to exceed 10 percent of the amount allocated for a fiscal year under any other of those paragraphs; and

(2) to an amount made available under subparagraphs (A), (B), or (C) of subsection (c)(3), not to exceed 10 percent of the amount allocated for a fiscal year under any other of those subparagraphs.

SEC. 2002. OBLIGATION CEILING.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the total of all obligations from amounts made available from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) by section 2001(a) shall not exceed—

(1) $388,669,286 for fiscal year 2005;

(2) $395,813,942 for fiscal year 2006;

(3) $402,065,516 for fiscal year 2007;

(4) $407,424,008 for fiscal year 2008; and

(5) $413,675,582 for fiscal year 2009.

SEC. 2003. NOTICE.

(a) NOTICE OF REPROGRAMMING.—If any funds authorized for carrying out this title or the amendments made by this title are subject to a reprogramming action that requires notice to be provided to the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, notice of that action shall be concurrently provided to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Science of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate.

(b) NOTICE OF REORGANIZATION.—On or before the 15th day preceding the date of any major reorganization of a program, project, or activity of the Department of Transportation for which funds are authorized by this title or the amendments made by this title, the Secretary shall provide notice of the reorganization to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Science of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate.

Subtitle B—Research and Technology

SEC. 2101. RESEARCH AND TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 5 of title 23, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

“SUBCHAPTER I—SURFACE TRANSPORTATION

“§ 501. Definitions

“In this subchapter:

“(1) FEDERAL LABORATORY.—The term ‘Federal laboratory’ includes—

“(A) a Government-owned, Government-operated laboratory; and “(B) a Government-owned, contractor-operated laboratory.

“(2) SAFETY.—The term ‘safety’ includes highway and traffic safety systems, research, and development relating to—

“(A) vehicle, highway, driver, passenger, bicyclist, and pedestrian characteristics;

“(B) accident investigations;

“(C) integrated, interoperable emergency communications;

“(D) emergency medical care; and “(E) transportation of the injured.

“§ 502. Surface transportation research

“(a) IN GENERAL.—

“(1) RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, AND TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary may carry out research, development, and technology transfer activities with respect to—

“(A) all phases of transportation planning and development (including new technologies, construction, transportation systems management and operations development, design, maintenance, safety, security, financing, data collection and analysis, demand forecasting, multimodal assessment, and traffic conditions); and

“(B) the effect of State laws on the activities described in subparagraph (A).

“(2) TESTS AND DEVELOPMENT.—The Secretary may test, develop, or assist in testing and developing, any material, invention, patented article, or process.

“(3) COOPERATION, GRANTS, AND CONTRACTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may carry out this section—

“(i) independently;

“(ii) in cooperation with—

“(I) any other Federal agency or instrumentality; and

“(II) any Federal laboratory; or

“(iii) by making grants to, or entering into contracts, cooperative agreements, and other transactions with—

“(I) the National Academy of Sciences;

“(II) the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials;

“(III) planning organizations;

“(IV) a Federal laboratory;

“(V) a State agency;

“(VI) an authority, association, institution, or organization;

“(VII) a for-profit or nonprofit corporation;

“(VIII) a foreign country; or

“(IX) any other person.

“(B) COMPETITION; REVIEW.—All parties entering into contracts, cooperative agreements or other transactions with the Secretary, or receiving grants, to perform research or provide technical assistance under this section shall be selected, to the maximum extent practicable and appropriate—

“(i) on a competitive basis; and

“(ii) on the basis of the results of peer review of proposals submitted to the Secretary.

“(4) TECHNOLOGICAL INNOVATION.—The programs and activities carried out under this section shall be consistent with the surface transportation research and technology development strategic plan developed under section 508(c).

“(5) FUNDS.—

“(A) SPECIAL ACCOUNT.—In addition to other funds made available to carry out this section, the Secretary shall use such funds as may be deposited by any cooperating organization or person in a special account of the Treasury established for this purpose.

“(B) USE OF FUNDS.—The Secretary shall use funds made available to carry out this section to develop, administer, communicate, and promote the use of products of research, development, and technology transfer programs under this section.

“(b) COLLABORATIVE RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—To encourage innovative solutions to surface transportation problems and stimulate the deployment of new technology, the Secretary may carry out, on a cost-shared basis, collaborative research and development with—

“(A) non-Federal entities (including State and local governments, foreign governments, colleges and universities, corporations, institutions, partnerships, sole proprietorships, and trade associations that are incorporated or established under the laws of any State); and

“(B) Federal laboratories.

“(2) AGREEMENTS.—In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary may enter into cooperative research and development agreements (as defined in section 12 of the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3710a)).

“(3) FEDERAL SHARE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Federal share of the cost of activities carried out under a cooperative research and development agreement entered into under this subsection shall not exceed 50 percent, except that if there is substantial public interest or benefit, the Secretary may approve a greater Federal share.

“(B) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—All costs directly incurred by the non-Federal partners, including personnel, travel, and hardware development costs, shall be credited toward the non-Federal share of the cost of the activities described in subparagraph (A).

“(4) USE OF TECHNOLOGY.—The research, development, or use of a technology under a cooperative research and development agreement entered into under this subsection, including the terms under which the technology may be licensed and the resulting royalties may be distributed, shall be subject to the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3701 et seq.).

“(5) WAIVER OF ADVERTISING REQUIREMENTS.—Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5) shall not apply to a contract or agreement entered into under this chapter.

“(c) CONTENTS OF RESEARCH PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall include as priority areas of effort within the surface transportation research program—

“(1) the development of new technologies and methods in materials, pavements, structures, design, and construction, with the objectives of—

“(A)(i) increasing to 50 years the expected life of pavements;

“(ii) increasing to 100 years the expected life of bridges; and

“(iii) significantly increasing the durability of other infrastructure;

“(B) lowering the life-cycle costs, including—

“(i) construction costs;

“(ii) maintenance costs;

“(iii) operations costs; and

“(vi) user costs.

“(2) the development, and testing for effectiveness, of nondestructive evaluation technologies for civil infrastructure using existing and new technologies;

“(3) the investigation of—

“(A) the application of current natural hazard mitigation techniques to manmade hazards; and

“(B) the continuation of hazard mitigation research combining manmade and natural hazards;

“(4) the improvement of safety—

“(A) at intersections;

“(B) with respect to accidents involving vehicles run off the road; and “(C) on rural roads;

“(5) the reduction of work zone incursions and improvement of work zone safety;

“(6) the improvement of geometric design of roads for the purpose of safety;

“(7) the examination of data collected through the national bridge inventory conducted under section 144 using the national bridge inspection standards established under section 151, with the objectives of determining whether—

“(A) the most useful types of data are being collected; and

“(B) any improvement could be made in the types of data collected and the manner in which the data is collected, with respect to bridges in the United States;

“(8) the improvement of the infrastructure investment needs report described in subsection (g) through—

“(A) the study and implementation of new methods of collecting better quality data, particularly with respect to performance, congestion, and infrastructure conditions;

“(B) monitoring of the surface transportation system in a system-wide manner, through the use of—

“(i) intelligent transportation system technologies of traffic operations centers; and

“(ii) other new data collection technologies as sources of better quality performance data;

“(C) the determination of the critical metrics that should be used to determine the condition and performance of the surface transportation system; and

“(D) the study and implementation of new methods of statistical analysis and computer models to improve the prediction of future infrastructure investment requirements;

“(9) the development of methods to improve the determination of benefits from infrastructure improvements, including—

“(A) more accurate calculations of benefit-to-cost ratios, considering benefits and impacts throughout local and regional transportation systems;

“(B) improvements in calculating life-cycle costs; and

“(C) valuation of assets;

“(10) the improvement of planning processes to better predict outcomes of transportation projects, including the application of computer simulations in the planning process to predict outcomes of planning decisions;

“(11) the multimodal applications of Geographic Information Systems and remote sensing, including such areas of application as—

“(A) planning;

“(B) environmental decisionmaking and project delivery; and

“(C) freight movement;

“(12) the development and application of methods of providing revenues to the Highway Trust Fund with the objective of offsetting potential reductions in fuel tax receipts;

“(13) the development of tests and methods to determine the benefits and costs to communities of major transportation investments and projects;

“(14) the conduct of extreme weather research, including research to—

“(A) reduce contraction and expansion damage;

“(B) reduce or repair road damage caused by freezing and thawing;

“(C) improve deicing or snow removal techniques;

“(D) develop better methods to reduce the risk of thermal collapse, including collapse from changes in underlying permafrost;

“(E) improve concrete and asphalt installation in extreme weather conditions; and “(F) make other improvements to protect highway infrastructure or enhance highway safety or performance;

“(15) the improvement of surface transportation planning;

“(16) environmental research;

“(17) transportation system management and operations; and

“(18) any other surface transportation research topics that the Secretary determines, in accordance with the strategic planning process under section 508, to be critical.

“(d) ADVANCED, HIGH-RISK RESEARCH.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish and carry out, in accordance with the surface transportation research and technology development strategic plan developed under section 508(c) and research priority areas described in subsection (c), an advanced research program that addresses longer-term, higher-risk research with potentially dramatic breakthroughs for improving the durability, efficiency, environmental impact, productivity, and safety (including bicycle and pedestrian safety) aspects of highway and intermodal transportation systems.

“(2) PARTNERSHIPS.—In carrying out the program, the Secretary shall seek to develop partnerships with the public and private sectors.

“(3) REPORT.—The Secretary shall include in the strategic plan required under section 508(c) a description of each of the projects, and the amount of funds expended for each project, carried out under this subsection during the fiscal year.

“(e) LONG-TERM PAVEMENT PERFORMANCE PROGRAM.—

“(1) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall continue, through September 30, 2009, the long-term pavement performance program tests, monitoring, and data analysis.

“(2) GRANTS, COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS, AND CONTRACTS.—Under the program, the Secretary shall make grants and enter into cooperative agreements and contracts to—

“(A) monitor, material-test, and evaluate highway test sections in existence as of the date of the grant, agreement, or contract;

“(B) analyze the data obtained in carrying out subparagraph (A); and “(C) prepare products to fulfill program objectives and meet future pavement technology needs.

“(3) CONCLUSION OF PROGRAM.—

“(A) SUMMARY REPORT.—The Secretary shall include in the strategic plan required under section 508(c) a report on the initial conclusions of the long-term pavement performance program that includes—

“(i) an analysis of any research objectives that remain to be achieved under the program;

“(ii) an analysis of other associated longer-term expenditures under the program that are in the public interest;

“(iii) a detailed plan regarding the storage, maintenance, and user support of the database, information management system, and materials reference library of the program;

“(iv) a schedule for continued implementation of the necessary data collection and analysis and project plan under the program; and

“(v) an estimate of the costs of carrying out each of the activities described in clauses (i) through (iv) for each fiscal year during which the program is carried out.

“(B) DEADLINE; USEFULNESS OF ADVANCES.—The Secretary shall, to the maximum extent practicable—

“(i) ensure that the long-term pavement performance program is concluded not later than September 30, 2009; and “(ii) make such allowances as are necessary to ensure the usefulness of the technological advances resulting from the program.

“(f) SEISMIC RESEARCH.—The Secretary shall—

“(1) in consultation and cooperation with Federal agencies participating in the National Earthquake Hazards Reduction Program established by section 5 of the Earthquake Hazards Reduction Act of 1977 (42 U.S.C. 7704), coordinate the conduct of seismic research;

“(2) take such actions as are necessary to ensure that the coordination of the research is consistent with—

“(A) planning and coordination activities of the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency under section 5(b)(1) of that Act (42 U.S.C. 7704(b)(1)); and

“(B) the plan developed by the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency under section 8(b) of that Act (42 U.S.C. 7705b(b)); and

“(3) in cooperation with the Center for Civil Engineering Research at the University of Nevada, Reno, carry out a seismic research program—

“(A) to study the vulnerability of the Federal-aid highway system and other surface transportation systems to seismic activity;

“(B) to develop and implement cost-effective methods to reduce the vulnerability; and

“(C) to conduct seismic research and upgrade earthquake simulation facilities as necessary to carry out the program.

“(g) INFRASTRUCTURE INVESTMENT NEEDS REPORT.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than July 31, 2005, and July 31 of every second year thereafter, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report that describes—

“(A) estimates of the future highway and bridge needs of the United States; and

“(B) the backlog of current highway and bridge needs.

“(2) COMPARISON WITH PRIOR REPORTS.—Each report under paragraph (1) shall provide the means, including all necessary information, to relate and compare the conditions and service measures used in the previous biennial reports.

“(h) SECURITY RELATED RESEARCH AND TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER ACTIVITIES.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Homeland Security, with key stakeholder input (including State transportation departments) shall develop a 5-year strategic plan for research and technology transfer and deployment activities pertaining to the security aspects of highway infrastructure and operations.

“(2) COMPONENTS OF PLAN.—The plan shall include—

“(A) an identification of which agencies are responsible for the conduct of various research and technology transfer activities;

“(B) a description of the manner in which those activities will be coordinated; and

“(C) a description of the process to be used to ensure that the advances derived from relevant activities supported by the Federal Highway Administration are consistent with the operational guidelines, policies, recommendations, and regulations of the Department of Homeland Security; and

“(D) a systematic evaluation of the research that should be conducted to address, at a minimum—

“(i) vulnerabilities of, and measures that may be taken to improve, emergency response capabilities and evacuations;

“(ii) recommended upgrades of traffic management during crises;

“(iii) integrated, interoperable emergency communications among the public, the military, law enforcement, fire and emergency medical services, and transportation agencies;

“(iv) protection of critical, security-related infrastructure; and

“(v) structural reinforcement of key facilities.

“(3) SUBMISSION.—On completion of the plan under this subsection, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives—

“(A) a copy of the plan developed under paragraph (1); and

“(B) a copy of a memorandum of understanding specifying coordination strategies and assignment of responsibilities covered by the plan that is signed by the Secretary and the Secretary of Homeland Security.

“(i) HIGH-PERFORMANCE CONCRETE BRIDGE RESEARCH AND TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER PROGRAM.—In accordance with the objectives described in subsection (c)(1) and the requirements under sections 503(b)(4) and 504(b), the Secretary shall carry out a program to demonstrate the application of high-performance concrete in the construction and rehabilitation of bridges.

“(j) BIOBASED TRANSPORTATION RESEARCH.—There shall be available from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) $16,075,472 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 equally divided and available to carry out biobased research of national importance at the National Biodiesel Board and at research centers identified in section 9011 of Public Law 107–171.

“§ 503. Technology application program

“(a) TECHNOLOGY APPLICATION INITIATIVES AND PARTNERSHIPS PROGRAM.—

“(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary, in consultation with interested stakeholders, shall develop and administer a national technology and innovation application initiatives and partnerships program.

“(2) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the program shall be to significantly accelerate the adoption of technology and innovation by the surface transportation community.

“(3) APPLICATION GOALS.—

“(A) ESTABLISHMENT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, the Secretary, in consultation with the Surface Transportation Research Technology Advisory Committee, State transportation departments, and other interested stakeholders, shall establish, as part of the surface transportation research and technology development strategic plan under section 508(c), goals to carry out paragraph (1).

“(B) DESIGN.—Each of the goals and the program developed to achieve the goals shall be designed to provide tangible benefits, with respect to transportation systems, in the areas of efficiency, safety, reliability, service life, environmental protection, and sustainability.

“(C) STRATEGIES FOR ACHIEVEMENT.—For each goal, the Secretary, in cooperation with representatives of the transportation community, such as States, local governments, the private sector, and academia, shall use domestic and international technology to develop strategies and initiatives to achieve the goal, including technical assistance in deploying technology and mechanisms for sharing information among program participants.

“(4) INTEGRATION WITH OTHER PROGRAMS.—The Secretary shall integrate activities carried out under this subsection with the efforts of the Secretary to—

“(A) disseminate the results of research sponsored by the Secretary; and

“(B) facilitate technology transfer.

“(5) LEVERAGING OF FEDERAL RESOURCES.—In selecting projects to be carried out under this subsection, the Secretary shall give preference to projects that leverage Federal funds with other significant public or private resources.

“(6) GRANTS, COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS, AND CONTRACTS.—Under the program, the Secretary may make grants and enter into cooperative agreements and contracts to foster alliances and support efforts to stimulate advances in transportation technology.

“(7) REPORTS.—The results and progress of activities carried out under this section shall be published as part of the annual transportation research report prepared by the Secretary under section 508(c)(5).

“(8) ALLOCATION.—To the extent appropriate to achieve the goals established under paragraph (3), the Secretary may further allocate funds made available to carry out this section to States for use by those States.

“(b) INNOVATIVE SURFACE TRANSPORTATION INFRASTRUCTURE RESEARCH AND CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish and carry out a program for the application of innovative material, design, and construction technologies in the construction, preservation, and rehabilitation of elements of surface transportation infrastructure.

“(2) GOALS.—The goals of the program shall include—

“(A) the development of new, cost-effective, and innovative materials;

“(B) the reduction of maintenance costs and life-cycle costs of elements of infrastructure, including the costs of new construction, replacement, and rehabilitation;

“(C) the development of construction techniques to increase safety and reduce construction time and traffic congestion;

“(D) the development of engineering design criteria for innovative products and materials for use in surface transportation infrastructure;

“(E) the development of highway bridges and structures that will withstand natural disasters and disasters caused by human activity; and

“(F) the development of new, nondestructive technologies and techniques for the evaluation of elements of transportation infrastructure.

“(3) GRANTS, COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS, AND CONTRACTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Under the program, the Secretary shall make grants to, and enter into cooperative agreements and contracts with—

“(i) States, other Federal agencies, universities and colleges, private sector entities, and nonprofit organizations, to pay the Federal share of the cost of research, development, and technology transfer concerning innovative materials and methods; and “(ii) States, to pay the Federal share of the cost of repair, rehabilitation, replacement, and new construction of elements of surface transportation infrastructure that demonstrate the application of innovative materials and methods.

“(B) APPLICATIONS.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—To receive a grant under this subsection, an entity described in subparagraph (A) shall submit to the Secretary an application in such form and containing such information as the Secretary may require.

“(ii) APPROVAL.—The Secretary shall select and approve an application based on whether the proposed project that is the subject of the application would meet the goals described in paragraph (2).

“(4) TECHNOLOGY AND INFORMATION TRANSFER.—The Secretary shall take such action as is necessary to—

“(A) ensure that the information and technology resulting from research conducted under paragraph (3) is made available to State and local transportation departments and other interested parties, as specified by the Secretary; and

“(B) encourage the use of the information and technology.

“(5) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of a project under this section shall be determined by the Secretary.

“§ 504. Training and education

“(a) NATIONAL HIGHWAY INSTITUTE.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall—

“(A) operate, in the Federal Highway Administration, a National Highway Institute (referred to in this subsection as the ‘Institute’); and

“(B) administer, through the Institute, the authority vested in the Secretary by this title or by any other law for the development and conduct of education and training programs relating to highways.

“(2) DUTIES OF THE INSTITUTE.—In cooperation with State transportation departments, industries in the United States, and national or international entities, the Institute shall develop and administer education and training programs of instruction for—

“(A) Federal Highway Administration, State, and local transportation agency employees;

“(B) regional, State, and metropolitan planning organizations;

“(C) State and local police, public safety, and motor vehicle employees; and “(D) United States citizens and foreign nationals engaged or to be engaged in surface transportation work of interest to the United States.

“(3) COURSES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Institute shall—

“(i) develop or update existing courses in asset management, including courses that include such components as—

“(I) the determination of life-cycle costs;

“(II) the valuation of assets;

“(III) benefit-to-cost ratio calculations; and

“(IV) objective decisionmaking processes for project selection; and

“(ii) continually develop courses relating to the application of emerging technologies for—

“(I) transportation infrastructure applications and asset management;

“(II) intelligent transportation systems;

“(III) operations (including security operations);

“(IV) the collection and archiving of data;

“(V) expediting the planning and development of transportation projects; and “(VI) the intermodal movement of individuals and freight.

“(B) ADDITIONAL COURSES.—In addition to the courses developed under subparagraph (A), the Institute, in consultation with State transportation departments, metropolitan planning organizations, and the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials, may develop courses relating to technology, methods, techniques, engineering, construction, safety, maintenance, environmental mitigation and compliance, regulations, management, inspection, and finance.

“(C) REVISION OF COURSES OFFERED.—The Institute shall periodically—

“(i) review the course inventory of the Institute; and “(ii) revise or cease to offer courses based on course content, applicability, and need.

“(4) ELIGIBILITY; FEDERAL SHARE.—The funds apportioned to a State under section 104(b)(3) for the surface transportation program shall be available for expenditure by the State transportation department for the payment of not to exceed 80 percent of the cost of tuition and direct educational expenses (excluding salaries) in connection with the education and training of employees of State and local transportation agencies in accordance with this subsection.

“(5) FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITY.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), education and training of employees of Federal, State, and local transportation (including highway) agencies authorized under this subsection may be provided—

“(i) by the Secretary, at no cost to the States and local governments, if the Secretary determines that provision at no cost is in the public interest; or “(ii) by the State, through grants, cooperative agreements, and contracts with public and private agencies, institutions, individuals, and the Institute.

“(B) PAYMENT OF FULL COST BY PRIVATE PERSONS.—Private agencies, international or foreign entities, and individuals shall pay the full cost of any education and training (including the cost of course development) received by the agencies, entities, and individuals, unless the Secretary determines that payment of a lesser amount of the cost is of critical importance to the public interest.

“(6) TRAINING FELLOWSHIPS; COOPERATION.—The Institute may—

“(A) engage in training activities authorized under this subsection, including the granting of training fellowships; and

“(B) exercise the authority of the Institute independently or in cooperation with any—

“(i) other Federal or State agency;

“(ii) association, authority, institution, or organization;

“(iii) for-profit or nonprofit corporation;

“(iv) national or international entity;

“(v) foreign country; or

“(vi) person.

“(7) COLLECTION OF FEES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—In accordance with this subsection, the Institute may assess and collect fees to defray the costs of the Institute in developing or administering education and training programs under this subsection.

“(B) PERSONS SUBJECT TO FEES.—Fees may be assessed and collected under this subsection only with respect to—

“(i) persons and entities for whom education or training programs are developed or administered under this subsection; and

“(ii) persons and entities to whom education or training is provided under this subsection.

“(C) AMOUNT OF FEES.—The fees assessed and collected under this subsection shall be established in a manner that ensures that the liability of any person or entity for a fee is reasonably based on the proportion of the costs referred to in subparagraph (A) that relate to the person or entity.

“(D) USE.—All fees collected under this subsection shall be used, without further appropriation, to defray costs associated with the development or administration of education and training programs authorized under this subsection.

“(8) RELATION TO FEES.—The funds made available to carry out this subsection may be combined with or held separate from the fees collected under—

“(A) paragraph (7);

“(B) memoranda of understanding;

“(C) regional compacts; and “(D) other similar agreements.

“(b) LOCAL TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.—

“(1) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall carry out a local technical assistance program that will provide access to surface transportation technology to—

“(A) highway and transportation agencies in urbanized areas;

“(B) highway and transportation agencies in rural areas;

“(C) contractors that perform work for the agencies; and “(D) infrastructure security.

“(2) GRANTS, COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS, AND CONTRACTS.—The Secretary may make grants and enter into cooperative agreements and contracts to provide education and training, technical assistance, and related support services to—

“(A) assist rural, local transportation agencies and tribal governments, and the consultants and construction personnel working for the agencies and governments, to—

“(i) develop and expand expertise in road and transportation areas (including pavement, bridge, concrete structures, intermodal connections, safety management systems, intelligent transportation systems, incident response, operations, and traffic safety countermeasures);

“(ii) improve roads and bridges;

“(iii) enhance—

“(I) programs for the movement of passengers and freight; and

“(II) intergovernmental transportation planning and project selection; and

“(iv) deal effectively with special transportation-related problems by preparing and providing training packages, manuals, guidelines, and technical resource materials;

“(B) develop technical assistance for tourism and recreational travel;

“(C) identify, package, and deliver transportation technology and traffic safety information to local jurisdictions to assist urban transportation agencies in developing and expanding their ability to deal effectively with transportation-related problems (particularly the promotion of regional cooperation);

“(D) operate, in cooperation with State transportation departments and universities—

“(i) local technical assistance program centers designated to provide transportation technology transfer services to rural areas and to urbanized areas; and

“(ii) local technical assistance program centers designated to provide transportation technical assistance to tribal governments; and

“(E) allow local transportation agencies and tribal governments, in cooperation with the private sector, to enhance new technology implementation.

“(c) Research Fellowships.—

“(1) General authority.—The Secretary, acting independently or in cooperation with other Federal agencies and instrumentalities, may make grants for research fellowships for any purpose for which research is authorized by this chapter.

“(2) Dwight David Eisenhower Transportation Fellowship Program.—The Secretary shall establish and implement a transportation research fellowship program, to be known as the ‘Dwight David Eisenhower Transportation Fellowship Program’, for the purpose of attracting qualified students to the field of transportation.

“§ 505. State planning and research

“(a) In General.—Two percent of the sums apportioned to a State for fiscal year 2005 and each fiscal year thereafter under sections 104 (other than subsections (f) and (h)) and 144 shall be available for expenditure by the State, in consultation with the Secretary, only for—

“(1) the conduct of engineering and economic surveys and investigations;

“(2) the planning of—

“(A) future highway programs and local public transportation systems; and

“(B) the financing of those programs and systems, including metropolitan and statewide planning under sections 134 and 135;

“(3) the development and implementation of management systems under section 303;

“(4) the conduct of studies on—

“(A) the economy, safety, and convenience of surface transportation systems; and

“(B) the desirable regulation and equitable taxation of those systems;

“(5) research, development, and technology transfer activities necessary in connection with the planning, design, construction, management, and maintenance of highway, public transportation, and intermodal transportation systems;

“(6) the conduct of studies, research, and training relating to the engineering standards and construction materials for surface transportation systems described in paragraph (5) (including the evaluation and accreditation of inspection and testing and the regulation of and charging for the use of the standards and materials); and “(7) the conduct of activities relating to the planning of real-time monitoring elements.

“(b) Minimum Expenditures on Research, Development, and Technology Transfer Activities.—

“(1) In general.—Subject to paragraph (2), not less than 25 percent of the funds subject to subsection (a) that are apportioned to a State for a fiscal year shall be expended by the State for research, development, and technology transfer activities that—

“(A) are described in subsection (a); and

“(B) relate to highway, public transportation, and intermodal transportation systems.

“(2) Waivers.—The Secretary may waive the application of paragraph (1) with respect to a State for a fiscal year if—

“(A) the State certifies to the Secretary for the fiscal year that total expenditures by the State for transportation planning under sections 134 and 135 will exceed 75 percent of the funds described in paragraph (1); and

“(B) the Secretary accepts the certification of the State.

“(3) Nonapplicability of assessment.—Funds expended under paragraph (1) shall not be considered to be part of the extramural budget of the agency for the purpose of section 9 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638).

“(c) Federal Share.—The Federal share of the cost of a project carried out using funds subject to subsection (a) shall be the share applicable under section 120(b), as adjusted under subsection (d) of that section.

“(d) Administration of Sums.—Funds subject to subsection (a) shall be—

“(1) combined and administered by the Secretary as a single fund; and

“(2) available for obligation for the period described in section 118(b)(2).

“(e) Eligible Use of State Planning and Research Funds.—A State, in coordination with the Secretary, may obligate funds made available to carry out this section for any purpose authorized under section 506(a).

“§ 506. International highway transportation outreach program

“(a) Establishment.—The Secretary may establish an international highway transportation outreach program—

“(1) to inform the United States highway community of technological innovations in foreign countries that could significantly improve highway transportation in the United States;

“(2) to promote United States highway transportation expertise, goods, and services in foreign countries; and

“(3) to increase transfers of United States highway transportation technology to foreign countries.

“(b) Activities.—Activities carried out under the program may include—

“(1) the development, monitoring, assessment, and dissemination in the United States of information about highway transportation innovations in foreign countries that could significantly improve highway transportation in the United States;

“(2) research, development, demonstration, training, and other forms of technology transfer and exchange;

“(3) the provision to foreign countries, through participation in trade shows, seminars, expositions, and other similar activities, of information relating to the technical quality of United States highway transportation goods and services;

“(4) the offering of technical services of the Federal Highway Administration that cannot be readily obtained from private sector firms in the United States for incorporation into the proposals of those firms undertaking highway transportation projects outside the United States, if the costs of the technical services will be recovered under the terms of the project;

“(5) the conduct of studies to assess the need for, or feasibility of, highway transportation improvements in foreign countries; and “(6) the gathering and dissemination of information on foreign transportation markets and industries.

“(c) Cooperation.—The Secretary may carry out this section in cooperation with any appropriate—

“(1) Federal, State, or local agency;

“(2) authority, association, institution, or organization;

“(3) for-profit or nonprofit corporation;

“(4) national or international entity;

“(5) foreign country; or

“(6) person.

“(d) Funds.—

“(1) Contributions.—Funds available to carry out this section shall include funds deposited by any cooperating organization or person into a special account of the Treasury established for this purpose.

“(2) Eligible uses of funds.—The funds deposited into the account, and other funds available to carry out this section, shall be available to cover the cost of any activity eligible under this section, including the cost of—

“(A) promotional materials;

“(B) travel;

“(C) reception and representation expenses; and

“(D) salaries and benefits.

“(3) Reimbursements for salaries and benefits.—Reimbursements for salaries and benefits of Department of Transportation employees providing services under this section shall be credited to the account.

“(e) Report—For each fiscal year, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report that describes the destinations and individual trip costs of international travel conducted in carrying out activities described in this section.

“§ 507. Surface transportation-environmental cooperative research program

“(a) In General.—The Secretary shall establish and carry out a surface transportation-environmental cooperative research program.

“(b) Contents.—The program carried out under this section may include research—

“(1) to develop more accurate models for evaluating transportation control measures and transportation system designs that are appropriate for use by State and local governments (including metropolitan planning organizations) in designing implementation plans to meet Federal, State, and local environmental requirements;

“(2) to improve understanding of the factors that contribute to the demand for transportation;

“(3) to develop indicators of economic, social, and environmental performance of transportation systems to facilitate analysis of potential alternatives;

“(4) to meet additional priorities as determined by the Secretary in the strategic planning process under section 508; and

“(5) to refine, through the conduct of workshops, symposia, and panels, and in consultation with stakeholders (including the Department of Energy, the Environmental Protection Agency, and other appropriate Federal and State agencies and associations) the scope and research emphases of the program.

“(c) Program Administration.—The Secretary shall—

“(1) administer the program established under this section; and

“(2) ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that—

“(A) the best projects and researchers are selected to conduct research in the priority areas described in subsection (b)—

“(i) on the basis of merit of each submitted proposal; and

“(ii) through the use of open solicitations and selection by a panel of appropriate experts;

“(B) a qualified, permanent core staff with the ability and expertise to manage a large multiyear budget is used;

“(C) the stakeholders are involved in the governance of the program, at the executive, overall program, and technical levels, through the use of expert panels and committees; and

“(D) there is no duplication of research effort between the program established under this section and the new strategic highway research program established under section 509.

"(d) NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.—The Secretary may make grants to, and enter into cooperative agreements with, the National Academy of Sciences to carry out such activities relating to the research, technology, and technology transfer activities described in subsections (b) and (c) as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"§ 508. Surface transportation research technology deployment and strategic planning

"(a) PLANNING.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall—

"(A) establish, in accordance with section 306 of title 5, a strategic planning process that—

"(i) enhances effective implementation of this section through the establishment in accordance with paragraph (2) of the Surface Transportation Research Technology Advisory Committee; and

"(ii) focuses on surface transportation research funded through paragraphs (1), (2), (4), and (5) of section 2001(a) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, taking into consideration national surface transportation system needs and intermodality requirements;

"(B) coordinate Federal surface transportation research, technology development, and deployment activities;

"(C) at such intervals as are appropriate and practicable, measure the results of those activities and the ways in which the activities affect the performance of the surface transportation systems of the United States; and

"(D) ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that planning and reporting activities carried out under this section are coordinated with all other surface transportation planning and reporting requirements.

"(2) SURFACE TRANSPORTATION RESEARCH TECHNOLOGY ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—

"(A) ESTABLISHMENT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, the Secretary shall establish a committee to be known as the 'Surface Transportation Research Technology Advisory Committee' (referred to in this section as the 'Committee').

"(B) MEMBERSHIP.—The Committee shall be composed of 12 members appointed by the Secretary—

"(i) each of which shall have expertise in a particular area relating to Federal surface transportation programs, including—

"(I) safety;

"(II) operations;

"(III) infrastructure (including pavements and structures);

"(IV) planning and environment;

"(V) policy; and

"(VI) asset management; and

"(ii) of which—

"(I) 3 members shall be individuals representing the Federal Government;

"(II) 3 members—

"(aa) shall be exceptionally qualified to serve on the Committee, as determined by the Secretary, based on education, training, and experience; and

"(bb) shall not be officers or employees of the United States;

"(III) 3 members—

"(aa) shall represent the transportation industry (including the pavement industry); and

"(bb) shall not be officers or employees of the United States; and

"(IV) 3 members shall represent State transportation departments from 3 different geographical regions of the United States.

"(C) MEETINGS.—The advisory subcommittees shall meet on a regular basis, but not less than twice each year.

"(D) DUTIES.—The Committee shall provide to the Secretary, on a continuous basis, advice and guidance relating to—

"(i) the determination of surface transportation research priorities;

"(ii) the improvement of the research planning and implementation process;

"(iii) the design and selection of research projects;

"(iv) the review of research results;

"(v) the planning and implementation of technology transfer activities and

"(vi) the formulation of the surface transportation research and technology deployment and deployment strategic plan required under subsection (c).

"(E) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to carry out this paragraph $178,616 for each fiscal year.

"(b) IMPLEMENTATION.—The Secretary shall—

"(1) provide for the integrated planning, coordination, and consultation among the operating administrations of the Department of Transportation, all other Federal agencies with responsibility for surface transportation research and technology development, State and local governments, institutions of higher education, industry, and other private and public sector organizations engaged in surface transportation-related research and development activities; and

"(2) ensure that the surface transportation research and technology development programs of the Department do not duplicate other Federal, State, or private sector research and development programs.

"(c) SURFACE TRANSPORTATION RESEARCH AND TECHNOLOGY DEPLOYMENT STRATEGIC PLAN.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—After receiving, and based on, extensive consultation and input from stakeholders representing the transportation community and the Surface Transportation Research Advisory Committee, the Secretary shall, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, complete, and shall periodically update thereafter, a strategic plan for each of the core surface transportation research areas, including—

"(A) safety;

"(B) operations;

"(C) infrastructure (including pavements and structures);

"(D) planning and environment;

"(E) policy; and

"(F) asset management.

"(2) COMPONENTS.—The strategic plan shall specify—

"(A) surface transportation research objectives and priorities;

"(B) specific surface transportation research projects to be conducted;

"(C) recommended technology transfer activities to promote the deployment of advances resulting from the surface transportation research conducted; and

"(D) short- and long-term technology development and deployment activities.

"(3) REVIEW AND SUBMISSION OF FINDINGS.—The Secretary shall enter into a contract with the Transportation Research Board of the National Academy of Sciences, on behalf of the Research and Technology Coordinating Committee of the National Research Council, under which—

"(A) the Transportation Research Board shall—

"(i) review the research and technology planning and implementation process used by Federal Highway Administration; and

"(ii) evaluate each of the strategic plans prepared under this subsection—

"(I) to ensure that sufficient stakeholder input is being solicited and considered throughout the preparation process; and

"(II) to offer recommendations relevant to research priorities, project selection, and deployment strategies; and

"(B) the Secretary shall ensure that the Research and Technology Coordinating Committee, in a timely manner, informs the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives of the findings of the review and evaluation under subparagraph (A).

"(4) RESPONSES OF SECRETARY.—Not later than 60 days after the date of completion of the strategic plan under this subsection, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives written responses to each of the recommendations of the Research and Technology Coordinating Committee under paragraph (3)(A)(ii)(II).

"(d) CONSISTENCY WITH GOVERNMENT PERFORMANCE AND RESULTS ACT OF 1993.—The plans and reports developed under this section shall be consistent with and incorporated as part of the plans developed under section 306 of title 5 and sections 1115 and 1116 of title 31.

"§ 509. New strategic highway research program

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The National Research Council shall establish and carry out, through fiscal year 2009, a new strategic highway research program.

"(b) BASIS; PRIORITIES.—With respect to the program established under subsection (a)—

"(1) the program shall be based on—

"(A) National Research Council Special Report No. 260, entitled 'Strategic Highway Research'; and

"(B) the results of the detailed planning work subsequently carried out to scope the research areas through National Cooperative Research Program Project 20–58.

"(2) the scope and research priorities of the program shall—

"(A) be refined through stakeholder input in the form of workshops, symposia, and panels; and

"(B) include an examination of—

"(i) the roles of highway infrastructure, drivers, and vehicles in fatalities on public roads;

"(ii) high-risk areas and activities associated with the greatest numbers of highway fatalities;

"(iii) the roles of various levels of government agencies and non-governmental organizations in reducing highway fatalities (including recommendations for methods of strengthening highway safety partnerships);

"(iv) measures that may save the greatest number of lives in the short- and long-term;

"(v) renewal of aging infrastructure with minimum impact on users of facilities;

"(vi) driving behavior and likely crash causal factors to support improved countermeasures;

"(vii) reduction in congestion due to nonrecurring congestion;

"(viii) planning and designing of new road capacity to meet mobility, economic, environmental, and community needs;

“(3) the program shall consider, at a minimum, the results of studies relating to the implementation of the Strategic Highway Safety Plan prepared by the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials; and

“(4) the research results of the program, expressed in terms of technologies, methodologies, and other appropriate categorizations, shall be disseminated to practicing engineers as soon as practicable for their use.

“(c) Program Administration.—In carrying out the program under this section, the National Research Council shall ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that—

“(1) the best projects and researchers are selected to conduct research for the program and priorities described in subsection (b)—

“(A) on the basis of the merit of each submitted proposal; and

“(B) through the use of open solicitations and selection by a panel of appropriate experts;

“(2) the National Research Council acquires a qualified, permanent core staff with the ability and expertise to manage a large research program and multiyear budget;

“(3) the stakeholders are involved in the governance of the program, at the executive, overall program, and technical levels, through the use of expert panels and committees; and

“(4) there is no duplication of research effort between the program established under this section and the surface transportation-environment cooperative research program established under section 507 or any other research effort of the Department.

“(d) National Academy of Sciences.—The Secretary may make grants to, and enter into cooperative agreements with, the National Academy of Sciences to carry out such activities relating to research, technology, and technology transfer described in subsections (b) and (c) as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

“(e) Report on Implementation of Results.—

“(1) In general.—Not later than October 1, 2007, the Secretary shall enter into a contract with the Transportation Research Board of the National Academy of Sciences under which the Transportation Research Board shall complete a report on the strategies and administrative structure to be used for implementation of the results of new strategic highway research program.

“(2) Components.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include, with respect to the new strategic highway research program—

“(A) an identification of the most promising results of research under the program (including the persons most likely to use the results);

“(B) a discussion of potential incentives for, impediments to, and methods of, implementing those results;

“(C) an estimate of costs that would be incurred in expediting implementation of those results; and

“(D) recommendations for the way in which implementation of the results of the program under this section should be conducted, coordinated, and supported in future years, including a discussion of the administrative structure and organization best suited to carry out those responsibilities.

“(3) Consultation.—In developing the report, the Transportation Research Board shall consult with a wide variety of stakeholders, including—

“(A) the American Association of State highway Officials;

“(B) the Federal Highway Administration; and “(C) the Surface Transportation Research Technology Advisory Committee.

“(4) Submission.—Not later than February 1, 2009, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives the report under this subsection.

“§ 510. University transportation centers

“(a) Centers.—

“(1) In general.—During fiscal year 2005, the Secretary shall provide grants to 40 nonprofit institutions of higher learning (or consortia of institutions of higher learning) to establish centers to address transportation design, management, research, development, and technology matters, especially the education and training of greater numbers of individuals to enter into the professional field of transportation.

“(2) Distribution of centers.—Not more than 1 university transportation center (or lead university in a consortia of institutions of higher learning), other than a center or university selected through a competitive process, may be located in any State.

“(3) Identification of centers.—The university transportation centers established under this section shall—

“(A) comply with applicable requirements under subsection (c); and

“(B) be located at the institutions of higher learning specified in paragraph (4).

“(4) Identification of groups.—For the purpose of making grants under this subsection, the following grants are identified:

“(A) Group A.—Group A shall consist of the 10 regional centers selected under subsection (b).

“(B) Group B.—Group B shall consist of the following:

“(i) [ ].
“(ii) [ ].
“(iii) [ ].
“(iv) [ ].
“(v) [ ].
“(vi) [ ].
“(vii) [ ].
“(viii) [ ].
“(ix) [ ].
“(x) [ ].
“(xi) [ ].

“(C) Group C.—Group C shall consist of the following:

“(i) [ ].
“(ii) [ ].
“(iii) [ ].
“(iv) [ ].
“(v) [ ].
“(vi) [ ].
“(vii) [ ].
“(viii) [ ].
“(ix) [ ].
“(x) [ ].
“(xi) [ ].

“(D) Group D.—Group D shall consist of the following:

“(i) [ ].
“(ii) [ ].
“(iii) [ ].
“(iv) [ ].
“(v) [ ].
“(vi) [ ].
“(vii) [ ].
“(viii) [ ].

“(b) Regional Centers.—

“(1) In general.—Not later than September 30, 2005, the Secretary shall provide to nonprofit institutions of higher learning (or consortia of institutions of higher learning) grants to be used during the period of fiscal years 2005 through 2009 to establish and operate 1 university transportation center in each of the 10 Federal regions that comprise the Standard Federal Regional Boundary System.

“(2) Selection of regional centers.—

“(A) Proposals.—In order to be eligible to receive a grant under this subsection, an institution described in paragraph (1) shall submit to the Secretary a proposal, in response to any request for proposals that shall be made by the Secretary, that is in such form and contains such information as the Secretary shall prescribe.

“(B) Request schedule.—The Secretary shall request proposals once for the period of fiscal years 2005 and 2006 and once for the period of fiscal years 2007 through 2009.

“(C) Eligibility.—Any institution of higher learning (or consortium of institutions of higher learning) that meets the criteria described in subsection (c) (including any institution identified in subsection (a)(4)) may apply for a grant under this subsection.

“(D) Selection criteria.—The Secretary shall select each recipient of a grant under this subsection through a competitive process on the basis of—

“(i) the location of the center within the Federal region to be served;

“(ii) the demonstrated research capabilities and extension resources available to the recipient to carry out this section;

“(iii) the capability of the recipient to provide leadership in making national and regional contributions to the solution of immediate and long-range transportation problems;

“(iv) the demonstrated ability of the recipient to disseminate results of transportation research and education programs through a statewide or regionwide continuing education program; and

“(v) the strategic plan that the recipient proposes to carry out using funds from the grant.

“(E) Selection process.—In selecting the recipients of grants under this subsection, the Secretary shall consult with, and consider the advice of—

“(i) the Research and Special Programs Administration;

“(ii) the Federal Highway Administration; and “(iii) the Federal Transit Administration.

“(c) Center Requirements.—

“(1) In general.—With respect to a university transportation center established under subsection (a) or (b), the institution or consortium that receives a grant to establish the center—

“(A) shall annually contribute at least $250,000 to the operation and maintenance of the center, except that payment by the institution or consortium of the salary required for transportation-related faculty and staff for a period greater than 90 days may not be counted against that contribution;

“(B) shall have established, as of the date of receipt of the grant, undergraduate or graduate programs in—

“(i) civil engineering;

“(ii) transportation engineering;

“(iii) transportation systems management and operations; or

“(iv) any other field significantly related to surface transportation systems, as determined by the Secretary; and

“(C) not later than 120 days after the date on which the institution or consortium receives notice of selection as a site for the establishment of a university transportation center under this section, shall submit to the Secretary a 6-year program plan for the university transportation center that includes, with respect to the center—

‘‘(i) a description of the purposes of programs to be conducted by the center;

‘‘(ii) a description of the undergraduate and graduate transportation education efforts to be carried out by the center;

‘‘(iii) a description of the nature and scope of research to be conducted by the center;

‘‘(iv) a list of personnel, including the roles and responsibilities of those personnel within the center; and

‘‘(v) a detailed budget, including the amount of contributions by the institution or consortium to the center; and

‘‘(D) shall establish an advisory committee that—

‘‘(i) is composed of a representative from each of the State transportation department of the State in which the institution or consortium is located, the Department of Transportation, and the institution or consortia, as appointed by those respective entities;

‘‘(ii) in accordance with paragraph (2), shall review and approve or disapprove the plan of the institution or consortium under subparagraph (C); and

‘‘(iii) shall, to the maximum extent practicable, ensure that the proposed research to be carried out by the university transportation center will contribute to the national highway research and technology agenda, as periodically updated by the Secretary, in consultation with stakeholders representing the highway community.

‘‘(2) PEER REVIEW.—

‘‘(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall require peer review for each report on research carried out using funds made available for this section.

‘‘(B) PURPOSES OF PEER REVIEW.—Peer review of a report under this section shall be carried out to evaluate—

‘‘(i) the relevance of the research described in the report with respect to the strategic plan under, and the goals of, this section;

‘‘(ii) the research covered by the report, and to recommend modifications to individual project plans;

‘‘(iii) the results of the research before publication of those results; and

‘‘(iv) the overall outcomes of the research.

‘‘(C) INTERNET AVAILABILITY.—Each report under this section that is received by the Secretary shall be published—

‘‘(i) by the Secretary, on the Internet website of the Department of Transportation; and ‘‘(ii) by the University Transportation Center.

‘‘(3) APPROVAL OF PLANS.—A plan of an institution or consortium described in paragraph (1)(C) shall not be submitted to the Secretary until such time as the advisory committee established under paragraph (1)(D) reviews and approves the plan.

‘‘(4) FAILURE TO COMPLY.—If a recipient of a grant under this subsection fails to submit a program plan acceptable to the Secretary and in accordance with paragraph (1)(C)—

‘‘(A) the recipient shall forfeit the grant and the selection of the recipient as a site for the establishment of a university transportation center; and

‘‘(B) the Secretary shall select a replacement recipient for the forfeited grant.

‘‘(5) APPLICABILITY.—This subsection does not apply to any research funds received in accordance with a competitive contract offered and entered into by the Federal Highway Administration.

‘‘(d) OBJECTIVES.—Each university transportation center established under subsection (a) or (b) shall carry out—

‘‘(1) undergraduate or graduate education programs that include—

‘‘(A) multidisciplinary coursework; and

‘‘(B) opportunities for students to participate in research;

‘‘(2) basic and applied research, the results and products of which shall be judged by peers or other experts in the field so as to advance the body of knowledge in transportation; and

‘‘(3) an ongoing program of technology transfer that makes research results available to potential users in such form as will enable the results to be implemented, used, or otherwise applied.

‘‘(e) MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, an applicant shall—

‘‘(1) enter into an agreement with the Secretary to ensure that the applicant will maintain total expenditures from all other sources to establish and operate a university transportation center and related educational and research activities at a level that is at least equal to the average level of those expenditures during the 2 fiscal years before the date on which the grant is provided;

‘‘(2) provide the annual institutional contribution required under subsection (c)(1); and

‘‘(3) submit to the Secretary, in a timely manner, for use by the Secretary in the preparation of the annual research report under section 508(c)(5) of title 23, an annual report on the projects and activities of the university transportation center for which funds are made available under section 2001 of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 that contains, at a minimum, for the fiscal year covered by the report, a description of—

‘‘(A) the goals of the center;

‘‘(B) the educational activities carried out by the center (including a detailed summary of the budget for those educational activities);

‘‘(C) teaching activities of faculty at the center;

‘‘(D) each research project carried out by the center, including—

‘‘(i) the identity and location of each investigator working on a research project;

‘‘(ii) the overall funding amount for each research project (including the amounts expended for the project as of the date of the report);

‘‘(iii) the current schedule for each research project; and

‘‘(iv) the results of each research project through the date of submission of the report, with particular emphasis on results for the fiscal year covered by the report; and

‘‘(E) overall technology transfer and implementation efforts of the center.

‘‘(f) PROGRAM COORDINATION.—The Secretary shall—

‘‘(1) coordinate the research, education, training, and technology transfer activities carried out by recipients of grants under this section; and

‘‘(2) establish and operate a clearinghouse for, and disseminate, the results of those activities.

‘‘(g) FUNDING.—

‘‘(1) NUMBER AND AMOUNT OF GRANTS.—The Secretary shall make the following grants under this subsection:

‘‘(A) GROUP A.—For each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, the Secretary shall make a grant in the amount of $893,082 to each of the institutions in group A (as described in subsection (a)(4)(A)).

‘‘(B) GROUP B.—The Secretary shall make a grant to each of the institutions in group B (as described in subsection (a)(4)(B)) in the amount of—

‘‘(i) $357,240 for fiscal year 2005; and

‘‘(ii) $535,860 for each of fiscal years 2006 and 2007.

‘‘(C) GROUP C.—For each of fiscal years 2005 through 2007, the Secretary shall make a grant in the amount of $893,082 to each of the institutions in group C (as described in subsection (a)(4)(C)).

‘‘(D) GROUP D.—For each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, the Secretary shall make a grant in the amount of $1,786,164 to each of the institutions in group D (as described in subsection (a)(4)(D)).

‘‘(E) LIMITED GRANTS FOR GROUPS B AND C.—For each of fiscal years 2008 and 2009, of the institutions classified in groups B and C (as described in subsection (a)(4)(B)), the Secretary shall select and make grants in an amount totaling $35,724,000 to not more than 15 institutions.

‘‘(2) USE OF FUNDS—

‘‘(A) IN GENERAL.—Of the funds made available for a fiscal year to a university transportation center established under subsection (a) or (b)—

‘‘(i) not less than $250,000 shall be used to establish and maintain new faculty positions for the teaching of undergraduate, transportation-related courses;

‘‘(ii) not more than $500,000 for the fiscal year, or $1,000,000 in the aggregate, may be used to construct or improve transportation-related laboratory facilities; and

‘‘(iii) not more than $300,000 for the fiscal year may be used for student internships of not more than 180 days in duration to enable students to gain experience by working on transportation projects as interns with design or construction firms.

‘‘(B) FACILITIES AND ADMINISTRATION FEE.—Not more than 10 percent of any grant made available to a university transportation center (or any institution or consortium that establishes such a center) for a fiscal year may be used to pay to the appropriate nonprofit institution of higher learning any administration and facilities fee (or any similar overhead fee) for the fiscal year.

‘‘(3) LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Funds made available under this subsection shall remain available for obligation for a period of 2 years after September 30 of the fiscal year for which the funds are authorized.

‘‘§ 511. Multistate corridor operations and management

‘‘(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall encourage multistate cooperative agreements, coalitions, or other arrangements to promote regional cooperation, planning, and shared project implementation for programs and projects to improve transportation system management and operations.

‘‘(b) INTERSTATE ROUTE I–95 CORRIDOR COALITION TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS MANAGEMENT AND OPERATIONS.—

‘‘(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make grants under this subsection to States to continue intelligent transportation system management and operations in the Interstate Route I–95 corridor coalition region initiated under the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102–240).

‘‘(2) FUNDING.—Of the amounts made available under section 2001(a)(4) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, the Secretary shall use to carry out this subsection—

‘‘(A) $8,930,818 for fiscal year 2005;

‘‘(B) $10,716,981 for fiscal year 2006;

‘‘(C) $10,716,981 for fiscal year 2007;

‘‘(D) $10,716,981 for fiscal year 2008; and

‘‘(E) $10,716,981 for fiscal year 2009.

"§512. Transportation analysis simulation system

"(a) Continuation of TRANSIMS Development.—

"(1) In General.—The Secretary shall continue the deployment of the advanced transportation model known as the 'Transportation Analysis Simulation System' (referred to in this section as 'TRANSIMS') developed by the Los Alamos National Laboratory.

"(2) Requirements and considerations.—In carrying out paragraph (1), the Secretary shall—

"(A) further improve TRANSIMS to reduce the cost and complexity of using the TRANSIMS;

"(B) continue development of TRANSIMS for applications to facilitate transportation planning, regulatory compliance, and response to natural disasters and other transportation disruptions; and

"(C) assist State transportation departments and metropolitan planning organizations, especially smaller metropolitan planning organizations, in the implementation of TRANSIMS by providing training and technical assistance.

"(b) Eligible Activities.—The Secretary shall use funds made available to carry out this section—

"(1) to further develop TRANSIMS for additional applications, including—

"(A) congestion analyses;

"(B) major investment studies;

"(C) economic impact analyses;

"(D) alternative analyses;

"(E) freight movement studies;

"(F) emergency evacuation studies;

"(G) port studies; and

"(H) airport access studies;

"(2) provide training and technical assistance with respect to the implementation and application of TRANSIMS to States, local governments, and metropolitan planning organizations with responsibility for travel modeling;

"(3) develop methods to simulate the national transportation infrastructure as a single, integrated system for the movement of individuals and goods;

"(4) provide funding to State transportation departments and metropolitan planning organizations for implementation of TRANSIMS.

"(c) Allocation of Funds.—Of the funds made available to carry out this section for each fiscal year, not less than 15 percent shall be allocated for activities described in subsection (b)(3).

"(d) Funding.—Of the amounts made available under section 2001(a) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, the Secretary shall use $893,082 to carry out this section.

"(e) Availability of Funds.—Funds made available under this section shall be available to the Secretary through the Transportation Planning, Research, and Development Account of the Office of the Secretary.".

(b) Other University Funding.—No university (other than university transportation centers specified in section 510 of title 23, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)) shall receive funds made available under section 2001 to carry out research unless the university is selected to receive the funds—

(1) through a competitive process that incorporates merit-based peer review; and

(2) based on a proposal submitted to the Secretary by the university in response to a request for proposals issued by the Secretary.

(c) Conforming Amendment.—Section 5505 of title 49, United States Code, is repealed.

SEC. 2102. STUDY OF DATA COLLECTION AND STATISTICAL ANALYSIS EFFORTS.

(a) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) Administration.—The term "Administration" means the Federal Highway Administration.

(2) Board.—The term "Board" means the Transportation Research Board of the National Academy of Sciences.

(3) Bureau.—The term "Bureau" means the Bureau of Transportation Statistics.

(4) Department.—The term "Department" means the Department of Transportation.

(5) Secretary.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Transportation.

(b) Priority Areas of Effort.—

(1) Statistical standards.—The Secretary shall direct the Bureau to assume the role of the lead agency in working with other agencies of the Department to establish, by not later the date that is 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, statistical standards for the Department.

(2) Statistical analysis effort.—

(A) In general.—The Bureau shall provide to the Secretary, on an annual basis, an overview of the level of effort expended on statistical analyses by each agency within the Department.

(B) Duty of agencies.—Each agency of the Department shall provide to the Bureau such information as the Bureau may require in carrying out subparagraph (A).

(3) National security.—The Bureau shall—

(A) conduct a study of the ways in which transportation statistics are and may be used for the purpose of national security; and

(B) submit to the Transportation Security Administration recommendations for means by which the use of transportation statistics for the purpose of national security may be improved.

(4) Modernization.—The Bureau shall develop new protocols for adapting data collection and delivery efforts in existence as of the date of enactment of this Act to deliver information in a more timely and frequent fashion.

(c) Study.—

(1) In general.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall provide a grant to, or enter into a cooperative agreement or contract with, the Board for the conduct of a study of the data collection and statistical analysis efforts of the Department with respect to the modes of surface transportation for which funds are made available under this Act.

(2) Purpose.—The purpose of the study shall be to provide to the Department information for use by agencies of the Department in providing to surface transportation agencies and individuals engaged in the surface transportation field higher quality, and more relevant and timely, data, statistical analyses, and products.

(3) Content.—The study shall include—

(A) an examination and analysis of the efforts, analyses, and products (with respect to usefulness and policy relevance) of the Bureau as of the date of the study, as compared with the duties of the Bureau specified in subsections (c) through (f) of section 111 of title 49, United States Code;

(B) an examination and analysis of data collected by, methods of data collection of, and analyses performed by, agencies within the Department; and

(C) recommendations relating to—

(i) the future efforts of the Department in the area of surface transportation with respect to—

(I) types of data collected;

(II) methods of data collection;

(III) types of analyses performed; and

(IV) products made available by the Secretary to the transportation community and Congress;

(ii) the means by which the Department may cooperate with State transportation departments to provide technical assistance in the use of data collected by traffic operations centers; and

(iii) duplication of efforts within the Department, including ways in which—

(I) the duplication may be reduced or eliminated; and

(II) each agency of the Department may cooperate with, and complement the efforts of, the others.

(4) Consultation.—In conducting the study, the Board shall consult with such stakeholders, agencies, and other entities as the Board considers to be appropriate.

(5) Report.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which a grant is provided, or a cooperative agreement or contract is entered into, for a study under paragraph (1)—

(A) the Board shall submit to the Secretary, the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate, and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a final report on the results of the study; and

(B) the results of the study shall be published—

(i) by the Secretary, on the Internet website of the Department; and

(ii) by the Board, on the Internet website of the Board.

(6) Implementation of results.—The Bureau shall, to the maximum extent practicable, implement any recommendations made with respect to the results of the study under this subsection.

(7) Compliance.—

(A) In general.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a review of the study under this subsection.

(B) Noncompliance.—If the Comptroller General of the United States determines that the Bureau failed to conduct the study under this subsection, the Bureau shall be ineligible to receive funds from the Highway Trust Fund until such time as the Bureau conducts the study under this subsection.

(d) Conforming Amendments.—Section 111 of title 49, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (k) as subsection (m);

(2) by inserting after subsection (j) the following:

"(k) Annual Report.—

"(1) In general.—For fiscal year 2005 and each fiscal year thereafter, the Bureau shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an annual report that—

"(A) describes progress made in responding to study recommendations for the fiscal year; and

"(B) summarizes the activities and expenditure of funds by the Bureau for the fiscal year.

"(2) Availability.—The Bureau shall—

"(A) make the report described in paragraph (1) available to the public; and

"(B) publish the report on the Internet website of the Bureau.

"(3) Combination of reports.—The report required under paragraph (1) may be included in or combined with the Transportation Statistics Annual Report required by subsection (j).

"(l) Expenditure of Funds.—Funds from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) that are authorized to be appropriated, and made available, in accordance with section 2001(a)(3) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 shall be used only for the collection and statistical analysis of information relating to surface transportation systems."; and

(3) in subsection (m) (as redesignated by subparagraph (A)), by inserting "surface transportation" after "sale of".

SEC. 2103. CENTERS FOR SURFACE TRANSPORTATION EXCELLENCE.

(a) Establishment.—The Secretary shall establish the centers for surface transportation excellence described in subsection (b) to promote high-quality outcomes in support of strategic national programs and activities, including—

(1) the environment;

(2) operations;

(3) surface transportation safety;

(4) project finance; and

(5) asset management.

(b) Centers.—The centers for surface transportation excellence referred to in subsection (a) are—

(1) a Center for Environmental Excellence to provide technical assistance, information sharing of best practices, and training in the use of tools and decision-making processes to assist States in planning and delivering environmentally-sound surface transportation projects;

(2) a Center for Operations Excellence to provide support for an integrated and coordinated national program for implementing operations in planning and management (including standards development) for the transportation system in the United States;

(3) a Center for Excellence in Surface Transportation Safety to implement a program of support for State transportation departments, including—

(A) the maintenance of an Internet site to provide critical information on safety programs;

(B) the provision of technical assistance to support a lead State transportation department for each of the safety emphasis areas (as identified by the Secretary); and

(C) the provision of training and education to enhance knowledge of personnel of State transportation departments in support of safety highway goals;

(4) a Center for Excellence in Project Finance—

(A) to provide support to State transportation departments in the development of finance plans and project oversight tools; and

(B) to develop and offer training in state-of-the-art financing methods to advance projects and leverage funds; and

(5) a Center for Excellence in Asset Management to develop and conduct research, provide training and education, and disseminate information on the benefits and tools for asset management.

(c) Program Administration.—

(1) In general.—Before funds authorized under this section for fiscal years 2005 through 2009 are obligated, the Secretary shall review and approve a multiyear strategic plan to be submitted by each of the centers.

(2) Timing.—The plan shall be submitted before the beginning of fiscal year 2005 and, subsequently, shall be annually updated.

(3) Content.—The plan shall include—

(A) a list of research and technical assistance projects and objectives; and

(B) a description of any other technology transfer activities, including a summary of training efforts.

(4) Cooperation and competition.—

(A) In general.—The Secretary shall carry out this section by making grants to, or entering into contracts, cooperative agreements, and other transactions with—

(i) the National Academy of Sciences;

(ii) the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials;

(iii) planning organizations;

(iv) a Federal laboratory;

(v) a State agency;

(vi) an authority, association, institution, or organization; or

(vii) a for-profit or nonprofit corporation.

(B) Competition; review.—All parties entering into contracts, cooperative agreements, or other transactions with the Secretary, or receiving grants, to perform research or provide technical assistance under this section shall be selected, to the maximum extent practicable—

(i) on a competitive basis; and

(ii) on the basis of the results of peer review of proposals submitted to the Secretary.

(5) Nonduplication.—The Secretary shall ensure that activities conducted by each of the centers do not duplicate, and to the maximum extent practicable, are integrated and coordinated with similar activities conducted by the Federal Highway Administration, the local technical assistance program, university transportation centers, and other research efforts supported with funds authorized by this title.

(d) Allocations.—

(1) In general.—For each of fiscal years 2005 through 2009, of the funds made available under section 2001(a)(1)(A), the Secretary shall set aside $8,930,818 to carry out this section.

(2) Allocation of funds.—Of the funds made available under paragraph (1)—

(A) 20 percent shall be allocated to the Center for Environmental Excellence established under subsection (b)(1);

(B) 30 percent shall be allocated to the Center for Operations Excellence established under subsection (b)(2);

(C) 20 percent shall be allocated to the Center for Excellence in Surface Transportation Safety established under subsection (b)(3);

(D) 10 percent shall be allocated to the Center for Excellence in Project Finance established under subsection (b)(4); and

(E) 20 percent shall be allocated to the Center for Excellence in Asset Management established under subsection (b)(5).

(3) Applicability of title 23.—Funds made available under this section shall be available for obligation in the same manner as if the funds were apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, except that the Federal share shall be 100 percent.

SEC. 2104. MOTORCYCLE CRASH CAUSATION STUDY GRANTS.

(a) Grants.—The Secretary shall provide grants for the purpose of conducting a comprehensive, in-depth motorcycle crash causation study that employs the common international methodology for in-depth motorcycle accident investigation of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

(b) Funding.—Of the amounts made available under section 2001(a)(3), $1,339,623 for fiscal year 2005 shall be available to carry out this section.

SEC. 2105. TRANSPORTATION TECHNOLOGY INNOVATION AND DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.

Section 5117(b)(3) of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (112 Stat. 449; 112 Stat. 864; 115 Stat. 2330) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B)—

(A) in clause (i)—

(i) in the first sentence—

(I) by striking "Build an" and inserting "Build or integrate an"; and

(II) by striking "$2,000,000" and inserting "$2,500,000"; and

(ii) in the second sentence—

(I) by striking "300,000 and that" and inserting "300,000,"; and

(II) by inserting before the period at the end the following: ", and includes major transportation corridors serving that metropolitan area";

(B) in clause (ii), by striking all that follows "will be" and inserting "reinvested in the intelligent transportation infrastructure system.";

(C) by striking clause (iii); and

(D) by redesignating clauses (iv) and (v) as clauses (iii) and (iv), respectively;

(2) in subparagraph (C)(ii), by striking "July 1, 2002" and inserting "the date that is 180 days after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005";

(3) in subparagraph (E), by striking clause (ii) and inserting the following:

"(ii) The term "follow-on deployment areas" means the metropolitan areas of Albany, Atlanta, Austin, Baltimore, Birmingham, Boston, Burlington Vermont, Charlotte, Chicago, Cleveland, Columbus, Dallas/Ft. Worth, Denver, Detroit, Greensboro, Hartford, Houston, Indianapolis, Jacksonville, Kansas City, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, Louisville, Miami, Milwaukee, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Nashville, New Orleans, New York/Northern New Jersey, Norfolk, Northern Kentucky/Cincinnati, Oklahoma City, Orlando, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Pittsburgh, Portland, Providence, Raleigh, Richmond, Sacramento, Salt Lake, San Diego, San Francisco, San Jose, St. Louis, Seattle, Tampa, Tucson, Tulsa, and Washington, District of Columbia.";

(4) in subparagraph (F)—

(A) by striking "Of the amounts" and inserting the following:

"(i) This Act.—Of the amounts"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"(ii) SAFETEA.—There are authorized to be appropriated out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) $4,465,409 for each fiscal year to carry out this paragraph.

"(iii) Availability; no reduction or set-aside.—Amounts made available by this subparagraph—

"(I) shall remain available until expended; and

"(II) shall not be subject to any reduction or setaside."; and

(5) by adding at the end the following:

"(H) Use of rights-of-way.—

"(i) In general.—An intelligent transportation system project described in paragraph (3) or (6) that involves privately owned intelligent transportation system components and is carried out using funds made available from the Highway Trust Fund shall not be subject to any law (including a regulation) of a State or political subdivision of a State prohibiting or regulating commercial activities in the rights-of-way of a highway for which Federal-aid highway funds have been used for planning, design, construction, or maintenance, if the Secretary determines that such use is in the public interest.

"(ii) Effect of Subparagraph.—Nothing in this subparagraph affects the authority of a State or political subdivision of a State to regulate highway safety.".

Subtitle C—Intelligent Transportation System Research

SEC. 2201. INTELLIGENT TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM RESEARCH AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.

(a) In General.—Chapter 5 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 2101), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SUBCHAPTER II—INTELLIGENT TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM RESEARCH AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

"§ 521. Finding

"Congress finds that continued investment in architecture and standards development, research, technical assistance for State and local governments, and systems integration is needed to accelerate the rate at which intelligent transportation systems—

"(1) are incorporated into the national surface transportation network; and

"(2) as a result of that incorporation, improve transportation safety and efficiency and reduce costs and negative impacts on communities and the environment.

"§ 522. Goals and purposes

"(a) Goals.—The goals of the intelligent transportation system research and technical assistance program include—

"(1) enhancement of surface transportation efficiency and facilitation of intermodalism and international trade—

"(A) to meet a significant portion of future transportation needs, including public access to employment, goods, and services; and

"(B) to reduce regulatory, financial, and other transaction costs to public agencies and system users;

"(2) the acceleration of the use of intelligent transportation systems to assist in the achievement of national transportation safety goals, including the enhancement of safe operation of motor vehicles and nonmotorized vehicles,.with particular emphasis on decreasing the number and severity of collisions;

"(3) protection and enhancement of the natural environment and communities affected by surface transportation, with particular emphasis on assisting State and local governments in achieving national environmental goals;

"(4) accommodation of the needs of all users of surface transportation systems, including—

"(A) operators of commercial vehicles, passenger vehicles, and motorcycles;

"(B) users of public transportation users (with respect to intelligent transportation system user services); and

"(C) individuals with disabilities; and

"(5)(A) improvement of the ability of the United States to respond to emergencies and natural disasters; and

"(B) enhancement of national security and defense mobility.

"(b) Purposes.—The Secretary shall carry out activities under the intelligent transportation system research and technical assistance program to, at a minimum—

"(1) assist in the development of intelligent transportation system technologies;

"(2) ensure that Federal, State, and local transportation officials have adequate knowledge of intelligent transportation systems for full consideration in the transportation planning process;

"(3) improve regional cooperation, interoperability, and operations for effective intelligent transportation system performance;

"(4) promote the innovative use of private resources;

"(5) assist State transportation departments in developing a workforce capable of developing, operating, and maintaining intelligent transportation systems;

"(6) maintain an updated national ITS architecture and consensus-based standards while ensuring an effective Federal presence in the formulation of domestic and international ITS standards;

"(7) advance commercial vehicle operations components of intelligent transportation systems—

"(A) to improve the safety and productivity of commercial vehicles and drivers; and

"(B) to reduce costs associated with commercial vehicle operations and Federal and State commercial vehicle regulatory requirements;

"(8) evaluate costs and benefits of intelligent transportation systems projects;

"(9) improve, as part of the Archived Data User Service and in cooperation with the Bureau of Transportation Statistics, the collection of surface transportation system condition and performance data through the use of intelligent transportation system technologies; and

"(10) ensure access to transportation information and services by travelers of all ages.

"§ 523. Definitions

"In this subchapter:

"(1) Commercial Vehicle Information Systems and Networks.—The term 'commercial vehicle information systems and networks' means the information systems and communications networks that support commercial vehicle operations.

"(2) Commercial Vehicle Operations.—

"(A) In General.—The term 'commercial vehicle operations' means motor carrier operations and motor vehicle regulatory activities associated with the commercial movement of goods (including hazardous materials) and passengers.

"(B) Inclusions.—The term 'commercial vehicle operations', with respect to the public sector, includes—

"(i) the issuance of operating credentials;

"(ii) the administration of motor vehicle and fuel taxes; and

"(iii) roadside safety and border crossing inspection and regulatory compliance operations.

"(3) Intelligent Transportation Infrastructure.—The term 'intelligent transportation infrastructure' means fully integrated public sector intelligent transportation system components, as defined by the Secretary.

"(4) Intelligent Transportation System.—The term 'intelligent transportation system' means electronics, communications, or information processing used singly or in combination to improve the efficiency or safety of a surface transportation system.

"(5) National ITS Architecture.—The term 'national ITS architecture' means the common framework for interoperability adopted by the Secretary that defines—

"(A) the functions associated with intelligent transportation system user services;

"(B) the physical entities or subsystems within which the functions reside;

"(C) the data interfaces and information flows between physical subsystems; and

"(D) the communications requirements associated with the information flows.

"(6) Standard.—The term 'standard' means a document that—

"(A) contains technical specifications or other precise criteria for intelligent transportation systems that are to be used consistently as rules, guidelines, or definitions of characteristics so as to ensure that materials, products, processes, and services are fit for their purposes; and

"(B) may—

"(i) support the national ITS architecture; and

"(ii) promote—

"(I) the widespread use and adoption of intelligent transportation system technology as a component of the surface transportation systems of the United States; and

"(II) interoperability among intelligent transportation system technologies implemented throughout the States.

"§ 524. General authorities and requirements

"(a) Scope.—Subject to this subchapter, the Secretary shall carry out an ongoing intelligent transportation system research program—

"(1) to research, develop, and operationally test intelligent transportation systems; and

"(2) to provide technical assistance in the nationwide application of those systems as a component of the surface transportation systems of the United States.

"(b) Policy.—Intelligent transportation system operational tests and projects funded under this subchapter shall encourage, but not displace, public-private partnerships or private sector investment in those tests and projects.

"(c) Cooperation With Governmental, Private, and Educational Entities.—The Secretary shall carry out the intelligent transportation system research and technical assistance program in cooperation with—

"(1) State and local governments and other public entities;

"(2) the private sector;

"(3) Federal laboratories (as defined in section 501); and

"(4) colleges and universities, including historically black colleges and universities and other minority institutions of higher education.

"(d) Consultation With Federal Officials.—In carrying out the intelligent transportation system research program, the Secretary, as appropriate, shall consult with—

"(1) the Secretary of Commerce;

"(2) the Secretary of the Treasury;

"(3) the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency;

"(4) the Director of the National Science Foundation; and

"(5) the Secretary of Homeland Security.

"(e) Technical Assistance, Training, and Information.—The Secretary may provide technical assistance, training, and information to State and local governments seeking to implement, operate, maintain, or evaluate intelligent transportation system technologies and services.

"(f) Transportation Planning.—The Secretary may provide funding to support adequate consideration of transportation system management and operations (including intelligent transportation systems) within metropolitan and statewide transportation planning processes.

"(g) Information Clearinghouse.—The Secretary shall—

"(1) maintain a repository for technical and safety data collected as a result of federally sponsored projects carried out under this subchapter; and

"(2) on request, make that information (except for proprietary information and data) readily available to all users of the repository at an appropriate cost.

"(h) ADVISORY COMMITTEES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In carrying out this subchapter, the Secretary—

"(A) may use 1 or more advisory committees; and

"(B) shall designate a public-private organization, the members of which participate in on-going research, planning, standards development, deployment, and marketing of ITS programs, products, and services, and coordinate the development and deployment of intelligent transportation systems in the United States, as the Federal advisory committee authorized by section 5204(h) of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (112 Stat. 454).

"(2) FUNDING.—Of the amount made available to carry out this subchapter, the Secretary may use $1,339,623 for each fiscal year for advisory committees described in paragraph (1).

"(3) APPLICABILITY OF FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT.—Any advisory committee described in paragraph (1) shall be subject to the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.).

"(i) PROCUREMENT METHODS.—The Secretary shall develop and provide appropriate technical assistance and guidance to assist State and local agencies in evaluating and selecting appropriate methods of deployment and procurement for intelligent transportation system projects carried out using funds made available from the Highway Trust Fund, including innovative and nontraditional methods such as Information Technology Omnibus Procurement (as developed by the Secretary).

"(j) EVALUATIONS.—

"(1) GUIDELINES AND REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall issue revised guidelines and requirements for the evaluation of operational tests and other intelligent transportation system projects carried out under this subchapter.

"(B) OBJECTIVITY AND INDEPENDENCE.—The guidelines and requirements issued under subparagraph (A) shall include provisions to ensure the objectivity and independence of the evaluator so as to avoid any real or apparent conflict of interest or potential influence on the outcome by—

"(i) parties to any such test; or

"(ii) any other formal evaluation carried out under this subchapter.

"(C) FUNDING.—The guidelines and requirements issued under subparagraph (A) shall establish evaluation funding levels based on the size and scope of each test that ensure adequate evaluation of the results of the test or project.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—Any survey, questionnaire, or interview that the Secretary considers necessary to carry out the evaluation of any test or program assessment activity under this subchapter shall not be subject to chapter 35 of title 44.

"§525. National ITS Program Plan

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) UPDATES.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005, the Secretary, in consultation with interested stakeholders (including State transportation departments) shall develop a 5-year National ITS Program Plan.

"(2) SCOPE.—The National ITS Program Plan shall—

"(A) specify the goals, objectives, and milestones for the research and deployment of intelligent transportation systems in the contexts of—

"(i) major metropolitan areas;

"(ii) smaller metropolitan and rural areas; and

"(iii) commercial vehicle operations;

"(B) specify the manner in which specific programs and projects will achieve the goals, objectives, and milestones referred to in subparagraph (A), including consideration of a 5-year timeframe for the goals and objectives;

"(C) identify activities that provide for the dynamic development, testing, and necessary revision of standards and protocols to promote and ensure interoperability in the implementation of intelligent transportation system technologies, including actions taken to establish standards; and

"(D) establish a cooperative process with State and local governments for—

"(i) determining desired surface transportation system performance levels; and

"(ii) developing plans for accelerating the incorporation of specific intelligent transportation system capabilities into surface transportation systems.

"(b) REPORTING.—The National ITS Program Plan shall be transmitted and biennially updated as part of the surface transportation research and technology development strategic plan developed under section 508(c).

"§526. National ITS architecture and standards

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) DEVELOPMENT, IMPLEMENTATION, AND MAINTENANCE.—In accordance with section 12(d) of the National Technology Transfer and Advancement Act of 1995 (15 U.S.C. 272 note; 110 Stat. 783), the Secretary shall develop, implement, and maintain a national ITS architecture and supporting standards and protocols to promote the widespread use and evaluation of intelligent transportation system technology as a component of the surface transportation systems of the United States.

"(2) INTEROPERABILITY AND EFFICIENCY.—To the maximum extent practicable, the national ITS architecture shall promote interoperability among, and efficiency of, intelligent transportation system technologies implemented throughout the United States.

"(3) USE OF STANDARDS DEVELOPMENT ORGANIZATIONS.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall use the services of such standards development organizations as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(b) PROVISIONAL STANDARDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Secretary finds that the development or selection of an intelligent transportation system standard jeopardizes the timely achievement of the objectives identified in subsection (a), the Secretary may establish a provisional standard—

"(A) after consultation with affected parties; and

"(B) by using, to the maximum extent practicable, the work product of appropriate standards development organizations.

"(2) CRITICAL STANDARDS.—If a standard identified by the Secretary as critical has not been adopted and published by the appropriate standards development organization by the date of enactment of this subchapter, the Secretary shall establish a provisional standard—

"(A) after consultation with affected parties; and

"(B) by using, to the maximum extent practicable, the work product of appropriate standards development organizations.

"(3) PERIOD OF EFFECTIVENESS.—A provisional standard established under paragraph (1) or (2) shall—

"(A) be published in the Federal Register; and

"(B) remain in effect until such time as the appropriate standards development organization adopts and publishes a standard.

"(c) WAIVER OF REQUIREMENT TO ESTABLISH PROVISIONAL CRITICAL STANDARD.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may waive the requirement under subsection (b)(2) to establish a provisional standard if the Secretary determines that additional time would be productive in, or that establishment of a provisional standard would be counterproductive to, the timely achievement of the objectives identified in subsection (a).

"(2) NOTICE.—The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a notice that describes—

"(A) each standard for which a waiver of the provisional standard requirement is granted under paragraph (1);

"(B) the reasons for and effects of granting the waiver; and

"(C) an estimate as to the date on which the standard is expected to be adopted through a process consistent with section 12(d) of the National Technology Transfer and Advancement Act of 1995 (15 U.S.C. 272 note; 110 Stat. 783).

"(3) WITHDRAWAL OF WAIVER.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may withdraw a waiver granted under paragraph (1) at any time.

"(B) NOTICE.—On withdrawal of a waiver, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a notice that describes—

"(i) each standard for which the waiver has been withdrawn; and

"(ii) the reasons for withdrawing the waiver.

"(d) CONFORMITY WITH NATIONAL ITS ARCHITECTURE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), the Secretary shall ensure that intelligent transportation system projects carried out using funds made available from the Highway Trust Fund conform to the national ITS architecture, applicable standards or provisional standards, and protocols developed under subsection (a).

"(2) DISCRETION OF SECRETARY.—The Secretary may authorize exceptions to paragraph (1) for projects designed to achieve specific research objectives outlined in—

"(A) the National ITS Program Plan under section 525; or

"(B) the surface transportation research and technology development strategic plan developed under section 508(c).

"(3) EXCEPTIONS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to funds used for operation or maintenance of an intelligent transportation system in existence on the date of enactment of this subchapter.

"§527. Commercial vehicle information systems and networks deployment

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) COMMERCIAL VEHICLE INFORMATION SYSTEMS AND NETWORKS.—The term 'commercial vehicle information systems and networks' means the information systems and communications networks that provide the capability to—

"(A) improve the safety of commercial vehicle operations;

"(B) increase the efficiency of regulatory inspection processes to reduce administrative burdens by advancing technology to facilitate inspections and increase the effectiveness of enforcement efforts;

"(C) advance electronic processing of registration information, driver licensing information, fuel tax information, inspection and crash data, and other safety information;

“(D) enhance the safe passage of commercial vehicles across the United States and across international borders; and “(E) promote the communication of information among the States and encourage multistate cooperation and corridor development.

“(2) COMMERCIAL VEHICLE OPERATIONS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The term ‘commercial vehicle operations’ means motor carrier operations and motor vehicle regulatory activities associated with the commercial movement of goods (including hazardous materials) and passengers.

“(B) INCLUSIONS.—The term ‘commercial vehicle operations’, with respect to the public sector, includes—

“(i) the issuance of operating credentials;

“(ii) the administration of motor vehicle and fuel taxes; and

“(iii) the administration of roadside safety and border crossing inspection and regulatory compliance operations.

“(3) CORE DEPLOYMENT.—The term ‘core deployment’ means the deployment of systems in a State necessary to provide the State with—

“(A) safety information exchange to—

“(i) electronically collect and transmit commercial vehicle and driver inspection data at a majority of inspection sites;

“(ii) connect to the Safety and Fitness Electronic Records system for access to—

“(I) interstate carrier and commercial vehicle data;

“(II) summaries of past safety performance; and

“(III) commercial vehicle credentials information; and

“(iii) exchange carrier data and commercial vehicle safety and credentials information within the State and connect to Safety and Fitness Electronic Records system for access to interstate carrier and commercial vehicle data;

“(B) interstate credentials administration to—

“(i)(I) perform end-to-end (including carrier application) jurisdiction application processing, and credential issuance, of at least the International Registration Plan and International Fuel Tax Agreement credentials; and

“(II) extend the processing to other credentials, including intrastate, titling, oversize or overweight requirements, carrier registration, and hazardous materials;

“(ii) connect to the International Registration Plan and International Fuel Tax Agreement clearinghouses; and

“(iii)(I) have at least 10 percent of the transaction volume handled electronically; and

“(II) have the capability to add more carriers and to extend to branch offices where applicable; and

“(C) roadside electronic screening to electronically screen transponder-equipped commercial vehicles at a minimum of 1 fixed or mobile inspection site and to replicate the screening at other sites.

“(4) EXPANDED DEPLOYMENT.—The term ‘expanded deployment’ means the deployment of systems in a State that—

“(A) exceed the requirements of a core deployment of commercial vehicle information systems and networks;

“(B) improve safety and the productivity of commercial vehicle operations; and

“(C) enhance transportation security.

“(b) PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall carry out a commercial vehicle information systems and networks program to—

“(1) improve the safety and productivity of commercial vehicles and drivers; and

“(2) reduce costs associated with commercial vehicle operations and Federal and State commercial vehicle regulatory requirements.

“(c) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of the program to advance the technological capability and promote the deployment of intelligent transportation system applications for commercial vehicle operations, including commercial vehicle, commercial driver, and carrier-specific information systems and networks.

“(d) CORE DEPLOYMENT GRANTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make grants to eligible States for the core deployment of commercial vehicle information systems and networks.

“(2) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible for a core deployment grant under this subsection, a State shall—

“(A) have a commercial vehicle information systems and networks program plan and a top level system design approved by the Secretary;

“(B) certify to the Secretary that the commercial vehicle information systems and networks deployment activities of the State (including hardware procurement, software and system development, and infrastructure modifications)—

“(i) are consistent with the national intelligent transportation systems and commercial vehicle information systems and networks architectures and available standards; and

“(ii) promote interoperability and efficiency, to the maximum extent practicable; and

“(C) agree to execute interoperability tests developed by the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration to verify that the systems of the State conform with the national intelligent transportation systems architecture, applicable standards, and protocols for commercial vehicle information systems and networks.

“(3) AMOUNT OF GRANTS.—The maximum aggregate amount a State may receive under this subsection for the core deployment of commercial vehicle information systems and networks may not exceed $2,500,000, including funds received under section 2001(a) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 for the core deployment of commercial vehicle information systems and networks.

“(4) USE OF FUNDS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), funds from a grant under this subsection may only be used for the core deployment of commercial vehicle information systems and networks.

“(B) REMAINING FUNDS.—An eligible State that has completed the core deployment of commercial vehicle information systems and networks, or completed the deployment before core deployment grant funds are expended, may use the remaining core deployment grant funds for the expanded deployment of commercial vehicle information systems and networks in the State.

“(e) EXPANDED DEPLOYMENT GRANTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—For each fiscal year, from the funds remaining after the Secretary has made core deployment grants under subsection (d), the Secretary may make grants to each eligible State, on request, for the expanded deployment of commercial vehicle information systems and networks.

“(2) ELIGIBILITY.—Each State that has completed the core deployment of commercial vehicle information systems and networks shall be eligible for an expanded deployment grant.

“(3) AMOUNT OF GRANTS.—Each fiscal year, the Secretary may distribute funds available for expanded deployment grants equally among the eligible States in an amount that does not exceed $1,000,000 for each State.

“(4) USE OF FUNDS.—A State may use funds from a grant under this subsection only for the expanded deployment of commercial vehicle information systems and networks.

“(f) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of a project payable from funds made available to carry out this section shall be the share applicable under section 120(b), as adjusted under subsection (d) of that section.

“(g) FUNDING.—Funds authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section shall be available for obligation in the same manner and to the same extent as if the funds were apportioned under chapter 1, except that the funds shall remain available until expended.

“§ 528. Research and development

“(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall carry out a comprehensive program of intelligent transportation system research, development, and operational tests of intelligent vehicles and intelligent infrastructure systems, and other similar activities that are necessary to carry out this subchapter.

“(b) PRIORITY AREAS.—Under the program, the Secretary shall give priority to funding projects that—

“(1) assist in the development of an interconnected national intelligent transportation system network that—

“(A) improves the reliability of the surface transportation system;

“(B) supports national security;

“(C) reduces, by at least 20 percent, the cost of manufacturing, deploying, and operating intelligent transportation systems network components;

“(D) could assist in deployment of the Armed Forces in response to a crisis; and

“(E) improves response to, and evacuation of the public during, an emergency situation;

“(2) address traffic management, incident management, transit management, toll collection traveler information, or highway operations systems with goals of—

“(A) reducing metropolitan congestion by 5 percent by 2010;

“(B) ensuring that a national, interoperable 511 system, along with a national traffic information system that includes a user-friendly, comprehensive website, is fully implemented for use by travelers throughout the United States by September 30, 2010; and

“(C)(i) improving incident management response, particularly in rural areas, so that rural emergency response times are reduced by an average of 10 minutes; and

“(ii) subject to subsection (d), improving communication between emergency care providers and trauma centers;

“(3) address traffic management, incident management, transit management, toll collection, traveler information, or highway operations systems;

“(4) conduct operational tests of the integration of at least 3 crash-avoidance technologies in passenger vehicles;

“(5) incorporate human factors research, including the science of the driving process;

“(6) facilitate the integration of intelligent infrastructure, vehicle, and control technologies;

“(7) incorporate research on the impact of environmental, weather, and natural conditions on intelligent transportation systems, including the effects of cold climates;

“(8) as determined by the Secretary, will improve the overall safety performance of vehicles and roadways, including the use of real-time setting of speed limits through the use of speed management technology;

"(9) examine—

"(A) the application to intelligent transportation systems of appropriately modified existing technologies from other industries; and

"(B) the development of new, more robust intelligent transportation systems technologies and instrumentation;

"(10) develop and test communication technologies that—

"(A) are based on an assessment of the needs of officers participating in a motor carrier safety program funded under section 31104 of title 49;

"(B) take into account the effectiveness and adequacy of available technology;

"(C) address systems integration, connectivity, and interoperability challenges; and

"(D) provide the means for officers participating in a motor carrier safety program funded under section 31104 of title 49 to directly assess, without an intermediary, current and accurate safety and regulatory information on motor carriers, commercial motor vehicles and drivers at roadside or mobile inspection facilities;

"(11) enhance intermodal use of intelligent transportation systems for diverse groups, including for emergency and health-related services;

"(12) improve sensing and wireless communications that provide real-time information regarding congestion and incidents;

"(13) develop and test high-accuracy, lane-level, real-time accessible digital map architectures that can be used by intelligent vehicles and intelligent infrastructure elements to facilitate safety and crash avoidance (including establishment of national standards for an open-architecture digital map of all public roads that is compatible with electronic 9-1-1 services);

"(14) encourage the dual-use of intelligent transportation system technologies (such as wireless communications) for—

"(A) emergency services;

"(B) road pricing; and

"(C) local economic development; and

"(15) advance the use of intelligent transportation systems to facilitate high-performance transportation systems, such as through—

"(A) congestion-pricing;

"(B) real-time facility management;

"(C) rapid-emergency response; and

"(D) just-in-time transit.

"(c) OPERATIONAL TESTS.—Operational tests conducted under this section shall be designed for—

"(1) the collection of data to permit objective evaluation of the results of the tests;

"(2) the derivation of cost-benefit information that is useful to others contemplating deployment of similar systems; and

"(3) the development and implementation of standards.

"(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the costs of operational tests under subsection (a) shall not exceed 80 percent.

"§ 529. Use of funds

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For each fiscal year, not more than $5,000,000 of the funds made available to carry out this subchapter shall be used for intelligent transportation system outreach, public relations, displays, tours, and brochures.

"(b) APPLICABILITY.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to intelligent transportation system training, scholarships, or the publication or distribution of research findings, technical guidance, or similar documents.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Title V of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century is amended by striking subtitle C (23 U.S.C. 502 note; 112 Stat. 452).

TITLE III—RECREATIONAL BOATING SAFETY PROGRAMS

SEC. 3001. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Sport Fishing and Recreational Boating Safety Act".

SEC. 3002. AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL AID IN FISH RESTORATION ACT.

Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this subtitle an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Act entitled "An Act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in fish restoration and management projects, and for other purposes," approved August 9, 1950 (64 Stat. 430; 16 U.S.C. 777 et seq.).

SEC. 3003. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 3 (16 U.S.C. 777b) is amended—

(1) by striking "the succeeding fiscal year." in the third sentence and inserting "succeeding fiscal years."; and

(2) by striking "in carrying on the research program of the Fish and Wildlife Service in respect to fish of material value for sport and recreation." and inserting "to supplement the 57 percent of the balance of each annual appropriation to be apportioned among the States, as provided for in section 4(c).".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 3 of the Dingell-Johnson Sport Fish Restoration Act (16 U.S.C. 777b) is amended in the first sentence—

(A) by striking "Sport Fish Restoration Account" and inserting "Sport Fish Restoration Trust Fund"; and

(B) by striking "that Account" and inserting "that Trust Fund, except as provided in section 9504(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986".

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by paragraph (1) take effect on October 1, 2004.

SEC. 3004. DIVISION OF ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 4 (16 U.S.C. 777c) is amended—

(1) by striking subsections (a) through (c) and redesignating subsections (d) through (g) as subsections (b) through (e), respectively;

(2) by inserting before subsection (b) (as redesignated by paragraph (1)), the following:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For fiscal years 2004 through 2009, the balance of each annual appropriation made in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of this title remaining after the distributions are made for administrative expenses and other purposes under section 4(b) and for multistate conservation grants under section 14 shall be distributed as follows:

"(1) COASTAL WETLANDS.—18.5 percent to the Secretary of the Interior for distribution as provided in the Coastal Wetlands Planning, Protection, and Restoration Act (16 U.S.C. 3951 et seq.).

"(2) BOATING SAFETY.—18.5 percent to the Secretary of Homeland Security for State recreational boating safety programs under section 13106 of title 46, United States Code.

"(3) CLEAN VESSEL ACT.—2 percent to the Secretary of the Interior for qualified projects under section 5604(c) of the Clean Vessel Act of 1992 (33 U.S.C. 1322 note).

"(4) BOATING INFRASTRUCTURE.—2 percent to the Secretary of the Interior for obligation for qualified projects under section 7404(d) of the Sportfishing and Boating Safety Act of 1998 (16 U.S.C. 777g–1(d)).

"(5) NATIONAL OUTREACH AND COMMUNICATIONS.—2 percent to the Secretary of the Interior for the National Outreach and Communications Program under section 8(d) of this title. Such amounts shall remain available for 3 fiscal years, after which any portion thereof that is unobligated by the Secretary for that program may be expended by the Secretary under subsection (c).";

(3) in subsection (b)(1) (as redesignated by paragraph (1)), by striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following:

"(A) SET-ASIDE.—For fiscal year 2006 and each subsequent fiscal year, before making a distribution under subsection (a), the Secretary of the Interior may use not more than the available amount specified in subparagraph (B) for the fiscal year for expenses of administration incurred in the implementation of this chapter, in accordance with this section and section 9.";

(4) in subsection (c) (as redesignated by paragraph (1)), by striking the subsection heading and all that follows through the colon in the first sentence and inserting the following:

"(c) APPORTIONMENT AMONG STATES.—For fiscal year 2006 and each subsequent fiscal year, after the distribution, transfer, use, and deduction under subsection (b), and after deducting amounts for grants under section 14, the Secretary of the Interior shall apportion 57 percent of the balance of each annual appropriation among the several States in the following manner:";

(5) by striking "per centum" each place it appears in subsection (c) (as redesignated by paragraph (1)) and inserting "percent";

(6) in paragraph (1) of subsection (e) (as redesignated by paragraph (1)), by striking "subsections (a), (b)(3)(A), (b)(3)(B), and (c)" and inserting "paragraphs (1), (3), (4), and (5) of subsection (a)"; and

(7) by adding at the end the following:

"(f) TRANSFER OF CERTAIN FUNDS.—Amounts available under paragraphs (3) and (4) of subsection (a) that are unobligated by the Secretary after 3 fiscal years shall be transferred to the Secretary of Homeland Security and shall be expended for State recreational boating safety programs under section 13106(a) of title 46, United States Code.".

SEC. 3005. MAINTENANCE OF PROJECTS.

Section 8 (16 U.S.C. 777g) is amended—

(1) by striking "in carrying out the research program of the Fish and Wildlife Service in respect to fish of material value for sport or recreation." in subsection (b)(2) and inserting "to supplement the 57 percent of the balance of each annual appropriation to be apportioned among the States under section 4(c)."; and

(2) in subsection (d)(3), by striking "subsection (c) or (d) of section 4" and inserting "section 4(a)(5) or section 4(b)".

SEC. 3006. BOATING INFRASTRUCTURE.

Section 7404(d)(1) of the Sportfishing and Boating Safety Act of 1998 (16 U.S.C. 777g-1(d)(1)) is amended by striking "section 4(b)(3)(B)" and inserting "section 4(a)(4)".

SEC. 3007. REQUIREMENTS AND RESTRICTIONS CONCERNING USE OF AMOUNTS FOR EXPENSES FOR ADMINISTRATION.

Section 9 (16 U.S.C. 777h) is amended—

(1) by striking "section 4(d)(1)" in subsection (a) and inserting "section 4(b)"; and

(2) by striking "section 4(d)(1)" in subsection (b)(1) and inserting "section 4(b)".

SEC. 3008. PAYMENTS OF FUNDS TO AND COOPERATION WITH PUERTO RICO, THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, GUAM, AMERICAN SAMOA, THE COMMONWEALTH OF THE NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS, AND THE VIRGIN ISLANDS.

Section 12 (16 U.S.C. 777k) is amended by striking "in carrying on the research program of the Fish and Wildlife Service in respect to fish of material value for sport or recreation." and inserting "to supplement the 57 percent of the balance of each annual appropriation to be apportioned among the States under section 4(b) of this title.".

SEC. 3009. MULTISTATE CONSERVATION GRANT PROGRAM.

Section 14 (16 U.S.C. 777m) is amended—

(1) by striking so much of subsection (a) as precedes paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) AMOUNT FOR GRANTS.—For fiscal year 2004 and each subsequent fiscal year, not more than $3,000,000 of each annual appropriation made in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of this title shall be distributed to the Secretary of the Interior for making multistate conservation project grants in accordance with this section.";

(2) by striking "section 4(e)" each place it appears in subsection (a)(2)(B) and inserting "section 4(c)"; and

(3) by striking "Of the balance of each annual appropriation made under section 3 remaining after the distribution and use under subsections (a), (b), and (c) of section 4 for each fiscal year and after deducting amounts used for grants under subsection (a)—" in subsection (e) and inserting "Of amounts made available under section 4(b) for each fiscal year—".

TITLE IV—SOLID WASTE DISPOSAL

SEC. 4001. INCREASED USE OF RECOVERED MINERAL COMPONENT IN FEDERALLY FUNDED PROJECTS INVOLVING PROCUREMENT OF CEMENT OR CONCRETE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subtitle F of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. 6961 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 6005. INCREASED USE OF RECOVERED MINERAL COMPONENT IN FEDERALLY FUNDED PROJECTS INVOLVING PROCUREMENT OF CEMENT OR CONCRETE.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) AGENCY HEAD.—The term 'agency head' means—

"(A) the Secretary of Transportation; and

"(B) the head of each other Federal agency that on a regular basis procures, or provides Federal funds to pay or assist in paying the cost of procuring, material for cement or concrete projects.

"(2) CEMENT OR CONCRETE PROJECT.—The term 'cement or concrete project' means a project for the construction or maintenance of a highway or other transportation facility or a Federal, State, or local government building or other public facility that—

"(A) involves the procurement of cement or concrete; and

"(B) is carried out in whole or in part using Federal funds.

"(3) RECOVERED MINERAL COMPONENT.—The term 'recovered mineral component' means—

"(A) ground granulated blast furnace slag;

"(B) coal combustion fly ash; and

"(C) any other waste material or byproduct recovered or diverted from solid waste that the Administrator, in consultation with an agency head, determines should be treated as recovered mineral component under this section for use in cement or concrete projects paid for, in whole or in part, by the agency head.

"(b) IMPLEMENTATION OF REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this section, the Administrator and each agency head shall take such actions as are necessary to implement fully all procurement requirements and incentives in effect as of the date of enactment of this section (including guidelines under section 6002) that provide for the use of cement and concrete incorporating recovered mineral component in cement or concrete projects.

"(2) PRIORITY.—In carrying out paragraph (1) an agency head shall give priority to achieving greater use of recovered mineral component in cement or concrete projects for which recovered mineral components historically have not been used or have been used only minimally.

"(3) CONFORMANCE.—The Administrator and each agency head shall carry out this subsection in accordance with section 6002.

"(c) FULL IMPLEMENTATION STUDY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator, in cooperation with the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Energy, shall conduct a study to determine the extent to which current procurement requirements, when fully implemented in accordance with subsection (b), may realize energy savings and environmental benefits attainable with substitution of recovered mineral component in cement used in cement or concrete projects.

"(2) MATTERS TO BE ADDRESSED.—The study shall—

"(A) quantify the extent to which recovered mineral components are being substituted for Portland cement, particularly as a result of current procurement requirements, and the energy savings and environmental benefits associated with that substitution;

"(B) identify all barriers in procurement requirements to greater realization of energy savings and environmental benefits, including barriers resulting from exceptions from current law; and

"(C)(i) identify potential mechanisms to achieve greater substitution of recovered mineral component in types of cement or concrete projects for which recovered mineral components historically have not been used or have been used only minimally;

"(ii) evaluate the feasibility of establishing guidelines or standards for optimized substitution rates of recovered mineral component in those cement or concrete projects; and

"(iii) identify any potential environmental or economic effects that may result from greater substitution of recovered mineral component in those cement or concrete projects.

"(3) REPORT.—Not later than 30 months after the date of enactment of this section, the Administrator shall submit to Congress a report on the study.

"(d) ADDITIONAL PROCUREMENT REQUIREMENTS.—Unless the study conducted under subsection (c) identifies any effects or other problems described in subsection (c)(2)(C)(iii) that warrant further review or delay, the Administrator and each agency head shall, not later than 1 year after the release of the report in accordance with subsection (c)(3), take additional actions authorized under this Act to establish procurement requirements and incentives that provide for the use of cement and concrete with increased substitution of recovered mineral component in the construction and maintenance of cement or concrete projects, so as to—

"(1) realize more fully the energy savings and environmental benefits associated with increased substitution; and

"(2) eliminate barriers identified under subsection (c).

"(e) EFFECT OF SECTION.—Nothing in this section affects the requirements of section 6002 (including the guidelines and specifications for implementing those requirements).".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS AMENDMENT.—The table of contents in section 1001 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. prec. 6901) is amended by adding after the item relating to section 6004 the following:

"Sec. 6005. Increased use of recovered mineral component in federally funded projects involving procurement of cement or concrete.".

SEC. 4002. USE OF GRANULAR MINE TAILINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subtitle F of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. 6961 et seq.) (as amended by section 4001(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 6006. USE OF GRANULAR MINE TAILINGS.

"(a) MINE TAILINGS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Administrator, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation and heads of other Federal agencies, shall establish criteria (including an evaluation of whether to establish a numerical standard for concentration of lead and other hazardous substances) for the safe and environmentally protective use of granular mine tailings from the Tar Creek, Oklahoma Mining District, known as 'chat', for—

"(A) cement or concrete projects; and

"(B) transportation construction projects (including transportation construction projects involving the use of asphalt) that are carried out, in whole or in part, using Federal funds.

"(2) REQUIREMENTS.—In establishing criteria under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall consider—

"(A) the current and previous uses of granular mine tailings as an aggregate for asphalt; and

"(B) any environmental and public health risks and benefits derived from the removal, transportation, and use in transportation projects of granular mine tailings.

"(3) PUBLIC PARTICIPATION.—In establishing the criteria under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall solicit and consider comments from the public.

"(4) APPLICABILITY OF CRITERIA.—On the establishment of the criteria under paragraph (1), any use of the granular mine tailings described in paragraph (1) in a transportation project that is carried out, in whole or in part, using Federal funds, shall meet the criteria established under paragraph (1).

"(b) EFFECT OF SECTIONS.—Nothing in this section or section 6005 affects any requirement of any law (including a regulation) in effect on the date of enactment of this section.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents in section 1001 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. prec. 6901) (as amended by section 4001(b)) is amended by adding after the item relating to section 6005 the following:

"Sec. 6006. Use of granular mine tailings.".

SA 568. Mr. BAYH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3, Reserved; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place insert the following:

(6) by amending paragraph (18), as redesignated, to read as follows:

"(18) URBANIZED AREA.—The term 'urbanized area' means an area encompassing a population of not less than 50,000 people that has been defined and designated in the most recent decennial census as an 'urbanized area' by the Secretary of Commerce.".

SEC. 6005. METROPOLITAN TRANSPORTATION PLANNING.

Section 5303 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 5303. Metropolitan transportation planning

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section and in section 5304, the following definitions shall apply:

"(1) CONSULTATION.—A 'consultation' occurs when 1 party—

"(A) confers with another identified party in accordance with an established process;

"(B) prior to taking action, considers the views of the other identified party; and

"(C) periodically informs that party about action taken.

"(2) METROPOLITAN PLANNING AREA.—The term 'metropolitan planning area' means the geographic area determined by agreement between the metropolitan planning organization and the Governor under subsection (d).

"(3) METROPOLITAN PLANNING ORGANIZATION.—The term 'metropolitan planning organization' means the Policy Board of the organization designated under subsection (c).

"(4) NONMETROPOLITAN AREA.—The term 'nonmetropolitan area' means any geographic area outside all designated metropolitan planning areas.

"(5) NONMETROPOLITAN LOCAL OFFICIAL.—The term 'nonmetropolitan local official' means any elected or appointed official of general purpose local government located in a nonmetropolitan area who is responsible for transportation services for such local government.

"(b) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) DEVELOPMENT OF PLANS AND PROGRAMS.—To accomplish the objectives described in section 5301(a), each metropolitan planning organization, in cooperation with the State and public transportation operators, shall develop transportation plans and programs for metropolitan planning areas of the State in which it is located.

"(2) CONTENTS.—The plans and programs developed under paragraph (1) for each metropolitan planning area shall provide for the development and integrated management and operation of transportation systems and facilities (including pedestrian walkways and bicycle transportation facilities) that will function as an intermodal transportation system for the metropolitan planning area and as an integral part of an intermodal transportation system for the State and the United States.

"(3) PROCESS OF DEVELOPMENT.—The process for developing the plans and programs shall provide for consideration of all modes of transportation and shall be continuing, cooperative, and comprehensive to the degree appropriate, based on the complexity of the transportation problems to be addressed.

"(4) PLANNING AND PROJECT DEVELOPMENT.—The metropolitan planning organization, the State Department of Transportation, and the appropriate public transportation provider shall agree upon the approaches that will be used to evaluate alternatives and identify transportation improvements that address the most complex problems and pressing transportation needs in the metropolitan area.

"(c) DESIGNATION OF METROPOLITAN PLANNING ORGANIZATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—To carry out the transportation planning process under this section, a metropolitan planning organization shall be designated for each urbanized area—

"(A) by agreement between the Governor and units of general purpose local government that combined represent not less than 75 percent of the affected population (including the incorporated city or cities named by the Bureau of the Census in designating the urbanized area); or

"(B) in accordance with procedures established by applicable State or local law.

"(2) STRUCTURE.—Each metropolitan planning organization designated under paragraph (1) that serves an area identified as a transportation management area shall consist of—

"(A) local elected officials;

"(B) officials of public agencies that administer or operate major modes of transportation in the metropolitan area; and

"(C) appropriate State officials.

"(3) LIMITATION ON STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to interfere with the authority, under any State law in effect on December 18, 1991, of a public agency with multimodal transportation responsibilities—

"(A) to develop plans and programs for adoption by a metropolitan planning organization; and

"(B) to develop long-range capital plans, coordinate transit services and projects, and carry out other activities pursuant to State law.

"(4) CONTINUING DESIGNATION.—The designation of a metropolitan planning organization under this subsection or any other provision of law shall remain in effect until the metropolitan planning organization is redesignated under paragraph (5).

"(5) REDESIGNATION PROCEDURES.—A metropolitan planning organization may be redesignated by agreement between the Governor and units of general purpose local government that combined represent not less than 75 percent of the existing planning area population (including the incorporated city or cities named by the Bureau of the Census in designating the urbanized area) as appropriate to carry out this section.

“(6) DESIGNATION OF MORE THAN 1 METROPOLITAN PLANNING ORGANIZATION.—More than 1 metropolitan planning organization may be designated within an existing metropolitan planning area only if the Governor and the existing metropolitan planning organization determine that the size and complexity of the existing metropolitan planning area make designation of more than 1 metropolitan planning organization for the area appropriate.

“(d) METROPOLITAN PLANNING AREA BOUNDARIES.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—For the purposes of this section, the boundaries of a metropolitan planning area shall be determined by agreement between the metropolitan planning organization and the Governor.

“(2) INCLUDED AREA.—Each metropolitan planning area—

“(A) shall encompass at least the existing urbanized area and the contiguous area expected to become urbanized within a 20-year forecast period for the transportation plan; and

“(B) may encompass the entire metropolitan statistical area or consolidated metropolitan statistical area, as defined by the Office of Management and Budget.

“(3) IDENTIFICATION OF NEW URBANIZED AREAS WITHIN EXISTING PLANNING AREA BOUNDARIES.—The designation by the Bureau of the Census of new urbanized areas within an existing metropolitan planning area shall not require the redesignation of the existing metropolitan planning organization.

“(4) EXISTING METROPOLITAN PLANNING AREAS IN NONATTAINMENT.—Notwithstanding paragraph (2), in the case of an urbanized area designated as a nonattainment area for ozone or carbon monoxide under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.), the boundaries of the metropolitan planning area in existence as of the date of enactment of the Federal Public Transportation Act of 2005 shall be retained, except that the boundaries may be adjusted by agreement of the Governor and affected metropolitan planning organizations in accordance with paragraph (5).

“(5) NEW METROPOLITAN PLANNING AREAS IN NONATTAINMENT.—If an urbanized area is designated after the date of enactment of this paragraph in a nonattainment area for ozone or carbon monoxide, the boundaries of the metropolitan planning area—

“(A) shall be established in accordance with subsection (c)(1);

“(B) shall encompass the areas described in paragraph (2)(A);

“(C) may encompass the areas described in paragraph (2)(B); and “(D) may address any nonattainment identified under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.) for ozone or carbon monoxide.

“(e) COORDINATION IN MULTISTATE AREAS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall encourage each Governor with responsibility for a portion of a multistate metropolitan area and the appropriate metropolitan planning organizations to provide coordinated transportation planning for the entire metropolitan area.

“(2) INTERSTATE COMPACTS.—States are authorized—

“(A) to enter into agreements or compacts with other States, which agreements or compacts are not in conflict with any law of the United States, for cooperative efforts and mutual assistance in support of activities authorized under this section as the activities pertain to interstate areas and localities within the States; and

“(B) to establish such agencies, joint or otherwise, as the States may determine desirable for making the agreements and compacts effective.

“(3) LAKE TAHOE REGION.—

“(A) DEFINITION.—In this paragraph, the term ‘Lake Tahoe region’ has the meaning given the term ‘region’ in subdivision (a) of article II of the Tahoe Regional Planning Compact, as set forth in the first section of Public Law 96–551 (94 Stat. 3234).

“(B) TRANSPORTATION PLANNING PROCESS.—The Secretary shall—

“(i) establish with the Federal land management agencies that have jurisdiction over land in the Lake Tahoe region a transportation planning process for the region; and “(ii) coordinate the transportation planning process with the planning process required of State and local governments under this section and section 5304.

“(C) INTERSTATE COMPACT.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Subject to clause (ii) and notwithstanding subsection (c), to carry out the transportation planning process required by this section, California and Nevada may designate a metropolitan planning organization for the Lake Tahoe region, by agreement between the Governor of the State of California, the Governor of the State of Nevada, and units of general purpose local government that combined represent not less than 75 percent of the affected population (including the incorporated city or cities named by the Bureau of the Census in designating the urbanized area), or in accordance with procedures established by applicable State or local law.

“(ii) INVOLVEMENT OF FEDERAL LAND MANAGEMENT AGENCIES.—

“(I) REPRESENTATION.—The policy board of a metropolitan planning organization designated under clause (i) shall include a representative of each Federal land management agency that has jurisdiction over land in the Lake Tahoe region.

“(II) FUNDING.—In addition to funds made available to the metropolitan planning organization under other provisions of title 23 and this chapter, not more than 1 percent of the funds allocated under section 202 of title 23 may be used to carry out the transportation planning process for the Lake Tahoe region under this subparagraph.

“(D) ACTIVITIES.—Highway projects included in transportation plans developed under this paragraph—

“(i) shall be selected for funding in a manner that facilitates the participation of the Federal land management agencies that have jurisdiction over land in the Lake Tahoe region; and “(ii) may, in accordance with chapter 2 of title 23, be funded using funds allocated under section 202 of title 23.

“(f) COORDINATION OF METROPOLITAN PLANNING ORGANIZATIONS.—

“(1) NONATTAINMENT AREAS.—If more than 1 metropolitan planning organization has authority within a metropolitan area or an area which is designated as a nonattainment area for ozone or carbon monoxide under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.), each metropolitan planning organization shall consult with the other metropolitan planning organizations designated for such area and the State in the coordination of plans required by this section.

“(2) TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENTS LOCATED IN MULTIPLE METROPOLITAN PLANNING AREAS.—If a transportation improvement funded from the highway trust fund is located within the boundaries of more than 1 metropolitan planning area, the metropolitan planning organizations shall coordinate plans regarding the transportation improvement.

“(3) INTERREGIONAL AND INTERSTATE PROJECT IMPACTS.—Planning for National Highway System, commuter rail projects, or other projects with substantial impacts outside a single metropolitan planning area or State shall be coordinated directly with the affected, contiguous, metropolitan planning organizations and States.

“(4) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PLANNING PROCESSES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall encourage each metropolitan planning organization to coordinate its planning process, to the maximum extent practicable, with those officials responsible for other types of planning activities that are affected by transportation, including State and local land use planning, economic development, environmental protection, airport operations, housing, and freight.

“(B) OTHER CONSIDERATIONS.—The metropolitan planning process shall develop transportation plans with due consideration of, and in coordination with, other related planning activities within the metropolitan area. This should include the design and delivery of transportation services within the metropolitan area that are provided by—

“(i) recipients of assistance under this chapter;

“(ii) governmental agencies and nonprofit organizations (including representatives of the agencies and organizations) that receive Federal assistance from a source other than the Department of Transportation to provide nonemergency transportation services; and “(iii) recipients of assistance under section 204 of title 23.

“(g) SCOPE OF PLANNING PROCESS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The goals and objectives developed through the metropolitan planning process for a metropolitan planning area under this section shall address, in relation to the performance of the metropolitan area transportation systems—

“(A) supporting the economic vitality of the metropolitan area, especially by enabling global competitiveness, productivity, and efficiency, including through services provided by public and private operators;

“(B) increasing the safety of the transportation system for motorized and nonmotorized users;

“(C) increasing the security of the transportation system for motorized and nonmotorized users;

“(D) increasing the accessibility and mobility of people and for freight, including through services provided by public and private operators;

“(E) protecting and enhancing the environment (including the protection of habitat, water quality, and agricultural and forest land, while minimizing invasive species), promoting energy conservation, and promoting consistency between transportation improvements and State and local land use planning and economic development patterns (including minimizing adverse health effects from mobile source air pollution and promoting the linkage of the transportation and development goals of the metropolitan area);

“(F) enhancing the integration and connectivity of the transportation system, across and between modes, for people and freight, including through services provided by public and private operators;

“(G) promoting efficient system management and operation; and

“(H) emphasizing the preservation and efficient use of the existing transportation system, including services provided by public and private operators.

“(2) SELECTION OF FACTORS.—After soliciting and considering any relevant public comments, the metropolitan planning organization shall determine which of the factors described in paragraph (1) are most appropriate to consider.

“(3) FAILURE TO CONSIDER FACTORS.—The failure to consider any factor specified in paragraph (1) shall not be reviewable by any court under title 23, this title, subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5, or chapter 7 of title 5 in any matter affecting a transportation plan, a transportation improvement plan, a project or strategy, or the certification of a planning process.

“(h) DEVELOPMENT OF TRANSPORTATION PLAN.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—

“(A) REQUIREMENT.—Each metropolitan planning organization shall develop a transportation plan for its metropolitan planning area in accordance with this subsection, and update such plan—

“(i) not less frequently than once every 4 years in areas designated as nonattainment, as defined in section 107(d) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7407(d)), and in areas that were nonattainment that have been redesignated as attainment, in accordance with paragraph (3) of such section, with a maintenance plan under section 175A of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7505a); or “(ii) not less frequently than once every 5 years in areas designated as attainment, as defined in section 107(d) of the Clean Air Act.

“(B) COORDINATION FACTORS.—In developing the transportation plan under this section, each metropolitan planning organization shall consider the factors described in subsection (f) over a 20-year forecast period.

“(C) FINANCIAL ESTIMATES.—For the purpose of developing the transportation plan, the metropolitan planning organization, transit operator, and State shall cooperatively develop estimates of funds that will be available to support plan implementation.

“(2) MITIGATION ACTIVITIES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—A transportation plan under this subsection shall include a discussion of—

“(i) types of potential habitat, hydrological, and environmental mitigation activities that may assist in compensating for loss of habitat, wetland, and other environmental functions; and

“(ii) potential areas to carry out these activities, including a discussion of areas that may have the greatest potential to restore and maintain the habitat types and hydrological or environmental functions affected by the plan.

“(B) CONSULTATION.—The discussion described in subparagraph (A) shall be developed in consultation with Federal and State tribal wildlife, land management, and regulatory agencies.

“(3) CONTENTS.— A transportation plan under this subsection shall be in a form that the Secretary determines to be appropriate and shall contain—

“(A) an identification of transportation facilities, including major roadways, transit, multimodal and intermodal facilities, intermodal connectors, and other relevant facilities identified by the metropolitan planning organization, which should function as an integrated metropolitan transportation system, emphasizing those facilities that serve important national and regional transportation functions;

“(B) a financial plan that—

“(i) demonstrates how the adopted transportation plan can be implemented;

“(ii) indicates resources from public and private sources that are reasonably expected to be made available to carry out the plan;

“(iii) recommends any additional financing strategies for needed projects and programs; and

“(iv) may include, for illustrative purposes, additional projects that would be included in the adopted transportation plan if approved by the Secretary and reasonable additional resources beyond those identified in the financial plan were available;

“(C) operational and management strategies to improve the performance of existing transportation facilities to relieve vehicular congestion and maximize the safety and mobility of people and goods;

“(D) capital investment and other strategies to preserve the existing metropolitan transportation infrastructure and provide for multimodal capacity increases based on regional priorities and needs; and “(E) proposed transportation and transit enhancement activities.

“(4) CONSULTATION.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—In each metropolitan area, the metropolitan planning organization shall consult, as appropriate, with State and local agencies responsible for land use management, natural resources, environmental protection, conservation, and historic preservation concerning the development of a long-range transportation plan.

“(B) ISSUES.—The consultation shall involve—

“(i) comparison of transportation plans with State conservation plans or with maps, if available;

“(ii) comparison of transportation plans to inventories of natural or historic resources, if available; or

“(iii) consideration of areas where wildlife crossing structures may be needed to ensure connectivity between wildlife habitat linkage areas.

“(5) COORDINATION WITH CLEAN AIR ACT AGENCIES.—In metropolitan areas in nonattainment for ozone or carbon monoxide under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.), the metropolitan planning organization shall coordinate the development of a transportation plan with the process for development of the transportation control measures of the State implementation plan required by the Clean Air Act.

“(6) APPROVAL OF THE TRANSPORTATION PLAN.—Each transportation plan prepared by a metropolitan planning organization shall be—

“(A) approved by the metropolitan planning organization; and

“(B) submitted to the Governor for information purposes at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may reasonably require.

“(i) PARTICIPATION BY INTERESTED PARTIES.—

“(1) DEVELOPMENT OF PARTICIPATION PLAN.—Not less frequently than every 4 years, each metropolitan planning organization shall develop and adopt a plan for participation in the process for developing the metropolitan transportation plan and programs by—

“(A) citizens;

“(B) affected public agencies;

“(C) representatives of public transportation employees;

“(D) freight shippers;

“(E) providers of freight transportation services;

“(F) private providers of transportation;

“(G) representatives of users of public transit;

“(H) representatives of users of pedestrian walkways and bicycle transportation facilities; and

“(I) other interested parties.

“(2) CONTENTS OF PARTICIPATION PLAN.—The participation plan—

“(A) shall be developed in a manner the Secretary determines to be appropriate;

“(B) shall be developed in consultation with all interested parties; and

“(C) shall provide that all interested parties have reasonable opportunities to comment on—

“(i) the process for developing the transportation plan; and

“(ii) the contents of the transportation plan.

“(3) METHODS.—The participation plan shall provide that the metropolitan planning organization shall, to the maximum extent practicable—

“(A) hold any public meetings at convenient and accessible locations and times;

“(B) employ visualization techniques to describe plans; and

“(C) make public information available in electronically accessible format and means, such as the World Wide Web.

“(4) CERTIFICATION.—Before the metropolitan planning organizations approve a transportation plan or program, each metropolitan planning organization shall certify that it has complied with the requirements of the participation plan it has adopted.

“(j) TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.—

“(1) DEVELOPMENT AND UPDATE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—In cooperation with the State and affected operators of public transportation, a metropolitan planning organization designated for a metropolitan planning area shall develop a transportation improvement program for the area.

“(B) PARTICIPATION.—In developing the transportation improvement program, the metropolitan planning organization, in cooperation with the Governor and any affected operator of public transportation, shall provide an opportunity for participation by interested parties in the development of the program, in accordance with subsection (i).

“(C) UPDATES.—The transportation improvement program shall be updated not less than once every 4 years and shall be approved by the metropolitan planning organization and the Governor.

“(D) FUNDING ESTIMATE.—In developing the transportation improvement program, the metropolitan planning organization, operators of public transportation, and the State shall cooperatively develop estimates of funds that are reasonably expected to be available to support program implementation.

“(E) PROJECT ADVANCEMENT.—Projects listed in the transportation improvement program may be selected for advancement consistent with the project selection requirements.

“(F) MAJOR AMENDMENTS.—Major amendments to the list described in subparagraph (E), including the addition, deletion, or concept and scope change of a regionally significant project, may not be advanced without—

“(i) appropriate public involvement;

“(ii) financial planning;

“(iii) transportation conformity analyses; and "(iv) a finding by the Federal Highway Administration and Federal Transit Administration that the amended plan was produced in a manner consistent with this section.

"(2) INCLUDED PROJECTS.—

"(A) PROJECTS UNDER CHAPTER 1 OF TITLE 23 AND THIS CHAPTER.—A transportation improvement program developed under this section for a metropolitan area shall include the projects and strategies within the metropolitan area that are proposed for funding under chapter 1 of title 23 and this chapter.

"(B) PROJECTS UNDER CHAPTER 2 OF TITLE 23.—

"(i) REGIONALLY SIGNIFICANT PROJECTS.—Regionally significant projects proposed for funding under chapter 2 of title 23 shall be identified individually in the metropolitan transportation improvement program.

"(ii) OTHER PROJECTS.—Projects proposed for funding under chapter 2 of title 23 that are not regionally significant shall be grouped in 1 line item or identified individually in the metropolitan transportation improvement program.

"(3) SELECTION OF PROJECTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided under subsection (k)(4), the selection of federally funded projects in metropolitan planning areas shall be carried out, from the approved transportation plan—

"(i) by the State, in the case of projects under chapter 1 of title 23 or section 5308, 5310, 5311, or 5317 of this title;

"(ii) by the designated recipient, in the case of projects under section 5307; and

"(iii) in cooperation with the metropolitan planning organization.

"(B) MODIFICATIONS TO PROJECT PRIORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a project may be advanced from the transportation improvement program in place of another project in the same transportation improvement program without the approval of the Secretary.

"(4) PUBLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) PUBLICATION OF TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.—A transportation improvement program involving Federal participation shall be published or otherwise made readily available by the metropolitan planning organization for public review, including, to the maximum extent practicable, in electronically accessible formats and means, such as the World Wide Web.

"(B) PUBLICATION OF ANNUAL LISTINGS OF PROJECTS.—An annual listing of projects, including investments in pedestrian walkways and bicycle transportation facilities, for which Federal funds have been obligated in the preceding 4 years shall be published or otherwise made available for public review by the cooperative effort of the State, transit operator, and the metropolitan planning organization. This listing shall be consistent with the funding categories identified in the transportation improvement program.

"(C) RULEMAKING.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of the Federal Public Transportation Act of 2005, the Secretary shall issue regulations specifying—

"(i) the types of data to be included in the list described in subparagraph (B), including—

"(I) the name, type, purpose, and geocoded location of each project;

"(II) the Federal, State, and local identification numbers assigned to each project;

"(III) amounts obligated and expended on each project, sorted by funding source and transportation mode, and the date on which each obligation was made; and

"(IV) the status of each project; and

"(ii) the media through which the list described in subparagraph (B) will be made available to the public, including written and visual components for each of the projects listed.

"(k) TRANSPORTATION MANAGEMENT AREAS.—

"(1) REQUIRED IDENTIFICATION.—The Secretary shall identify each urbanized area with a population of more than 200,000 individuals as a transportation management area.

"(2) TRANSPORTATION PLANS AND PROGRAMS.—Transportation plans and programs for a metropolitan planning area serving a transportation management area shall be based on a continuing and comprehensive transportation planning process carried out by the metropolitan planning organization in cooperation with the State and transit operators.

"(3) CONGESTION MANAGEMENT SYSTEM.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The transportation planning process under this section shall address congestion management through a process that provides for effective management and operation, based on a cooperatively developed and implemented metropolitan-wide strategy, of new and existing transportation facilities eligible for funding under title 23 and this chapter through the use of travel demand reduction and operational management strategies.

"(B) PHASE-IN SCHEDULE.—The Secretary shall establish a phase-in schedule that provides for full compliance with the requirements of this section not later than 1 year after the identification of transportation management areas under paragraph (1).

"(4) SELECTION OF PROJECTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—All federally funded projects carried out within the boundaries of a metropolitan planning area serving a transportation management area under title 23 (except for projects carried out on the National Highway System and projects carried out under the bridge program or the interstate maintenance program) or under this chapter shall be selected for implementation from the approved transportation improvement program by the metropolitan planning organization designated for the area in consultation with the State and any affected public transit operator.

"(B) NATIONAL HIGHWAY SYSTEM PROJECTS.—Projects on the National Highway System carried out within the boundaries of a metropolitan planning area serving a transportation management area and projects carried out within such boundaries under the bridge program or the interstate maintenance program under title 23 shall be selected for implementation from the approved transportation improvement program by the State in cooperation with the metropolitan planning organization designated for the area.

"(5) CERTIFICATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall—

"(i) ensure that the metropolitan planning process of a metropolitan planning organization serving a transportation management area is being carried out in accordance with Federal law; and

"(ii) subject to subparagraph (B), certify, not less frequently than once every 4 years in nonattainment and maintenance areas (as defined under the Clean Air Act) and not less frequently than once every 5 years in attainment areas (as defined under such Act), that the requirements of this paragraph are met with respect to the metropolitan planning process.

"(B) REQUIREMENTS FOR CERTIFICATION.—The Secretary may make the certification under subparagraph (A) if—

"(i) the transportation planning process complies with the requirements of this section and all other applicable Federal law; and

"(ii) a transportation plan and a transportation improvement program for the metropolitan planning area have been approved by the metropolitan planning organization and the Governor.

"(C) PENALTY FOR FAILING TO CERTIFY.—

"(i) WITHHOLDING PROJECT FUNDS.—If the metropolitan planning process of a metropolitan planning organization serving a transportation management area is not certified, the Secretary may withhold any funds otherwise available to the metropolitan planning area for projects funded under title 23 and this chapter.

"(ii) RESTORATION OF WITHHELD FUNDS.—Any funds withheld under clause (i) shall be restored to the metropolitan planning area when the metropolitan planning process is certified by the Secretary.

"(D) REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION.—In making a certification under this paragraph, the Secretary shall provide for public involvement appropriate to the metropolitan area under review.

"(l) ABBREVIATED PLANS FOR CERTAIN AREAS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), in the case of a metropolitan area not designated as a transportation management area under this section, the Secretary may provide for the development of an abbreviated transportation plan and transportation improvement program for the metropolitan planning area that the Secretary determines is appropriate to achieve the purposes of this section, after considering the complexity of transportation problems in the area.

"(2) NONATTAINMENT AREAS.—The Secretary may not permit abbreviated plans for a metropolitan area that is in nonattainment for ozone or carbon monoxide under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.).

"(m) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS FOR CERTAIN NONATTAINMENT AREAS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provisions of title 23 or this chapter, Federal funds may not be advanced for transportation management areas classified as nonattainment for ozone or carbon monoxide pursuant to the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.) for any highway project that will result in a significant increase in carrying capacity for single-occupant vehicles unless the project is addressed through a congestion management process.

"(2) APPLICABILITY.—This subsection applies to any nonattainment area within the metropolitan planning area boundaries determined under subsection (d).

"(n) LIMITATION ON STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to confer on a metropolitan planning organization the authority to impose legal requirements on any transportation facility, provider, or project that is not eligible under title 23 or this chapter.

"(o) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Funds set aside under section 104(f) of title 23 or section 5308 of this title shall be available to carry out this section.

"(p) CONTINUATION OF CURRENT REVIEW PRACTICE.—Any decision by the Secretary concerning a plan or program described in this section shall not be considered to be a Federal action subject to review under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).".

SEC. 6006. STATEWIDE TRANSPORTATION PLANNING.

Section 5304 is amended to read as follows:

“§5304. Statewide transportation planning

“(a) General Requirements.—

“(1) Development of plans and programs.—To support the policies described in section 5301(a), each State shall develop a statewide transportation plan (referred to in this section as a “Plan”) and a statewide transportation improvement program (referred to in this section as a “Program”) for all areas of the State subject to section 5303.

“(2) Contents.—The Plan and the Program developed for each State shall provide for the development and integrated management and operation of transportation systems and facilities (including pedestrian walkways and bicycle transportation facilities) that will function as an intermodal transportation system for the State and an integral part of an intermodal transportation system for the United States.

“(3) Process of development.—The process for developing the Plan and the Program shall—

“(A) provide for the consideration of all modes of transportation and the policies described in section 5301(a); and

“(B) be continuing, cooperative, and comprehensive to the degree appropriate, based on the complexity of the transportation problems to be addressed.

“(b) Coordination With Metropolitan Planning; State Implementation Plan.—Each State shall—

“(1) coordinate planning under this section with—

“(A) the transportation planning activities under section 5303 for metropolitan areas of the State; and

“(B) other related statewide planning activities, including trade and economic development and related multistate planning efforts; and

“(2) develop the transportation portion of the State implementation plan, as required by the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.).

“(c) Interstate Agreements.—States may enter into agreements or compacts with other States for cooperative efforts and mutual assistance in support of activities authorized under this section related to interstate areas and localities in the States and establishing authorities the States consider desirable for making the agreements and compacts effective.

“(d) Scope of Planning Process.—

“(1) In general.—Each State shall carry out a statewide transportation planning process that provides for the consideration of projects, strategies, and implementing projects and services that will—

“(A) support the economic vitality of the United States, the States, nonmetropolitan areas, and metropolitan areas, especially by enabling global competitiveness, productivity, and efficiency;

“(B) increase the safety of the transportation system for motorized and nonmotorized users;

“(C) increase the security of the transportation system for motorized and nonmotorized users;

“(D) increase the accessibility and mobility of people and freight;

“(E) protect and enhance the environment (including the protection of habitat, water quality, and agricultural and forest land, while minimizing invasive species), promote energy conservation, promote consistency between transportation improvements and State and local land use planning and economic development patterns, and improve the quality of life (including minimizing adverse health effects from mobile source air pollution and promoting the linkage of the transportation and development goals of the State);

“(F) enhance the integration and connectivity of the transportation system, across and between modes throughout the State, for people and freight;

“(G) promote efficient system management and operation; and

“(H) emphasize the preservation and efficient use of the existing transportation system.

“(2) Selection of projects and strategies.—After soliciting and considering any relevant public comments, the State shall determine which of the projects and strategies described in paragraph (1) are most appropriate.

“(3) Mitigation activities.—

“(A) In general.—A transportation plan under this subsection shall include a discussion of—

“(i) types of potential habitat, hydrological, and environmental mitigation activities that may assist in compensating for loss of habitat, wetland, and other environmental functions; and

“(ii) potential areas to carry out these activities, including a discussion of areas that may have the greatest potential to restore and maintain the habitat types and hydrological or environmental functions affected by the plan.

“(B) Consultation.—The discussion described in subparagraph (A) shall be developed in consultation with Federal and State tribal wildlife, land management, and regulatory agencies.

“(4) Failure to consider factors.—The failure to consider any factor described in paragraph (1) shall not be reviewable by any court under title 23, this title, subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5, or chapter 7 of title 5 in any matter affecting a Plan, a Program, a project or strategy, or the certification of a planning process.

“(e) Additional Requirements.—In carrying out planning under this section, each State shall consider—

“(1) with respect to nonmetropolitan areas, the concerns of affected local officials with responsibility for transportation;

“(2) the concerns of Indian tribal governments and Federal land management agencies that have jurisdiction over land within the boundaries of the State; and

“(3) coordination of Plans, Programs, and planning activities with related planning activities being carried out outside of metropolitan planning areas and between States.

“(f) Statewide Transportation Plan.—

“(1) Development.—Each State shall develop a Plan, with a minimum 20-year forecast period for all areas of the State, that provides for the development and implementation of the intermodal transportation system of the State.

“(2) Consultation with governments.—

“(A) Metropolitan planning areas.—The Plan shall be developed for each metropolitan planning area in the State in cooperation with the metropolitan planning organization designated for the metropolitan planning area under section 5303.

“(B) Nonmetropolitan areas.—With respect to nonmetropolitan areas, the statewide transportation plan shall be developed in consultation with affected nonmetropolitan officials with responsibility for transportation. The consultation process shall not require the review or approval of the Secretary.

“(C) Indian tribal areas.—With respect to each area of the State under the jurisdiction of an Indian tribal government, the Plan shall be developed in consultation with the tribal government and the Secretary of the Interior.

“(D) Consultation, comparison, and consideration.—

“(i) In general.—The Plan shall be developed, as appropriate, in consultation with State and local agencies responsible for—

“(I) land use management;

“(II) natural resources;

“(III) environmental protection;

“(IV) conservation; and

“(V) historic preservation.

“(ii) Comparison and consideration.—Consultation under clause (i) shall involve—

“(I) comparison of transportation plans to State conservation plans or maps, if available;

“(II) comparison of transportation plans to inventories of natural or historic resources, if available; or

“(III) consideration of areas where wildlife crossing structures may be needed to ensure connectivity between wildlife habitat linkage areas.

“(3) Participation by interested parties.—In developing the Plan, the State shall—

“(A) provide citizens, affected public agencies, representatives of public transportation employees, freight shippers, private providers of transportation, representatives of users of public transportation, representatives of users of pedestrian walkways and bicycle transportation facilities, providers of freight transportation services, and other interested parties with a reasonable opportunity to comment on the proposed Plan; and

“(B) to the maximum extent practicable—

“(i) hold any public meetings at convenient and accessible locations and times;

“(ii) employ visualization techniques to describe plans; and

“(iii) make public information available in electronically accessible format and means, such as the World Wide Web.

“(4) Mitigation activities.—

“(A) In general.—A Plan shall include a discussion of—

“(i) types of potential habitat, hydrological, and environmental mitigation activities that may assist in compensating for loss of habitat, wetlands, and other environmental functions; and

“(ii) potential areas to carry out these activities, including a discussion of areas that may have the greatest potential to restore and maintain the habitat types and hydrological or environmental functions affected by the plan.

“(B) Consultation.—The discussion described in subparagraph (A) shall be developed in consultation with Federal and State tribal wildlife, land management, and regulatory agencies.

“(5) Transportation strategies.—A Plan shall identify transportation strategies necessary to efficiently serve the mobility needs of people.

“(6) Financial plan.—The Plan may include a financial plan that—

“(A) demonstrates how the adopted Plan can be implemented;

“(B) indicates resources from public and private sources that are reasonably expected to be made available to carry out the Plan;

“(C) recommends any additional financing strategies for needed projects and programs; and

“(D) may include, for illustrative purposes, additional projects that would be included in the adopted Plan if reasonable additional resources beyond those identified in the financial plan were available.

"(7) SELECTION OF PROJECTS FROM ILLUSTRATIVE LIST.—A State shall not be required to select any project from the illustrative list of additional projects described in paragraph (6)(D).

"(8) EXISTING SYSTEM.—The Plan should include capital, operations and management strategies, investments, procedures, and other measures to ensure the preservation and most efficient use of the existing transportation system.

"(9) PUBLICATION OF LONG-RANGE TRANSPORTATION PLANS.—Each Plan prepared by a State shall be published or otherwise made available, including, to the maximum extent practicable, in electronically accessible formats and means, such as the World Wide Web.

"(g) STATEWIDE TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.—

"(1) DEVELOPMENT.—Each State shall develop a Program for all areas of the State.

"(2) CONSULTATION WITH GOVERNMENTS.—

"(A) METROPOLITAN PLANNING AREAS.—With respect to each metropolitan planning area in the State, the Program shall be developed in cooperation with the metropolitan planning organization designated for the metropolitan planning area under section 5303.

"(B) NONMETROPOLITAN AREAS.—With respect to each nonmetropolitan area in the State, the Program shall be developed in consultation with affected nonmetropolitan local officials with responsibility for transportation. The consultation process shall not require the review or approval of the Secretary.

"(C) INDIAN TRIBAL AREAS.—With respect to each area of the State under the jurisdiction of an Indian tribal government, the Program shall be developed in consultation with the tribal government and the Secretary of the Interior.

"(3) PARTICIPATION BY INTERESTED PARTIES.—In developing the Program, the State shall provide citizens, affected public agencies, representatives of public transportation employees, freight shippers, private providers of transportation, providers of freight transportation services, representatives of users of public transit, representatives of users of pedestrian walkways and bicycle transportation facilities, and other interested parties with a reasonable opportunity to comment on the proposed Program.

"(4) INCLUDED PROJECTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A Program developed under this subsection for a State shall include federally supported surface transportation expenditures within the boundaries of the State.

"(B) LISTING OF PROJECTS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The Program shall cover a minimum of 4 years, identify projects by year, be fiscally constrained by year, and be updated not less than once every 4 years.

"(ii) PUBLICATION.—An annual listing of projects for which funds have been obligated in the preceding 4 years in each metropolitan planning area shall be published or otherwise made available by the cooperative effort of the State, transit operator, and the metropolitan planning organization for public review. The listing shall be consistent with the funding categories identified in each metropolitan transportation improvement program.

"(C) INDIVIDUAL IDENTIFICATION.—

"(i) REGIONALLY SIGNIFICANT PROJECTS.—Regionally significant projects proposed for funding under chapter 2 of title 23 shall be identified individually in the transportation improvement program.

"(ii) OTHER PROJECTS.—Projects proposed for funding under chapter 2 of title 23 that are not determined to be regionally significant shall be grouped in 1 line item or identified individually.

"(D) CONSISTENCY WITH STATEWIDE TRANSPORTATION PLAN.—Each project included in the list described in subparagraph (B) shall be—

"(i) consistent with the Plan developed under this section for the State;

"(ii) identical to the project or phase of the project as described in each year of the approved metropolitan transportation improvement program; and

"(iii) in conformance with the applicable State air quality implementation plan developed under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.), if the project is carried out in an area designated as nonattainment for ozone or carbon monoxide under that Act.

"(E) REQUIREMENT OF ANTICIPATED FULL FUNDING.—The Program shall not include a project, or an identified phase of a project, unless full funding can reasonably be anticipated to be available for the project within the time period contemplated for completion of the project.

"(F) FINANCIAL PLAN.—The Program may include a financial plan that—

"(i) demonstrates how the approved Program can be implemented;

"(ii) indicates resources from public and private sources that are reasonably expected to be made available to carry out the Program;

"(iii) recommends any additional financing strategies for needed projects and programs; and

"(iv) may include, for illustrative purposes, additional projects that would be included in the adopted transportation plan if reasonable additional resources beyond those identified in the financial plan were available.

"(G) SELECTION OF PROJECTS FROM ILLUSTRATIVE LIST.—

"(i) NO REQUIRED SELECTION.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (F), a State shall not be required to select any project from the illustrative list of additional projects described in subparagraph (F)(iv).

"(ii) REQUIRED APPROVAL BY THE SECRETARY.—A State shall not include any project from the illustrative list of additional projects described in subparagraph (F)(iv) in an approved Program without the approval of the Secretary.

"(H) PRIORITIES.—The Program shall reflect the priorities for programming and expenditures of funds, including transportation and transit enhancement activities, required by title 23 and this chapter, and transportation control measures included in the State's air quality implementation plan.

"(5) PROJECT SELECTION FOR AREAS WITH FEWER THAN 50,000 INDIVIDUALS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Each State, in cooperation with the affected nonmetropolitan local officials with responsibility for transportation, shall select projects to be carried out in areas with fewer than 50,000 individuals from the approved Program (excluding projects carried out under the National Highway System, the bridge program, or the interstate maintenance program under title 23 or sections 5310 and 5311 of this title).

"(B) CERTAIN PROGRAMS.—Each State, in consultation with the affected nonmetropolitan local officials with responsibility for transportation, shall select, from the approved Program, projects to be carried out in areas with fewer than 50,000 individuals under the National Highway System, the bridge program, or the Interstate maintenance program under title 23 or under sections 5310 and 5311 of this title.

"(6) STATEWIDE TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM APPROVAL.—A Program developed under this subsection shall be reviewed and based on a current planning finding approved by the Secretary not less frequently than once every 4 years.

"(7) PLANNING FINDING.—Not less frequently than once every 4 years, the Secretary shall determine whether the transportation planning process through which Plans and Programs are developed are consistent with this section and section 5303.

"(8) MODIFICATIONS TO PROJECT PRIORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a project included in the approved Program may be advanced in place of another project in the program without the approval of the Secretary.

"(h) FUNDING.—Funds set aside pursuant to section 104(i) of title 23 and section 5308 of this title shall be available to carry out this section.

"(i) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN STATE LAWS AS CONGESTION MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS.—For purposes of this section and section 5303, State laws, rules, or regulations pertaining to congestion management systems or programs may constitute the congestion management system under section 5303(i)(3) if the Secretary determines that the State laws, rules, or regulations are consistent with, and fulfill the intent of, the purposes of section 5303.

"(j) CONTINUATION OF CURRENT REVIEW PRACTICE.—Any decision by the Secretary under this section, regarding a metropolitan or statewide transportation plan or the Program, shall not be considered to be a Federal action subject to review under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).".

SEC. 6007. TRANSPORTATION MANAGEMENT AREAS.

Section 5305 is repealed.

SEC. 6008. PRIVATE ENTERPRISE PARTICIPATION.

Section 5306 is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking "5305 of this title" and inserting "5308"; and

(B) by inserting ", as determined by local policies, criteria, and decision making," after "feasible";

(2) in subsection (b) by striking "5303-5305 of this title" and inserting "5303, 5304, and 5308"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(c) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the Federal Public Transportation Act of 2005, the Secretary shall issue regulations describing how the requirements under this chapter relating to subsection (a) shall be enforced.".

SEC. 6009. URBANIZED AREA FORMULA GRANTS.

(a) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—Section 5307 is amended—

(1) by striking subsections (h), (j) and (k); and

(2) by redesignating subsections (i), (l), (m), and (n) as subsections (h), (i), (j), and (k), respectively.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—Section 5307(a) is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (2)(A) to read as follows:

"(A) an entity designated, in accordance with the planning process under sections 5303, 5304, and 5306, by the chief executive officer of a State, responsible local officials, and publicly owned operators of public transportation, to receive and apportion amounts under section 5336 that are attributable to transportation management areas designated under section 5303; or"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(3) SUBRECIPIENT.—The term 'subrecipient' means a State or local governmental authority, a nonprofit organization, or a private operator of public transportation service that may receive a Federal transit program grant indirectly through a recipient, rather than directly from the Federal Government.".

(c) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—Section 5307(b) is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation may award grants under this section for—

"(A) capital projects, including associated capital maintenance items;

"(B) planning, including mobility management;

"(C) transit enhancements;

"(D) operating costs of equipment and facilities for use in public transportation in an urbanized area with a population of less than 200,000; and

"(E) operating costs of equipment and facilities for use in public transportation in a portion or portions of an urbanized area with a population of at least 200,000, but not more than 225,000, if—

"(i) the urbanized area includes parts of more than 1 State;

"(ii) the portion of the urbanized area includes only 1 State;

"(iii) the population of the portion of the urbanized area is less than 30,000; and

"(iv) the grants will not be used to provide public transportation outside of the portion of the urbanized area.";

(2) by amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

"(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR FISCAL YEARS 2005 THROUGH 2007.—

"(A) INCREASED FLEXIBILITY.—The Secretary may award grants under this section, from funds made available to carry out this section for each of the fiscal years 2005 through 2007, to finance the operating cost of equipment and facilities for use in mass transportation in an urbanized area with a population of at least 200,000, as determined by the 2000 decennial census of population if—

"(i) the urbanized area had a population of less than 200,000, as determined by the 1990 decennial census of population;

"(ii) a portion of the urbanized area was a separate urbanized area with a population of less than 200,000, as determined by the 1990 decennial census of population;

"(iii) the area was not designated as an urbanized area, as determined by the 1990 decennial census of population; or

"(iv) a portion of the area was not designated as an urbanized area, as determined by the 1990 decennial census, and received assistance under section 5311 in fiscal year 2002.

"(B) MAXIMUM AMOUNTS IN FISCAL YEAR 2005.—In fiscal year 2005—

"(i) amounts made available to any urbanized area under clause (i) or (ii) of subparagraph (A) shall be not more than the amount apportioned in fiscal year 2002 to the urbanized area with a population of less than 200,000, as determined in the 1990 decennial census of population;

"(ii) amounts made available to any urbanized area under subparagraph (A)(iii) shall be not more than the amount apportioned to the urbanized area under this section for fiscal year 2003; and

"(iii) each portion of any area not designated as an urbanized area, as determined by the 1990 decennial census, and eligible to receive funds under subparagraph (A)(iv), shall receive an amount of funds to carry out this section that is not less than the amount the portion of the area received under section 5311 for fiscal year 2002.

"(C) MAXIMUM AMOUNTS IN FISCAL YEAR 2006.—In fiscal year 2006—

"(i) amounts made available to any urbanized area under clause (i) or (ii) of subparagraph (A) shall be not more than 50 percent of the amount apportioned in fiscal year 2002 to the urbanized area with a population of less than 200,000, as determined in the 1990 decennial census of population;

"(ii) amounts made available to any urbanized area under subparagraph (A)(iii) shall be not more than 50 percent of the amount apportioned to the urbanized area under this section for fiscal year 2003; and

"(iii) each portion of any area not designated as an urbanized area, as determined by the 1990 decennial census, and eligible to receive funds under subparagraph (A)(iv), shall receive an amount of funds to carry out this section that is not less 50 percent of the amount the portion of the area received under section 5311 for fiscal year 2002.

"(D) MAXIMUM AMOUNTS IN FISCAL YEAR 2007.—In fiscal year 2007—

"(i) amounts made available to any urbanized area under clause (i) or (ii) of subparagraph (A) shall be not more than 25 percent of the amount apportioned in fiscal year 2002 to the urbanized area with a population of less than 200,000, as determined in the 1990 decennial census of population;

"(ii) amounts made available to any urbanized area under subparagraph (A)(iii) shall be not more than 25 percent of the amount apportioned to the urbanized area under this section for fiscal year 2003; and

"(iii) each portion of any area not designated as an urbanized area, as determined by the 1990 decennial census, and eligible to receive funds under subparagraph (A)(iv), shall receive an amount of funds to carry out this section that is not less than 25 percent of the amount the portion of the area received under section 5311 in fiscal year 2002."; and

(3) by striking paragraph (4).

(d) GRANT RECIPIENT REQUIREMENTS.—Section 5307(d)(1) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by inserting ", including safety and security aspects of the program" after "program";

(2) in subparagraph (E), by striking "section" and all that follows and inserting "section, the recipient will comply with sections 5323 and 5325;";

(3) in subparagraph (H), by striking "sections 5301(a) and (d), 5303-5306, and 5310(a)-(d) of this title" and inserting "subsections (a) and (d) of section 5301 and sections 5303 through 5306";

(4) in subparagraph (I) by striking "and" at the end;

(5) in subparagraph (J), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(6) by adding at the end the following:

"(K) if located in an urbanized area with a population of at least 200,000, will expend not less than 1 percent of the amount the recipient receives each fiscal year under this section for transit enhancement activities described in section 5302(a)(15).".

(e) GOVERNMENT'S SHARE OF COSTS.—Section 5307(e) is amended—

(1) by striking the first sentence and inserting the following:

"(1) CAPITAL PROJECTS.—A grant for a capital project under this section shall cover 80 percent of the net project cost.";

(2) by striking "A grant for operating expenses" and inserting the following:

"(2) OPERATING EXPENSES.—A grant for operating expenses";

(3) by striking the fourth sentence and inserting the following:

"(3) REMAINING COSTS.—The remainder of the net project cost shall be provided in cash from non-Federal sources or revenues derived from the sale of advertising and concessions and amounts received under a service agreement with a State or local social service agency or a private social service organization."; and

(4) by adding at the end the following: "The prohibitions on the use of funds for matching requirements under section 403(a)(5)(C)(vii) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 603(a)(5)(C)(vii)) shall not apply to the remainder.".

(f) UNDERTAKING PROJECTS IN ADVANCE.—Section 5307(g) is amended by striking paragraph (4).

(g) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.—Section 5307(k), as redesignated, is amended to read as follows:

"(k) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.—

"(1) APPLICABLE PROVISIONS.—Sections 5301, 5302, 5303, 5304, 5306, 5315(c), 5318, 5319, 5323, 5325, 5327, 5329, 5330, 5331, 5332, 5333 and 5335 apply to this section and to any grant made under this section.

"(2) INAPPLICABLE PROVISIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided under this section, no other provision of this chapter applies to this section or to a grant made under this section.

"(B) TITLE 5.—The provision of assistance under this chapter shall not be construed as bringing within the application of chapter 15 of title 5, any nonsupervisory employee of a public transportation system (or any other agency or entity performing related functions) to which such chapter is otherwise inapplicable.".

SEC. 6010. PLANNING PROGRAMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 5308 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 5308. Planning programs

"(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—Under criteria established by the Secretary, the Secretary may award grants to States, authorities of the States, metropolitan planning organizations, and local governmental authorities, make agreements with other departments, agencies, or instrumentalities of the Government, or enter into contracts with private nonprofit or for-profit entities to—

"(1) develop transportation plans and programs;

"(2) plan, engineer, design, and evaluate a public transportation project; or

"(3) conduct technical studies relating to public transportation, including—

"(A) studies related to management, planning, operations, capital requirements, and economic feasibility;

"(B) evaluations of previously financed projects;

"(C) peer reviews and exchanges of technical data, information, assistance, and related activities in support of planning and environmental analyses among metropolitan planning organizations and other transportation planners; and

"(D) other similar and related activities preliminary to, and in preparation for, constructing, acquiring, or improving the operation of facilities and equipment.

"(b) PURPOSE.—To the extent practicable, the Secretary shall ensure that amounts appropriated pursuant to section 5338 to carry out this section and sections 5303, 5304, and 5306 are used to support balanced and comprehensive transportation planning that considers the relationships among land use and all transportation modes, without regard to the programmatic source of the planning amounts.

"(c) Metropolitan Planning Program.—

"(1) Allocations to States.—

"(A) In general.—The Secretary shall allocate 80 percent of the amount made available under subsection (g)(3)(A) to States to carry out sections 5303 and 5306 in a ratio equal to the population in urbanized areas in each State, divided by the total population in urbanized areas in all States, as shown by the latest available decennial census of population.

"(B) Minimum allocation.—Each State shall receive not less than 0.5 percent of the total amount allocated under this paragraph.

"(2) Availability of funds.—A State receiving an allocation under paragraph (1) shall promptly distribute such funds to metropolitan planning organizations in the State under a formula—

"(A) developed by the State in cooperation with the metropolitan planning organizations;

"(B) approved by the Secretary of Transportation;

"(C) that considers population in urbanized areas; and

"(D) that provides an appropriate distribution for urbanized areas to carry out the cooperative processes described in this section.

"(3) Supplemental allocations.—

"(A) In general.—The Secretary shall allocate 20 percent of the amount made available under subsection (g)(3)(A) to States to supplement allocations made under paragraph (1) for metropolitan planning organizations.

"(B) Allocation formula.—Amounts under this paragraph shall be allocated under a formula that reflects the additional cost of carrying out planning, programming, and project selection responsibilities in complex metropolitan planning areas under sections 5303, 5304, and 5306.

"(d) State Planning and Research Program.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary shall allocate amounts made available pursuant to subsection (g)(3)(B) to States for grants and contracts to carry out sections 5304, 5306, 5315, and 5322 so that each State receives an amount equal to the ratio of the population in urbanized areas in that State, divided by the total population in urbanized areas in all States, as shown by the latest available decennial census.

"(2) Minimum allocation.—Each State shall receive not less than 0.5 percent of the amount allocated under this subsection.

"(3) Reallocation.—A State may authorize part of the amount made available under this subsection to be used to supplement amounts available under subsection (c).

"(e) Planning Capacity Building Program.—

"(1) Establishment.—The Secretary shall establish a Planning Capacity Building Program (referred to in this subsection as the "Program") to support and fund innovative practices and enhancements in transportation planning.

"(2) Purpose.—The purpose of the Program shall be to promote activities that support and strengthen the planning processes required under this section and sections 5303 and 5304.

"(3) Administration.—The Program shall be administered by the Federal Transit Administration in cooperation with the Federal Highway Administration.

"(4) Use of funds.—

"(A) In general.—Appropriations authorized under subsection (g)(1) to carry out this subsection may be used—

"(i) to provide incentive grants to States, metropolitan planning organizations, and public transportation operators; and

"(ii) to conduct research, disseminate information, and provide technical assistance.

"(B) Grants, contracts, cooperative agreements.—In carrying out the activities described in subparagraph (A), the Secretary may—

"(i) expend appropriated funds directly; or

"(ii) award grants to, or enter into contracts, cooperative agreements, and other transactions with, a Federal agency, State agency, local governmental authority, association, nonprofit or for-profit entity, or institution of higher education.

"(f) Government's Share of Costs.—Amounts made available to carry out subsections (c), (d), and (e) may not exceed 80 percent of the costs of the activity unless the Secretary of Transportation determines that it is in the interest of the Government not to require State or local matching funds.

"(g) Allocation of Funds.—Of the amounts made available under section 5338(b)(2)(B) for fiscal year 2006 and each fiscal year thereafter to carry out this section—

"(1) $5,000,000 shall be allocated for the Planning Capacity Building Program established under subsection (e);

"(2) $20,000,000 shall be allocated for grants under subsection (a)(2) for alternatives analyses required by section 5309(e)(2)(A); and

"(3) of the remaining amount—

"(A) 82.72 percent shall be allocated for the metropolitan planning program described in subsection (d); and

"(B) 17.28 percent shall be allocated to carry out subsection (b).

"(h) Reallocations.—Any amount allocated under this section that has not been used 3 years after the end of the fiscal year in which the amount was allocated shall be reallocated among the States.".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The item relating to section 5308 in the table of sections for chapter 53 is amended to read as follows:

"5308. Planning programs.".

SEC. 6011. CAPITAL INVESTMENT PROGRAM.

(a) Section Heading.—The section heading of section 5309 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 5309. Capital investment grants".

(b) General Authority.—Section 5309(a) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking "(1) The Secretary of Transportation may make grants and loans" and inserting the following:

"(1) Grants authorized.—The Secretary may award grants";

(B) in subparagraph (A), by striking "alternatives analysis related to the development of systems,";

(C) by striking subparagraphs (B), (C), (D), and (G);

(D) by redesignating subparagraphs (E), (F), and (H) as subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D), respectively;

(E) in subparagraph (C), as redesignated, by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting ", including programs of bus and bus-related projects for assistance to subrecipients which are public agencies, private companies engaged in public transportation, or private nonprofit organizations; and"; and

(F) in subparagraph (D), as redesignated—

(i) by striking "to support fixed guideway systems"; and

(ii) by striking "dedicated bus and high occupancy vehicle";

(2) by amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

"(2) Grantee requirements.—

"(A) Grantee in urbanized area.—The Secretary shall require that any grants awarded under this section to a recipient or subrecipient located in an urbanized area shall be subject to all terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions that the Secretary determines to be necessary or appropriate for the purposes of this section, including requirements for the disposition of net increases in the value of real property resulting from the project assisted under this section.

"(B) Grantee not in urbanized area.—The Secretary shall require that any grants awarded under this section to a recipient or subrecipient not located in an urbanized area shall be subject to the same terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions as a recipient or subrecipient of assistance under section 5311.

"(C) Subrecipient.—The Secretary shall require that any private, nonprofit organization that is a subrecipient of a grant awarded under this section shall be subject to the same terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions as a subrecipient of assistance under section 5310.

"(D) Statewide transit provider grantees.—A statewide transit provider that receives a grant under this section shall be subject to the terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions of this section or section 5311, consistent with the scope and purpose of the grant and the location of the project."; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(3) Certification.—An applicant that has submitted the certifications required under subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (H) of section 5307(d)(1) shall be deemed to have provided sufficient information upon which the Secretary may make the findings required under this subsection.".

(c) Defined Term.—Section 5309(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Defined Term.—As used in this section, the term 'alternatives analysis' means a study conducted as part of the transportation planning process required under sections 5303 and 5304, which includes—

"(1) an assessment of a wide range of public transportation alternatives designed to address a transportation problem in a corridor or subarea;

"(2) sufficient information to enable the Secretary to make the findings of project justification and local financial commitment required under this section;

"(3) the selection of a locally preferred alternative; and

"(4) the adoption of the locally preferred alternative as part of the long-range transportation plan required under section 5303.".

(d) Grant Requirements.—Section 5309(d) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) Grant Requirements.—The Secretary may not approve a grant for a project under this section unless the Secretary determines that—

"(1) the project is part of an approved transportation plan and program of projects required under sections 5303, 5304, and 5306; and

"(2) the applicant has, or will have—

"(A) the legal, financial, and technical capacity to carry out the project, including safety and security aspects of the project;

"(B) satisfactory continuing control over the use of the equipment or facilities; and

"(C) the capability and willingness to maintain the equipment or facilities.".

(e) MAJOR CAPITAL INVESTMENT PROJECTS OF $75,000,000 OR MORE.—Section 5309(e) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) MAJOR CAPITAL INVESTMENT PROJECTS OF $75,000,000 OR MORE.—

"(1) FULL FUNDING GRANT AGREEMENT.—The Secretary shall enter into a full funding grant agreement, based on the evaluations and ratings required under this subsection, with each grantee receiving not less than $75,000,000 under this subsection for a new fixed guideway capital project that—

"(A) is authorized for final design and construction; and

"(B) has been rated as medium, medium-high, or high, in accordance with paragraph (5)(B).

"(2) DETERMINATIONS.—The Secretary may not award a grant under this subsection for a new fixed guideway capital project unless the Secretary determines that the proposed project is—

"(A) based on the results of an alternatives analysis and preliminary engineering;

"(B) justified based on a comprehensive review of its mobility improvements, environmental benefits, cost-effectiveness, operating efficiencies, economic development effects, and public transportation supportive land use patterns and policies; and

"(C) supported by an acceptable degree of local financial commitment, including evidence of stable and dependable financing sources to construct the project, and maintain and operate the entire public transportation system, while ensuring that the extent and quality of existing public transportation services are not degraded.

"(3) EVALUATION OF PROJECT JUSTIFICATION.—In making the determinations under paragraph (2)(B) for a major capital investment grant, the Secretary shall analyze, evaluate, and consider—

"(A) the results of the alternatives analysis and preliminary engineering for the proposed project;

"(B) the reliability of the forecasts of costs and utilization made by the recipient and the contractors to the recipient;

"(C) the direct and indirect costs of relevant alternatives;

"(D) factors such as—

"(i) congestion relief;

"(ii) improved mobility;

"(iii) air pollution;

"(iv) noise pollution;

"(v) energy consumption; and

"(vi) all associated ancillary and mitigation costs necessary to carry out each alternative analyzed;

"(E) reductions in local infrastructure costs achieved through compact land use development and positive impacts on the capacity, utilization, or longevity of other surface transportation assets and facilities;

"(F) the cost of suburban sprawl;

"(G) the degree to which the project increases the mobility of the public transportation dependent population or promotes economic development;

"(H) population density and current transit ridership in the transportation corridor;

"(I) the technical capability of the grant recipient to construct the project;

"(J) any adjustment to the project justification necessary to reflect differences in local land, construction, and operating costs; and

"(K) other factors that the Secretary determines to be appropriate to carry out this chapter.

"(4) EVALUATION OF LOCAL FINANCIAL COMMITMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In evaluating a project under paragraph (2)(C), the Secretary shall require that—

"(i) the proposed project plan provides for the availability of contingency amounts that the Secretary determines to be reasonable to cover unanticipated cost increases;

"(ii) each proposed local source of capital and operating financing is stable, reliable, and available within the proposed project timetable; and

"(iii) local resources are available to recapitalize and operate the overall proposed public transportation system, including essential feeder bus and other services necessary to achieve the projected ridership levels, while ensuring that the extent and quality of existing public transportation services are not degraded.

"(B) EVALUATION CRITERIA.—In assessing the stability, reliability, and availability of proposed sources of local financing under paragraph (2)(C), the Secretary shall consider—

"(i) the reliability of the forecasts of costs and utilization made by the recipient and the contractors to the recipient;

"(ii) existing grant commitments;

"(iii) the degree to which financing sources are dedicated to the proposed purposes;

"(iv) any debt obligation that exists, or is proposed by the recipient, for the proposed project or other public transportation purpose; and

"(v) the extent to which the project has a local financial commitment that exceeds the required non-Federal share of the cost of the project, provided that if the Secretary gives priority to financing projects that include more than the non-Federal share required under subsection (h), the Secretary shall give equal consideration to differences in the fiscal capacity of State and local governments.

"(5) PROJECT ADVANCEMENT AND RATINGS.—

"(A) PROJECT ADVANCEMENT.—A proposed project under this subsection shall not advance from alternatives analysis to preliminary engineering or from preliminary engineering to final design and construction unless the Secretary determines that the project meets the requirements of this section and there is a reasonable likelihood that the project will continue to meet such requirements.

"(B) RATINGS.—In making a determination under subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall evaluate and rate the project on a 5-point scale (high, medium-high, medium, medium-low, or low) based on the results of the alternatives analysis, the project justification criteria, and the degree of local financial commitment, as required under this subsection. In rating the projects, the Secretary shall provide, in addition to the overall project rating, individual ratings for each of the criteria established by regulation.

"(6) APPLICABILITY.—This subsection shall not apply to projects for which the Secretary has issued a letter of intent or entered into a full funding grant agreement before the date of enactment of the Federal Public Transportation Act of 2005.

"(7) RULEMAKING.—Not later than 240 days after the date of enactment of the Federal Public Transportation Act of 2005, the Secretary shall issue regulations on the manner by which the Secretary shall evaluate and rate projects based on the results of alternatives analysis, project justification, and local financial commitment, in accordance with this subsection.

"(8) POLICY GUIDANCE.—

"(A) PUBLICATION.—The Secretary shall publish policy guidance regarding the new starts project review and evaluation process—

"(i) not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of the Federal Public Transportation Act of 2005; and

"(ii) each time significant changes are made by the Secretary to the new starts project review and evaluation process and criteria, but not less frequently than once every 2 years.

"(B) PUBLIC COMMENT AND RESPONSE.—The Secretary shall—

"(i) invite public comment to the policy guidance published under subparagraph (A); and

"(ii) publish a response to the comments received under clause (i).".

(f) MAJOR CAPITAL INVESTMENT PROJECTS OF LESS THAN $75,000,000.—Section 5309(f) is amended to read as follows:

"(f) MAJOR CAPITAL INVESTMENT PROJECTS OF LESS THAN $75,000,000.—

"(1) PROJECT CONSTRUCTION GRANT AGREEMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall enter into a project construction grant agreement, based on evaluations and ratings required under this subsection, with each grantee receiving less than $75,000,000 under this subsection for a new fixed guideway or corridor improvement capital project that—

"(i) is authorized by law; and

"(ii) has been rated as medium, medium-high, or high, in accordance with paragraph (3)(B).

"(B) CONTENTS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—An agreement under this paragraph shall specify—

"(I) the scope of the project to be constructed;

"(II) the estimated net cost of the project;

"(III) the schedule under which the project shall be constructed;

"(IV) the maximum amount of funding to be obtained under this subsection;

"(V) the proposed schedule for obligation of future Federal grants; and

"(VI) the sources of non-Federal funding.

"(ii) ADDITIONAL FUNDING.—The agreement may include a commitment on the part of the Secretary to provide funding for the project in future fiscal years.

"(C) FULL FUNDING GRANT AGREEMENT.—An agreement under this paragraph shall be considered a full funding grant agreement for the purposes of subsection (g).

"(2) SELECTION PROCESS.—

"(A) SELECTION CRITERIA.—The Secretary may not award a grant under this subsection for a proposed project unless the Secretary determines that the project is—

"(i) based on the results of planning and alternatives analysis;

"(ii) justified based on a review of its public transportation supportive land use policies, cost effectiveness, and effect on local economic development; and

"(iii) supported by an acceptable degree of local financial commitment.

"(B) PLANNING AND ALTERNATIVES.—In evaluating a project under subparagraph (A)(i), the Secretary shall analyze and consider the results of planning and alternatives analysis for the project.

"(C) PROJECT JUSTIFICATION.—In making the determinations under subparagraph (A)(ii), the Secretary shall—

"(i) determine the degree to which local land use policies are supportive of the public transportation project and the degree to which the project is likely to achieve local developmental goals;

"(ii) determine the cost effectiveness of the project at the time of the initiation of revenue service;

"(iii) determine the degree to which the project will have a positive effect on local economic development;

"(iv) consider the reliability of the forecasts of costs and ridership associated with the project; and

"(v) consider other factors that the Secretary determines to be appropriate to carry out this subsection.

"(D) LOCAL FINANCIAL COMMITMENT.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)(iii), the Secretary shall require that each proposed local source of capital and operating financing is stable, reliable, and available within the proposed project timetable.

"(3) ADVANCEMENT OF PROJECT TO DEVELOPMENT AND CONSTRUCTION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A proposed project under this subsection may not advance from the planning and alternatives analysis stage to project development and construction unless—

"(i) the Secretary finds that the project meets the requirements of this subsection and there is a reasonable likelihood that the project will continue to meet such requirements; and

"(ii) the metropolitan planning organization has adopted the locally preferred alternative for the project into the long-range transportation plan.

"(B) EVALUATION.—In making the findings under subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall evaluate and rate the project as high, medium-high, medium, medium-low, or low, based on the results of the analysis of the project justification criteria and the degree of local financial commitment, as required under this subsection.

"(4) IMPACT REPORT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 240 days after the date of enactment of the Federal Public Transportation Act of 2005, the Federal Transit Administration shall submit a report on the methodology to be used in evaluating the land use and economic development impacts of non-fixed guideway or partial fixed guideway projects to—

"(i) the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate; and

"(ii) the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives.

"(B) CONTENTS.—The report submitted under subparagraph (A) shall address any qualitative and quantitative differences between fixed guideway and non-fixed guideway projects with respect to land use and economic development impacts.

"(5) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of the Federal Public Transportation Act of 2005, the Secretary shall issue regulations establishing an evaluation and rating process for proposed projects under this subsection that is based on the results of project justification and local financial commitment, as required under this subsection.".

(g) FULL FUNDING GRANT AGREEMENTS.—Section 5309(g)(2) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(C) BEFORE AND AFTER STUDY.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Each full funding grant agreement shall require the applicant to conduct a study that—

"(I) describes and analyzes the impacts of the new start project on transit services and transit ridership;

"(II) evaluates the consistency of predicted and actual project characteristics and performance; and

"(III) identifies sources of differences between predicted and actual outcomes.

"(ii) INFORMATION COLLECTION AND ANALYSIS PLAN.—

"(I) SUBMISSION OF PLAN.—Applicants seeking a full funding grant agreement shall submit a complete plan for the collection and analysis of information to identify the impacts of the new start project and the accuracy of the forecasts prepared during the development of the project. Preparation of this plan shall be included in the full funding grant agreement as an eligible activity.

"(II) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—The plan submitted under subclause (I) shall provide for—

"(aa) the collection of data on the current transit system regarding transit service levels and ridership patterns, including origins and destinations, access modes, trip purposes, and rider characteristics;

"(bb) documentation of the predicted scope, service levels, capital costs, operating costs, and ridership of the project;

"(cc) collection of data on the transit system 2 years after the opening of the new start project, including analogous information on transit service levels and ridership patterns and information on the as-built scope and capital costs of the new start project; and

"(dd) analysis of the consistency of predicted project characteristics with the after data.

"(D) COLLECTION OF DATA ON CURRENT SYSTEM.—To be eligible for a full funding grant agreement, recipients shall have collected data on the current system, according to the plan required, before the beginning of construction of the proposed new start project. Collection of this data shall be included in the full funding grant agreement as an eligible activity.

"(E) PUBLIC PRIVATE PARTNERSHIP PILOT PROGRAM.—

"(i) AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary may establish a pilot program to demonstrate the advantages of public-private partnerships for certain fixed guideway systems development projects.

"(ii) IDENTIFICATION OF QUALIFIED PROJECTS.—The Secretary shall identify qualified public-private partnership projects as permitted by applicable State and local enabling laws and work with project sponsors to enhance project delivery and reduce overall costs.".

(h) GOVERNMENT SHARE OF NET PROJECT COST.—Section 5309(h) is amended to read as follows:

"(h) GOVERNMENT SHARE OF ADJUSTED NET PROJECT COST.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall estimate the net project cost based on engineering studies, studies of economic feasibility, and information on the expected use of equipment or facilities.

"(2) ADJUSTMENT FOR COMPLETION UNDER BUDGET.—The Secretary may adjust the final net project cost of a major capital investment project evaluated under subsections (e) and (f) to include the cost of eligible activities not included in the originally defined project if the Secretary determines that the originally defined project has been completed at a cost that is significantly below the original estimate.

"(3) MAXIMUM GOVERNMENT SHARE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A grant for the project shall be for 80 percent of the net project cost, or the net project cost as adjusted under paragraph (2), unless the grant recipient requests a lower grant percentage.

"(B) EXCEPTIONS.—The Secretary may provide a higher grant percentage than requested by the grant recipient if—

"(i) the Secretary determines that the net project cost of the project is not more than 10 percent higher than the net project cost estimated at the time the project was approved for advancement into preliminary engineering; and

"(ii) the ridership estimated for the project is not less than 90 percent of the ridership estimated for the project at the time the project was approved for advancement into preliminary engineering.

"(4) OTHER SOURCES.—The costs not funded by a grant under this section may be funded from—

"(A) an undistributed cash surplus;

"(B) a replacement or depreciation cash fund or reserve; or

"(C) new capital, including any Federal funds that are eligible to be expended for transportation.

"(5) PLANNED EXTENSION TO FIXED GUIDEWAY SYSTEM.—In addition to amounts allowed under paragraph (1), a planned extension to a fixed guideway system may include the cost of rolling stock previously purchased if the Secretary determines that only non-Federal funds were used and that the purchase was made for use on the extension. A refund or reduction of the costs not funded by a grant under this section may be made only if a refund of a proportional amount of the grant is made at the same time.

"(6) EXCEPTION.—The prohibitions on the use of funds for matching requirements under section 403(a)(5)(C)(vii) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 603(a)(5)(C)(vii)) shall not apply to amounts allowed under paragraph (4).".

(i) LOAN PROVISIONS AND FISCAL CAPACITY CONSIDERATIONS.—Section 5309 is amended—

(1) by striking subsections (i), (j), (k), and (l);

(2) by redesignating subsections (m) and (n) as subsections (i) and (j), respectively;

(3) by striking subsection (o) (as added by section 3009(i) of the Federal Transit Act of 1998); and

(4) by redesignating subsections (o) and (p) as subsections (k) and (l), respectively.

(j) ALLOCATING AMOUNTS.—Section 5309(i), as redesignated, is amended to read as follows:

"(i) ALLOCATING AMOUNTS.—

"(1) FISCAL YEAR 2005.—Of the amounts made available or appropriated for fiscal year 2005 under section 5338(a)(3)—

"(A) $1,437,829,600 shall be allocated for projects of not less than $75,000,000 for major capital projects for new fixed guideway systems and extensions of such systems under subsection (e) and projects for new fixed guideway or corridor improvement capital projects under subsection (f);

"(B) $1,204,684,800 shall be allocated for capital projects for fixed guideway modernization; and

"(C) $669,600,000 shall be allocated for capital projects for buses and bus-related equipment and facilities.

"(2) IN GENERAL.—Of the amounts made available or appropriated for fiscal year 2006 and each fiscal year thereafter for grants under this section pursuant to subsections (b)(4) and (c) of section 5338—

"(A) the amounts appropriated under section 5338(c) shall be allocated for major capital projects for—

"(i) new fixed guideway systems and extensions of not less than $75,000,000, in accordance with subsection (e); and

"(ii) projects for new fixed guideway or corridor improvement capital projects, in accordance with subsection (f); and

"(B) the amounts made available under section 5338(b)(4) shall be allocated for capital projects for buses and bus-related equipment and facilities.

"(3) FIXED GUIDEWAY MODERNIZATION.—The amounts made available for fixed guideway modernization under section 5338(b)(2)(K) for fiscal year 2006 and each fiscal year thereafter shall be allocated in accordance with section 5337.

"(4) PRELIMINARY ENGINEERING.—Not more that 8 percent of the allocation described in paragraphs (1)(A) and (2)(A) may be expended on preliminary engineering.

"(5) FUNDING FOR FERRY BOATS.—Of the amounts described in paragraphs (1)(A) and (2)(A), $10,400,000 shall be available in each of the fiscal years 2005 through 2009 for capital projects in Alaska and Hawaii for new fixed guideway systems and extension projects utilizing ferry boats, ferry boat terminals, or approaches to ferry boat terminals.

"(6) BUS AND BUS FACILITY GRANTS.—

"(A) CONSIDERATIONS.—In making grants under paragraphs (1)(C) and (2)(B), the Secretary shall consider the age and condition of buses, bus fleets, related equipment, and bus-related facilities.

"(B) PROJECTS NOT IN URBANIZED AREAS.—Of the amounts made available under paragraphs (1)(C) and (2)(B), not less than 5.5 percent shall be available in each fiscal year for projects that are not in urbanized areas.

"(6) CONTRACTOR PERFORMANCE INCENTIVE REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the enactment of the Federal Public Transportation Act of 2005, the Secretary shall submit a report to the committees and subcommittees listed under paragraph (3) on the suitability of allowing contractors to public transportation agencies that undertake major capital investments under this section to receive performance incentive awards if a project is completed for less than the original estimated cost.".

(l) RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF BUS CATEGORY FUNDS FOR FIXED GUIDEWAY PROJECTS.—Funds provided to grantees under the bus and bus facility category for fixed guideway ferry and gondola projects in the Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations Acts for any of fiscal years 1998 through 2005, or accompanying committee reports, that remain available and unobligated may be used for fixed guideway projects under this section.

SEC. 6012. NEW FREEDOM FOR ELDERLY PERSONS AND PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 5310 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 5310. New freedom for elderly persons and persons with disabilities

"(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—

"(1) AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary may award grants to a State for capital public transportation projects that are planned, designed, and carried out to meet the needs of elderly individuals and individuals with disabilities, with priority given to the needs of these individuals to access necessary health care.

"(2) ACQUISITION OF PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION SERVICES.—A capital public transportation project under this section may include acquiring public transportation services as an eligible capital expense.

"(3) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—A State may use not more than 15 percent of the amounts received under this section to administer, plan, and provide technical assistance for a project funded under this section.

"(b) ALLOTMENTS AMONG STATES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—From amounts made available or appropriated in each fiscal year under subsections (a)(1)(C)(iv) and (b)(2)(D) of section 5338 for grants under this section, the Secretary shall allot amounts to each State under a formula based on the number of elderly individuals and individuals with disabilities in each State.

"(2) TRANSFER OF FUNDS.—Any funds allotted to a State under paragraph (1) may be transferred by the State to the apportionments made under sections 5311(c) and 5336 if such funds are only used for eligible projects selected under this section.

"(3) REALLOCATION OF FUNDS.—A State receiving a grant under this section may reallocate such grant funds to—

"(A) a private nonprofit organization;

"(B) a public transportation agency or authority; or

"(C) a governmental authority that—

"(i) has been approved by the State to coordinate services for elderly individuals and individuals with disabilities;

"(ii) certifies that nonprofit organizations are not readily available in the area that can provide the services described under this subsection; or

"(iii) will provide services to persons with disabilities that exceed those services required by the Americans with Disabilities Act.

"(c) GOVERNMENT SHARE.—

"(1) MAXIMUM.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A grant for a capital project under this section may not exceed 80 percent of the net capital costs of the project, as determined by the Secretary.

"(B) EXCEPTION.—A State described in section 120(d) of title 23 shall receive an increased Government share in accordance with the formula under that section.

"(2) REMAINING COSTS.—The costs of a capital project under this section that are not funded through a grant under this section—

"(A) may be funded from an undistributed cash surplus, a replacement or depreciation cash fund or reserve, a service agreement with a State or local social service agency or a private social service organization, or new capital; and

"(B) may be derived from amounts appropriated to or made available to any Federal agency (other than the Department of Transportation, except for Federal Lands Highway funds) that are eligible to be expended for transportation.

"(3) EXCEPTION.—For purposes of paragraph (2), the prohibitions on the use of funds for matching requirements under section 403(a)(5)(C)(vii) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 603(a)(5)(C)(vii)) shall not apply to Federal or State funds to be used for transportation purposes.

"(d) GRANT REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A grant recipient under this section shall be subject to the requirements of a grant recipient under section 5307 to the extent the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(2) CERTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) FUND TRANSFERS.—A grant recipient under this section that transfers funds to a project funded under section 5336 in accordance with subsection (b)(2) shall certify that the project for which the funds are requested has been coordinated with private nonprofit providers of services under this section.

"(B) PROJECT SELECTION AND PLAN DEVELOPMENT.—Each grant recipient under this section shall certify that—

"(i) the projects selected were derived from a locally developed, coordinated public transit-human services transportation plan; and

"(ii) the plan was developed through a process that included representatives of public, private, and nonprofit transportation and human services providers and participation by the public.

"(C) ALLOCATIONS TO SUBRECIPIENTS.—Each grant recipient under this section shall certify that allocations of the grant to subrecipients, if any, are distributed on a fair and equitable basis.

"(e) STATE PROGRAM OF PROJECTS.—

"(1) SUBMISSION TO SECRETARY.—Each State shall annually submit a program of transportation projects to the Secretary for approval with an assurance that the program provides for maximum feasible coordination between transportation services funded under this section and transportation services assisted by other Federal sources.

"(2) USE OF FUNDS.—Each State may use amounts made available to carry out this section to provide transportation services for elderly individuals and individuals with disabilities if such services are included in an approved State program of projects.

"(f) LEASING VEHICLES.—Vehicles acquired under this section may be leased to local governmental authorities to improve transportation services designed to meet the needs of elderly individuals and individuals with disabilities.

"(g) MEAL DELIVERY FOR HOMEBOUND INDIVIDUALS.—Public transportation service providers receiving assistance under this section or section 5311(c) may coordinate and assist in regularly providing meal delivery service for homebound individuals if the delivery service does not conflict with providing public transportation service or reduce service to public transportation passengers.

"(h) TRANSFERS OF FACILITIES AND EQUIPMENT.—With the consent of the recipient in possession of a facility or equipment acquired with a grant under this section, a State may transfer the facility or equipment to any recipient eligible to receive assistance under this chapter if the facility or equipment will continue to be used as required under this section.

"(i) FARES NOT REQUIRED.—This section does not require that elderly individuals and individuals with disabilities be charged a fare.".

“(A) the Secretary determines that such financial assistance is essential to a program of projects required under sections 5303, 5304, and 5306;

“(B) the Secretary determines that the program provides for the participation of private companies engaged in public transportation to the maximum extent feasible; and

“(C) just compensation under State or local law will be paid to the company for its franchise or property.”; and

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking “(2)” and inserting the following:

“(2) LIMITATION.—”;

(2) by amending subsection (b) to read as follows:

“(b) NOTICE AND PUBLIC HEARING.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—An application for a grant under this chapter for a capital project that will substantially affect a community, or the public transportation service of a community, shall include, in the environmental record for the project, evidence that the applicant has—

“(A) provided an adequate opportunity for public review and comment on the project;

“(B) held a public hearing on the project if the project affects significant economic, social, or environmental interests;

"(C) considered the economic, social, and environmental effects of the project; and

"(D) found that the project is consistent with official plans for developing the urban area.

"(2) Contents of notice.—Notice of a hearing under this subsection—

"(A) shall include a concise description of the proposed project; and

"(B) shall be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the geographic area the project will serve.";

(3) by amending subsection (e) to read as follows:

"(e) New Technology.—A grant for financial assistance under this chapter for new technology, including innovative or improved products, techniques, or methods, shall be subject to the requirements of section 5309 to the extent the Secretary determines to be appropriate.";

(4) in subsection (f)—

(A) by striking "(1)" and inserting the following:

"(1) In general.—";

(B) by striking paragraph (2);

(C) by striking "This subsection" and inserting the following:

"(2) Exceptions.—This subsection; and

(D) by adding at the end the following:

"(3) Penalty.—If the Secretary determines that an applicant, governmental authority, or publicly owned operator has violated the agreement required under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall bar the applicant, authority, or operator from receiving Federal transit assistance in an amount the Secretary determines to be appropriate.";

(5) in subsection (g), by striking "103(e)(4) and 142 (a) or (c)" each place it appears and inserting "133 and 142";

(6) by amending subsection (h) to read as follows:

"(h) Transfer of Lands or Interests in Lands Owned by the United States.—

"(1) Request by secretary.—If the Secretary determines that any part of the lands or interests in lands owned by the United States and made available as a result of a military base closure is necessary for transit purposes eligible under this chapter, including corridor preservation, the Secretary shall submit a request to the head of the Federal agency supervising the administration of such lands or interests in lands. Such request shall include a map showing the portion of such lands or interests in lands, which is desired to be transferred for public transportation purposes.

"(2) Transfer of land.—If 4 months after submitting a request under paragraph (1), the Secretary does not receive a response from the Federal agency described in paragraph (1) that certifies that the proposed appropriation of land is contrary to the public interest or inconsistent with the purposes for which such land has been reserved, or if the head of such agency agrees to the utilization or transfer under conditions necessary for the adequate protection and utilization of the reserve, such land or interests in land may be utilized or transferred to a State, local governmental authority, or public transportation operator for such purposes and subject to the conditions specified by such agency.

"(3) Reversion.—If at any time the lands or interests in land utilized or transferred under paragraph (2) are no longer needed for public transportation purposes, the State, local governmental authority, or public transportation operator that received the land shall notify to the Secretary, and such lands shall immediately revert to the control of the head of the Federal agency from which the land was originally transferred.";

(7) in subsection (j)(5), by striking "Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-240, 105 Stat. 1914)" and inserting "Federal Public Transportation Act of 2005";

(8) by amending subsection (l) to read as follows:

"(l) Relationship to Other Laws.—Section 1001 of title 18 applies to a certificate, submission, or statement provided under this chapter. The Secretary may terminate financial assistance under this chapter and seek reimbursement directly, or by offsetting amounts, available under this chapter, if the Secretary determines that a recipient of such financial assistance has made a false or fraudulent statement or related act in connection with a Federal transit program.";

(9) in subsection (m), by adding at the end the following: "Requirements to perform preaward and postdelivery reviews of rolling stock purchases to ensure compliance with subsection (j) shall not apply to private nonprofit organizations or to grantees serving urbanized areas with a population of fewer than 1,000,000.";

(10) in subsection (o), by striking "the Transportation Infrastructure Finance and Innovation Act of 1998" and inserting "subchapter II of chapter 1 of title 23"; and

(11) by adding at the end the following:

"(p) Bond Proceeds Eligible for Local Share.—

"(1) In general.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a recipient of assistance under section 5307 or 5309, may use the proceeds from the issuance of revenue bonds as part of the local matching funds for a capital project.

"(2) Reimbursement by secretary.—The Secretary may reimburse an eligible recipient for deposits of bond proceeds in a debt service reserve that the recipient established pursuant to section 5302(a)(1)(K) from amounts made available to the recipient under section 5307 or 5309.";

"(q) Prohibited Use of Funds.—Grant funds received under this chapter may not be used to pay ordinary governmental or nonproject operating expenses.".

SEC. 6023. SPECIAL PROVISIONS FOR CAPITAL PROJECTS.

(a) In General.—Section 5324 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 5324. Special provisions for capital projects

"(a) Real Property and Relocation Services.—Whenever real property is acquired or furnished as a required contribution incident to a project, the Secretary shall not approve the application for financial assistance unless the applicant has made all payments and provided all assistance and assurances that are required of a State agency under sections 210 and 305 of the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 4630 and 4655). The Secretary must be advised of specific references to any State law that are believed to be an exception to section 301 or 302 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 4651 and 4652).

"(b) Advance Real Property Acquisitions.—

(1) In general.—The Secretary may participate in the acquisition of real property for any project that may use the property if the Secretary determines that external market forces are jeopardizing the potential use of the property for the project and if—

"(A) there are offers on the open real estate market to convey that property for a use that is incompatible with the project under study;

"(B) there is an imminent threat of development or redevelopment of the property for a use that is incompatible with the project under study;

"(C) recent appraisals reflect a rapid increase in the fair market value of the property;

"(D) the property, because it is located near an existing transportation facility, is likely to be developed and to be needed for a future transportation improvement; or

"(E) the property owner can demonstrate that, for health, safety, or financial reasons, retaining ownership of the property poses an undue hardship on the owner in comparison to other affected property owners and requests the acquisition to alleviate that hardship.

"(2) Environmental reviews.—Property acquired in accordance with this subsection may not be developed in anticipation of the project until all required environmental reviews for the project have been completed.

"(3) Limitation.—The Secretary shall limit the size and number of properties acquired under this subsection as necessary to avoid any prejudice to the Secretary's objective evaluation of project alternatives.

"(4) Exemption.—An acquisition under this section shall be considered an exempt project under section 176 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7506).

"(c) Railroad Corridor Preservation.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary may assist an applicant to acquire railroad right-of-way before the completion of the environmental reviews for any project that may use the right-of-way if the acquisition is otherwise permitted under Federal law. The Secretary may establish restrictions on such an acquisition as the Secretary determines to be necessary and appropriate.

"(2) Environmental reviews.—Railroad right-of-way acquired under this subsection may not be developed in anticipation of the project until all required environmental reviews for the project have been completed.

"(d) Consideration of Economic, Social, and Environmental Interests.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary may not approve an application for financial assistance for a capital project under this chapter unless the Secretary determines that the project has been developed in accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.). The Secretary's findings under this paragraph shall be made a matter of public record.

"(2) Cooperation and consultation.—In carrying out section 5301(e), the Secretary shall cooperate and consult with the Secretary of the Interior and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency on each project that may have a substantial impact on the environment.".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The item relating to section 5324 in the table of sections for chapter 53 is amended to read as follows:

"5324. Special provisions for capital projects.".

SEC. 6024. CONTRACT REQUIREMENTS.

(a) In General.—Section 5325 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 5325. Contract requirements

"(a) Competition.—Recipients of assistance under this chapter shall conduct all procurement transactions in a manner that provides full and open competition as determined by the Secretary.

"(b) Architectural, Engineering, and Design Contracts.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A contract or requirement for program management, architectural engineering, construction management, a feasibility study, and preliminary engineering, design, architectural, engineering, surveying, mapping, or related services for a project for which Federal assistance is provided under this chapter shall be awarded in the same manner as a contract for architectural and engineering services is negotiated under chapter 11 of title 40, or an equivalent qualifications-based requirement of a State. This subsection does not apply to the extent a State has adopted or adopts by law a formal procedure for procuring those services.

"(2) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—When awarding a contract described in paragraph (1), recipients of assistance under this chapter shall comply with the following requirements:

"(A) Any contract or subcontract awarded under this chapter shall be performed and audited in compliance with cost principles contained in part 31 of title 48, Code of Federal Regulations (commonly known as the Federal Acquisition Regulation).

"(B) A recipient of funds under a contract or subcontract awarded under this chapter shall accept indirect cost rates established in accordance with the Federal Acquisition Regulation for 1-year applicable accounting periods by a cognizant Federal or State government agency, if such rates are not currently under dispute.

"(C) After a firm's indirect cost rates are accepted under subparagraph (B), the recipient of the funds shall apply such rates for the purposes of contract estimation, negotiation, administration, reporting, and contract payment, and shall not be limited by administrative or de facto ceilings.

"(D) A recipient requesting or using the cost and rate data described in subparagraph (C) shall notify any affected firm before such request or use. Such data shall be confidential and shall not be accessible or provided by the group of agencies sharing cost data under this subparagraph, except by written permission of the audited firm. If prohibited by law, such cost and rate data shall not be disclosed under any circumstances.

"(c) EFFICIENT PROCUREMENT.—A recipient may award a procurement contract under this chapter to other than the lowest bidder if the award furthers an objective consistent with the purposes of this chapter, including improved long-term operating efficiency and lower long-term costs.

"(d) DESIGN-BUILD PROJECTS.—

"(1) DEFINED TERM.—As used in this subsection, the term 'design-build project'—

"(A) means a project under which a recipient enters into a contract with a seller, firm, or consortium of firms to design and build an operable segment of a public transportation system that meets specific performance criteria; and

"(B) may include an option to finance, or operate for a period of time, the system or segment or any combination of designing, building, operating, or maintaining such system or segment.

"(2) FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR CAPITAL COSTS.—Federal financial assistance under this chapter may be provided for the capital costs of a design-build project after the recipient complies with Government requirements.

"(e) ROLLING STOCK.—

"(1) ACQUISITION.—A recipient of financial assistance under this chapter may enter into a contract to expend that assistance to acquire rolling stock—

"(A) with a party selected through a competitive procurement process; or

"(B) based on—

"(i) initial capital costs; or

"(ii) performance, standardization, life cycle costs, and other factors.

"(2) MULTIYEAR CONTRACTS.—A recipient procuring rolling stock with Federal financial assistance under this chapter may make a multiyear contract, including options, to buy not more than 5 years of requirements for rolling stock and replacement parts. The Secretary shall allow a recipient to act on a cooperative basis to procure rolling stock under this paragraph and in accordance with other Federal procurement requirements.

"(f) EXAMINATION OF RECORDS.—Upon request, the Secretary and the Comptroller General, or any of their representatives, shall have access to and the right to examine and inspect all records, documents, and papers, including contracts, related to a project for which a grant is made under this chapter.

"(g) GRANT PROHIBITION.—A grant awarded under this chapter may not be used to support a procurement that uses an exclusionary or discriminatory specification.

"(h) BUS DEALER REQUIREMENTS.—No State law requiring buses to be purchased through in-State dealers shall apply to vehicles purchased with a grant under this chapter.

"(i) AWARDS TO RESPONSIBLE CONTRACTORS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Federal financial assistance under this chapter may be provided for contracts only if a recipient awards such contracts to responsible contractors possessing the ability to successfully perform under the terms and conditions of a proposed procurement.

"(2) CRITERIA.—Before making an award to a contractor under paragraph (1), a recipient shall consider—

"(A) the integrity of the contractor;

"(B) the contractor's compliance with public policy;

"(C) the contractor's past performance, including the performance reported in the Contractor Performance Assessment Reports required under section 5309(m)(4); and

"(D) the contractor's financial and technical resources.".

SEC. 6037. APPORTIONMENTS BASED ON GROWING STATES FORMULA FACTORS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 53 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 5340. Apportionments based on growing States and high density State formula factors

"(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term 'State' shall mean each of the 50 States of the United States.

"(b) ALLOCATION.—Of the amounts made available for each fiscal year under section 5338(b)(2)(J), the Secretary shall apportion—

"(1) 50 percent to States and urbanized areas in accordance with subsection (c); and

"(2) 50 percent to States and urbanized areas in accordance with subsection (d).

"(c) GROWING STATE APPORTIONMENTS.—

"(1) APPORTIONMENT AMONG STATES.—The amounts apportioned under subsection (b)(1) shall provide each State with an amount equal to the total amount apportioned multiplied by a ratio equal to the population of that State forecast for the year that is 15 years after the most recent decennial census, divided by the total population of all States forecast for the year that is 15 years after the most recent decennial census. Such forecast shall be based on the population trend for each State between the most recent decennial census and the most recent estimate of population made by the Secretary of Commerce.

"(2) APPORTIONMENTS BETWEEN URBANIZED AREAS AND OTHER THAN URBANIZED AREAS IN EACH STATE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall apportion amounts to each State under paragraph (1) so that urbanized areas in that State receive an amount equal to the amount apportioned to that State multiplied by a ratio equal to the sum of the forecast population of all urbanized areas in that State divided by the total forecast population of that State. In making the apportionment under this subparagraph, the Secretary shall utilize any available forecasts made by the State. If no forecasts are available, the Secretary shall utilize data on urbanized areas and total population from the most recent decennial census.

"(B) REMAINING AMOUNTS.—Amounts remaining for each State after apportionment under subparagraph (A) shall be apportioned to that State and added to the amount made available for grants under section 5311.

"(3) APPORTIONMENTS AMONG URBANIZED AREAS IN EACH STATE.—The Secretary shall apportion amounts made available to urbanized areas in each State under paragraph (2)(A) so that each urbanized area receives an amount equal to the amount apportioned under paragraph (2)(A) multiplied by a ratio equal to the population of each urbanized area divided by the sum of populations of all urbanized areas in the State. Amounts apportioned to each urbanized area shall be added to amounts apportioned to that urbanized area under section 5336, and made available for grants under section 5307.

"(d) HIGH DENSITY STATE APPORTIONMENTS.—Amounts to be apportioned under subsection (b)(2) shall be apportioned as follows:

"(1) ELIGIBLE STATES.—The Secretary shall designate as eligible for an apportionment under this subsection all States with a population density in excess of 370 persons per square mile.

"(2) STATE URBANIZED LAND FACTOR.—For each State qualifying for an apportionment under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall calculate an amount equal to—

"(A) the total land area of the State (in square miles); multiplied by

"(B) 370; multiplied by

"(C)(i) the population of the State in urbanized areas; divided by

"(ii) the total population of the State.

"(3) STATE APPORTIONMENT FACTOR.—For each State qualifying for an apportionment under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall calculate an amount equal to the difference between the total population of the State less the amount calculated in paragraph (2).

"(4) STATE APPORTIONMENT.—Each State qualifying for an apportionment under paragraph (1) shall receive an amount equal to the amount to be apportioned under this subsection multiplied by the amount calculated for the State under paragraph (3) divided by the sum of the amounts calculated under paragraph (3) for all States qualifying for an apportionment under paragraph (1).

"(5) APPORTIONMENTS BETWEEN URBANIZED AREAS AND OTHER THAN URBANIZED AREAS IN EACH STATE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall apportion amounts apportioned to each State under paragraph (4) so that urbanized areas in that State receive an amount equal to the amount apportioned to that State multiplied by a ratio equal to the sum of the population of all urbanized areas in that State divided by the total population of that State.

"(B) REMAINING AMOUNTS.—Amounts remaining for each State after apportionment under subparagraph (a) shall be apportioned to that State and added to the amount made available for grants under section 5311.

"(6) APPORTIONMENTS AMONG URBANIZED AREAS IN EACH STATE.—The Secretary shall apportion amounts made available to urbanized areas in each State under paragraph (5)(A) so that each urbanized area receives an amount equal to the amount apportioned under paragraph (5)(A) multiplied by a ratio equal to the population of each urbanized area divided by the sum of populations of all urbanized areas in the State. Amounts apportioned to each urbanized area shall be added to amounts apportioned to that urbanized area under section 5336, and made available for grants under section 5307.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 53 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"5340. Apportionments based on growing States and high density States formula factors.".

"Sec. 3038. Over-the-road bus accessibility program.".

SEC. 6040. ALTERNATIVE TRANSPORTATION IN PARKS AND PUBLIC LANDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 53 is amended by inserting after section 5315 the following:

"§ 5316. Alternative transportation in parks and public lands

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) AUTHORIZATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, may award a grant or enter into a contract, cooperative agreement, interagency agreement, intraagency agreement, or other transaction to carry out a qualified project under this section to enhance the protection of America's National Parks and public lands and increase the enjoyment of those visiting the parks and public lands by ensuring access to all, including persons with disabilities, improving conservation and park and public land opportunities in urban areas through partnering with state and local governments, and improving park and public land transportation infrastructure.

"(B) CONSULTATION WITH OTHER AGENCIES.—To the extent that projects are proposed or funded in eligible areas that are not within the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior, the Secretary of the Interior shall consult with the heads of the relevant Federal land management agencies in carrying out the responsibilities under this section.

"(2) USE OF FUNDS.—A grant, cooperative agreement, interagency agreement, intraagency agreement, or other transaction for a qualified project under this section shall be available to finance the leasing of equipment and facilities for use in public transportation, subject to any regulation that the Secretary may prescribe limiting the grant or agreement to leasing arrangements that are more cost-effective than purchase or construction.

"(b) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions shall apply:

"(1) ELIGIBLE AREA.—The term 'eligible area' means any federally owned or managed park, refuge, or recreational area that is open to the general public, including—

"(A) a unit of the National Park System;

"(B) a unit of the National Wildlife Refuge System;

"(C) a recreational area managed by the Bureau of Land Management; and

"(D) a recreation area managed by the Bureau of Reclamation.

"(2) FEDERAL LAND MANAGEMENT AGENCY.—The term 'Federal land management agency' means a Federal agency that manages an eligible area.

"(3) ALTERNATIVE TRANSPORTATION.—The term 'alternative transportation' means transportation by bus, rail, or any other publicly or privately owned conveyance that provides to the public general or special service on a regular basis, including sightseeing service.

"(4) QUALIFIED PARTICIPANT.—The term 'qualified participant' means—

"(A) a Federal land management agency; or

"(B) a State, tribal, or local governmental authority with jurisdiction over land in the vicinity of an eligible area acting with the consent of the Federal land management agency, alone or in partnership with a Federal land management agency or other Governmental or nongovernmental participant.

"(5) QUALIFIED PROJECT.—The term 'qualified project' means a planning or capital project in or in the vicinity of an eligible area that—

"(A) is an activity described in section 5302, 5303, 5304, 5308, or 5309(a)(1)(A);

"(B) involves—

"(i) the purchase of rolling stock that incorporates clean fuel technology or the replacement of buses of a type in use on the date of enactment of this section with clean fuel vehicles; or

"(ii) the deployment of alternative transportation vehicles that introduce innovative technologies or methods;

"(C) relates to the capital costs of coordinating the Federal land management agency public transportation systems with other public transportation systems;

"(D) provides a nonmotorized transportation system (including the provision of facilities for pedestrians, bicycles, and nonmotorized watercraft);

"(E) provides waterborne access within or in the vicinity of an eligible area, as appropriate to and consistent with this section; or

"(F) is any other alternative transportation project that—

"(i) enhances the environment;

"(ii) prevents or mitigates an adverse impact on a natural resource;

"(iii) improves Federal land management agency resource management;

"(iv) improves visitor mobility and accessibility and the visitor experience;

"(v) reduces congestion and pollution (including noise pollution and visual pollution); or

"(vi) conserves a natural, historical, or cultural resource (excluding rehabilitation or restoration of a non-transportation facility).

"(c) FEDERAL AGENCY COOPERATIVE ARRANGEMENTS.—The Secretary shall develop cooperative arrangements with the Secretary of the Interior that provide for—

"(1) technical assistance in alternative transportation;

"(2) interagency and multidisciplinary teams to develop Federal land management agency alternative transportation policy, procedures, and coordination; and

"(3) the development of procedures and criteria relating to the planning, selection, and funding of qualified projects and the implementation and oversight of the program of projects in accordance with this section.

"(d) LIMITATION ON USE OF AVAILABLE AMOUNTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, may use not more than 10 percent of the amount made available for a fiscal year under section 5338(b)(2)(H) to carry out planning, research, and technical assistance under this section, including the development of technology appropriate for use in a qualified project.

“(2) ADDITIONAL AMOUNTS.—Amounts made available under this subsection are in addition to amounts otherwise available to the Secretary to carry out planning, research, and technical assistance under this title or any other provision of law.

“(3) MAXIMUM AMOUNT.—No qualified project shall receive more than 12 percent of the total amount made available to carry out this section under section 5338(b)(2)(H) for any fiscal year.

“(e) PLANNING PROCESS.—In undertaking a qualified project under this section—

“(1) if the qualified participant is a Federal land management agency—

“(A) the Secretary, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Interior, shall develop transportation planning procedures that are consistent with—

“(i) the metropolitan planning provisions under section 5303 of this title;

“(ii) the statewide planning provisions under section 5304 of this title; and

“(iii) the public participation requirements under section 5307(e); and

“(B) in the case of a qualified project that is at a unit of the National Park system, the planning process shall be consistent with the general management plans of the unit of the National Park system; and

“(2) if the qualified participant is a State or local governmental authority, or more than one State or local governmental authority in more than one State, the qualified participant shall—

“(A) comply with the metropolitan planning provisions under section 5303 of this title;

“(B) comply with the statewide planning provisions under section 5304 of this title;

“(C) comply with the public participation requirements under section 5307(e) of this title; and “(D) consult with the appropriate Federal land management agency during the planning process.

“(f) COST SHARING.—

“(1) The Secretary, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Interior, shall establish the agency share of net project cost to be provided under this section to a qualified participant.

“(2) In establishing the agency share of net project cost to be provided under this section, the Secretary shall consider—

“(A) visitation levels and the revenue derived from user fees in the eligible area in which the qualified project is carried out;

“(B) the extent to which the qualified participant coordinates with a public transportation authority or private entity engaged in public transportation;

“(C) private investment in the qualified project, including the provision of contract services, joint development activities, and the use of innovative financing mechanisms;

“(D) the clear and direct benefit to the qualified participant; and “(E) any other matters that the Secretary considers appropriate to carry out this section.

“(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Federal funds appropriated to any Federal land management agency may be counted toward the non-agency share of the net project cost of a qualified project.

“(g) SELECTION OF QUALIFIED PROJECTS.—

“(1) The Secretary of the Interior, after consultation with and in cooperation with the Secretary, shall determine the final selection and funding of an annual program of qualified projects in accordance with this section.

“(2) In determining whether to include a project in the annual program of qualified projects, the Secretary of the Interior shall consider—

“(A) the justification for the qualified project, including the extent to which the qualified project would conserve resources, prevent or mitigate adverse impact, and enhance the environment;

“(B) the location of the qualified project, to ensure that the selected qualified projects—

“(i) are geographically diverse nationwide; and

“(ii) include qualified projects in eligible areas located in both urban areas and rural areas;

“(C) the size of the qualified project, to ensure that there is a balanced distribution;

“(D) the historical and cultural significance of a qualified project;

“(E) safety;

“(F) the extent to which the qualified project would—

“(i) enhance livable communities;

“(ii) reduce pollution (including noise pollution, air pollution, and visual pollution);

“(iii) reduce congestion; and

“(iv) improve the mobility of people in the most efficient manner; and

“(G) any other matters that the Secretary considers appropriate to carry out this section, including—

“(i) visitation levels;

“(ii) the use of innovative financing or joint development strategies; and “(iii) coordination with gateway communities.

“(h) QUALIFIED PROJECTS CARRIED OUT IN ADVANCE.—

“(1) When a qualified participant carries out any part of a qualified project without assistance under this section in accordance with all applicable procedures and requirements, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, may pay the share of the net capital project cost of a qualified project if—

“(A) the qualified participant applies for the payment;

“(B) the Secretary approves the payment; and

“(C) before carrying out that part of the qualified project, the Secretary approves the plans and specifications in the same manner as plans and specifications are approved for other projects assisted under this section.

“(2)(A) The cost of carrying out part of a qualified project under paragraph (1) includes the amount of interest earned and payable on bonds issued by a State or local governmental authority, to the extent that proceeds of the bond are expended in carrying out that part.

“(B) The rate of interest under this paragraph may not exceed the most favorable rate reasonably available for the qualified project at the time of borrowing.

“(C) The qualified participant shall certify, in a manner satisfactory to the Secretary, that the qualified participant has exercised reasonable diligence in seeking the most favorable interest rate.

“(i) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.—

“(1) SECTION 5307.—A qualified participant under this section shall be subject to the requirements of sections 5307 and 5333(a) to the extent the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

“(2) OTHER REQUIREMENTS.—A qualified participant under this section is subject to any other terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions that the Secretary determines to be appropriate to carry out this section, including requirements for the distribution of proceeds on disposition of real property and equipment resulting from a qualified project assisted under this section.

“(3) PROJECT MANAGEMENT PLAN.—If the amount of assistance anticipated to be required for a qualified project under this section is not less than $25,000,000—

“(A) the qualified project shall, to the extent the Secretary considers appropriate, be carried out through a full funding grant agreement, in accordance with section 5309(g); and

“(B) the qualified participant shall prepare a project management plan in accordance with section 5327(a).

“(i) ASSET MANAGEMENT.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, may transfer the interest of the Department of Transportation in, and control over, all facilities and equipment acquired under this section to a qualified participant for use and disposition in accordance with any property management regulations that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

“(j) COORDINATION OF RESEARCH AND DEPLOYMENT OF NEW TECHNOLOGIES.—

“(1) The Secretary, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Interior, may undertake, or make grants, cooperative agreements, contracts (including agreements with departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government) or other transactions for research, development, and deployment of new technologies in eligible areas that will—

“(A) conserve resources;

“(B) prevent or mitigate adverse environmental impact;

“(C) improve visitor mobility, accessibility, and enjoyment; and

“(D) reduce pollution (including noise pollution and visual pollution).

“(2) The Secretary may request and receive appropriate information from any source.

“(3) Grants, cooperative agreements, contracts or other transactions under paragraph (1) shall be awarded from amounts allocated under subsection (c)(1).

“(k) INNOVATIVE FINANCING.—A qualified project receiving financial assistance under this section shall be eligible for funding through a state infrastructure bank or other innovative financing mechanism available to finance an eligible project under this chapter.

“(l) REPORTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, shall annually submit a report on the allocation of amounts made available to assist qualified projects under this section to—

“(A) the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate; and

“(B) the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives.

“(2) ANNUAL AND SUPPLEMENTAL REPORTS.—The report required under paragraph (1) shall be included in the report submitted under section 5309(m).”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The table of sections for chapter 53 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 5315 the following:

“5316. Alternative transportation in parks and public lands.”.

SEC. 6041. OBLIGATION CEILING.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the total of all obligations from amounts made available from the Mass Transit Account of the Highway Trust Fund by, and amounts appropriated under, subsections (a) through (c) of section 5338 of title 49, United States Code, shall not exceed—

(1) $7,646,336,000 for fiscal year 2005;

(2) $8,208,645,000 for fiscal year 2006;

(3) $8,673,850,000 for fiscal year 2007;

(4) $9,477,988,000 for fiscal year 2008; and

(5) $10,327,303,000 for fiscal year 2009.

SEC. 6042. ADJUSTMENTS FOR THE SURFACE TRANSPORTATION EXTENSION ACT OF 2004.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary shall reduce the total apportionments and allocations made for fiscal year 2005 to each grant recipient under section 5338 of title 49, United States Code, by the amount apportioned to that recipient pursuant to section 8 of the Surface Transportation Extension Act of 2004 part V (118 Stat. 1154).

(b) FIXED GUIDEWAY MODERNIZATION ADJUSTMENT.—In making the apportionments described in subsection (a), the Secretary shall adjust the amount apportioned for fiscal year 2005 to each urbanized area for fixed guideway modernization to reflect the apportionment method set forth in 5337(a) of title 49, United States Code.

SEC. 6043. DISADVANTAGED BUSINESS ENTERPRISE.

Section 1821(a) of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005 shall apply to all funds authorized or otherwise made available under this title.

SA 574. Mrs. DOLE (for herself and Mr. BURR) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill H.R. 3, Reserved: which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . TAX TREATMENT OF STATE OWNERSHIP OF RAILROAD REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.

(a) IN GENERAL.—If a State owns all of the outstanding stock of a corporation—

(1) which is a real estate investment trust on the date of the enactment of this Act,

(2) which is a non-operating class III railroad, and

(3) substantially all of the activities of which consist of the ownership, leasing, and operation by such corporation of facilities, equipment, and other property used by the corporation or other persons for railroad transportation and for economic development purposes for the benefit of the State and its citizens, then, to the extent such activities are of a type which are an essential governmental function within the meaning of section 115 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, income derived from such activities by the corporation shall be treated as accruing to the State for purposes of section 115 of such Code.

(b) GAIN OR LOSS NOT RECOGNIZED ON CONVERSION.—Notwithstanding section 337(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986—

(1) no gain or loss shall be recognized under section 336 or 337 of such Code, and

(2) no change in basis of the property of such corporation shall occur, because of any change of status of a corporation to a tax-exempt entity by reason of the application of subsection (a).

(c) TAX-EXEMPT FINANCING.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Any obligation issued by a corporation described in subsection (a) at least 95 percent of the net proceeds (as defined in section 150(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) of which are to be used to provide for the acquisition, construction, or improvement of railroad transportation infrastructure (including railroad terminal facilities)—

(A) shall be treated as a State or local bond (within the meaning of section 103(c) of such Code), and

(B) shall not be treated as a private activity bond (within the meaning of section 103(b)(1) of such Code) solely by reason of the ownership or use of such railroad transportation infrastructure by the corporation.

(2) NO INFERENCE.—Except as provided in paragraph (1), nothing in this subsection shall be construed to affect the treatment of the private use of proceeds or property financed with obligations issued by the corporation for purposes of section 103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and part IV of subchapter B of such Code.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

(1) REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.—The term "real estate investment trust" has the meaning given such term by section 856(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(2) NON-OPERATING CLASS III RAILROAD.—The term "non-operating class III railroad" has the meaning given such term by part A of subtitle IV of title 49, United States Code (49 U.S.C. 10101 et seq.), and the regulations thereunder.

(3) STATE.—The term "State" includes—

(A) the District of Columbia and any possession of the United States, and

(B) any authority, agency, or public corporation of a State.

(e) APPLICABILITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), this section shall apply on and after the date on which a State becomes the owner of all of the outstanding stock of a corporation described in subsection (a) through action of such corporation's board of directors.

(2) EXCEPTION.—This section shall not apply to any State which—

(A) becomes the owner of all of the voting stock of a corporation described in subsection (a) after December 31, 2003, or

(B) becomes the owner of all of the outstanding stock of a corporation described in subsection (a) after December 31, 2006.

SA 575. Mr. SPECTER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3, Reserved; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of subtitle B of title II, add the following:

SEC. 21 . TRANSPORTATION TECHNOLOGY INNOVATION AND DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 5117(b)(3) of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (Public Law 105–178; 112 Stat. 449) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B)—

(A) in clause (i)—

(i) in the first sentence—

(I) by striking "Build an" and inserting "Build or integrate an"; and

(II) by striking "2,000,000" and inserting "2,500,000"; and

(ii) in the second sentence—

(I) by striking "300,000 and that" and inserting "300,000,"; and

(II) by inserting before the period at the end the following: ", and includes major transportation corridors serving that metropolitan area";

(B) in clause (ii), by striking "shared" and all that follows and inserting "reinvested in the intelligent transportation infrastructure system.";

(C) by striking clause (iii); and

(D) by redesignating clauses (iv) and (v) as clauses (iii) and (iv), respectively;

(2) in subparagraph (C)(ii), by striking "July 1, 2002" and inserting "the date that is 180 days after the date of enactment of the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2005";

(3) in subparagraph (E), by striking clause (ii) and inserting the following:

"(ii) The term 'follow-on deployment areas' means the metropolitan areas of Albany, Atlanta, Austin, Baltimore, Birmingham, Boston, Charlotte, Chicago, Cleveland, Columbus, Dallas/Ft. Worth, Denver, Detroit, Greensboro, Hartford, Houston, Indianapolis, Jacksonville, Kansas City, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, Louisville, Miami, Milwaukee, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Nashville, New Orleans, New York/Northern New Jersey, Norfolk, Northern Kentucky/Cincinnati, Oklahoma City, Orlando, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Pittsburgh, Portland, Providence, Raleigh, Richmond, Sacramento, Salt Lake, San Diego, San Francisco, San Jose, St. Louis, Seattle, Tampa, Tucson, Tulsa, and Washington, District of Columbia.";

(A) by striking "Of the amounts" and inserting the following:

"(i) THIS ACT.—Of the amounts"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"(ii) SAFETEA.—There is authorized to be appropriated out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to carry out this paragraph $5,000,000 for each fiscal year.

"(iii) AVAILABILITY; NO REDUCTION OR SET-ASIDE.—Amounts made available by this subparagraph—

"(I) shall remain available until expended; and

"(II) shall not be subject to any reduction or setaside."; and

(5) by adding at the end the following:

"(H) USE OF RIGHTS-OF-WAY.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—An intelligent transportation system project described in paragraph (3) or (6) that involves privately owned intelligent transportation system components and is carried out using funds made available from the Highway Trust Fund shall not be subject to any law (including a regulation) of a State or political subdivision of a State prohibiting or regulating commercial activities in the rights-of-way of a highway for which Federal-aid highway funds have been used for planning, design, construction, or maintenance, if the Secretary of Transportation determines that such use is in the public interest.

"(ii) EFFECT OF SUBPARAGRAPH.—Nothing in this subparagraph affects the authority of a State or political subdivision of a State—

"(I) to regulate highway safety; or

"(II) under sections 253 and 332(c)(7) of the Act of June 19, 1934 (47 U.S.C. 253, 332(c)(7)) (commonly known as the 'Communications Act of 1934').".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 5204 of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (23 U.S.C. 502 note; 112 Stat. 453) is amended by striking subsection (k).

SA 576. Mr. SPECTER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3, Reserved; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of subchapter I of chapter 5 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 2101(a)), add the following:

"§513. California University of Pennsylvania Urban Maglev Demonstration Project.

The Secretary shall make available $45,000,000 for the continuation of the California University of Pennsylvania Urban Maglev Demonstration Project.".

In the analysis for chapter 5 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 2101(a)), at the end of the items relating to subchapter I, add the following:

In section 2001(a)(5), strike "$40,188,679" and insert "$50,188,679".

In the analysis for chapter 5 of title 23, United States Code (as added by section 2101(a)), strike the item relating to section 512 and insert the following:

"512. University bridge research centers.
"513. Transporation analysis simulation system.

In chapter 5 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 2101(a)), redesignate section 512 as section 513.

In chapter 5 of title 23, United States Code (as amended by section 2101(a)), insert after section 511 the following:

"§512. University bridge research centers

"(a) In General.—The Secretary shall establish and implement a university bridge research center program in accordance with this section.

"(b) Purposes.—The Secretary, in coordination with nonprofit institutions of higher learning, shall encourage and promote specific research on—

"(1) advanced highway bridge materials and systems for economical, rapid, and durable repair, replacement, and protection of highway bridges; and

"(2) technology to monitor and evaluate bridge damage and deterioration to significantly extend the useful life of highway bridges.

"(c) Bridge Centers.—The Secretary shall make grants to nonprofit institutions of higher learning to establish and operate university bridge research centers.

"(d) Selection of Grant Recipients.—

"(1) Applications.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a nonprofit institution of higher learning shall submit to the Secretary an application in such form and containing such information as the Secretary may require.

"(2) Selection criteria.—

"(A) In general.—Except as otherwise provided by subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall select each recipient of a grant under this section through a competitive process on the basis of—

"(i) the demonstrated research and development resources available to the recipient to carry out this section;

"(ii) the capability of the recipient to provide leadership in making national and regional contributions to the solution of immediate and long-range bridge deterioration and structure problems;

"(iii) the demonstrated commitment by the recipient of at least $200,000 in regularly budgeted institutional amounts each year to support ongoing bridge research and education programs;

"(iv) the demonstrated ability of the recipient to disseminate results of bridge transportation research and education programs through a statewide or regionwide program;

"(v) the demonstrated ability of the recipient to partner with other institutions that have highway bridge research expertise;

"(vi) the demonstrated ability of the recipient to conduct analysis, laboratory testing, and field verification of bridge design through a record of demonstration projects with State transportation departments and private, public and quasi-public bridge authorities;

"(vii) the demonstrated record of the recipient in transferring technology to practitioners;

"(viii) the demonstrated record of the recipient in testing full-scale bridge components in laboratory facilities and implementing results in design changes and field verification; and

"(ix) the strategic plan that the recipient proposes to carry out under the grant.

"(B) Preference.—Preference shall be given to nonprofit institutions of higher learning located in the 10 States with the worst deficiencies in highway bridges, as ranked by the 2002 Federal Highway Administration National Bridge Inventory.

"(e) Activities.—A Federal Highway Administration university bridge transportation center that receives a grant under this section shall conduct—

"(1) basic and applied bridge research, the products of which are judged by peers or other experts in the field to advance the body of knowledge in bridge longevity;

"(2) an education program that includes multidisciplinary course work and student participation in research; and

"(3) an ongoing program of technology transfer that makes research results available to potential users in a form that can be implemented, used, or otherwise applied.

"(f) Federal Share.—

"(1) In general.—The Federal share of the costs of activities carried out using a grant made under this section shall be 50 percent.

"(2) Non-federal share.—The non-Federal share may include funds provided to a recipient under section 503, 504(b), or 505 of title 23.

"(g) Program Coordination.—

"(1) Coordination.—The Secretary shall—

"(A) coordinate the research, education, training, and technology transfer activities that grant recipients carry out under this section; and

"(B) establish a clearinghouse for dissemination of the results of the research.

"(2) Annual review and evaluation.—At least annually the Secretary shall review and evaluate programs carried out by grant recipients.

"(3) Funding limitation.—The Secretary shall use not more than 1 percent of amounts made available from Government sources to carry out this subsection.

"(h) Limitation on Availability of Funds.—Funds made available to carry out this section shall remain available for obligation for 2 years after the last day of the fiscal year for which the funds are made available.

"(i) Number and Amount of Grants.—For each of fiscal years 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, and 2009, the Secretary shall make a grant of $2,000,000 to each of 5 nonprofit institutions of higher education to conduct bridge transportation research.

SA 578. Mr. SPECTER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3, Reserved; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of section 1807, add the following new subsection:

(c) Steel Bridge Testing.—The Secretary shall make available $10,000,000 to test steel bridges using a non-destructive technology capable of detecting growing cracks, including subsurface flaws as small as 0.01 inches in length or depth.

SA 579. Mr. SPECTER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3, Reserved; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 216, after the matter preceding line 1, insert the following:

SEC. 15_. HIGH PRIORITY CORRIDORS ON THE NATIONAL HIGHWAY SYSTEM.

(a) In General.—Section 1105 of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (105 Stat. 2032) is amended—

(1) in subsection (c), by adding at the end the following:

"(46) Interstate Route 376 from the Pittsburgh Interchange (I/C No. 56) of the Pennsylvania Turnpike, westward on Interstate Route 279, United States Route 22, United States Route 30, and Pennsylvania Route 60, continuing past the Pittsburgh International Airport on Turnpike Route 60, to the Pennsylvania Turnpike (Interstate Route 76), Interchange 10, and continuing north on Pennsylvania Turnpike Route 60 and on United States Route 422 to Interstate Route 80."; and

(2) in subsection (e)(5)—

(A) by redesignating subparagraphs (B) through (D) as subparagraphs (C) through (E); and

(B) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following:

"(B) Interstate route 376.—

"(i) Designation of interstate route 376.—

"(I) In general.—The routes referred to in subsection (c)(46), except the portion of Pennsylvania Turnpike Route 60 and United States Route 422 between Pennsylvania Turnpike Interchange 10 and Interstate Route 80, shall be designated as Interstate Route 376.

"(II) Signs.—The State of Pennsylvania shall—

"(aa) have jurisdiction over the highways described in subclause (I) (except Pennsylvania Turnpike Route 60); and

"(bb) erect signs in accordance with Interstate signing criteria that identify the routes described in subclause (I) as Interstate Route 376.

"(III) Assistance from secretary.—The Secretary shall assist the State of Pennsylvania in carrying out, not later than December 31, 2008, an activity under subclause (II) relating to Interstate Route 376 and in complying with sections 109 and 139 of title 23, United States Code.

"(ii) Other segments.—The segment of the route referred to in subsection (c)(46) located between the Pennsylvania Turnpike, Interchange 10, and Interstate Route 80 may be signed as Interstate Route 376 under clause (i)(II) if that segment meets the criteria under sections 109 and 139 of title 23, United States Code.".

EXPRESSING SENSE OF CONGRESS ON WORLD INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY DAY

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of S. Con. Res. 28, which was submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the concurrent resolution by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res 28) expressing the sense of Congress on World Intellectual Property Day regarding the importance of protecting intellectual property rights globally.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, today, on World Intellectual Property Day, I rise in support of a resolution I have submitted recognizing the importance of protecting intellectual property. One of the key benefits of protecting intellectual property is preserving innovation. Only with enforcement of protections will there be incentives for inventors to create and protect their innovations. As the sharing of goods and ideas transcends national boundaries, it is vital that these protections be able to accompany the ideas that they protect globally.

Although most of our trading partners have national domestic laws protecting intellectual property piracy and are even parties to agreements which contain intellectual property protections, piracy continues largely due to lack of enforcement. Theft of intellectual property results in competitive disadvantages to U.S. industries and job loss for American workers.

Counterfeiting and digital piracy have increased dramatically in recent years. In addition to the direct impact on the sales and profits of the subject industries, there is also significant harm and deception to consumers who believe they are purchasing legal and legitimate goods. Piracy and counterfeiting of copyrighted products in digital and other formats have grown to an enormous scale because these illegal activities offer a high rate of return with minimal risk to the criminal producing element. This element can conduct piracy with little capital investment, and in many countries, little chance of apprehension. Even if apprehended, the penalties may be so minor that they offer no deterrent.

There are various agreements between nations implemented at different levels for the protection of intellectual property. One of these is part of the World Trade Organization, WTO, charter, the Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights, TRIPS. Key TRIPS provisions require all WTO members to provide certain minimum standards of protection for patents, copyrights, trademarks, trade secrets, geographical indicators, and other forms of intellectual property. There is also a requirement to provide effective enforcement of each nation's domestic intellectual property regulations.

Also currently in force are two copyright treaties of the World Intellectual Property Organization: the WIPO Copyright Treaty and the WIPO Performances and Phonograms Treaty, which entered into force in 2002. These treaties help raise the minimum standards of intellectual property protection around the world, particularly with respect to internet-based delivery of copyrighted works. As with the TRIPS agreement, enforcement of obligations by member countries remains the issue.

This resolution focuses on two nations, China and Russia, with which we have significant trading relationships, yet, are still not offering the necessary enforcement of protections. China has become a leading exporter of counterfeit and pirated goods to the world. It is, therefore, critical that we address the issue of protection and enforcement in China. At the April 2004 meeting of the Joint Commission on Commerce and Trade, JCCT, the Chinese Government indicated that it would undertake a series of actions to significantly reduce infringement throughout the country. Piracy rates in China have remained at extremely high levels for the past decade, despite numerous actions by the Chinese Government such as the seizure and destruction of millions of pirated products, often via highly publicized steamrollings of counterfeited discs. As a fellow member of the WTO, we must ensure that China fulfills its commitments to enforce intellectual property protections under the rules of the WTO.

Piracy in Russia continues to be a growing problem. Only a few pirate optical disc factories existed in Russia in the late 1990s. Reports indicate that there are now over 30 such plants producing pirated products in Russia, ruining the Russian market for American right-holders and substantially undermining other markets in Europe as well. The Russian Government has made many promises to solve this problem, but meaningful results have yet to occur. Russia recognizes that its domestic laws and enforcement measures still do not meet TRIPS requirements; however, the required legislation has not been implemented. We should encourage the Government of Russia to act promptly and implement these measures so that it can fully comply with the rules of the WTO.

The problem of protecting intellectual property is evident. Going forward, our focus should be on the solutions. What enforcement methods should be utilized that have not been thus far? Should our international agreements and treaties with our trading partners be better utilized to ensure enforcement of intellectual property rights laws? Some progress has been made in these areas, yet there is much more ground to cover. I encourage the administration to insure that our trading partners fulfill their commitments and agreements to abide by global intellectual property rules.

STATEMENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY ALLIANCE CELEBRATING WORLD INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY DAY

WASHINGTON, DC.—The International Intellectual Property Alliance (IIPA), a coalition of six trade associations representing 1,300 U.S.-based copyright companies, today celebrates 2005 World Intellectual Property Day. Eric H. Smith, President of IIPA, issued the following statement:

"The theme for 2005's World Intellectual Property Day is 'Think, Imagine, Create.' This message from the Director General of the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO), Kamil Idris, is directed at the world's young people to build awareness about the importance of creativity—and the protection of the intellectual property that supports that creativity—to the daily lives of every global citizen. Without providing this protection, many of the great cultural and technological assets that we now take for granted would never have been available to us to improve our lives. Strong protection and enforcement of the world's laws that nurture the creativity embodied in intellectual property are all too often taken for granted or viewed by a few as no longer necessary. We too often forget the important cultural and economic benefits, jobs, contributions to GDP and tax revenues that are dependent on a strong intellectual property system.

"U.S. creators have benefited significantly from a strong global system of protection enshrined in treaties and conventions to which virtually all the world's nations belong. Yet weak laws and inadequate enforcement of those laws continue to plague all those individuals and companies that contribute to this great global creative and technological explosion.

"Today, Senators Lugar and Baucus introduced a Sense of the Congress Resolution, celebrating World Intellectual Property Day, and highlighting the massive damage done—over $4 billion just to U.S. creators of copyright products alone—to global creativity by just two countries, China and Russia, through their failure to abide by internationally-agreed standards of protection and enforcement. The message to these countries is clear: they are cheating themselves by failing to take effective action to prevent the creative works of their own citizens, U.S. citizens and those of other countries, from blatant theft. IIPA members join with the sponsors of this Resolution to call upon these governments to take earnest measures to halt this theft and upon the U.S. government to use all the tools provided by Congress to see that these countries take effective action to prevent pirates from stealing intellectual property with impunity. Economic and cultural development is increasingly dependent on the creation and protection of intellectual property of all kinds. The resolution hits the mark in targeting two of the world's worst offenders of intellectual property rights."

PUBLISHERS APPLAUD SENATE RESOLUTION ON SAFEGUARDING INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY WORLDWIDE

WASHINGTON, DC, April 26, 2005.—The U.S. publishing industry enthusiastically welcomed today's introduction in the Senate of a bipartisan Concurrent Resolution stressing the importance of protecting intellectual property rights around the world. The Association of American Publishers (AAP) expressed special thanks to Senator Richard Lugar (R–IN), Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Max Baucus (D–MT), Ranking Member of the Finance Committee, who joined in sponsoring the resolution to mark the observance of World Intellectual Property Day.

Noting that the theft of intellectual property hurts the U.S. economy and costs American jobs, and citing deep concern over the failure of many U.S. trading partners to fulfill obligations to protect intellectual property, the resolution is particularly critical of China and Russia, where piracy threatens the very existence of legitimate markets for copyright products. The resolution calls on the Administration to use "all available tools provided by Congress," and the leverage provided by bi-lateral and multi-lateral trade agreements (including, where appropriate, WTO commitments) as well as terms regulating benefits such as the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program, to protect the intellectual property rights of American businesses.

AAP President and CEO Pat Schroeder congratulated Senators Lugar and Baucus for focusing attention on the serious matter of international piracy. "Chinese pirates are decimating markets for legitimate commercial best sellers, academic arid professional works and English language learning materials. Russia leads its region in consumption of pirated books in both English and translation, and the impact on American publishers will only deepen as demand for English language materials grows in the region. Piracy cost American publishers an estimated $50 million last year in China, and $42 million in Russia, and the situation is worsening with the growth of the Internet as a distribution channel for pirated works," Mrs. Schroeder said. "In marking World Intellectual Property Day, this strong statement of Congress" commitment to protect American creativity is very welcome."

The Association of American Publishers is the national trade association of the U.S. book publishing industry. AAP's approximately 300 members include most of the major commercial book publishers in the United States, as well as smaller and nonprofit publishers, university presses and scholarly societies. The protection of intellectual property rights in all media, the defense of intellectual freedom, and the promotion of reading and literacy are among the Association's primary concerns.

MPAA CHIEF PRAISES WORLD INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY DAY RESOLUTION

WASHINGTON, DC.—Motion Picture Association President and CEO Dan Glickman today praised a concurrent resolution introduced by Senator Richard Lugar (R–IN) and Senator Max Baucus (D–MT) that expressed the sense of the Congress stressing the importance of protecting intellectual property rights, particularly in China and Russia where piracy and counterfeiting are rampant.

"I thank Senator Lugar and Senator Baucus for this resolution celebrating World Intellectual Property Day, and more importantly, for taking a leadership role in fighting for intellectual property rights across the globe."

"Of course, my special concern is protecting the magic of the movies. Our industry loses $3.5 million each year through hard goods piracy, and billions more in internet piracy. If the black market is allowed to flourish, and if thieves are allowed to continue to steal our products, it makes it more and more difficult to make the movies that entertain people the world over."

"But this isn't just about the movies. As the resolution itself says, the American economy depends increasingly on the work of authors, inventors, programmers and many others who create intellectual products of high value. In fact, close to twelve million Americans are employed by the copyright industries. For America, intellectual property means jobs."

"But intellectual property is important for the rest of the world as well. Enforcing intellectual property laws in China and in Russia will only help these economies prosper in the long run." "I applaud this bold resolution and I thank both Senator Lugar and Senator Baucus for introducing it today."

UNIVERSAL MUSIC GROUP,
Santa Monica, CA, April 25, 2005.

Hon. RICHARD G. LUGAR,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LUGAR: I am the President and Chief Operating Officer of Universal Music Group, the worlds' largest music company. I write to tell you how much my company and I appreciate Congress' commitment to the fight against piracy. We recognize that you and Senator Baucus have been particular champions of this cause for some time now. The Resolution that you and Senator Baucus are introducing is another indication of your commitment to the many Americans who earn their livelihoods by bringing new artists and sounds to consumers around the globe.

It is clear that innovation and the strong protection of intellectual property laws will be vital to America's economic future. The United States Government must do all that it can to ensure that our trading partners vigorously enforce the treaties and other commitments they make to the United States, and it is our hope that your Senate colleagues will join you in sending that message by supporting the Lugar-Baucus Resolution.

Very truly yours,

ZACH HOROWITZ,
President and COO.

[From the Recording Industry Association of America, April 26, 2005]

STATEMENT ON WORLD INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY DAY

On behalf of America's music community, we wish to thank Chairman Lugar and Senator Baucus for the resolution that they have jointly introduced today highlighting the need for greater vigilance in the fight against piracy in global markets. In particular, there is an urgent need to direct attention to markets like Russia and China, which remain essentially closed to U.S. businesses due to stifling piracy rates. As the Senators aptly mention, piracy in these markets and elsewhere around the world "is open, notorious and permitted to operate without meaningful hindrance from the government."

There may be no single economic issue that has a greater bearing on American competitiveness in the 21st century than the protection of intellectual property. As such, it is imperative that we not shy away from demands that our trading partners meet their obligations under international agreements as well as the criteria for participating in US. trade programs affording unilaterally extended trade benefits. We simply cannot enter into political arrangements that fail to protect our greatest economic assets.

On the occasion of World Intellectual Property Day, we wish to call upon the Russian and Chinese governments to reform their approach to this critical issue and to begin to seriously address the rampant piracy that is so endemic in their societies today. It is of utmost importance that the Sino-U.S. and U.S.-Russia relationships are built upon a mutual understanding of shared obligations and a strong commitment to embracing and enforcing the rule of law. While we very much want to see Russia join the community of nations bound to one another in the World Trade Organization, negotiations cannot conclude without marked improvement and a commitment on the part of the Russian government to the protection of intellectual property.

We also wish to express our great concern about the current state of affairs in China and the apparent determination of the Chinese government to limit the ability of U.S. companies to meaningfully engage in the Chinese market. At present, the Chinese government continues to maintain significant barriers to entry for some of our nation's most competitive industries, particularly in the area of music and film production and distribution. In addition, the government continues to permit Chinese pirate businesses to be built on the back of American creativity. Without question, these practices must change if China wishes to maintain a secure and stable relationship with the United States.

We appreciate the continued attention of our nation's political leaders to this pressing issue—on both the occasion of World Intellectual Property Day and beyond. We look forward to working with Congress and the Administration to help produce—and if necessary, demand—effective changes to create a more level playing field and a global environment that values and respects American intellectual property.

MITCH BAINWOL,
Chairman and CEO.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, the theme of this year's World Intellectual Property Day, which we commemorate today, is "Think, Imagine, Create."

Think, imagine, create, these simple words are at the center of what makes America great and what continues to drive our progress. American thought produced our Constitution and our system of government. American imagination put a person on the moon. And American creativity has made U.S. culture the envy of the world.

It is astounding how important intellectual property has become in our everyday life. It is even more astounding how much we take human creativity and intellectual property for granted. Just think about it for a moment and imagine what a world would be like without intellectual property rights.

Without copyrights, who would want to write the books we read, produce the movies we watch, or compose the music that fills our ears?

Without trademarks, who would want to invest the enormous time, energy, and resources required to develop a brand name synonymous with quality and reliability?

And without patents, who would have the incentive to innovate and produce inventions that change our world and save our lives?

Intellectual property rights are not just some abstract legal concept the sole province of lawyers and judges. They are an essential motor of our economy.

Look at the copyright industry. These are the folks who produce newspapers, books, movies, computer software, and radio/TV broadcasting. This industry alone accounts for 12 percent of our gross domestic product. That's $1.25 trillion.

If these numbers don't impress, then let's look at the impact the copyright industries have on U.S. jobs. They alone employ roughly 11.5 million workers. That is nearly 8.5 percent of total U.S. employment. Believe it or not, that number approaches the level of employment in the heath care sector or the entire manufacturing sector. And between 1997 and 2002, the rate of job growth in the copyright industry exceeded that of the U.S. economy as a whole.

That is why protecting intellectual property rights worldwide is critical. It is not just a concern for the overall health of the U.S. economy. And it is not just a concern of this or that company. It is a concern of each and every worker that the intellectual property industries employ. And it is a concern of each and every one of us that enjoys going to see the latest movie, likes wearing a hip new pair of Nike shoes, or needs the most innovative life saving drug.

Unfortunately, while we have a robust IPR regime here in America, some of our trading partners do not. In certain countries, IPR theft is rampant.

China is probably the most notorious example. USTR reports that counterfeiting and piracy in China are at "epidemic levels and cause serious harm to U.S. businesses in virtually every sector of the economy." In fact, as USTR pointed out, one U.S. trade association claims that counterfeiting and piracy in China exceeds 90 percent. Estimates of the value of counterfeit and pirated goods in China are between $19 billion and $24 billion in 2001. That translates into losses of $2.5 to $3.8 billion to U.S. industry.

Russia is also a serial IPR violator. The scale of intellectual property rights infringement there is vast and growing. Russia's legal framework has huge gaps, and the enforcement of existing laws is lax. This has real costs. Estimated losses to U.S. copyright industries due to piracy of films, videos, sound recordings, books, and computer software continue to exceed $1 billion annually. Over 80 percent of all DVDs on the Russian market are estimated to be pirated. Pirated music is estimated at 66 percent of sales, and software piracy is estimated at about 88 percent.

IPR violations in Brazil are also very troubling, particularly given that Brazil is both a WTO member and receives benefits from the United States under the Generalized System of Preferences. USTR reports that estimated losses in Brazil due to piracy of copyrighted materials totaled over $930 million in 2004 alone. An estimated 75 percent of audiocassettes sold in Brazil are pirated.

These violations run counter to the entire spirit and purpose of World Intellectual Property Day. Rather than foster an environment that encourages thought, imagination, and creativity, IPR violations in China, Russia, Brazil, and other countries stifle creativity and innovation. They send the chilling message that the short-term profit of pirates, counterfeiters, and other IPR thieves matter more than the long term gains of society.

We need to crack down on countries that fail to protect and enforce intellectual property rights. We should use all tools at our disposal to address barriers to thought, imagination, and creativity.

In my view, we are long overdue in initiating a WTO case with China for its failure to comply with its obligations under the WTO's TRIPS agreement, particularly in the area of copyrights.

In my view, we should not give a green light to Russia's bid to join the WTO until Russia makes visible and sustained improvements to its legal regime as well as a demonstrable commitment to long-term enforcement.

And in my view, we should not continue to give countries with serious intellectual property deficiencies, like Russia and Brazil, GSP benefits until they clean up their act.

That is why I am today cosponsoring with Senator LUGAR a sense-of-the-Senate resolution on the importance of protecting intellectual property. Among other things, this resolution urges the administration to use all effective remedies to address the lack of intellectual property protection. It also urges the administration to take action to ensure that China, Russia, and our other trading partners comply with their international trade obligations.

Think, imagine, create, that is the theme of this year's World Intellectual Property Day. I hope that next year we can celebrate an improved global environment that truly fosters these important aspirations.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the concurrent resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 28) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. CON. RES. 28

Whereas protection of intellectual property is critical to our nation's economic competitiveness, cultural diversity, health and scientific development;

Whereas the United States economy depends increasingly on the work of authors, artists, inventors, programmers, and many others who create intellectual products of high value;

Whereas theft of intellectual property results in competitive disadvantages to United States industries and job losses for American workers, and for the United States economy as a whole;

Whereas the copyright industries employ approximately 11,500,000 workers or 8.41 percent of total employment in the United States, a number that approaches the levels of employment in the health care and social assistance sector (15,300,000 employees) and the entire manufacturing sector (14,500,000 workers in 21 manufacturing industries);

Whereas there is great concern about the failure of many of our trading partners to live up to their international obligations in the area of intellectual property protection;

Whereas counterfeiting of copyrighted products in digital and other formats, as well as counterfeiting of all types of trademarked products, has grown to an enormous scale;

Whereas many of our trading partners, in particular Russia and China, have laws in place to prevent piracy and counterfeiting, but are failing to enforce the laws;

Whereas Russia and China alone are responsible for over $4,000,000,000 in losses a year to United States industries due to piracy;

Whereas piracy in Russia and China is open, notorious, and permitted to operate without meaningful hindrance from the governments of those countries;

Whereas China should be encouraged to meet its intellectual property protection obligations as a member of the World Trade Organization (WTO);

Whereas Russia should be encouraged to explore means to provide effective piracy protection enabling compliance with the rules set forth by the WTO;

Whereas the United States Government must convey to these countries that failure to act will have political and economic consequences for relationships with the United States; and

Whereas Congress has enacted legislation regarding the protection of intellectual property, including measures which direct the Administration to censure countries that fail to provide adequate and effective protection for intellectual property: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That—

(1) the Administration should utilize effective remedies and solutions in addressing the lack of intellectual property protection in China and Russia, using all available tools provided by Congress;

(2) the Administration should ensure that any country that enjoys benefits under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program, such as Russia, lives up to its obligations to provide adequate and effective protection for intellectual property rights, or lose its eligibility to participate in trade preference programs;

(3) the Administration should ensure that action is taken against any country with which the United States shares mutual commitments under the WTO, such as China, when the country fails to live up to its WTO commitments;

(4) the Administration should urge Russia to promote measures to enforce intellectual property protection which will enable compliance with the intellectual property commitments required by the WTO; and

(5) the President should take any additional action the President considers appropriate to protect the intellectual property rights of United States businesses.

COMMENDING UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA WOMEN'S ICE HOCKEY TEAM

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 125, which was submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 125) commending the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers women's ice hockey team for winning the 2004–2005 National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I Women's Hockey Championship.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 125) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 125

Whereas, on Sunday, March 27, 2005, the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers won the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division I Women's Hockey Championship for the second straight year;

Whereas the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers defeated Harvard University in the championship game by a score of 4 to 3, and defeated Dartmouth College by a score of 7 to 2 in the semifinals;

Whereas, during the 2004–2005 season, the Golden Gophers won an outstanding 36 out of 40 games;

Whereas Ms. Krissy Wendell was honored with the prestigious Patty Kazmaier Award, which is presented annually to the Nation's most outstanding women's collegiate hockey player;

Whereas Ms. Natalie Darwitz, Ms. Lyndsay Wall, and Ms. Krissy Wendell were selected for the 2004-2005 NCAA All-Tournament Team, and Ms. Darwitz was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player;

Whereas Ms. Lyndsay Wall, Ms. Krissy Wendell, and Ms. Natalie Darwitz were named to the CCM Women's University Division I Ice Hockey All-American First Team, and Ms. Jody Horak was named to the CCM Women's University Division I Ice Hockey All-American Second Team;

Whereas the team's seniors—Ms. Jody Horak, Ms. Brenda Reinen, Ms. Kelly Stephens, Ms. Noelle Sutton, and Ms. Stacy Troumbly—made tremendous contributions to the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers women's ice hockey program throughout their collegiate careers;

Whereas Ms. Ashley Albrecht, Ms. Chelsey Brodt, Ms. Natalie Darwitz, Ms. Whitney Graft, Ms. Jody Horak, Ms. Krista Johnson, Ms. Natalie Lammé, Ms. Erica McKenzie, Ms. Anya Miller, Ms. Andrea Nichols, Ms. Liz Palkie, Ms. Jenelle Philipczyk, Ms. Brenda Reinen, Ms. Bobbi Ross, Ms. Allie Sanchez, Ms. Maggie Souba, Ms. Kelly Stephens, Ms. Noelle Sutton, Ms. Stacy Troumbly, Ms. Becky Wacker, Ms. Lyndsay Wall, and Ms. Krissy Wendell demonstrated exceptional teamwork, selfless team spirit, and admirable sportswomanship throughout the season;

Whereas the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers women's ice hockey team Head Coach Laura Halldorson and Assistant Coaches Brad Frost, Charlie Burggraf, and Jeff Moen provided outstanding leadership and coaching to mold all of the talented young women into a championship team: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) commends the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers women's ice hockey team for winning the 2004-2005 National Collegiate Athletic Association's Division I Women's Ice Hockey Championship;

(2) recognizes the outstanding achievements of the team's players, coaches, and support staff; and

(3) directs the Secretary of the Senate to transmit an enrolled copy of this resolution to the president of the University of Minnesota.

ORDERS FOR WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 2005

Mr. FRIST. I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday, April 27. I further ask that following the prayer and the pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved, and the Senate then proceed to a period for morning business for up to 120 minutes, with the first 30 minutes under the control of the majority leader or his designee, the next 60 minutes under the control of Senator BIDEN or his designee, and the final 30 minutes under the control of the majority leader or his designee; provided that following morning business the Senate resume consideration of H.R. 3, the highway bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, tomorrow following morning business, the Senate will resume consideration of the highway bill. We will continue the amending process tomorrow. The chairman and ranking member will be here to work through amendments that are offered. Rollcall votes are expected throughout the day in relation to the amendments.

I also remind my colleagues that we have several other important matters to address before adjourning for next week's recess. We hope to receive conference reports to both the budget resolution and supplemental appropriations bill. In addition, several nominations are available for floor consideration, and we expect to move forward with those this week as well.

Again, we have a lot of work to do this week. Senators should expect busy days with rollcall votes throughout the week.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. FRIST. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:34 p.m., adjourned until Wednesday, April 27, 2005, at 9:30 a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, April 26, 2005

The House met at 12:30 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. PRICE of Georgia).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
April 26, 2005.

I hereby appoint the Honorable TOM PRICE to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 30 minutes, and each Member, except the majority leader, the minority leader, or the minority whip, limited to not to exceed 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) for 5 minutes.

LEMELSON FOUNDATION AND INTRODUCTION OF WATER FOR THE POOR ACT OF 2005

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, last Friday evening I had the opportunity and the honor of attending a ceremony where the Lemelson Foundation awarded the annual Lemelson MIT Prize for Innovation, held for the first time in Portland, Oregon.

The foundation was established by one of the most prolific American inventors, the late Jerome Lemelson, and his family.

Although located in Portland, the foundation is truly international in scope. Jerome Lemelson endowed the foundation to promote innovation and to ensure that its application benefited humankind.

In the United States, their unique foundation supports several grantees whose programs celebrate extraordinary inventors as role models, illustrate the value of invention in the evolution of a great society, and nurture young adults to solve pressing social problems by pursuing careers in invention.

This year the foundation awarded a $500,000 Lemelson-MIT Prize, the largest cash award for innovation, to Elwood "Woody" Norris for revolutionizing acoustics.

Internationally, the Lemelson Foundation nurtures individual creativity to transform fundamental challenges into opportunities for sustainable progress. Its Invention for Sustainable Development program recognizes inventors and innovators in developing countries, fostering the institutions that support them, and applies their inventions to meet basic human needs and advance sustainable development.

Last week, foundation board member Eric Lemelson discussed foundation initiatives dealing with low-tech, high-impact innovation dealing with drip irrigation, an example of a cost-effective application of new technology to save scarce water resources, save money in a developing country while improving agricultural yields.

This is the type of commonsense approach of applied technology to sustainability that can truly transform people's lives.

I would hope that we in government can undertake the same spirit of innovation in our approach to USAID.

I was pleased to see Senator FRIST return from his trip to Africa convinced that the United States needs to do more with water innovation and has introduced legislation in the Senate. I applaud his bill, the Safe Water Currency for Peace Act, S. 492. By the same token, I am offering complementary legislation in the House, the Water for the Poor Act of 2005.

This bill will make access to clean water and sanitation a major U.S. foreign policy objective and requires the USAID to develop a strategy to carry out this objective. It supports innovative financing mechanisms that can create additional resources for water and sanitation, while ensuring access and affordability to the very poor.

This legislation is critically needed. The lack of clean water and sanitation is perhaps the world's greatest single health need. More than 1 billion people worldwide lack access to safe drinking water. More than twice as many, 2.3 billion people, one in every three people on the planet, lack access to adequate sanitation, and the consequences are devastating.

Water-related diseases are a human tragedy, killing up to 5 million people every year. At any given time, half the population in the developing world is sick from water-related disease. Tragically, one child dies every 15 seconds for lack of water and sanitation.

At a time when people in every corner of the globe understand the importance of water and the problems of its misuse, I was pleased that the United States and the Bush administration joined 185 other nations committed to cutting in half the percentage of people in the world without access to water and sanitation. I was there in Johannesburg in 2002, watching that consensus come together. I am hopeful that we will be able to follow through.

As Eric Lemelson pointed out in his remarks, the Lemelson Foundation does not have to be responsive to shareholders or the voters so they can afford to be cutting-edge, innovative, and creative. I would like to think that they are pointing the way to more liveable communities around the globe where all our families can be safe, healthy, and more economically secure; and they are pointing the way for the Federal Government to follow their lead.

My congratulations to the foundation; and I look forward to working on their innovations, integrating them with U.S. Government policy around the globe.

WHY THE F/A–22 RAPTOR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, recently I had the opportunity to visit Langley Air Force Base in Virginia and spend time with the commander of the Air Combat Command, Lieutenant General William Fraser, and many dedicated, indeed dedicated, members of the United States Air Force. As part of the Air Force Caucus trip, we had almost 50 people participating in the trip.

Much of this trip focused on the F/A–22 Raptor and its importance to the future of the United States Air Force. After visiting with General Fraser and seeing the Raptor up close, I am more convinced and I think the participants who went on this trip are also convinced that the F/A–22 will become an integral part of future military successes.

Mr. Speaker, during my visit I was briefed not only about the warfighting capabilities of this plane but about the maintenance program as well. The Air Force uses cutting-edge technology to maintain this plane; and this, of course, leads to more efficient maintenance. It is the first jet to use an entirely paperless maintenance program.

☐ This symbol represents the time of day during the House proceedings, e.g., ☐ 1407 is 2:07 p.m.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

allowing new parts to be ordered or changes to be made significantly faster.

The engine also utilizes new technologies. Its design allows it to be worked on while still on the plane, that is, the engine. In the past, engines often needed to be removed in order to be maintained. This is not the case for the F/A-22. These new technologies mean less time in the shop and, of course, more time in the air.

Also, the maintenance training program has been improved. No longer are there these big, bulky maintenance manuals. The training is digital in real-time, with real-world conditions. It leads to more effective and efficient training. Maintainers spend less time in training and more time actually working on the plane. This, of course, leads to faster maintenance and thus the F/A–22s are not grounded for longer than is necessary.

In the past, and particularly in the post-September 11 environment, homeland security has been our top priority here in Congress and our Nation. The F/A–22 plays a large role in protecting the homeland. According to the Air Force, 238 legacy fighters would be required and needed to protect this homeland while only 150 F/A-22s would be needed.

The Bush administration unfortunately has proposed cutting $10 billion from the F/A-22 program over the next 5 years, leaving enough to buy 183 of the 381 planes the Air Force says it needs. Simply put, in my judgment, this number is just not sufficient.

The Air Force will not be able to guarantee air superiority without a sufficient quantity of F/A-22s. The U.S. has not lost a soldier due to an air attack since 1952. The Air Force has made air superiority look so easy that we have begun to take it for granted, but maintaining this air dominance is not easy.

For now, the United States Air Force is the best trained, the best equipped in the world; but Russia, China, India have made huge strides in achieving parity, and, in some cases, have even surpassed U.S. capabilities.

Our current, but badly aging, fighters no longer enjoy technological or aerodynamic superiority when compared to the modern aircraft of potential adversaries. There have been some recent exercises pitting the F–15s, which the F/A-22 Raptor will replace, against one of Russia's primary export fighters, resulting in kill ratios favoring the SU-30.

In contrast, on a recent training mission where a single F/A–22 went against five F-15s, the Raptor killed all the F-15s within 3 minutes. Additionally, due to a lack of stealth assets, the ability of our aircraft to operate in environments where hostile threats exist is inadequate. The only way to address these shortcomings, which will only worsen, I tell my colleagues, is with sufficient numbers of the F/A–22 Raptor. We cannot fight tomorrow's war with yesterday's equipment.

That is why America needs the Raptor. With a variety of internal weapons, the Raptor can destroy or negate the most capable future threats: advance fighters; surface-to-air missile systems; and high-value, mobile ground targets.

The F/A-22's combination of speed, stealth, and integrated avionics bring unmatched capabilities to cope with the 21st-century threat environment. Air dominance gives the joint force freedom from attack, freedom to maneuver and, of course, freedom to succeed. No substitute exists for the F/A-22's unique capabilities.

With the international proliferation of sophisticated aircraft and air defense systems, U.S. fighters are losing their ability to leverage access for U.S. forces in hostile regions. The F/A-22 changes this equation with its revolutionary design and potent array of systems.

Mr. Speaker, that is why we need to fully fund the F/A-22 Raptor over the next 5 years.

ETHICS CHANGES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, since the beginning of the year, the House has been conducting its business without an organized Committee on Standards of Official Conduct in place to investigate possible unethical behavior by Members of Congress. Republicans have tried to blame Democrats on the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct for this standoff, but the fact is they have nobody to blame but themselves.

At the beginning of this year, the Republican leadership went ahead and changed the way the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct does its business. In the past, whenever ethics changes were being considered, they were addressed in a bipartisan fashion, with both Democrats and Republicans at the table. That is the only way ethics reform can honestly be addressed, but the Republican leadership ignored that protocol and strong-armed enough of its Members into passing new and weakened ethics rules.

The American people need to understand that these new rules will allow either party, Democrat or Republican, to protect its own Members. Under the new Republican rules, if the majority of the committee cannot determine whether or not an investigation should proceed, after 45 days of receiving a complaint, the complaint would simply be dropped. No action would take place.

Since the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct is made up of five Members from each party, either side could prevent an ethics investigation from moving forward against one of its Members. Now, this is not the way the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct is supposed to work. Under the old bipartisan rules, if the committee could not come to an agreement on how to proceed after 45 days, an investigative subcommittee was created.

The weakening of the ethics rules by House Republicans did not fool editorial writers, both liberal and conservative, who follow House proceedings closely; and I just wanted to give some examples.

The conservative Chicago Tribune recently said, How do House Republicans respond to ethical lapses? By trying to bury them.

□ 1245

The Hartford Courant concluded, "The committee has been careening toward ethical oblivion in recent years, as the majority Republicans have relaxed the standards, eased up on investigations and created trapdoors through which alleged transgressors could escape."

The Republican leadership did not stop at just weakening the ethics rules, the Republican leadership also purged three Republican Members of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, three Members who were not in the pockets of the leadership.

After losing his chairmanship of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HEFLEY) told The Washington Post that there is "a bad perception out there that there was a purge in the committee and that people were put in that would protect our side of the aisle better than I did. Nobody should be there to protect anybody. They should be there to protect the integrity of the institution."

Mr. Speaker, congressional Republicans should listen to their former ethics chairman, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HEFLEY). The integrity of the House of Representatives is much more important than any one Member.

These actions by the Republican majority really make one wonder why the changes are necessary now. It seems clear to me that the Republican leadership went to all of this trouble to protect one of its leaders. Last month the Wall Street Journal, which has a conservative editorial page, charged there is an "odor," an "unsavory whiff" at the very highest reaches of this House. Every single day, it seems, more revelations come out about questionable actions by a member of the Republican leadership. These daily revelations should concern every Member of the institution.

My Democrat colleagues and I realize the integrity of the House is at stake. We cannot allow weakened ethics rules to move forward to protect anyone, and it is critical that the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct be allowed to do its job and that is impossible under the new Republican rules.

Mr. Speaker, as the majority leader, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) said back in November 1995, "The time has come that the American people know exactly what their representatives are doing here in Washington, are they feeding at the public trough, taking lobbyist-paid vacations, getting wined and dined by special interest groups, or are they working hard to represent their constituents? The American people have a right to know." That was the majority leader, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), in his own words 10 years ago.

Let me say, the majority leader was right, the American people deserve answers and they will not get those answers under the weakened Republican ethics rules. That is why Democrats are fighting so hard to have the old rules restored. If the majority leader believes his comments from 10 years ago, I would think he would join us in our fight.

DISCRIMINATION AT THE UNITED NATIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PRICE of Georgia). Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, we are currently engaged in a detailed and comprehensive review of the United Nations, the system it has, with the goal of providing reforms that are going to ensure transparency, accountability, and efficiency in all U.N. operations. A critical component of this effort must include measures to ensure that Israel is afforded equal treatment and representation while addressing the anti-Israeli and anti-Semitic component that is pervasive in many U.N. bodies and its affiliated agencies.

The 1975 United Nations resolution equating Zionism, the national liberation movement of the Jewish people, to racism stands out as an example of this bias and outright bigotry. While this was the most notorious illustration of its anti-Jewish sentiment at the U.N. there are many, many others.

During the 1991 session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, for example, the Syrian representative to the U.N. repeated the Damascus blood libel that Jews killed Christian children to use their blood to make Matzoth. In 1997, the Palestinian representative charged that the Israeli Government had injected 300 Palestinian children with the HIV virus.

The goals of the 2001 U.N. World Conference Against Racism were undermined by hateful anti-Jewish rhetoric and anti-Israeli political agendas, prompting both Israel and the United States to withdraw their delegations from the conference.

In the United Nations General Assembly, we must look no further than the over 20 resolutions introduced by the Palestinian delegation each and every year against Israel, challenging Israel's policies and her very right to exist. During the 59th session of the U.N. General Assembly for 2004, close to 30 percent of all resolutions considered by this body were measures condemning Israel in some fashion.

At the U.N. Commission on Human Rights, there is an entire agenda item, item 8, that is dedicated to attacking and criticizing Israel. Countries that are gross human rights violators, such as Libya, Indonesia, and Egypt, have introduced resolutions under this category that criticize Israel for alleged human rights abuses in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

An additional resolution was introduced at this year's Human Rights Commission regarding what was termed as the Palestinian right of self-determination for the Palestinians, as well as another one on Israel and Lebanon. Yet there was not a single measure on the Syrian regime's gross violations of the rights of the Syrian and the Lebanese people or on the deplorable acts committed by the Iranian regime against its people.

Israel is a democracy and yet its sovereignty and its right to defend itself are frequently called into question in the United Nations system. The ruling last summer by the International Court of Justice on Israel's security fence is a case in point. Not only was Israel's inherent right to self-defense branded illegitimate by the United Nations, but terrorists and suicide bombers remain uncensored.

In addition, the failure of the U.N. system in fulfilling its mandate is illustrated by the limitations placed on Israel's membership. Israel is denied the ability to serve or run for leadership positions in multiple U.N. bodies and its affiliated agencies. While Israel was accepted as a temporary member of the Western European and Others Group, it is not allowed to present candidacies for open seats in any U.N. body and is not able to compete for major U.N. bodies.

Israel is excluded from consultations at the U.N. offices in Geneva, Nairobi, Rome and Vienna. By contrast, there is a separate "U.N. Division For Palestinian Rights," a "Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, a U.N. Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative to the Palestinian Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority," and "NGO Network on the Question of Palestine."

There is also an entire agency, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency, specifically designated for Palestinian refugees at a cost of over $400 million in the year 2004, yet all other refugees and internally displaced persons throughout the world are covered by the Office of the U.N. High Commissioner For Refugees.

Mr. Speaker, I include the remainder of my statement for the RECORD, and close by saying any effort at reforming the United Nations must include an end to the anti-Israel and anti-Semitic sentiment that has infected the U.N. organization for far too long.

I held a hearing last week to evaluate United Nations programs related to the Middle East, with special emphasis on the anti-Israel discrimination and anti-Semitic attacks.

It became abundantly clear that any U.N. reform efforts must address this imbalance and bias in favor of rogue states and individual groups.

In turn, the discrimination against Israel in the United Nations must be brought to an immediate end.

I have undertaken various initiatives to correct this injustice and ensure full membership and participation for Israel in all U.N. forums.

Most recently, I introduced H. Res. 54: calling on the United Nations to hold countries accountable for anti-Semitic statements and anti-Israeli incitement and calling for U.N. entities, such as UNESCO, to develop and implement Holocaust education programs throughout the world as part of an effort to combat such religious intolerance and anti-Israeli bias.

I ask my colleagues to render their support to these efforts and to co-sponsor this resolution.

The goals enshrined in the U.N. Charter—the promotion of international peace and security, and the respect for fundamental human rights—have never been more significant for the Jewish people and the State of Israel, which was founded on the ashes of the Holocaust.

BIPARTISAN LEGISLATION IN 109TH CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, Republicans and Democrats alike in this House can take a great deal of pride in the work product that has come forward in the 109th Congress. We know that for 8 years there has been an attempt to pass bankruptcy reform legislation, to finally bring some common sense to our bankruptcy law. With a strong bipartisan vote, Democrats joining with Republicans, we finally have been able to bring about bankruptcy reform.

We know that frivolous lawsuits have been a tremendous problem, and class action reform is again another very important bipartisan victory that we have been able to bring about.

Securing our borders. Our national security is our number one priority in this country. It has to be constitutional, but securing our borders is very important. With a strong, bipartisan vote, we have been able to pass the Real ID legislation which has now been attached to the very supplemental appropriations bill which also enjoyed very strong bipartisan support.

The highway bill enjoyed strong bipartisan support with Democrats and Republicans coming together to work on this important issue.

We also know that trying to save small businesses and family farms has been very important, and that is why Democrats and Republicans came together to permanently repeal the death tax, one of the most onerous taxes of all, and we also know that dealing with the prospect of a horrible terrorist attack is something that we had not contemplated up until September 11, 2001. Now we have seriously considered the prospect of that by passing very important Continuity in Government legislation which enjoyed the support of 122 Democrats along with Republicans.

Mr. Speaker, just last week we saw 41 Democrats joined with Republicans to pass the very important energy legislation geared toward reducing the cost of gasoline which is one of the great challenges our constituents face.

We have enjoyed those strong bipartisan victories: bankruptcy, highway, continuity in government, border security, energy, and repeal of the death tax. These are very important bipartisan victories, but it is also important to note that we have had a very important bipartisan win just today, and it is because of the policies of President Bush and the United States Congress that we have been able to see the Syrians, after 3 long decades, finally extricate themselves from Lebanon.

I had the privilege of joining with a bipartisan delegation of my colleagues, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS), the gentleman from Washington (Mr. HASTINGS), the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. GINGREY), the gentleman from Florida (Mr. CRENSHAW) join with us in going into Beirut, Lebanon. We had a chance to meet with young students who were great activists at Martyr's Square at the grave site of Rafik Hariri, the former Prime Minister who was tragically assassinated. These students said because of what the United States of America and the Coalition forces did in Iraq, laying the groundwork for 8.5 million people to vote on January 30, 2005, they were willing to stand up and free their country, and they were willing to die to ensure that the people of Lebanon would be free.

Mr. Speaker, I have to say while we have enjoyed a wide range of bipartisan victories in the 109th Congress under the very able leadership of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT), it is also very important to note that under his leadership and the leadership of President Bush, we have been able to see democracy spread throughout the Middle East. It is exactly what President Bush said, and thank God we vigorously pursued that policy.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12(a) of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 2 p.m. today.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 58 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess until 2 p.m.

☐ 1400

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order at 2 p.m.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Lord God, Well-spring of all creation and Provident Guide of our Nation's history, You bring us together for this session of the 109th Congress of the United States.

From diversity, You fashion one Nation. Out of the human search for truth and faulty efforts to lovingly accept one another in fellowship, You inspire consensus and settle a just yet temporary compromise. Grant to all patience and civility in every endeavor.

For You leave this work in such human hands, though You are the designer of lasting results.

Lord, without a transcendent framework, the movable pieces of this mosaic of government will not fall into place.

Alone and filled with fears and absolutes, all human effort to seek the common good will only lead to some artificial conformity or relative common denominator.

So again, our Nation turns to You in prayer, as we will do, now and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCNULTY) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. MCNULTY led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

> I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Monahan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed a bill of the following title in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

> S. 893. An Act to make technical corrections in the Anabolic Steroid Control Act of 2004.

HEALTH INSURANCE PATIENT-OWNERSHIP PLAN

(Mr. PRICE of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. Speaker, I am a third-generation physician. Both my father and grandfather were doctors, and I practiced medicine for over 20 years before coming to Congress. I can tell my colleagues that without a doubt, the doctor-patient relationship is far from what it used to be, or ought to be.

Today, our health care system is big business. The doctor-patient relationship is often obstructed by insurance companies, the government, and employers. The result is a system that prevents people from having control and ownership of critical health care decisions in their own lives.

Today, employers or the government most often determine what health insurance coverage a person receives, they dictate what the copays and the deductibles are, and they hold the contract with the insurance company.

I believe that the person most affected by health care decisions should be the one who has the most control over those decisions, and that is the patient.

Mr. Speaker, it is time we started thinking about health care in a new way. We should put health care choices in the patient's hands, not the employer's, not the insurance company's, and certainly not the government's. H. Res. 215, the Health Insurance Patient-Ownership Plan, is a good way to begin, and I ask my colleagues for their support on this new, exciting, and positive initiative.

OPPOSING THE PRIVATIZATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY

(Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise to reiterate my emphatic opposition to the privatization of Social Security. This program would not only hurt millions of elderly Americans but, ultimately, the whole country. For women and working families especially, Social Security is a lifeline, and they need to know that they can rely on a guaranteed benefit.

Social Security was never intended to be a roll-the-dice stock market gambit. Social Security was never meant to be an elaborate investment scheme geared to maximizing returns. Social Security was designed as a simple, straightforward social insurance program that ensures all of us to spend our golden years in a basic level of dignity, independence, and security.

Mr. Speaker, privatization is also not good for young workers. A 30-year-old worker making $40,000 a year will lose 27 percent of their benefits under this plan. That is almost $6,000 a year.

I urge all of my colleagues, let us work together and solve a manageable problem.

PARENTS DESERVE THE RIGHT TO KNOW

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, a woman from my district came to Washington last month to tell Congress about how her daughter was taken to New Jersey for an abortion without her knowledge. This mom knew about her 14-year-old daughter's pregnancy. Her daughter had chosen to keep the baby and was attending prenatal classes.

But the boyfriend's family, according to her testimony, "planned, paid for, coerced, harassed, and threatened her into having an abortion. They left her alone during the abortion and went to eat lunch."

About 80 percent of the public favors parental notification laws. Over 30 States have enacted such laws. As in the case of my constituent, these laws are often evaded by interstate transportation of minors, and it is often openly encouraged in advertising by abortion providers.

This week, the House will consider legislation that merely says that in States that protect a parent's right to know, taking a young girl across State lines will not keep the parent in the dark. The bill would make it a Federal offense to transport a minor across State lines to circumvent that State's abortion parental notification laws. In addition, the bill requires that in a State without parental notification, abortion providers are required to notify a parent.

I urge support of the bill.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FORBES). Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair will postpone further proceedings today on motions to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 6 of rule XX.

Record votes on postponed questions will be taken after 6:30 p.m. today.

REAUTHORIZING THE STEEL AND ALUMINUM ENERGY CONSERVATION AND TECHNOLOGY ACT OF 1988

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1158) to reauthorize the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act of 1988, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1158

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. AMENDMENTS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 9 of the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act of 1988 (15 U.S.C. 5108) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 9. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary to carry out this Act $12,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2006 through 2010.".

(b) STEEL PROJECT PRIORITIES.—Section 4(c)(1) of the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act of 1988 (15 U.S.C. 5103(c)(1)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (H), by striking "coatings for sheet steels" and inserting "sheet and bar steels"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(K) The development of technologies which reduce greenhouse gas emissions.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act of 1988 is further amended—

(1) by striking section 7 (15 U.S.C. 5106); and

(2) in section 8 (15 U.S.C. 5107), by inserting ", beginning with fiscal year 2006," after "close of each fiscal year".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. LIPINSKI) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 1158, as amended, the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 1158, the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act. I would like to commend my colleague, the gentlewoman from Pennsylvania (Ms. HART), for reintroducing this important legislation which she originally introduced and which passed the House in the 108th Congress.

There are many reasons why we should pass this legislation today.

First of all, the metals industry is highly energy-intensive. Taken together, the steel, aluminum, and copper industries account for more than 10 percent of industrial usage in the United States. President Bush's national energy plan recognized that improving energy efficiency in our most energy-intensive industries could yield large improvements in productivity, product quality, safety, and pollution prevention.

Second, we have a strategic national interest in helping our metals industry remain competitive. For any industry, energy efficiency means increased production without increased energy consumption or costs. Improving energy efficiency helps the bottom line, making American metal products more competitive on the global market. That means more jobs here at home.

But energy efficiency is more than that. Reducing energy use means reducing our emissions of pollutants and greenhouse gases, and increasing our energy security. In this way, energy efficiency just makes sense, dollars and cents, for the Nation.

H.R. 1158 recognizes this fact and puts in place a new requirement that program managers consider the potential for technologies to reduce greenhouse gas emissions when developing their research plans. In this way the bill updates the plan to address current concerns about the impact of energy-intensive industries.

For these reasons, both the Committee on Science and the full House passed a similar bill by voice vote in the 108th Congress, and the Committee on Science approved H.R. 1158 by voice vote in March.

I encourage my colleagues to demonstrate support for this bill again today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to join the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) in support of H.R. 1158, the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act. I commend her for her support today, and I also commend the gentlewoman from Pennsylvania (Ms. HART) for taking a leadership role in pursuing this legislation dating back to the last Congress.

This bill will benefit our constituents, Democrat and Republican alike. It has been a pleasure to have this opportunity to work in a bipartisan effort to bring this measure to the floor today.

Today, almost one-quarter of the steel production in the United States is in the Chicago, northern Indiana region. But, unfortunately, our country no longer hails as the world's leading producer. My constituents in the Third District of Illinois have been especially impacted by the changes that have come from increased foreign competition. In my area, families and communities have been badly hurt by job losses. But the impact has also been felt in other places around the country.

My father-in-law in Johnstown, Pennsylvania lost his job as a steelworker when his plant was forced to close. This bill will help prevent further losses of good American jobs by increasing the competitiveness of our domestic manufacturing.

I also strongly believe that the overall prospects for the American steel industry have an important bearing on our future economic security as well as our national security. For these reasons, I strongly support this bill, which has become known as the metals initiative.

This bill, improving upon a program which was originally passed by the 108th Congress, authorizes Federal cost-sharing of research. The goals of this research are threefold: increased competitiveness for the U.S. metals industry, energy efficiency, and a cleaner environment.

The development of technologies that will increase energy efficiency as well as improve our international competitiveness is key to maintaining our national security, both from an economic and a military perspective. Likewise, the implementation of more environmentally friendly technologies that reduce emissions or reduce demand for petroleum will result in both a public benefit, a cleaner environment; and a private benefit, a cut in the cost of production.

The metals initiative has three very important provisions that make it a commonsense vehicle for pursuing cooperation between government and industry. First, there is a payback provision which requires that the Federal investment be repaid out of net proceeds of commercialization once the technology is developed. This provision prevents the program from taking on the negative connotations of a mere Federal subsidy. Instead, it provides a framework for these domestic companies, their employees, and the communities that rely upon the revenue bases to benefit from the new technologies that are made possible through this public-private partnership.

The second provision that makes this partnership work is the 70 percent/30 percent government-industry cost-share. When industry puts their own money at risk, the projects get senior management attention. Historically, these types of steel research and development projects have yielded results that meet national needs and are highly marketable, producing a win-win situation.

□ 1415

The third provision calls for industry ownership of intellectual property produced from the research. Twenty-five years of experience under the Bayh-Dole Act has shown that when ownership of patents is left with inventors, the likelihood that patents will be put to commercial use dramatically increases. This factor creates opportunities for economic growth and better job security for hard-working Americans.

The Metals Initiative is simply a great example of how public private partnerships can benefit both taxpayers and share holders. It will help enrich the overall economy, offer much needed stimulation for the growth of technology in key industries, and protect the environment. With recent changes in trade laws and other international forces at work, we owe it especially to the people who work in these industries. All Americans benefit from such commonsense programs. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1158 today and vote "yes" on this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Pennsylvania (Ms. HART), who is the sponsor of this legislation.

Ms. HART. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Illinois (Chairwoman Biggert) and ranking member (Mr. HONDA) of the Energy Subcommittee for working together to make sure that this bill moved forward. I am pleased for their support and also for the support of the Science Committee chairman, the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT), and ranking member, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. GORDON), for moving the bill through committee and also for their support. I especially thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. LIPINSKI), who just spoke, for working with me on this legislation, H.R. 1158, the bill to reauthorize the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act.

The steel industry is one of the most energy-intensive industries with energy accounting for a major portion of the cost of production. Improvement in energy efficiency is therefore an important component to reducing the cost of steel and thereby making us more competitive.

Recent experiences have shown that energy costs per unit of output of steel can be reduced significantly through more intelligent capital-intensive investments in modifications to existing plants and equipment and conversion to more energy-efficient processes.

Investment made at the government level in partnerships with industry to stimulate achievement of this increased energy efficiency has shown great results over the years.

This legislation would reauthorize the steel and aluminum competitiveness act, which established a public private partnership, a research initiative. It is cost sharing with government and industry, focused on improving industrial energy efficiency in the steel and aluminum and fabrication industries.

The bill will result in improved energy efficiency in the domestic metals industries, thereby improving our competitiveness and also improving the cost and quality of the actual product. This efficiency offers environmental benefits through reduced emissions per unit of steel and aluminum produced. It can also help reduce the future demand for energy in this industrial sector.

The steel industry and the Department of Energy continue this partnership under the Metals Initiative and its predecessor, the Steel Initiative, even after the authorization expired; so, therefore, it is something that is successful enough to have provided with its funding.

For fiscal year 2006, the administration has only recommended $6.5 million. That is $3.8 million for steel and $2.7 million for aluminum, which is slightly more than half of the $11.1 million provided in 2004.

This legislation would reauthorize the 1988 act through 2010. Over the years, 58 steel companies and 23 research organizations participated in and benefited from this program. Two of those companies, INTEG Process Group and U.S. Steel from my area, participated in a subcommittee hearing on this bill last year and testified regarding the benefits this initiative has produced; the jobs it has obviously preserved and provided; the opportunity that it has provided in those industries as well.

The bill authorizes $12 million for this program for fiscal years 2006 through 2010, for a total of $60 million over 5 years. It is an investment that is well worth it to preserve and grow an industry that is so important to our country.

This bill is right for this industry, it is right for energy security, and it is right for our competitiveness, and it is good for the environment.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 1158, the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act. I want to thank my friend and colleague from Illinois, Representative BIGGERT for her leadership, as well as Representative MELISSA HART, for her persistence in introducing this legislation in the 108th Congress and again in the 109th Congress.

I am pleased Chairman BOEHLERT and Ranking Member GORDON acted quickly in the House Science Committee to mark-up this bill and bring it to the floor today because it helps our steel, aluminum, copper, and other metal industries stay competitive in today's global marketplace.

H.R. 1158, the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness bill before us today authorizes the Department of Energy to develop a public and private partnership to build upon important research goals, such as energy efficiency, increasing competitiveness of the U.S. metals industries, and improving the environment. By working together, both the taxpayers and share holders can benefit from this federal cost share between the government and the metals industries.

The domestic steel industry alone has come a long way since the steel crisis began in 1988. In my home state of Illinois, the crisis has resulted in four steel companies filing for bankruptcy, including Laclede Steel and the parent company for Granite City Steel, which are in my Congressional District. Approximately 5,000 steel workers lost their jobs in Illinois alone.

Now, prices are stabilizing and the industry is restructuring and consolidating. All of this has happened without hampering the availability of competitively priced steel products. However, aggressive trade laws and other international pressures can damage the progress that was made. Therefore, it is important we continue down the path of successful recovery because the overall prospects for our steel industry can affect our future economic and national security.

As a member of the Congressional Steel Caucus, I am deeply committed to making sure the metals industries stay competitive and for these reasons, I support to this bill and urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, we have no more speakers. I yield back the balance of my time..

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FORBES). The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1158, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HIGH-PERFORMANCE COMPUTING REVITALIZATION ACT OF 2005

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 28) to amend the High-Performance Computing Act of 1991, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 28

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "High-Performance Computing Revitalization Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Section 2 of the High-Performance Computing Act of 1991 (15 U.S.C. 5501) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(10) Commercial application of the results of Federal investment in basic and computing science is consistent with longstanding United States technology transfer policy and is a critical national priority, particularly with regard to cybersecurity and other homeland security applications, because of the urgent needs of commercial, academic, and individual users as well as the Federal and State Governments.".

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

Section 4 of the High-Performance Computing Act of 1991 (15 U.S.C. 5503) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by inserting "and multidisciplinary teams of researchers" after "high-performance computing resources";

(2) in paragraph (3)—

(A) by striking "scientific workstations,";

(B) by striking "(including vector supercomputers and large scale parallel systems)";

(C) by striking "and applications" and inserting "applications"; and

(D) by inserting ", and the management of large data sets" after "systems software";

(3) in paragraph (4), by striking "packet switched"; and

(4) by amending paragraphs (5) and (6) to read as follows:

"(5) 'Program' means the High-Performance Computing Research and Development Program described in section 101; and

"(6) 'Program Component Areas' means the major subject areas under which are grouped related individual projects and activities carried out under the Program.".

SEC. 4. HIGH-PERFORMANCE COMPUTING RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

Title I of the High-Performance Computing Act of 1991 (15 U.S.C. 5511 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in the title heading, by striking "AND THE NATIONAL RESEARCH AND EDUCATION NETWORK" and inserting "RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT";

(2) in section 101—

(A) the section heading, by striking "NATIONAL HIGH-PERFORMANCE COMPUTING" and inserting "HIGH-PERFORMANCE COMPUTING RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT";

(B) in subsection (a)—

(i) in the subsection heading, by striking "NATIONAL HIGH-PERFORMANCE COMPUTING" and inserting "HIGH-PERFORMANCE COMPUTING RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT";

(ii) by striking paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting the following: "(1) The President shall implement a High-Performance Computing Research and Development Program, which shall—

"(A) provide for long-term basic and applied research on high-performance computing;

"(B) provide for research and development on, and demonstration of, technologies to advance the capacity and capabilities of high-performance computing and networking systems;

"(C) provide for sustained access by the research community in the United States to high-performance computing systems that are among the most advanced in the world in terms of performance in solving scientific and engineering problems, including provision for technical support for users of such systems;

"(D) provide for efforts to increase software availability, productivity, capability, security, portability, and reliability;

"(E) provide for high-performance networks, including experimental testbed networks, to enable research and development on, and demonstration of, advanced applications enabled by such networks;

"(F) provide for computational science and engineering research on mathematical modeling and algorithms for applications in all fields of science and engineering;

"(G) provide for the technical support of, and research and development on, high-performance computing systems and software required to address Grand Challenges;

"(H) provide for educating and training additional undergraduate and graduate students in software engineering, computer science, computer and network security, applied mathematics, library and information science, and computational science; and

"(I) provide for improving the security of computing and networking systems, including Federal systems, including research required to establish security standards and practices for these systems.";

(iii) by redesignating paragraphs (3) and (4) as paragraphs (2) and (3), respectively;

(iv) in paragraph (2), as so redesignated by clause (iii) of this subparagraph—

(I) by striking subparagraph (B);

(II) by redesignating subparagraphs (A) and (C) as subparagraphs (D) and (F), respectively;

(III) by inserting before subparagraph (D), as so redesignated by subclause (II) of this clause, the following new subparagraphs:

"(A) establish the goals and priorities for Federal high-performance computing research, development, networking, and other activities;

"(B) establish Program Component Areas that implement the goals established under subparagraph (A), and identify the Grand Challenges that the Program should address;

"(C) provide for interagency coordination of Federal high-performance computing research, development, networking, and other activities undertaken pursuant to the Program;"; and

(IV) by inserting after subparagraph (D), as so redesignated by subclause (II) of this clause, the following new subparagraph:

"(E) develop and maintain a research, development, and deployment roadmap for the provision of high-performance computing systems under paragraph (1)(C); and"; and

(v) in paragraph (3), as so redesignated by clause (iii) of this subparagraph—

(I) by striking "paragraph (3)(A)" and inserting "paragraph (2)(D)";

(II) by amending subparagraph (A) to read as follows:

"(A) provide a detailed description of the Program Component Areas, including a description of any changes in the definition of or activities under the Program Component Areas from the preceding report, and the reasons for such changes, and a description of Grand Challenges supported under the Program;";

(III) in subparagraph (C), by striking "specific activities" and all that follows through "the Network" and inserting "each Program Component Area";

(IV) in subparagraph (D), by inserting "and for each Program Component Area" after "participating in the Program";

(V) in subparagraph (D), by striking "applies;" and inserting "applies; and";

(VI) by striking subparagraph (E) and redesignating subparagraph (F) as subparagraph (E); and

(VII) in subparagraph (E), as so redesignated by subclause (VI) of this clause, by inserting "and the extent to which the Program incorporates the recommendations of the advisory committee established under subsection (b)" after "for the Program";

(C) in subsection (b)—

(i) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (5) as subparagraphs (A) through (E), respectively;

(ii) by inserting "(1)" after "ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—";

(iii) in paragraph (1)(C), as so redesignated by clauses (i) and (ii) of this subparagraph, by inserting ", including funding levels for the Program Component Areas" after "of the Program";

(iv) in paragraph (1)(D), as so redesignated by clauses (i) and (ii) of this subparagraph, by striking "computing" and inserting "high-performance computing and networking"; and

(v) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) In addition to the duties outlined in paragraph (1), the advisory committee shall conduct periodic evaluations of the funding, management, coordination, implementation, and activities of the Program, and shall report not less frequently than once every two fiscal years to the Committee on Science of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate on its findings and recommendations. The first report shall be due within one year after the date of enactment of this paragraph."; and

(D) in subsection (c)(1)(A), by striking "Program or" and inserting "Program Component Areas or"; and

(3) by striking sections 102 and 103.

SEC. 5. AGENCY ACTIVITIES.

Title II of the High-Performance Computing Act of 1991 (15 U.S.C. 5521 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by amending subsection (a) of section 201 to read as follows:

"(a) GENERAL RESPONSIBILITIES.—As part of the Program described in title I, the National Science Foundation shall—

"(1) support research and development to generate fundamental scientific and technical knowledge with the potential of advancing high-performance computing and networking systems and their applications;

"(2) provide computing and networking infrastructure support to the research community in the United States, including the provision of high-performance computing systems that are among the most advanced in the world in terms of performance in solving scientific and engineering problems, and including support for advanced software and applications development, for all science and engineering disciplines; and

"(3) support basic research and education in all aspects of high-performance computing and networking.";

(2) by amending subsection (a) of section 202 to read as follows:

"(a) GENERAL RESPONSIBILITIES.—As part of the Program described in title I, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration shall conduct basic and applied research in high-performance computing and networking, with emphasis on—

"(1) computational fluid dynamics, computational thermal dynamics, and computational aerodynamics;

"(2) scientific data dissemination and tools to enable data to be fully analyzed and combined from multiple sources and sensors;

"(3) remote exploration and experimentation; and

"(4) tools for collaboration in system design, analysis, and testing.";

(3) in section 203—

(A) by striking subsections (a) through (d) and inserting the following:

"(a) GENERAL RESPONSIBILITIES.—As part of the Program described in title I, the Secretary of Energy shall—

"(1) conduct and support basic and applied research in high-performance computing and networking to support fundamental research in science and engineering disciplines related to energy applications; and

"(2) provide computing and networking infrastructure support, including the provision of high-performance computing systems that are among the most advanced in the world in terms of performance in solving scientific and engineering problems, and including support for advanced software and applications development, for science and engineering disciplines related to energy applications."; and

(B) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (b);

(4) by amending subsection (a) of section 204 to read as follows:

"(a) GENERAL RESPONSIBILITIES.—As part of the Program described in title I—

"(1) the National Institute of Standards and Technology shall—

"(A) conduct basic and applied metrology research needed to support high-performance computing and networking systems;

"(B) develop benchmark tests and standards for high-performance computing and networking systems and software;

"(C) develop and propose voluntary standards and guidelines, and develop measurement techniques and test methods, for the interoperability of high-performance computing systems in networks and for common user interfaces to high-performance computing and networking systems; and

"(D) work with industry and others to develop, and facilitate the implementation of, high-performance computing applications to solve science and engineering problems that are relevant to industry; and

"(2) the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration shall conduct basic and applied research on high-performance computing applications, with emphasis on—

"(A) improving weather forecasting and climate prediction;

"(B) collection, analysis, and dissemination of environmental information; and

"(C) development of more accurate models of the ocean-atmosphere system."; and

(5) by amending subsection (a) of section 205 to read as follows:

"(a) GENERAL RESPONSIBILITIES.—As part of the Program described in title I, the Environmental Protection Agency shall conduct basic and applied research directed toward advancement and dissemination of computational techniques and software tools for high-performance computing systems with an emphasis on modeling to—

"(1) develop robust decision support tools;

"(2) predict pollutant transport and the effects of pollutants on humans and on ecosystems; and

"(3) better understand atmospheric dynamics and chemistry.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) and the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 28, as amended, the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Speaker, when we think of how computers affect our lives, we probably think of the work we do on our office desktop machines or maybe the Internet surfing we do in our spare time. We do not normally think of the enormous contribution that supercomputers, also called high-performance computers, make to the world around us.

A recent report by the Council on Competitiveness outlined how high-performance computers currently are used in various industries. The report concluded that "there is great potential for increased productivity, innovation and competitive advancement across the private sector" as more industries learn how to take advantage of supercomputing technologies.

This is not at all surprising. At a Science Committee hearing last year, we learned that supercomputers allow companies to anticipate how new products will behave in different environments using simulations that are called "virtual prototyping."

For instance, the automotive industry uses high-performance computers to reduce costs and improve quality and safety during the vehicle design process. Pharmaceutical companies simulate chemical interactions to design new drugs. These approaches help companies increase the speed to market for new products.

High-performance computers also are central to maintaining U.S. leadership in many scientific fields. Computational science complements theory and experimentation in fields such as plasma physics and fusion, astrophysics, nuclear physics and genomics.

However, in June 2002, a new Japanese supercomputer, the Earth Simulator, was named the fastest in the world, a title it held through November 2004. Some experts claim that Japan was able to produce the Earth Simulator, a computer far ahead of American machines, because the U.S. had taken an overly cautious or conventional approach to computing R&D. In hindsight, we see that caution meant lost opportunities. Japan's Earth Simulator is an example of a road not taken.

But the U.S. is coming back. Last fall, American machines took the two top spots on the list of fastest supercomputers, pushing the Earth Simulator to third. I commend IBM and Silicon Graphics, Inc. for producing these amazing new machines.

The bill we are considering on the House floor today, H.R. 28, the High-performance Computing Revitalization Act of 2005, will ensure that America remains a leader in the development and use of supercomputers.

To achieve this aim, the bill does four things. First, it requires that Federal agencies provide the U.S. research community access to the most advanced high-performance computing systems and technical support for their users.

Second, there is more to computing than building big machines. That is why the bill requires Federal agencies to support all aspects of the high-performance computing for scientific and engineering applications.

Third, the bill requires the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy to direct an interagency planning process to develop and maintain a road map for the provision of high-performance computing resources for the U.S. research community.

The original legislation that the bill amends, the High-performance Computing Act of 1991, gave rise to an interagency planning process that has lost the vitality it once had. This provision will help ensure a robust planning process so that our national high-performance computing effort is not allowed to lag in the future.

Finally, the bill clarifies the mission of each of the Federal agencies that have a role in developing or using high-performance computing.

Mr. Speaker, this bill was the subject of a full committee hearing in May of 2004. At that hearing, Dr. John Marburger, director of the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy, communicated the administration's support for this bill. The bill is also consistent with a report written by the High End Computing Revitalization Task Force and released by OSTP on the day of the hearing.

More recently, the President's Information Technology Advisory Committee, known as PITAC, on April 14 approved the recommendations for a report on computational science they will issue shortly. Designed to ensure U.S. preeminence and competitiveness in the computational science, these recommendations include sustained access for the research community to the highest end supercomputers, devotion of resources to software development and data management, and creation of a multidecade road map for computational science and the fields that require it. In other words, the actions this report recommends are exactly what today's bill requires the Federal Government to do.

The Nation's experts on PITAC, Dr. Marburger, and the Bush administration all recognize that we cannot imagine the kinds of problems that the supercomputers of tomorrow will be able to solve, but we can imagine the kinds of problems we will have if we fail to provide researchers in the United States with the computing resources they need to remain world-class.

This bill will guide Federal agencies in providing needed support to high-performance computing and its user communities. Our Nation's scientific enterprise and our economy will be stronger for it. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First of all, I would like to commend my colleague, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT), for her constant work on the Science Committee and these particular areas for the work that she has done over the last several years and her consistent leadership in support of the high-end computing.

I also thank my colleagues in the House for passing the previous version of this bill in the 108th Congress, and hopefully the Senate will pass this bill also in a timely manner.

H.R. 28 aims to restore U.S. world leadership in the area of high-performance computing. Supercomputing is a large national effort spread out over seven Federal agencies. This resolution seeks to better coordinate those agencies' efforts and to improve both short-term and long-term planning.

The Oak Ridge National Laboratory near my district is a center of national leadership and high-performance computing. Oak Ridge is the Department of Energy's largest science and energy laboratory. This lab is involved in many innovative research projects, including renewable energy, materials science, national security, and bioscience.

I am proud that the Oak Ridge National Lab near my district stands to become the home of the world's most powerful supercomputer.

I envision thousands of scientists traveling to Oak Ridge to use the computing facilities. The discoveries they make will change how we diagnose and cure diseases, heat and cool our homes, travel from place to place, and defend our liberties in time of warfare.

H.R. 28 will strengthen and streamline our national efforts in the areas of high-performance computing. I commend this bill and recommend this bill to my colleagues and ask for their support.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished chairman of the Science Committee, the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT).

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, this is very important legislation. It deals with the competitiveness of the United States of America in the global marketplace. This is something that too many take for granted that we are going to continue to be preeminent in the competitive world. We are not going to be preeminent in the competitive world if we do not invest wisely, if we do not direct our resources in the proper way, because the competition is all over the place. It is not just one State against another. It is the United States against the world. We are ahead. That is a position I like. I like to be ahead of the parade.

But I will tell you, when we look back, we see a lot of people following closely behind. So it is critically important that we do things like investing in high-performance computing. And among other things, this bill directs the director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, that is the science advisor to the President of the United States, to develop and maintain a research development and deployment road map for the provision of high-performance computing systems for use by the research community in the United States of America.

□ 1430

Now, that is a very important assignment. And we want Dr. Marburger down at the White House to know that those of us in the legislative branch are determined to give the resources necessary, the direction necessary to enable him to go forward, confident that he has the support, the bipartisan support of the Congress of the United States. So I commend this bill to my colleagues. I commend this bill to the other side of the Capitol, our colleagues in the United States Senate.

This is important business and let us get on with it. I thank my chairwoman, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) for the outstanding leadership she has provided and I thank my colleagues for their indulgence.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN).

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I believe I am the only one to come to this floor to oppose this bill. I will try to yield back at least a few minutes to the gentleman and hopefully they will be available should my comments result in comments of others that need rebuttal.

I support science. It is important to America. It is important to my district. But as we look at what we can accomplish, we also have to examine what we should try to accomplish. While we expand the tools of the human race, we must also look at the pitfalls.

This is an issue that I have been talking about for a long time. I first brought it to the floor 5 years ago and that is best illustrated by the fact that roughly 50,000 years ago was the last time that a new level of intelligence came to this planet. It was our ancestors, who said hello to Neanderthal, the only other intelligence on the planet that we were aware of at the time. It did not work out so well for the Neanderthal.

Today we are as a species looking at two exciting new technologies, each which is likely to create an entity, a life form, with a higher level of intelligence than human beings; and, in fact, a higher level by a differential that exceeds whatever differential there was between human beings and Neanderthals. One of these technologies is genetic engineering. And if this was a genetic engineering bill, I would not get to speak on it as long because there would be more members to speak against it, worried about the societal implications. But genetic engineering raises questions that should also be raised by computer engineering, because the kind of high-technology, high-performance computer which is the subject of the bill is an important step towards the development of an artificial life form that will exceed human intelligence.

We had hearings 2 years ago in the Committee on Science where the consensus of experts and I did not invite any of these experts, senior committee members did, (chiefly the chairman) they testified that we are roughly 25 years away from a computer that exceeds human intelligence.

Now, I do not know whether it is 25 years or whether it is a bit longer or a bit less, but should we go headlong into developing the next intelligent species on this planet without even including, in the slightest, in our legislation something to say "let us examine whether this is something we want to do, and whether we want to have any controls."

The truth is, Mr. Speaker, we do not know whether we are creating Data from "Star Trek, The Next Generation," or whether we are creating Hal from "2001: A Space Odyssey." We know that the future will look like science fiction. We just do not know which science fiction book or movie.

Last year when the Committee on Science considered this same bill as H.R. 4218, the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) and I reached an agreement on an amendment that would provide for looking at the societal implications of future advances in information technology. That amendment was included in the bill that passed this House. Specifically, it directed the National Science Foundation to support research into the implications of computers, both hardware and software, that were capable of mimicking human ability to learn to reason and to make decisions. Likewise, the nanotechnology bill which passed both houses, and is now law, provided for even more extensive review into the societal implications, including explicitly the implications of developing levels of intelligence that exceeds those of human beings. But H.R. 28 strips out the provisions that were included in prior legislation. This draft says we will do nothing to look at the societal, the ethical, the environmental implications of what we are doing, and we will rush headlong into trying to do it without the slightest thought of whether we should do it.

My amendment in committee was defeated 17–19 on what was unfortunately, and inexplicably a party-line vote. My amendment put forward just a few weeks ago was identical to the compromise language the chairman and I reached in the 108th Congress.

Now, the importance of understanding how artificial intelligence will be achieved through information technology, how it will impact society—that importance has not decreased since last year. The amendment should be included before this bill leaves this House.

Now, I know there are those who say it is okay to create a computer that exceeds human intelligence and that is self-aware because it will not have hands and will not be able to act except through human beings. Trust me, there are those amongst us who would sell hands to the devil for a good stock tip. If you create Pandora's box, it will be opened.

Now, H.R. 28 deals with the creation of high-performance computers; and as I said and want to say again, the testimony before our committee was that we are 25 years, and this is not one crackpot, this was a consensus; the range was 20 to 30 years between now and when we develop a computer that exceeds human intelligence. And it is not just me. The DARPA, the Defense Advanced Research Project Agency, has on its Web page the statement that its mission, supported by this bill, is to develop a computer which will "learn from its experience, be aware of itself, and be able to reflect on its own behavior."

So part of our government is engaged in trying to create maybe Hal, maybe Data, while here in the Congress we pretend that it is impossible, that it is not an issue worthy of reflection. DARPA is going to create a reflective computer, but we do not have a reflective Congress.

Now, I understand that H.R. 28 is an important bill to set goals and priorities in high-performance computer research development with a number of different agencies, including DARPA and its subsidiary agencies. What I do not understand is why there is such resistance to studying the implications of this research. We cannot and should not plunge ahead without a provision to study these implications.

Join me in rejecting this bill on suspension. A bill with this level of implications should not be considered under a suspension of the rules. Send this bill back to the Committee on Science. Have the Committee on Science create a balanced program. Overwhelmingly, this bill should deal with supporting the technology, marching forward, achieving all of the goals that the preceding speakers have indicated. But then let us also put in the bill just a little language to say that we ought to look at the implications: Whether it is likely that this technology will create an entity more intelligent than human beings? Whether that entity is likely to be self-aware? How we could either cause or prevent such self-awareness? What are the societal and ethical implications of having a slave entity reflective, intelligent, and commanded to do what we instruct, without so much as the minimum wage?

So let us pass this bill next month, after the Committee on Science can provide some balance to it.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier the Committee on Science held a hearing on the high-performance computer in May of last year. And at that time my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) asked the experts who testified at that hearing whether there was any danger of computers approaching the cognitive abilities of humans. And the witnesses gave a resounding no in answer to that question.

More specifically, my colleague wanted to know how close we were to a machine that has reached a level of intelligence where it would be entitled to the minimum wage. Dr. Jack Marburger, the President's Science Advisor responded, "Not very. We are quite far from that in terms of number of components measured in neurons; for example, the interconnectivity of the human brain far exceeds anything that we can currently build or foresee in the foreseeable future with computer hardware."

Dr. Rick Stevens, a renowned computer scientist from Argonne National Laboratory, responded to the same question saying, "My personal view is that I would be much more concerned with near-term issues associated with large-scale computing or the use of large-scale data systems to collect information. Right now, if you had to estimate what is the most intelligent device we can build, it is roughly between a worm and an insect in terms of what it can do."

I think it is exceedingly inappropriate for this bill to impose a requirement on our Federal agencies to focus on the societal implications of hypothetical human-mimicking computers. Doing so would suggest that we as a body fundamentally misunderstand the nature and focus of high-performance computing research.

In addition, as Dr. Stevens pointed out at our hearing last year, information technology has societal implications for privacy, for workplace collaboration and for many other areas. Our Federal agencies should focus any resources for societal studies on these real and immediate needs.

Finally, NSF already has the ability to conduct research generally into social, economic, and work-force implications of information technology. We should allow the research community, via the peer review process, and the agency to determine if this sort of research becomes necessary. This should not be a mandate in this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, how much time is remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FORBES). The gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DAVIS) has 9 minutes remaining.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN).

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his additional generosity. I wish to respond to the comments of the gentlewoman.

Mr. Speaker, I will submit for the RECORD the section of DARPA's mission statement that I referred to previously where DARPA itself indicates that its mission, using the funds provided by this Congress, is to create a computer that is self-aware and able to reflect on its own behavior.

Mr. Speaker, we have thrown around terms as to what is close and what is not. It just comes down to whether 25 years, 30 years, is something close enough for us to be concerned about, or should we be concerned about only the immediate future? I would point out that we are not going to have self-aware computers for at least 10, maybe 15 or 20 congressional elections. And so if that is how we measure time, self-aware computers are a long way away. But when we approve construction projects and roads, we do not build bridges that are going to collapse in 25 or 30 years, and we assume that human beings will be the only intelligent species using those bridges.

If we are concerned when we build infrastructure for things 20, 30, 50, 100 years down the road, then we should be even more concerned with this bill. And we should not pass this bill in this form and say, well, we will worry about these issues when they come up in some subsequent decade.

□ 1445

In addition, it is put forward that we will just have the scientists and the research community figure out how to deal with these issues. That is perhaps the problem, because if we provide the support exclusively to the hardware and software scientists and nothing to those who will consider the societal implications, the ethical implications, the philosophical implications—then no one will be looking at those issues, then we will not have done our job to provide a balanced, scientific research bill. That is why I am voting "no."

The material I referred to previously is as follows:

DARPA STRATEGIC PLAN: SECTION 3.7: COGNITIVE COMPUTING (RELEASED FEBRUARY 2005)

Many elements of the information technology revolution that have vastly improved the effectiveness of the U.S. forces and transformed American society (e.g., time-sharing, personal computers, and the Internet) were given their impetus by J.C.R. Licklider, a visionary scientist at DARPA some 40 years ago. Licklider's vision was of people and computers working symbiotically. He envisioned computers seamlessly adapting to people as partners that would handle routine information processing tasks, thus freeing the people to focus on what they do best—think analytically and creatively—and greatly extend their cognitive powers. As we move to an increasingly network-centric military, the vision of intelligent, cooperative computing systems responsible for their own maintenance is more relevant than ever.

Despite the enormous progress in information technology over the years, information technology still falls well short of Licklider's vision. While computing systems are critical to U.S. national defense, they remain exceedingly complex, expensive to create, insecure, frequently incompatible, and prone to failure. And, they still require the user to adapt to them, rather than the other way around. Computers have grown ever faster, but they remain fundamentally unintelligent and difficult to use. Something dramatically different is needed.

In response, DARPA is revisiting Licklider's vision as its inspiration for the strategic thrust, "Cognitive Computing." Cognitive computers can be thought of as systems that know what they're doing. Cognidtive computing systems "reason" about their environments (including other systems), their goals, and their own capabilities. They will "learn" both from experience and by being taught. They will be capable of natural interactions with users, and will be able to "explain" their reasoning in natural terms. They will be robust in the face of surprises and avoid the brittleness and fragility of expert systems.

The benefits from this cognitive computing thrust will be profound. The increasing complexity of military systems means that the level of expertise needed to maintain them is also increasing—as are the staffing requirements for virtually every military function that uses computing and communications technology. By creating systems that know what they are doing, and that can configure, maintain, and adapt themselves, we will be able to drastically reduce the staff needed for operations centers, forward command posts, and even in support of small dismounted units and special operations teams. Cognitive computing technology will also help us to deal with the increasing tempo of operations and the complexity of plans, such as Air Tasking Orders and joint hostage rescue operations plans, by allowing computers to tap into the accumulated knowledge of past experience on behalf of their human partners.

Along these lines, DARPA's Personalized Assistant that Learns (PAL) program will create intelligent personalized assistants for many tasks, such as a commander's assistant, an intelligence analyst's assistant, or a decision-maker's executive assistant. These assistants will interact with their human partners by accepting direct, naturally expressed guidance to learn their partner's preferences and procedures. Then, they will be able to anticipate the human's needs and prepare materials to be ready just in time for them. These new and unprecedented artificial helpers should reduce military staffing needs in many key places and will help ensure decisions are made in a timely fashion and with the best possible preparation.

To meet these challenges and seize these opportunities, DARPA has structured its work in cognitive computing to catalyze innovative work in single cognitive systems, collaborative teams of cognitive systems, and collective cognition from large numbers of small non-cognitive elements. Each area will demonstrate the power of merging reasoning, learning, perception, and communication technologies. These areas will be supported and complemented by broad-based technology efforts in the hardware, software, and integration techniques needed.

The strategic thrust of cognitive computing is a template shaping DARPA's core technology foundation work in information technology.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I certainly understand the gentleman from California's (Mr. SHERMAN) efforts in an attempt to amend the bill in the committee process. As the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) has explained, however, there are other areas today in the policy of NSF that literally would look into the particular issues that he has raised with his amendment.

As a result of that, both the ranking member and the chairman agreed that this legislation is what we need to be considering today. So I strongly support this bill. I think that it is good for America. I think it is good perhaps even for the world; but, certainly, it is good in the areas where research and science is a major part of offering opportunities and options for those of us who live in this country.

So on that effort, I again make my comments of being sorry that the gentleman from California's (Mr. SHERMAN) efforts were not successful in the committee. Actually, last year, we did consider that amendment, and it actually passed the House floor; but I recommend strongly to the Members of the House passage of this bill, strongly support this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would agree with the gentleman from Tennessee that we really do have the means to conduct research generally and to the social, economic and workforce implication of information technology, and NSF has that ability; and I think that that is all that is necessary. We do not want a mandate in this bill.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I want to recognize the bill's chief cosponsor, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DAVIS), and thank him for all the great work that he has done on this bill. It is a very important bill to his district, to my district, and to all of the Nation.

I would also like to thank the other cosponsor of this important legislation, including the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT), the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Science; along with the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. GORDON), the ranking member; the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. INGLIS); the gentlewoman from Oregon (Ms. HOOLEY); and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JOHNSON), and I thank them all for their support.

With that, I would also like to thank my colleagues in this body for supporting an identical bill to this one in the 108th Congress; and, finally, I would like to extend my thanks to the Committee on Science staff, majority and minority, for their hard work to bring this bill to the floor today.

As I said earlier, we must commit to providing sustained support for high-performance computers at our Federal civil science agencies. H.R. 28 represents just such a commitment. Our Nation's scientific enterprise and our economy will be the stronger for it. I would urge my colleagues to support the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FORBES). The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 28, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECOGNIZING THE SIGNIFICANCE OF AFRICAN AMERICAN WOMEN IN THE UNITED STATES SCIENTIFIC COMMUNITY

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 96) recognizing the significance of African American women in the United States scientific community, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 96

Whereas African American women, once considered nontraditional participants in the United States scientific community, have become an indispensable part of the new technology society;

Whereas although women comprise approximately 25 percent of the 427,740 individuals employed in the United States workforce who hold a science and engineering doctoral degree, African American women comprise less than one percent of such individuals;

Whereas a skilled workforce is the essential fuel to propel the United States economy and ensure a high quality of life, and it is absolutely critical to the success of the economy to produce a scientifically literate workforce;

Whereas for these reasons, it is crucial for the United States to continue to aggressively recruit more minority and women students into careers in science and technology;

Whereas to improve the numbers of African American youth pursuing science, especially young women, it is crucial to provide strong scientific minds for them to look up to and emulate;

Whereas very little literature documents African American women and their place in science;

Whereas commemorating the achievements of African American women at the very top of the performance curve demonstrates to the world the importance of diversity in the workforce; and

Whereas Dr. Ruth Ella Moore (who in 1933 became the first African American woman to earn a Ph.D. in natural science from the Ohio State University), Dr. Roger Arliner Young (who in 1940 became the first African American woman to receive a Ph.D. in zoology from the University of Pennsylvania), Dr. Euphemia Lofton Haynes (who in 1943 became the first African American woman to receive a Ph.D. in mathematics from the Catholic University of America), Dr. Shirley Ann Jackson (who in 1973 became the first African American woman to receive a Ph.D. in physics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology), and Dr. Mae Jemison (a physician and the first African American woman in space) represent only a few of the African American women who have broken through many barriers to achieve greatness in science: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That Congress acknowledges and recognizes the significant achievements and contributions of African American women scientists, mathematicians, and inventors and supports the establishment of a special day on which these great minds may be honored and esteemed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) and the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H. Con. Res. 96, as amended, the resolution now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Concurrent Resolution 96, a resolution to recognize the significant contributions of African American women to the U.S. scientific community.

In recent history, it has become almost ordinary for talented individuals from diverse backgrounds to pursue educational opportunities in fields that were previously considered all white male domains. Yet today's women and minorities could never have succeeded in the once nontraditional fields of science, engineering, and mathematics had it not been for the courage of their predecessors.

For today's young women, it is difficult to appreciate how exceptional it was for African American women in particular to pursue a career in science. For those born in the early 20th century, they were told that they did not belong; and they felt lucky if they found work as research assistants to, or unpaid volunteers for, male scientists.

Yet the grit and perseverance of women like Ruth Ella Moore, the first African American woman to receive a Ph.D. in natural science from Ohio State University, as well as civil rights legislation and the women's movement, help to overcome these obstacles. They also helped pave the way for the successes of women like Shirley Ann Jackson, the first African American woman to receive a Ph.D. from MIT, and Mae Jemison, the first African American woman in space as a crew member of the shuttle Endeavor.

Today, African American women scientists hold positions at all levels of universities, government laboratories, and industry. They chair departments and scientific societies; and they serve on peer review committees, something that was unthinkable just 25 years ago.

The women we are honoring in House Concurrent Resolution 96 are more than pioneers. They are role models for a new generation of women who are just beginning to think about their life's work and future ambitions and explore their many opportunities. Yet, despite these successes, women and minorities are still under-represented in undergraduate and graduate science and engineering education.

As national demographics shift, we simply cannot rely only on our traditional science, mathematics, engineering and technology workforce, which is overwhelmingly white and male, and retiring. If the U.S. is to remain innovative and competitive, we must nurture, prepare, and engage young women and minorities in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics today.

That is what this resolution is all about. By underscoring the importance of diversity and recognizing the significant scientific achievements of African American women, I hope we can inspire more young women, and men, to follow in the footsteps of those who pursued science with such passion and enthusiasm.

In conclusion, I want to thank the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON) for her leadership on this very important issue. I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to thank the gentleman from New York (Chairman BOEHLERT) and the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. GORDON) for their bipartisan support of this resolution and in our Committee on Science markup last month during Women's Month. I also want to commend the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) for her willingness to help us move this bill forward here today.

As this Nation faces a shortage of qualified scientists, it is appropriate that we discuss the significant contributions that African American women have made to the scientific community. Most people that know me know that this has been a passion of mine for many years.

In the past, most of the U.S. scientists and engineers were white males. According to Census Bureau projections, this segment of the workforce population will decline from 37 percent in 1995 to 26 percent in 2050. Looking at these numbers, it is obvious that this group will not provide the needed scientists and engineers, particularly since participation rates in these fields are also declining.

Clearly, it will be necessary to attract greater numbers of women and minorities to careers in science and engineering in order to avoid devastating consequences for the future. Efforts to increase the presence of Americans in science are incomplete unless they have a women's component. Some progress has been made, but much remains to be accomplished. Women make up half the population, but only 24 percent of the science and engineering workforce. African Americans, Hispanics, and Native Americans as a group constitute 24 percent of the U.S. population, but only 7 percent of the total science and technology workforce.

African American women have an especially difficult time bridging the technology divide when it comes to their representation in the science fields. While women make up about 25 percent of the 427,740 employed science and engineering doctorate holders in the United States workforce, African American women comprise less than 1 percent employed as science and engineering doctorate holders. Many African American women who pursue science education experience isolation both in their graduate departments and in their communities.

So who are their mentors? One of the first pioneers was Dr. Ruth Ella Moore, the first African American woman to receive a doctoral degree in natural science in 1933. Dr. Moore graduated in 1933 from Ohio State University with a doctorate degree in bacteriology and was head of the department of bacteriology at Howard University's Medical School from 1947 to 1958.

In the field of space exploration, while most are familiar with Dr. Mae Jemison, few are aware that Katherine Coleman Goble Johnson was a key member of the control room during the Apollo 13 crisis. Katherine Johnson, a physicist, space scientist and mathematician, was instrumental in formulating calculations that helped the Apollo 13 return home safely in 1970 after a fuel tank explosion and computer system failure. That was detailed in Tom Hanks's film, "Apollo 13."

Unfortunately, many young African Americans are unfamiliar with these facts. Very little literature documents African American women and their place in science. To increase the number of African American youth pursuing science, especially young women, it is critical that we provide them strong science role models for them to admire and emulate.

In addition, commemorating the achievements of African American women at the very top of the performance curve demonstrates to the world the importance of diversity in the workforce, especially in the scientific community.

That is why I ask my colleagues to join me today by honoring our great African American women pioneers who helped pave the way for current science stars, like Dr. Mae Jemison and Dr. Shirley Ann Jackson.

As a medical doctor and the first African American woman in space, Dr. Jemison continues to inspire young people in the science field with her program, The Earth We Share International Camp, called TEWS, T-E-W-S, which is an acronym. It is designed to promote science literacy for all students.

Dr. Shirley Ann Jackson was not only the first African American to receive a Ph.D. in physics from MIT but was also the first African American woman to receive a doctorate in any field from that school.

This resolution recognizes their achievements in science and technology and encourages a new generation of young women to continue in their legacies.

Again, I wish to thank the gentleman from New York (Chairman BOEHLERT) and the gentleman from Tennessee (Ranking Member GORDON) for working with me in a collegial manner, as we always do on the Committee on Science, and for allowing quick passage of the resolution and speedy action to the floor.

I urge my colleagues to vote "yes" on H. Con. Res. 96. This resolution represents our most needed commitment to supporting the continued progress of women and minorities and, in particular, African American women in the sciences. Full participation by all of our diverse population in an endeavor this important will be our key to future success as a world leader in science and technology.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further speakers, and I yield back the balance of my time.

□ 1500

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to again congratulate the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON), and I urge all my colleagues to vote for this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FORBES). The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 96, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECOGNIZING SECOND CENTURY OF BIG BROTHERS BIG SISTERS AND SUPPORTING THE MISSION AND GOALS OF THAT ORGANIZATION

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 41) recognizing the second century of Big Brothers Big Sisters, and supporting the mission and goals of that organization.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 41

Whereas the year 2004 marked the 100th anniversary of the founding of Big Brothers Big Sisters;

Whereas Congress chartered Big Brothers in 1958;

Whereas Ernest Coulter recognized the need for adult role models for the youth he saw in court in New York City in 1904 and recruited "Big Brothers" to serve as mentors, beginning the Big Brothers movement;

Whereas Big Brothers Big Sisters is the oldest, largest youth mentoring organization in the nation, serving over 220,000 children in 2004 and approximately 2,000,000 since its founding 100 years ago;

Whereas Big Brothers Big Sisters has historically been supported through the generosity of individuals who have believed in the organization's commitment to matching at-risk children with caring, volunteer mentors;

Whereas Big Brothers and Big Sisters have given countless hours and forever changed the lives of America's children, contributing over 10,500,000 volunteer hours at an estimated value of $190,000,000 in 2004;

Whereas evidence-based research has shown that the Big Brothers Big Sisters mentoring model improves a child's academic performance and relationships with teachers, parents, and peers, decreases the likelihood of youth violence and drug and alcohol use, and raises self-confidence levels;

Whereas 454 local Big Brothers Big Sisters agencies are currently contributing to the quality of life of at-risk youth in over 5,000 communities across the United States; and

Whereas the future of Big Brothers Big Sisters depends not only on its past impact, but also on the future accomplishments of its Little Brothers and Little Sisters and the continued commitment of its Big Brothers and Big Sisters: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That Congress—

(1) recognizes the second century of Big Brothers Big Sisters, supports the mission and goals of the organization, and commends Big Brothers Big Sisters for its commitment to helping children in need reach their potential through professionally supported one to one mentoring relationships with measurable results;

(2) asks all Americans to join in marking the beginning of Big Brothers Big Sisters' second century and support the organization's next 100 years of service on behalf of America's children; and

(3) encourages Big Brothers Big Sisters to continue to strive towards serving 1,000,000 children annually.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on House Concurrent Resolution 41, the concurrent resolution under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on Government Reform, I rise in support of House Concurrent Resolution 41, a resolution that honors one of America's greatest charities. This year marks the 101st year since the founding of Big Brothers Big Sisters.

Over the past century, this organization has been devoted to the well-being and development of our Nation's young people. Big Brothers Big Sisters aims to provide a mentor to every child who wants or needs one. Today, Big Brothers Big Sisters serves over 200,000 children ages 6 to 18, nationwide.

Performance statistics prove that children who are mentored by Big Brothers Big Sisters are much less likely than their peers to use illegal drugs or alcohol, to skip school, and are more likely to have strong relationships with their families.

Today, the House specifically recognizes the thousands of mentors who have made a difference through Big Brothers Big Sisters during its first century. Mentoring a child requires no special training or experience, just a willingness to spend time with a child during his or her formative years. We salute their compassion.

Mr. Speaker, along with my distinguished colleagues, the gentleman from California (Mr. SCHIFF) and the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. OSBORNE), I commend Big Brothers Big Sisters for its commitment to helping children in need reach their potential, and I urge the adoption of House Concurrent Resolution 41.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to join my colleague, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) by stating my strong support for H. Con. Res. 41, recognizing the second century of Big Brothers Big Sisters and supporting the mission and goals of that organization.

Mr. Speaker, 2004 marked the 100th anniversary of Big Brothers Big Sisters, one of the Nation's greatest civic programs. Big Brothers Big Sisters is the oldest and largest youth-mentoring organization in the United States. As of last year, the organization served an astounding 225,000 youth between the ages of 5 and 18 in 5,000 communities across the country.

Research has demonstrated that mentoring helps at-risk youth overcome the many obstacles they face in their lives. Youths in the program, or "Littles" as they are called, are less likely to use illegal drugs, consume alcohol, skip school, or engage in acts of violence.

I want to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. SCHIFF) for introducing this important legislation. Big Brothers Big Sisters has made a positive impact on the lives of impoverished young people, especially, and others throughout the Nation. We all owe them a great debt of gratitude, and I trust they will have success as they continue in their work.

On a very personal note, Mr. Speaker, I had the good fortune to serve as a Big Brother to a little brother of mine, who then went on to become a staff person and work for the Mayor, Sharon Pratt, of Washington, D.C., and then went on to work for Vice President Al Gore, eventually becoming, and he is now, the minister and pastor of a church out in Maryland. So I know that the Big Brothers program is a good program; that it does work, because Reverend Courtney Miller is a prime example of that. And I certainly wish Courtney well as we wish the continuation of the Big Brothers Big Sisters program.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. OSBORNE), one of the lead cosponsors of this legislation.

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Ohio for yielding me this time, and I rise in support of this concurrent resolution. I want to congratulate Big Brothers Big Sisters on 100 years of service. I think any organization that lasts for 100 years is certainly doing some things correctly.

At this time, I would like to point out, Mr. Speaker, that it is a very difficult time to be a young person in our Nation. We have a great deal of family instability. Roughly 50 percent of our children today are growing up without both biological parents, so they have suffered some serious dysfunction in their lives. Roughly 22 million young people today are fatherless, and of course they are moving into a world in which a drug and alcohol culture and violence is quite prevalent. So it is very, very difficult.

We find that mentoring is one way that we can help these young people negotiate their way through a very difficult world. Mentoring works. As my colleague from Ohio mentioned earlier, it improves graduation rates and it improves school attendance. One of the programs I work with very closely improves attendance by 80 percent. It improves grades significantly. The program I am involved with, about a 40 percent improvement. It improves peer and family relationships and even improves personal hygiene, which is something that many people do not realize. It decreases drug and alcohol abuse in many programs by as much as 50 percent. It decreases crime, gang membership, teen pregnancy, and dropout rates.

So this is about the best thing we have going, and it is very important to remember that it is very cost effective. It costs about $30,000 a year to lock somebody up, and yet most mentoring programs, some of the very best ones, cost maybe $400 to $500 per mentee per year. So we cannot have a better return on investment than that.

I serve as a mentor. I have been mentoring a young person now for about 3 years, and I had another young person for 4 or 5 years before that. My wife also mentors. A mentor is somebody who cares, somebody who shows up. An awful lot of young people in our culture today do not have an adult in their life that they can count on; that they know cares about them unconditionally and will be there for them through thick and thin.

A mentor is somebody who affirms. Again, so many young people today in our culture do not have anyone in their lives who say "I believe in you. I see some talent, I think you could be a mechanic, I think you could be someone who can go to a community college, I think you could do well in school." So affirmation is something that all of us have to have in order to live effectively, and a mentor provides that.

A mentor is someone who provides a vision of what is possible, because so many times a young person grows up in a family where no one has graduated from high school, no one has gone to college, no one has set any type of vision out there for them as to what they might be. So a mentor oftentimes fulfills that role.

According to the National Mentoring Partnership, 18 million children in our country today need a mentor, yet only about 2.5 million actually are being mentored. Big Brothers Big Sisters accounts for roughly one-tenth of that number. So we have a huge gap from what is needed to what we are actually getting done.

We had a mentoring amendment attached to the No Child Left Behind bill that last year was funded at $50 million. This year, that money is in jeopardy. A lot of that money went to Big Brothers Big Sisters. So I would certainly like to encourage my colleagues to support this program and further this cause, because we have reached hundreds of thousands of young people as a result of it.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) and the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. OSBORNE) for sharing their personal experiences with us relative to mentoring, and I urge passage of the concurrent resolution.

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Con. Res. 41, a resolution highlighting the mission and goals of Big Brothers and Big Sisters and to recognize a hundred years of success in the organization.

I applaud the work that Big Brothers Big Sisters perform on a daily basis to assist America's youth. As you are well aware, Big Brothers Big Sisters of America has helped more than one million children nationwide in its 100 years of operation. Youth with mentors are significantly less likely to try drugs or alcohol, skip school, or exhibit violent behavior. Children who participate in Big Brothers Big Sisters programs have better relationships with peers, get better grades, and get along better with their families as a result of the one-on-one attention of a caring adult role model.

My district in El Paso, TX, is faced with significant challenges in deterring youth from becoming involved in drugs, alcohol, and violent activities. Founded in 1999, Big Brothers Big Sisters of El Paso has an excellent reputation in my district and has shown tremendous results. In fact, Big Brothers Big Sisters of El Paso has already drawn over $1 million in State and Federal funds to our city. Because Big Brothers Big Sisters works with schools and businesses, it acts as a catalyst in the community helping bring business men and women into the lives of students and strengthening the bond between program participants and the community. Last year, I was honored to be selected to serve as an honorary board member of the Big Brothers and Big Sisters of El Paso.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join my colleagues in recognizing Big Brothers for their century of service to America's young people.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Concurrent Resolution 41 recognizing the second century of Big Brothers Big Sisters, the oldest and largest youth mentoring organization in the United States which celebrated its 100th anniversary last year.

I want to thank Representative TOM OSBORNE for joining me in introducing this resolution and for his strong advocacy of mentoring. I also want to thank Chairman TOM DAVIS and Ranking Member HENRY WAXMAN of the House Government Reform Committee for their diligence and helpfulness in getting this resolution to the Floor today. And I also appreciate and want to thank Senator JOHN ENSIGN and Senator CHRISTOPHER DODD for their leadership in introducing this resolution in the Senate.

But the big heroes are the untold thousands of volunteers—Big Brothers and Big Sisters throughout the country—who for the last one hundred years have played critical roles in the mentoring of our nation's youth. Lastly and most of all, I would like to thank all of the Little Brothers and Little Sisters because they have been the ones to enrich our lives.

As you know, when Representative OSBORNE and I introduced this resolution in February, I came to the Floor to speak about my almost two decades of experience being a Big Brother, and my accomplished, now not-so-Little Brother, David. I was a young prosecutor in Southern California when I first became a Big Brother, and David was just seven years old. Through fun outings, good talks and merely spending time together, we learned a lot about each other and a lot about ourselves. He is now a Yale and USC film school graduate, and is emarking upon a wonderful career and many new adventures. Because of Big Brothers Big Sisters, I again experienced through David a child's wide-eyed optimism about the future, a teenager's eager determination to understand oneself and a young adult's pursuit of success.

Kids need to learn and mature in safe and nurturing environments, yet so many face difficult circumstances through broken families, poverty or simply a lack of opportunities. These situations create an emotional burden very heavy to bear at any age, but especially upon children. In some cases, these burdens are too much to bear, and a child who could have contributed greatly to society takes a much more destructive path. We can prevent this from happening. Through Big Brothers Big Sisters and like-minded organizations, we can reach those at risk of delinquency, and help them lead productive lives. Our children truly are an investment in the future, and all of those who have participated in mentoring know that it is an investment that pays off greatly.

Since 1904, Big Brothers Big Sisters has been enabling Americans to make this investment—hundreds of thousands of times over, one child at a time. We thank Big Brothers Big Sisters for the magnificent contribution they have made to our country and we look forward to many more years of continuing success.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 41.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MAYOR TONY ARMSTRONG MEMORIAL POST OFFICE

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1236) to designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 750 4th Street in Sparks, Nevada, as the "Mayor Tony Armstrong Memorial Post Office".

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1236

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. MAYOR TONY ARMSTRONG MEMORIAL POST OFFICE.

(a) DESIGNATION.—The facility of the United States Postal Service located at 750 4th Street in Sparks, Nevada, shall be known and designated as the "Mayor Tony Armstrong Memorial Post Office".

(b) REFERENCES.—Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the facility referred to in subsection (a) shall be deemed to be a reference to the "Mayor Tony Armstrong Memorial Post Office".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 1236, the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Speaker, this post office naming legislation honors a wonderful civic leader. Tony Armstrong had served as mayor of Sparks, Nevada, since being first elected in 1999. Sadly, Mayor Armstrong passed away on January 29 from complications due to a December surgery to remove his spleen. He was 59 years of age. H.R. 1256 will name a post office in his honor in his hometown of Sparks, and I support its passage.

Mr. Speaker, with the exception of a 6-year stint in the Nevada Air National Guard during the 1960s, Tony Armstrong had lived in Sparks since the age of 4. In 1989, he was elected to the Sparks City Council, where he served until becoming mayor in 1999. He was a man whose passionate principles shaped his leadership. As his former colleague on the city council, Councilman Mike Carrigan said, "Mayor Armstrong's priorities were God first, his family second, and the City of Sparks third.

Mayor Armstrong is survived by his beloved wife, Debby, and his adult children Richard, Keith and Misti. Our hearts and prayers go out to the entire Armstrong family.

Mr. Speaker, I know that my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS) was very close with Mayor Armstrong. They grew up together and they have served the people of Nevada together. I thank the gentleman for honoring his friend, Tony Armstrong, by dedicating this post office in his honor, and I urge all my colleagues to join me in supporting H.R. 1236.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. As a member of the House Committee on Government Reform, I am pleased to join my colleague in consideration of H.R. 1236, legislation designating the postal facility in Sparks, Nevada, after the late Tony Armstrong, mayor of Sparks. This measure, which was introduced by our colleague, the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS) on March 2005, enjoys the support and co-sponsorship of the entire Nevada State delegation.

Tony Armstrong grew up in Sparks, Nevada, and after serving in the Nevada Air National Guard and opening a general contracting business, he was elected in 1989 to the Sparks City Council, representing Ward Three. Ten years later, in 1999, he was elected mayor of Sparks. During his tenure as mayor, he worked hard to promote the image of his city. Sadly, he passed away on January 29, 2005. Mayor Armstrong left behind his wife, two sons, and a daughter.

Mr. Speaker, I urge swift passage of this bill and note that it is definitely a way to honor the work of the mayor of Sparks, Nevada.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

□ 1515

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS).

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) for yielding me this time to speak on H.R. 1236.

It is both with pride and sadness that I rise today in support of H.R. 1236, the Mayor Tony Armstrong Memorial Post Office Designation Act.

Tony Armstrong and his family moved to Sparks, Nevada, from California when he was just 4 years old. Tony made Sparks his home until his untimely death in January of this year. Tony and I met as young kids, and typical of all kids, created trouble for our parents in Sparks, Nevada.

We both graduated from Sparks High School, and while I served in the United States Air Force, Tony Armstrong served in the Nevada Air National Guard during the Vietnam War. Tony Armstrong served his country honorably and then turned his efforts to serving his beloved hometown of Sparks, Nevada.

In 1970, Tony Armstrong served as the chief deputy building inspector for Washoe County, Nevada, and later opened a general contracting business, which would become the largest and oldest home inspection service in Nevada.

In 1983, Tony was fortunate: he married Debbie Rimbey and was later blessed with two sons and a daughter. After a successful business career, Tony Armstrong turned his attention to becoming a public servant. He was elected to serve on the Sparks City Council in 1989 and was elected mayor a decade later. Over the years, no one has worked harder or loved that community more than Tony Armstrong.

The day before Mayor Armstrong died, he was awarded Civic Leader of the Year by the Reno-Sparks Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Speaker, as a fitting tribute, H.R. 1236 would name the main post office in Sparks, Nevada, the Mayor Tony Armstrong Memorial Post Office. The post office that will receive this designation sits directly across the street from City Hall, the place where Tony Armstrong worked tirelessly. City Hall is a different place today without Tony's Hawaiian shirts passing through the hallways and his smiles greeting anyone and everyone who walked into his office. Mayor Armstrong may best be remembered for ensuring that visitors to Sparks City Hall would always be reminded that God blesses America. When told that the word God would have to be cut from all signs posted in City Hall, Tony made his own signs and posted them around the building. He declared, I guess I am just an old redneck Nevadan because I want my sign to say God bless America.

The people of Sparks have lost a gentleman, a patriot, and a servant of the people; and I have lost a dear friend. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1236, which will honor this extraordinary man, a man who put God, his family, and the citizens of Sparks above himself, a man who went above and beyond for his country, for his State, and for his community. I ask all Members to support H.R. 1236.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS) for his reflections of his friend, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1236.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ED EILERT POST OFFICE BUILDING

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1524) to designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 12433 Antioch Road in Overland Park, Kansas, as the "Ed Eilert Post Office Building".

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1524

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. ED EILERT POST OFFICE BUILDING.

(a) DESIGNATION.—The facility of the United States Postal Service located at 12433 Antioch Road in Overland Park, Kansas, shall be known and designated as the "Ed Eilert Post Office Building".

(b) REFERENCES.—Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the facility referred to in subsection (a) shall be deemed to be a reference to the "Ed Eilert Post Office Building".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1524 designates this postal facility in Overland Park, Kansas, as the Ed Eilert Post Office Building. The four members of the Kansas State congressional delegation have all endorsed this legislation, and I join them in support of the bill.

After more than a quarter of a century, Ed Eilert stepped down from being a leader in Overland Park government on Monday, April 11. Ed Eilert's public service career began when he was elected to the Overland Park City Council in 1977. In 1981, he was elected to the first of six terms as mayor of Overland Park that spanned 24 years. Overland Park has doubled in population and become Kansas' second largest city under Mayor Eilert's direction. Without question, Ed Eilert is a one-man institution in east central Kansas. This post office on Antioch Road is a natural and deserved commemoration of Mayor Eilert's legacy and distinguished leadership.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Members of the House, I congratulate Mayor Ed Eilert on his tremendous tenure in local government and wish him the very best in retirement. I applaud the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. MOORE) for working toward passage of H.R. 1524.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Committee on Government Reform, I am pleased to join in the consideration of H.R. 1524, legislation designating a postal facility in Overland Park, Kansas, after Mayor Ed Eilert. This measure, which was introduced by the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. MOORE) on April 6, 2005, enjoys the support and cosponsorship of the entire Kansas State delegation.

Ed Eilert was first elected in 1981. As mayor of Overland Park for 24 years, he worked hard to improve the condition of his city. The population has doubled, the number of projects tripled, and the number of hotels has increased dramatically. Business and opportunities have also grown. A convention center is now home to Overland Park, and more hospitals have been added. Overland Park is now Kansas' second largest city.

The growth occurred under the leadership and vision of Mayor Eilert. This week Mayor Eilert steps down from his position, and what a wonderful way to honor the achievements of Ed Eilert. I join my colleagues in honoring Mayor Ed Eilert and urge the swift passage of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. MOORE).

Mr. MOORE of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of legislation designating the United States Postal Service facility located at 12433 Antioch Road in Overland Park, Kansas, as the Ed Eilert Post Office Building. I was joined in sponsoring this legislation by the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. TIAHRT), the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. RYUN), and the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. MORAN); and I am grateful for their support.

Recently, an era came to an end in Overland Park. Mayor Ed Eilert stepped down as mayor, an office to which he was elected six times and held for a total of 24 years. Since he was sworn into office in 1981, Overland Park has grown to become Kansas' second largest city. Its population has nearly double to over 165,000. The number of people working within the city limits has more than tripled with roughly 120,000 jobs in Overland Park today, and hotel capacity has increased from 800 rooms to 5,100 rooms.

During his tenure, 21,000 single-family and 19,000 multi-family residences have been added in Overland Park, along with 23.7 million square feet of office, retail, and industrial space. Over the years, the city has seen the arrival of the Sprint campus, three new hospitals, the University of Kansas Edwards campus, the Carlsen Center at Johnson County Community College, and a city convention center.

Additionally, under Ed Eilert's leadership, the city added the landmark Clock Tower Plaza and the Farmers Market in the downtown area, a neighborhood conservation program, and Arboretum and Botanical Gardens, the International Trade Center, the W. Jack Sanders Justice Center, and interchanges at I-435 at both Nall Avenue and Quivira Road.

Mayor Eilert also supported construction of the Fire Training Center which has been used by many other cities and county fire departments in the Kansas City metropolitan area, and he worked with Johnson County Community College to create a training facility for Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railway employees on the college campus.

And during Mayor Eilert's tenure, the city's land area expanded by 36 percent to nearly 62 square miles. Finally, Overland Park enjoys a top rating for a solid financial condition. It has received numerous awards as an outstanding city. For years, Overland Park has had the lowest property tax rate of any first-class city in Kansas.

Ed Eilert was first elected to Overland Park City Council in 1977 and became council president in 1980. He formerly taught at Shawnee Mission North High School and knows firsthand how Overland Park has benefited from its nationally recognized school systems.

He made his first visit to the city in 1960 because it was the home of Jan Bush, whom he met while studying at Emporia State University and would marry 2 years later. The Eilerts moved to Overland Park in 1965 when he completed graduate school. In 1977, he began his first campaign for political office and has been a public servant since then. He has also been a financial consultant with A.G. Edwards & Sons and serves on the board of directors of Metcalf Bank.

When we consider the array of challenges that Ed Eilert faced in his 24 years as mayor of Overland Park, Members cannot help but agree with Bob Sigmund, the opinion page editor of the Johnson County Sun who recently wrote that "Ed Eilert provided the vision and leadership in shaping Overland Park's success as an ideal place to live, work and raise a family. Eilert's political skills have been especially useful in easing tensions and maintaining an acceptable balance between the older, established neighborhoods in northern Overland Park and the rapidly expanding new subdivisions in the south."

I am proud to call Ed Eilert my friend. While we are members of different political parties, I have always been impressed by his sound judgment, diligence, and dedication to his community and to the public welfare. When he sought the Republican nomination for the House in 1996, he lost narrowly to then-State Representative Vince Snowbarger for the nomination to succeed Representative Jan Meyers. I often tell third district residents that I would have not sought election to Congress myself had Ed Eilert been elected 2 years before I became a candidate for the office.

Dedication of this postal service facility in Overland Park is a small, but fitting, tribute to a man who has dedicated most of his adult life to public service at the community level. He has worked tirelessly to bring people together while ensuring quality economic development and competence in the delivery of local services. I commend Mayor Ed Eilert and again thank my colleagues in the Kansas House delegation for their support. I urge my colleagues to approve this legislation today, and I hope the other body will follow suit quickly so we can see it signed into law.

Mr. MORAN of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1524. I thank my colleague, Mr. MOORE, for sponsoring this legislation to name the post office at 12433 Antioch Road in Overland Park after long-time Mayor Ed Eilert.

The job of mayor is a challenging position. Each day they are tasked with the responsibility of making their community, their home, a better place to live. They do this with the eye of the public always on them as they live and work in that community. The fact that May Eilert was re-elected six times speaks volumes of his dedication and character. During his over 24 years in office, Mayor Eilert worked hard to improve Overland Park, and his leadership is well respected.

Mr. MOORE spoke of the infrastructure improvements that Mr. Eilert helped bring to Overland Park—the Clock Tower Plaza, KU's Edwards Campus and the Fire Training Center, to name a few. I want to emphasize that these centers and buildings are much more than physical structures. They are symbols of economic development, job creation and improvements in quality of life. During the time Ed served as Mayor, Overland Park grew to be the second-largest city in Kansas. Ed's vision helped to ensure that the city is both bigger and better for the businesses, individuals and families who are proud to call Overland Park their home.

Mayor Eilert's commitment to Overland Park extended beyond his role as mayor. He was an active member of many civic organizations including the League of Kansas Municipalities and the National League of Cities. He has also served as secretary and treasurer of the Johnson/Wyandotte Counties Council of Mayors. He currently serves as a commissioner of the Kansas and Missouri Metropolitan Cultural District, a board member of Services for Seniors and Advocates for Citizens with Retardation, a member of the advisory council for Emporia State University's school of business and a member of the advisory council for United Community Services and Temporary Lodging for Children.

Mayor Eilert is a charter member of the South Overland Park Rotary Club, the Overland Park Historical Society, the Overland Park Arboretum and Friends of Johnson County Developmental Supports. He also is a member and elder, and a former chairman of the board, of Overland Park Christian Church. I commend Ed for his service to the community and his contributions to improving the quality of life in Overland Park.

I recognize that Kansas is home to many leaders who work to make our state a great place to live and work. I also acknowledge that our growth and prosperity is possible because of the efforts of local leaders like Mayor Eilert who are willing to serve our communities. Mayor Eilert touched lives every day. He directly affected the residents of Overland Park in a positive way. I am grateful for his hard work and dedication, and I join with my fellow Kansas representatives in honoring Mayor Eilert.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. MOORE) for his reflections of his friend, urge passage of the bill; and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1524.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECOGNIZING AND HONORING CONTRIBUTIONS OF INDIAN AMERICANS TO ECONOMIC INNOVATION AND SOCIETY GENERALLY

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 227) recognizing and honoring the contributions of Indian Americans to economic innovation and society generally.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. RES. 227

Whereas the United States is deeply enriched by its Indian American residents;

Whereas the Indian American community and the graduates of the Indian Institutes of Technology (IIT) in the United States have made valuable and significant contributions to society in every profession and discipline; and

Whereas IIT graduates are highly committed and dedicated to research, innovation, and promotion of trade and international cooperation between India and the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives—

(1) recognizes the valuable and significant contributions of Indian Americans to American society;

(2) honors the economic innovation attributable to graduates of the Indian Institutes of Technology; and

(3) urges all Americans to recognize the contributions of Indian Americans and have a greater appreciation of the role Indian Americans have played in helping to advance and enrich American society.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the resolution under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 227, which I introduced to recognize the contributions to our Nation of Indian Americans, and specifically the graduates of the Indian Institutes of Technology.

After winning independence in 1947, India began building a democratic nation to provide its citizens with equal opportunities.

□ 1530

One of the successes of the new nation was the Indian Institute of Technology, or IIT, which was established in Kharagpur in May, 1950. Today there are seven IIT campuses across India. IITs have become synonymous with excellence in technology and engineering education.

Since the inception of IIT, thousands of graduates have sought and achieved the highest levels of professional successes in the United States and indeed throughout the world. IIT graduates are estimated to have stimulated the creation of over 150,000 jobs in the U.S. Most Silicon Valley firms have at least one IIT graduate among their top executives. In my district in Northern Virginia, we literally have dozens of IIT executives running their own companies, producing thousands of jobs. Almost all IIT alumni attribute their success to the rigorous educational foundation they received at IIT.

Mr. Speaker, the U.S. has attracted more IIT graduates than any other country because we remain on the cutting edge of the science and technology fields. In recognition of IIT graduates' contributions to our Nation, the second Global IIT Alumni Conference will be held in nearby Bethesda, Maryland from May 20 through 22. The conference will attract over 1,500 attendees from all over the United States and around the world.

Mr. Speaker I am pleased that the House is recognizing the achievements of Indian Americans and IIT graduates in helping to make the United States the global leader it is. Indian Americans are wonderful ambassadors of their homeland, and they strengthen the strong friendship between India and the United States, the two largest democratic nations in the world.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all my colleagues to join me in recognition of the important contributions made by Indian Americans and IIT graduates to our national economy. I thank the House India Caucus and all the cosponsors for their support of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, it is important that we acknowledge from time to time our individual histories and what makes us unique. I believe that it is our differences that make our Nation strong. Therefore, I am very happy to join the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS), the distinguished chairman of the House Committee on Government Reform, in support of H. Res. 227, recognizing and honoring the contributions of Indian Americans to economic innovation and to society generally.

According to a 2000 census, the Indian American population stands at over 1.6 million. This represents a 106 percent increase over the 1990 census figures. In fact, Indian Americans are the largest-growing Asian American community in the United States.

In addition to being a growing community within our society, the Indian American population also is a wonderful contributor to our Nation's well-being. The Indian American median family income is $60,093, which is significantly higher than the national median family income of $38,885. This high-income level is not only an example of their determination and hard work, but it is also a testament to the strong regard they hold for education. More than 87 percent of Indian Americans have completed high school, while at least 62 percent have completed some college. The value that members of the Indian American community place on education allows them and helps them to succeed in this country and to become positive role models and economic forces for all of us.

As our Nation struggles to teach the value of education to our young, I strongly believe that we should hold in high regard the Indian American community's commitment to higher education. It is indeed inspirational. So once again, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS) for his leadership on this issue and reiterate my strong support for H. Res. 227.

Mr. Speaker. I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. JINDAL).

Mr. JINDAL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of what I think is a very appropriate resolution.

I am very proud to be the son of Indian immigrants to this country. Though born and raised in Louisiana, I am very proud of their background. Certainly I think not only my parents but the interior Indian American community is a great example of living the American dream. And so many stories have been told, and there are so many wonderful examples.

Certainly we can talk in terms of numbers. We can talk in terms of the IIT graduates who are now doing so well in Fortune 500 companies in this country. Certainly we can talk about the academic achievements. We can talk about the contributions to our high-tech industry in this country. We can talk about the contributions in medicine, in small business ownership. And the numbers are phenomenal. One of the most successful, if not the most successful, immigrant group. But I do not think the numbers tell the entire story. I think sometimes we have to look beyond the numbers and hear the personal stories.

My father, for example, is one of nine children, the first one in his family and the only one to go to high school, much less beyond high school. I am certainly very proud of everything my father has accomplished in this country. But it is not just my father. I am very proud of all the different Indian Americans I have the privilege of meeting who have achieved so much in their respective fields, and again I think a wonderful example of the American dream, a wonderful example that in this country we do provide opportunity if one works hard and pursues that education.

I often tease my parents. Mark Twain said that the older we become, the smarter our fathers become, the smarter our parents become. And I tease my parents because, now being the father of two children, I appreciate more and more what my parents have sacrificed, what they have endured and what they have accomplished. I appreciate more the significance of the accomplishments of the Indian American community. Some of those things we took for granted. I did, anyway, growing up. We did not really realize the significance of those struggles, those sacrifices, and how remarkable have been their collective and individual achievements.

Again, it is hard to exaggerate. The Indian American population numbers, according to census numbers, 1½ million people in this country. We are talking about the Indians in America, 87 percent have completed high school, almost two-thirds have at least some college education. Remarkable numbers, remarkable contributions. But, again, the numbers do not tell the entire story.

In my State, Indian American physicians serve some of the neediest areas, allow emergency rooms to stay open, provide primary care to those who would not otherwise have access to care. The numbers are amazing: 300,000 Indian Americans working in Silicon Valley, 750 of those companies headed by people of Indian American descent, responsible for 15 percent of the high-tech startups in the area.

Again when we look at the numbers, they tell an amazing story, but it is not just the numbers. Again, in my home State, in my home district, Indian Americans own businesses in the biggest cities to the smallest communities, the most rural parts of my State, employing thousands of my citizens, of my constituents. So, again, I think it is a wonderful success story.

I want to thank the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman TOM DAVIS) for highlighting, through this resolution, the accomplishments of the Indian American people.

But I will just remind my colleagues two things in closing: One, it is my belief that the Indian American success story is a great testimony to the strength of the American dream, that the American dream is alive and well. One of the reasons I was so passionate to become a Member of this body was to nurture that dream for our children, to make sure that all of our children continue to have the same opportunities that brought my parents and others like them here in the first place. And, secondly, to say it is not just the numbers. It is not just the IIT graduates. It is not just the high-tech startups. It is not just the educational achievement. It is also the personal stories. Stories like my dad's, and others like him, who have not only done so well but have given so their kids and others around them might have a better quality of life.

Again, I want to thank the chairman and my colleagues for sponsoring and supporting this resolution. I am very proud to not only cosponsor the resolution but to be a part of a community that is so grateful and has done so much to contribute to this country.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I just want to thank the gentleman from Illinois on the other side of the aisle for helping us bring this bill to the floor and the gentleman from Louisiana, a Rhodes scholar and one who has brought credit to his heritage, to his State, and this body by serving here.

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 227, which would honor the contributions of Indian Americans in the field of information technology.

Like so many other groups, Indian Americans lend creativity, technical expertise, and innovation to their chosen fields. Every day, they show their dedication not only to improving the economy and competitiveness of this country, but to advancing a positive relationship between the United States and India.

This resolution presents us with an opportunity to thank those who have such an important impact on our society. Indian Americans have created thousands of jobs in the U.S. and hold senior positions at Fortune 500 companies, national labs, universities, and venture capital firms. And through their work as economists, researchers, educators, and social and political leaders, they have ensured that their extraordinary commitment will benefit not only this generation, but the next, as well.

That is why I support this resolution. The cornerstone of our society was built on the contributions of many groups who brought intelligence and originality to their work in this country. And that is why I urge my colleagues to join me today in thanking Indian Americans by recognizing their contributions to information technology.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, as the former Co-Chair of the Caucus on India and Indian Americans and the representative of one of the largest concentrations of Indian Americans in the United States, I have seen firsthand the contributions my friends from India have made.

I commend my colleague and good friend Rep. TOM DAVIS (R–VA) for introducing this legislation and talking about the contributions of Indian Americans. Representing the second highest concentration of Indian Americans in the country, I have seen for myself on 74th Street in Jackson Heights, Queens how successful and industrious Indian Americans are. That recipe for success starts with institutions like the Indian Institute of Technology, which we recognize today, and the far-reaching success of their graduates.

The Indian Institute of Technology (IIT) has had a long history of grooming fine minds that have gone on to achieve incredible success in India and around the world.

The first IIT was established in 1950 in Kharagpur and now 50 plus years later they have a total of seven institutes, with the newest one established by recognizing University of Roorkee, one of Asia's oldest engineering institutions, as IIT Roorkee. Many of the top Indians in industry have graduated from India's prestigious Indian Institute of Technology, like Vinod Khosla, founder of Sun Microsystems, to Rajat Gupta, the first non North America born head of the venerable consulting company McKinsey & Co.

I have had an opportunity to meet many graduates of IIT and all have spoken about the benefits of attending the institute.

I believe in today's current educational environment in the United States we can learn from the history of how the Indian government went about establishing this institute. After the Indians gained their independence from the British, they formed committees to explore ways of creating an educated class of people to move the country forward.

What they found was that to be competitive in the world they needed to excel in technology and engineering, which is where we in the United States find ourselves to be lacking today. We need to follow the example of our Indian friends and the example we set in the 1960's and create a national strategy to make the way we teach our children in the United States more focused on the math and sciences so we are not left behind.

Instead of fearing India as an economic competitor, we should be embracing India as an economic and political ally. The over 1 billion consumers in India and the market for U.S. goods and services in India allows for unprecedented opportunities for American companies, and job growth for Americans.

I want to thank Mr. DAVIS for introducing this resolution and urge all my colleagues to support it.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be a co-sponsor of H. Res. 227 to honor all that Indian Americans have contributed to our country. Specifically, I would like to commend the graduates of the Indian Institutes of Technology (IIT) for their economic innovations and technological expertise.

After India gained its independence and began its new life as a democratic nation, a committee was formed to create institutes of higher education that would focus on technology to fuel the post-war industrial development of India. After looking at the committee recommendations, the first Indian Institute of Technology was created in May 1950. The campus was placed at the site of the Hijli Detention camp, which used to house young Indian freedom fighters during the independence movement.

Since that time 6 more campuses have been formed throughout India. IIT offers undergraduate and postgraduate degrees in more than 25 engineering, science, technology and management disciplines. Students are admitted after taking a national entrance exam and the student body is a diverse mixture of socio-economic backgrounds, cultures, languages, and religions.

After graduating from IIT, alumni are able to take the knowledge they gained and excel in technology and engineering sectors. Graduates are currently serving in senior positions at Citigroup and Sun Microsystems, among other established and Fortune 500 companies. They are also serving as Deans and Professors at the best universities in the United States, including Harvard, MIT and Carnegie Mellon.

The United States economy has felt the impact of IIT graduates. Over 25 percent of graduates since 1990 have been entrepreneurs and have started numerous companies that have fueled job creation in their communities. IIT alumni are also performing cutting edge research that is needed by U.S. companies, and a great number have received patents for their innovations.

The effect of Indian Institute of Technology graduates is felt here in the United States and throughout the world. It is important that all Americans recognize the great impact Indian Americans and IIT graduates have had on our society and economy. Without their knowledge, skill, and drive to achieve, our economy would not have as many technological innovations which enrich our daily lives.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 227.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PRESIDENTIAL $1 COIN ACT OF 2005

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 902) to improve circulation of the $1 coin, create a new bullion coin, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 902

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Presidential $1 Coin Act of 2005".

TITLE I—PRESIDENTIAL $1 COINS

SEC. 101. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds as follows:

(1) There are sectors of the United States economy, including public transportation, parking meters, vending machines and low-dollar value transactions, in which the use of a $1 coin is both useful and desirable for keeping costs and prices down.

(2) For a variety of reasons, the new $1 coin introduced in 2000 has not been widely sought-after by the public, leading to higher costs for merchants and thus higher prices for consumers.

(3) The success of the 50 States Commemorative Coin Program for circulating quarter dollars shows that a design on a United States circulating coin that is regularly changed in a manner similar to the systematic change in designs in such Program radically increases demand for the coin, rapidly pulling it through the economy.

(4) The 50 States Commemorative Coin Program also has been an educational tool, teaching both Americans and visitors something about each State for which a quarter has been issued.

(5) A national survey and study by the Government Accountability Office has indicated that many Americans who do not seek, or who reject, the new $1 coin for use in commerce would actively seek the coin if an attractive, educational rotating design were to be struck on the coin.

(6) The President is the leader of our tripartite government and the President's spouse has often set the social tone for the White House while spearheading and highlighting important issues for the country.

(7) Sacagawea, as currently represented on the new $1 coin, is an important symbol of American history.

(8) Many people cannot name all of the Presidents, and fewer can name the spouses, nor can many people accurately place each President in the proper time period of American history.

(9) First Spouses have not generally been recognized on American coinage.

(10) In order to revitalize the design of United States coinage and return circulating coinage to its position as not only a necessary means of exchange in commerce but also as an object of aesthetic beauty in its own right, it is appropriate to move many of the mottos and emblems, the inscription of the year, and the so-called "mint marks" that currently appear on the 2 faces of each circulating coin to the edge of the coin, which would allow larger and more dramatic artwork on the coins reminiscent of the so-called "Golden Age of Coinage" in the United States, at the beginning of the Twentieth Century, initiated by President Theodore Roosevelt, with the assistance of noted sculptors and medallic artists James Earle Fraser and Augustus Saint-Gaudens.

(11) Placing inscriptions on the edge of coins, known as edge-incusing, is a hallmark of modern coinage and is common in large-volume production of coinage elsewhere in the world, such as the 2,700,000,000 2-Euro coins in circulation, but it has not been done on a large scale in United States coinage in recent years.

(12) Although the Congress has authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to issue gold coins with a purity of 99.99 percent, the Secretary has not done so.

(13) Bullion coins are a valuable tool for the investor and, in some cases, an important aspect of coin collecting.

SEC. 102. PRESIDENTIAL $1 COIN PROGRAM.

Section 5112 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by inserting after subsection (m) the following new subsection:

"(n) Redesign and Issuance of Circulating $1 Coins Honoring Each of the Presidents of the United States.—

"(1) Redesign beginning in 2007.—

"(A) In general.—Notwithstanding subsection (d) and in accordance with the provisions of this subsection, $1 coins issued during the period beginning January 1, 2007, and ending upon the termination of the program under paragraph (6) shall have designs on the obverse selected in accordance with paragraph (2)(B) which are emblematic of the Presidents of the United States and a design on the reverse selected in accordance with paragraph (2)(A).

"(B) Continuity provision.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall continue to mint and issue $1 coins which bear the design on $1 coins being minted and issued before the issuance of coins as required under this subsection.

"(2) Design requirements.—The $1 coins issued in accordance with paragraph (1)(A) shall meet the following design requirements:

"(A) Coin reverse.—The design on the reverse shall bear—

"(i) a likeness of the Statue of Liberty extending to the rim of the coin and large enough to provide a dramatic representation of Liberty while not being large enough to create the impression of a '2-headed' coin;

"(ii) the inscription '$1' ; and

"(iii) the inscription 'United States of America'.

"(B) Coin obverse.—The design on the obverse shall contain the name and likeness of a President of the United States and basic information about the President, including the dates or years of the term of office of such President and a number indicating the order of the period of service in which the President served.

"(C) Edge-incused inscriptions.—

"(i) In general.—The inscription of the year of minting or issuance of the coin and the inscriptions 'E Pluribus Unum' and 'In God We Trust' shall be edge-incused into the coin.

"(ii) Preservation of distinctive edge.—The edge-incusing of the inscriptions under clause (i) on coins issued under this subsection shall be done in a manner that preserves the distinctive edge of the coin so that the denomination of the coin is readily discernible, including by individuals who are blind or visually impaired.

"(D) INSCRIPTIONS OF 'LIBERTY'.—Notwithstanding the 2d sentence of subsection (d)(1), because the use of a design bearing the likeness of the Statue of Liberty on the reverse of the coins issued under this subsection adequately conveys the concept of Liberty, the inscription of 'Liberty' shall not appear on the coins.

"(E) PROHIBITION ON SITTING PRESIDENT IN SERIES.—No coin issued under this subsection may bear the image of a President who, at the time of issuance, is currently serving as President.

"(3) ISSUANCE OF COINS COMMEMORATING PRESIDENTS.—

"(A) ORDER OF ISSUANCE.—The coins issued under this subsection commemorating Presidents of the United States shall be issued in the order of the period of service of each President, beginning with President George Washington.

"(B) TREATMENT OF PERIOD OF SERVICE.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Subject to clause (ii), only 1 coin design shall be issued for a period of service for any President, no matter how many consecutive terms of office the President served.

"(ii) NONCONSECUTIVE TERMS.—If a President has served during 2 or more nonconsecutive periods of service, a coin shall be issued under this subsection for each such nonconsecutive period of service.

"(4) ISSUANCE OF COINS COMMEMORATING 4 PRESIDENTS DURING EACH YEAR OF THE PERIOD.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The designs for the $1 coins issued during each year of the period referred to in paragraph (1) shall be emblematic of 4 Presidents until each President has been so honored, subject to paragraph (2)(E).

"(B) NUMBER OF 4 CIRCULATING COIN DESIGNS IN EACH YEAR.—The Secretary shall prescribe, on the basis of such factors as the Secretary determines to be appropriate, the number of $1 coins that shall be issued with each of the designs selected for each year of the period referred to in paragraph (1).

"(5) ISSUANCE OF NUMISMATIC COINS.—The Secretary may mint and issue such number of $1 coins of each design selected under this subsection in uncirculated and proof qualities as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(6) TERMINATION OF PROGRAM.—The issuance of coins under this subsection shall terminate when each President has been so honored, subject to paragraph (2)(E), and may not be resumed except by an Act of Congress.

"(7) REVERSION TO PRECEDING DESIGN.—Upon the termination of the issuance of coins under this subsection, the design of all $1 coins shall revert to the the so-called 'Sacagawea-design' $1 coins.".

SEC. 103. FIRST SPOUSE BULLION COIN PROGRAM.

Section 5112 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by inserting after subsection (n) (as added by the preceding section of this title) the following new subsection:

"(o) FIRST SPOUSE BULLION COIN PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—During the same period in which the $1 coins are issued under subsection (n) which are emblematic of the Presidents of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury shall issue bullion coins under this subsection that are emblematic of the spouse of each such President.

"(2) SPECIFICATIONS.—The coins issued under this subsection shall—

"(A) have the same diameter as the $1 coins described in subsection (n);

"(B) weigh 0.5 ounce; and

"(C) contain 99.99 percent pure gold.

"(3) DESIGN REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) COIN OBVERSE.—The design on the obverse of each coin issued under this subsection shall contain—

"(i) the name and likeness of a person who was a spouse of a President during the President's period of service;

"(ii) an inscription of the years during which such person was the spouse of a President during the President's period of service; and

"(iii) the number indicating the order of the period of service in which such President served.

"(B) COIN REVERSE.—The design on the reverse of each coin issued under this subsection shall bear—

"(i) images emblematic of the life and work of the First Spouse whose image is borne on the obverse; and

"(ii) the inscription 'United States of America'.

"(C) DESIGNATED DENOMINATION.—Each coin issued under this subsection shall bear, on the reverse, an inscription of the nominal denomination of the coin which shall be '$10'.

"(D) DESIGN IN CASE OF NO FIRST SPOUSE.—In the case of any President who served without a spouse—

"(i) the image on the obverse of the bullion coin corresponding to the $1 coin relating to such President shall be an image emblematic of the concept of 'Liberty'—

"(I) as represented on a United States coin issued during the period of service of such President; or

"(II) as represented, in the case of President Chester Alan Arthur, by a design incorporating the name and likeness of Alice Paul, a leading strategist in the suffrage movement, who was instrumental in gaining women the right to vote upon the adoption of the 19th amendment and thus participate in the election of future Presidents, and who was born on January 11, 1885, during the term of President Arthur; and

"(ii) the reverse of such bullion coin shall be of a design representative of themes of such President, except that in the case of the bullion coin referred to in clause (i)(II) the reverse of such coin shall be representative of the suffrage movement.

"(E) DESIGN AND COIN FOR EACH SPOUSE.—A separate coin shall be designed and issued under this section for each person who was the spouse of a President during any portion of a term of office of such President.

"(F) INSCRIPTIONS.—Each bullion coin issued under this subsection shall bear the inscription of the year of minting or issuance of the coin and such other inscriptions as the Secretary may determine to be appropriate.

"(4) SALE OF BULLION COINS.—Each bullion coin issued under this subsection shall be sold for an amount the Secretary of the Treasury determines to be appropriate that is equal to or greater than the sum of—

"(A) the face value of the coins; and

"(B) the cost of designing and issuing the coins (including labor, materials, dies, use of machinery, overhead expenses, marketing, and shipping).

"(5) ISSUANCE OF COINS COMMEMORATING FIRST SPOUSES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The bullion coins issued under this subsection with respect to any spouse of a President shall be issued on the same schedule as the $1 coin issued under subsection (n) with respect to such President.

"(B) MAXIMUM NUMBER OF BULLION COINS FOR EACH DESIGN.—The Secretary shall—

"(i) prescribe, on the basis of such factors as the Secretary determines to be appropriate, the maximum number of bullion coins that shall be issued with each of the designs selected under this subsection; and

"(ii) announce, before the issuance of the bullion coins of each such design, the maximum number of bullion coins of that design that will be issued.

"(C) TERMINATION OF PROGRAM.—No bullion coin may be issued under this subsection after the termination, in accordance with subsection (n)(6), of the $1 coin program established under subsection (n).

"(6) QUALITY OF COINS.—The bullion coins shall be issued in both proof and uncirculated qualities.

"(7) SOURCE OF GOLD BULLION.—The Secretary shall acquire gold for the coins issued under this subsection by purchase of gold mined from natural deposits in the United States, or in a territory or possession of the United States, within 1 year after the month in which the ore from which it is derived was mined. The Secretary shall pay not more than the average world price for the gold.

"(8) BRONZE MEDALS.—The Secretary may strike and sell bronze medals that bear the likeness of the bullion coins authorized under this subsection, at a price, size, and weight, and with such inscriptions, as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.".

SEC. 104. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.

It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) the enactment of this Act will serve to increase the use of $1 coins generally, which will increase the circulation of the so-called "Sacagawea-design" $1 coins that have been and will continue to be minted and issued;

(2) the continued minting and issuance of the so-called "Sacagawea-design" $1 coins will serve as a lasting tribute to the role of women and Native Americans in the history of the United States;

(3) while the American tradition of not issuing a coin with the image of a living person has served the country well and deserves to be continued as a general practice, in a series of coins commemorating former Presidents, all former Presidents should be so honored notwithstanding such tradition;

(4) the full circulation potential and cost-savings benefit projections for the $1 coins are not likely to be achieved unless the coins are delivered in ways useful to ordinary commerce;

(5) in order for the circulation of $1 coins to achieve maximum potential—

(A) the coins should be as attractive as possible; and

(B) the Director of the United States Mint should take all reasonable steps to ensure that all $1 coins minted and issued remain tarnish-free for as long as possible without incurring undue expense;

(6) if the Secretary of the Treasury determines to include on any $1 coin minted under section 5112(n) of title 31, United States Code (as added by section 102 of this Act) a mark denoting the United States Mint facility at which the coin was struck, such mark should be edge-incused;

(7) at such time as the Secretary of Treasury determines to be appropriate, and after consultation with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the submission of notice to the Congress, the Secretary should declare to be obsolete any circulating $1 coin that bears the design of the $1 coins being issued immediately before the issuance of coins with the design referred to in section 5112(n)(7) of title 31, United States Code;

(8) in connection with the introduction of the $1 coins under the Presidential $1 Coin Program—

(A) the coins should not be introduced with an overly expensive taxpayer-funded public relations campaign; and

(B) the Director of the United States Mint, a bureau in the Department of the Treasury, should work with consumer groups, media outlets, and schools to ensure an adequate amount of news coverage about the start of the coin program so consumers will know of the availability of the coins;

(9) the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the Secretary of the Treasury should take steps to ensure that an adequate supply of $1 coins are available for commerce and collectors at such places and in such quantities as are appropriate by—

(A) meeting, from time to time but no less frequently than quarterly, with a coin users group that includes representatives of merchants who would benefit from the increased usage of $1 coins, vending machine and other coin acceptor manufacturers, vending machine owners and operators, transit officials, municipal parking officials, depository institutions, coin and currency handlers, armored-car operators, car wash operators, and coin collectors and dealers to accurately gauge demand for coins and to anticipate and eliminate obstacles to the easy and efficient distribution and circulation of $1 coins as well as all other circulating coins;

(B) submitting a semiannual report to the Congress containing an assessment of the remaining obstacles to the efficient and timely circulation of coins, and particularly $1 coins, together with such recommendations for legislative action the Board and the Secretary may determine to be appropriate;

(C) consulting with industry representatives to encourage operators of vending machines and other automated coin-accepting devices in the United States to accept coins issued under the Presidential $1 Coin Program and the so-called "Sacagawea-design" $1 coins, and to include notices on the machines and devices of such acceptability;

(D) ensuring that during an introductory period, all institutions that want unmixed supplies of each newly-issued design of $1 coins are able to obtain such unmixed supplies; and

(E) consulting with representatives of depository institutions and armored-car operators to support the availability of $1 coins in packaging of sizes and types appropriate for and useful to ordinary commerce, including rolled coins; and

(10) the Director of the United States Mint should take all steps necessary to expand the marketplace for bullion coins, and reduce barriers to the sale of bullion coins, by ensuring that—

(A) the greatest number possible of reputable, reliable, and responsible dealers are qualified to offer for sale all bullion coins struck and issued by the United States Mint; and

(B) all such dealers and their customers have equal and timely access to all new issues of such bullion coins.

TITLE II—ABRAHAM LINCOLN BICENTENNIAL 1-CENT COIN REDESIGN

SEC. 201. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds as follows:

(1) Abraham Lincoln, the 16th President, was one of the Nation's greatest leaders, demonstrating true courage during the Civil War, one of the greatest crises in the Nation's history.

(2) Born of humble roots in Hardin County (present-day LaRue County), Kentucky, on February 12, 1809, Abraham Lincoln rose to the Presidency through a combination of honesty, integrity, intelligence, and commitment to the United States.

(3) With the belief that all men are created equal, Abraham Lincoln led the effort to free all slaves in the United States.

(4) Abraham Lincoln had a generous heart, with malice toward none and with charity for all.

(5) Abraham Lincoln gave the ultimate sacrifice for the country he loved, dying from an assassin's bullet on April 15, 1865.

(6) All Americans could benefit from studying the life of Abraham Lincoln, for Lincoln's life is a model for accomplishing the "American dream" through honesty, integrity, loyalty, and a lifetime of education.

(7) The year 2009 will be the bicentennial anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

(8) Abraham Lincoln was born in Kentucky, grew to adulthood in Indiana, achieved fame in Illinois, and led the nation in Washington, D.C.

(9) The so-called "Lincoln cent" was introduced in 1909 on the 100th anniversary of Lincoln's birth, making the obverse design the most enduring on the nation's coinage.

(10) President Theodore Roosevelt was so impressed by the talent of Victor David Brenner that the sculptor was chosen to design the likeness of President Lincoln for the coin, adapting a design from a plaque Brenner had prepared earlier.

(11) In the nearly 100 years of production of the "Lincoln cent", there have been only 2 designs on the reverse: the original, featuring 2 wheat-heads in memorial style enclosing mottoes, and the current representation of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C.

(12) On the occasion of the bicentennial of President Lincoln's birth and the 100th anniversary of the production of the Lincoln cent, it is entirely fitting to issue a series of 1-cent coins with designs on the reverse that are emblematic of the 4 major periods of President Lincoln's life.

SEC. 202. REDESIGN OF LINCOLN CENT FOR 2009.

(a) IN GENERAL.—During the year 2009, the Secretary of the Treasury shall issue 1-cent coins in accordance with the following design specifications:

(1) OBVERSE.—The obverse of the 1-cent coin shall continue to bear the Victor David Brenner likeness of President Abraham Lincoln.

(2) REVERSE.—The reverse of the coins shall bear 4 different designs each representing a different aspect of the life of Abraham Lincoln, such as—

(A) his birth and early childhood in Kentucky;

(B) his formative years in Indiana;

(C) his professional life in Illinois; and

(D) his presidency, in Washington, D.C.

(b) ISSUANCE OF REDESIGNED LINCOLN CENTS IN 2009.—

(1) ORDER.—The 1-cent coins to which this section applies shall be issued with 1 of the 4 designs referred to in subsection (a)(2) beginning at the start of each calendar quarter of 2009.

(2) NUMBER.—The Secretary shall prescribe, on the basis of such factors as the Secretary determines to be appropriate, the number of 1-cent coins that shall be issued with each of the designs selected for each calendar quarter of 2009.

(c) DESIGN SELECTION.—The designs for the coins specified in this section shall be chosen by the Secretary—

(1) after consultation with the Abraham Lincoln Bicentennial Commission and the Commission of Fine Arts; and

(2) after review by the Citizens Coinage Advisory Committee.

SEC. 203. REDESIGN OF REVERSE OF 1-CENT COINS AFTER 2009.

The design on the reverse of the 1-cent coins issued after December 31, 2009, shall bear an image emblematic of President Lincoln's preservation of the United States of America as a single and united country.

SEC. 204. NUMISMATIC PENNIES WITH THE SAME METALLIC CONTENT AS THE 1909 PENNY.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall issue 1-cent coins in 2009 with the exact metallic content as the 1-cent coin contained in 1909 in such number as the Secretary determines to be appropriate for numismatic purposes

SEC. 205. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.

It is the sense of the Congress that the original Victor David Brenner design for the 1-cent coin was a dramatic departure from previous American coinage that should be reproduced, using the original form and relief of the likeness of Abraham Lincoln, on the 1-cent coins issued in 2009.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) and the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on this legislation and to include extraneous material thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Delaware?

There was no objection.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I am pleased that the House will consider today the Presidential $1 Coin Act of 2005 I authored with the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY). This legislation honors each U.S. President by placing him on the obverse side of the $1 coin on a rotating basis. By doing so it aims to improve circulation of the $1 coin, which will lower costs to businesses and thus restrain price increases. I believe this program is a great opportunity for educating both children and adults about the history of our country. In addition, although it is not the goal of the program, these new coins will likely generate as much as $5 billion for the government.

Concurrently with this program, the current Sacagawea coin will also be minted. I am pleased that we were able to work with the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY) to address his concerns and continue the Sacagawea program, which will now hopefully be stronger than ever.

In many ways this legislation is modeled after the successful "50 State Quarter Program." The 50 State Quarter Program, which I was also proud to have authored, issues five quarters a year bearing images connected with one of the States, so that over a decade each State will have been honored. Before the State quarter program started, the U.S. Mint was making about 400 million quarters a year, but in the first year of the 50 State Quarter Program it minted approximately 1.2 billion quarters. The Mint estimates that one person in each household is collecting the quarters and they are collecting a full set, not just their own State. According to the most recent numbers from the Mint, nearly $5 billion worth of savings have been created for the Federal Government.

It is important to note that this program is likely to be more accepted by the public than previous dollar coin programs. In a 2002 General Accounting Office report to Congress, 25 percent of respondents stated that they would use the dollar coin for more purchases if there was a rotating design similar to the 50 State Quarter Program. Additionally, nearly 50 percent of respondents stated they would collect the new coin if it featured a changing design. And 69 percent of respondents favored U.S. Presidents as the choice for the new rotating design on the dollar coin.

Under the program, the images on the front and back of the coin temporarily would be replaced beginning in 2007 with images of the United States Presidents. Four Presidents a year would be honored, in the order of their service, with a likeness of the President, his name and dates of service, and a number signifying the order in which he served, on the front of the coin. The image on the reverse would be that of the Statue of Liberty, large enough to be dramatic but not so large as to create a so-called "two-headed" coin. The date, Mint mark, and other important mottos on the coin would be on the edge of the coin, leaving room on the faces for more dramatic artwork.

Working through concerns, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. KELLY) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) raised last year, there is language that was drafted in consultation with the National Federation of the Blind to ensure seeing-impaired individuals would be able to distinguish the dollar coin from a quarter.

The educational aspects of this program are obvious. We all know George Washington was the first President, but how many can tell the exact dates of his service to the country? How about the dates of service of the famous Civil War General Ulysses S. Grant, who later became President? And how many in this Chamber can name the only President who would end up with two coins in the series because he served twice, in terms separated by another President's term?

This legislation also seeks to honor the First Spouses by creating a nearly pure-gold investment-grade bullion coin, the same diameter as the dollar coin, and half an ounce in weight, honoring the First Spouses who have done so much for our country. The U.S. Mint will also be able to make bronze medal replicas of the First Spouse gold bullion coin. This will enable school children and ordinary citizens an affordable option for collecting the First Spouse series. These bronze medal replicas will cost just a few dollars.

For the First Spouse coin, the obverse, as for the Presidential coins, would be the likeness of the spouse, terms of service, and the order in which they served. On the reverse would be images emblematic of the spouse's works. In the five instances to date in which Presidents had no spouses while in office, the educational part again, the bill calls for the image on the front of the coin to be that of an image, that of "Liberty," as used on a U.S. coin circulating that President's term, and the reverse of the coin to carry images related to the President's term.

□ 1545

During President Chester Arthur's term, the image of Liberty would be represented by Alice Paul, a leading figure in the women's suffrage movement, who was born during Arthur's term. Other Presidents, such as President Wilson, have had more than one spouse while in office due to the death of a spouse and subsequent remarriage while still in office.

Finally, this legislation includes H.R. 767 as a second title. This legislation, introduced by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. LAHOOD) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON) and cosponsored by the entire Illinois delegation, will redesign the Lincoln penny in 2009 in celebration of the 200th anniversary of President Lincoln's birth. The redesign will feature four designs, each representing a different aspect of his life: first, his birth and early childhood in Kentucky; second, his formative years in Indiana; third, his professional life in Illinois; and, finally, his Presidency in Washington, DC.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) for her work on this legislation, indeed there was a great deal of work, as well as the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman OXLEY) and the ranking member, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK), for their support.

I urge my colleagues to support this fun and educational program.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the bill that the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) and I have offered that is a win-win for taxpayers and the economy.

The Presidential Dollar Coin Act builds on the remarkable success of the 50 State Quarter Act of the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE), which is well into its 10-year run and has earned praise from educators and coin collectors and benefited the Treasury. My daughters, like many young people across America, enjoy collecting this popular coin.

Like the State quarter bill, the Presidential dollar coin will educate Americans about our Presidents and our first ladies while making money for the taxpayers. In addition, this bill will encourage use of the Sacagawea dollar coin, which will continue to be issued throughout the program and will be the sole U.S. dollar coin after the program ends. Thanks to discussions with the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY), Indian tribal chiefs and women's groups, the provisions of the bill relating to the Sacagawea dollar coin have been clarified and strengthened to assure that Sacagawea, the only woman on our currency at this present moment, will continue to be honored on the dollar coin.

In a similar vein, the bill also provides for commemorative coins honoring each first lady to be issued during the period that their husbands were President. These will be issued both as gold bullion collectors' items and also in a bronze version, making them more accessible to school children and the public.

I am particularly pleased that the bill provides for a coin to be issued in honor of the noted suffragette Alice Paul at the same time as the coin commemorating President Chester Arthur, who served without a spouse. As a New Yorker, I am particularly pleased that Lady Liberty, the international symbol of the United States, will be on the back of the coin.

The General Accounting Office has estimated that general use of dollar coins could save the government as much as $500 million per year because they last longer than the dollar bill. Boosting usage of the dollar coin in everyday commerce also helps small businesses and provides consumers with faster and better service.

At the halfway point of issuance, the 50-State Quarter program had made the government over $4 billion primarily from collectors taking the coins out of circulation so that the Federal Reserve then buys more from the Mint. We have similar expectations for the effect of individuals collecting the dollar coins.

This bill earns money for the government, benefits small businesses and consumers, educates all users of American currency about their Presidents and first ladies, and encourages wider use of the Sacagawea dollar coin. I would call that a bill that deserves our full support.

I particularly want to thank the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) for his work, not only on the quarter coin, which has been a huge success for our school children and our Nation and helped our economy, but his leadership and constant work on this bill, along with the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman OXLEY) and the ranking member, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK).

I particularly thank Joe Pinder of the committee staff, who is really an expert on coins and has put a great deal of time and effort on this, along with Emily Pfeiffer from the staff of the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) and Eleni Constantin, my financial services counsel.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that this will pass overwhelmingly and be circulating soon.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY).

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me time, and I am rising today in support of H.R. 902. I congratulate the gentleman from Delaware and the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) for having worked long and hard on this legislation.

In a Chamber where we find so much to fight about, you might think that a dollar coin commemorating former Presidents would be the ultimate no-brainer; but believe me, I had very deep troubles with this legislation. You see, I represent the State of North Dakota, home of Sacagawea, as we say in Hidatsa. Sacagawea as she is known in the Shoshone language. This coin, the Presidential coin, will come in addition to the existing dollar coin which bears the likeness of Sacagawea.

This occurs at a time when we are recognizing the 200th anniversary of the Lewis and Clark Expedition and commemorating, in accordance with that remembrance, the role Sacagawea had in this very important expedition.

The State of North Dakota feels very deeply about Sacagawea and about her role in U.S. history. We commemorated not long ago our second statue in Statuary Hall in Sacagawea's likeness. We were concerned that the move to the Presidential coin would somehow phase out the Sacagawea coin or relegate this one coin to history and obscurity. We thought that was not the time to do it, not in the bicentennial of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, not this coin that recognizes the contributions Native American people have made in our history, not the coin that recognizes the role women have played in the history of our country.

So with all of these concerns, I sat down and began my discussions with the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) and also many discussions with my friend, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY).

I am very pleased to say that this was one experience where rather than just being rebuffed with "forget about your concerns, we have got the votes so we are going to run this," there was actual, very sincere listening to our concerns that Sacagawea continue in the coinage of our country. There were sincere efforts to address the issues that we were raising, and let me just cite a couple of them:

First, that the Presidential coins start at the conclusion of the bicentennial observation of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. In addition, that any improvements to the coin to advance the Presidential coins would also be applied to the Sacagawea coin. Specifically, here we are talking about making a coin that will work in vending machines, that has the gold color, yet is not so subject to tarnishing as the existing rendition of the Sacagawea coin.

I think that the bill, as a result of the changes made by the constructive dialogue we were able to maintain, is a better bill; and I am just deeply grateful that on this issue, maybe not of great national importance to many, but of very real importance to me and the people I represent, you paid attention to our concerns, addressed them and came up with what I believe is an acceptable compromise. Maybe we can take this example and export it to other issues before us.

I am deeply grateful to the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE). By golly, when the gentleman gets an idea, he just does not let it drop. I was hoping the gentleman would wear out on this one; but, no, he kept pushing, and here we are today and we are going to pass it and are going to pass it with my vote.

So I commend the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE), I commend the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY), and I thank them once again for the opportunity to work with them on this legislation.

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to thank the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY) for his constant work on this bill and his support. We are very grateful. I believe the gentleman's input has made it a stronger bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back my time.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First, as a comment to the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY), he is tenacious, to say the least. We have been going through this with the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) for a year, or something of that nature, addressing a variety of issues.

Obviously, none of us wanted to see the Sacagawea coin not come back or fail or whatever. It will be continued, and I think it is our mutual hope that this program will accelerate the usage of these coins, and therefore it is going to be a coin when it does come back in full-blown issuance after all the Presidential coins are gone that will be used a heck of a lot more than it is now. So hopefully it is a win-win situation that we ended up with.

I thank the gentleman. It was all amiable, maybe a little frustrating at times, but all amiable.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot thank my cosponsor enough. She has also been tenacious in this, dealing with her side of the aisle when there were complications, smoothing those things over, plotting with me to get this done, which we had to do from time to time. It has been a great pleasure to work with the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) on this as well.

I would like to thank all the staff who worked on this legislation. It does seem like a relatively simple bill, but it is a little more complicated than one might think; and there was a lot of staff involvement. Obviously, Emily Pfeiffer on my staff I thank particularly, and Joe Pinder is truly an expert on coinage. I think he dreams about these coins and constantly he would come up with things I had not thought of, usually which we had to overcome in some way or another. But his institutional knowledge of coinage in the United States, which may not be exceeded in this country, is of extraordinary value to all of us as we deal with legislation such as that.

So we are pleased to be here. We think this is obviously very good legislation for a whole variety of reasons, every bit, hopefully, as good as the quarter legislation turned out to be.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 902, the "Presidential $1 Coin Act of 2005," that the gentleman from Delaware, Mr. CASTLE, has written.

The dollar coin has the potential to save consumers and business billions of dollars if it is available for the niche population that has need of it. However, for number of reasons the so-called "golden" dollar coin never has achieved the success it should have when it was introduced in 2000. I think the Castle bill addresses all of those, creating a demand for the coin rather than trying to force it into circulation. I like the educational opportunities the coin presents, and I particularly like that the bill would put the Statue of Liberty on the reverse of the coin. Mr. CASTLE isn't going to say this, but I will: In 1997, when Congress approved the original Golden Dollar program, the legislation left the House with more than 400 votes to put the Statue of Liberty on the coin. Somehow, before it got to the President, that important symbol disappeared. Especially after 9/11, I think all of us believe that having Lady Liberty on our currency will be terrific.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 902, introduced by Mr. CASTLE for himself and Mrs. MALONEY, seeks to improve demand for and thus circulation of the current one-dollar coin, with the intent of saving money for business and thus restraining price increases for consumers.

The legislation directs the Secretary of the Treasury to redesign the new "golden" one-dollar coin, beginning in 2007, issuing four different designs a year. Each design would depict the image and pertinent information about a President of the United States, in order of service, on the front. The reverse of the coin would depict an image of the Statue of Liberty.

Additionally, the legislation directs the Treasury Secretary to begin issuing, concurrently with the Presidential dollars, pure-gold "bullion" coins honoring and depicting the First Spouses. The bill also allows striking of an inexpensive bronze copy of the Spouse coin so that schoolchildren could collect affordable President-and-First Spouse sets, and proposes a number of methods to increase the circulation of the dollar coin.

Essentially similar legislation passed both subcommittee and full committee last year. Changes to this version include moving the starting date back one year, to 2007, and explicit guarantees that the so-called "Sacagawea" design currently being minted and issued, will continue to be minted and issued during the life of the Presidential Dollar program, as well as becoming the sole design after the end of that program.

Finally the legislation incorporates as a separate title the text of H.R. 767, introduced by Mr. LAHOOD for himself and Mr. JACKSON, which calls for a temporary redesign of the reverse of the one-cent coin in 2009 honoring the bicentennial of the birth of President Abraham Lincoln.

With that, I urge unanimous support for H.R. 902.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 902, as amended.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

EXPANDED ACCESS TO FINANCIAL SERVICES ACT OF 2005

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 749) to amend the Federal Credit Union Act to provide expanded access for persons in the field of membership of a Federal credit union to money order, check cashing, and money transfer services, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 749

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Expanded Access to Financial Services Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. CHECK CASHING AND MONEY TRANSFER SERVICES OFFERED WITHIN THE FIELD OF MEMBERSHIP.

Paragraph (12) of section 107 of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1757(12)) is amended to read as follows:

"(12) in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Board—

"(A) to sell, to persons in the field of membership, negotiable checks (including travelers checks), money orders, and other similar money transfer instruments (including international and domestic electronic fund transfers); and

"(B) to cash checks and money orders and receive international and domestic electronic fund transfers for persons in the field of membership for a fee;".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) and the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 749, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Delaware?

There was no objection.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 749, the Expanded Access to Financial Services Act of 2005, introduced by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GERLACH) and the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) and favorably reported to the House by the Committee on Financial Services.

This bill makes a simple change to the Federal Credit Union Act to allow Federal credit unions to offer check cashing and money transfer services to anyone within their field of membership. H.R. 749 will serve the dual purpose of lowering the cost to consumers of both check cashing and wire transfer products, while providing credit unions the opportunity to establish relationships with individuals who are currently unbanked.

Money transfers by individuals living and working in the U.S. to Latin America are currently estimated at $10 billion annually, and should more than double by 2010.

□ 1600

As the remittance market continues to grow, there becomes a significant danger in depriving customers of low-cost remittance products, thereby driving them to underground service providers that evade regulatory oversight. H.R. 749 will allow credit unions to offer remittance products to individuals who qualify for membership while promoting greater transparency within the remittance market. This improved transparency will enhance the ability for regulators and law enforcement agencies to track wire transfers used for illegal activity. Increasing the ease with which regulators and law enforcement agencies can follow the money trail is consistent with the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission on Terrorist Financing.

Allowing Federal credit unions to offer products and services to all consumers within their field of membership would provide further benefits to our economy by allowing credit unions to establish relationships with individuals who are currently "unbanked." Many users of remittance services are recent immigrants and should be empowered with the knowledge and resources necessary to open personal accounts at mainstream financial institutions. Studies indicate that as many as 10 million American households do not have a bank account. Establishing and successfully managing a personal account with an insured depository institution can lead to greater economic self-sufficiency and long-term financial security. Particularly for low- and moderate-income Americans, opening a checking or savings account can be an important first step in establishing a credit history, which can unlock doors to other financial opportunities.

I believe that this bill is a positive step toward ensuring that millions of unbanked Americans have access to secure, low-cost remittance products, while drawing these same customers into the regulated financial mainstream. I therefore encourage all of my colleagues to vote in favor of H.R. 749.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) summarized well the reasons for voting for this bill. If I had more forbearance, I would simply sit down, but I have a really nicely written speech here and will use a few minutes, hopefully abbreviating it, since so many of its points have already been covered.

Mr. Speaker, I will put into the RECORD at this point a letter in support of this bill from the National Association of Federal Credit Unions.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF FEDERAL CREDIT UNIONS,
Arlington, VA, April 26, 2005.

Hon. MIKE OXLEY,
Chairman, House Committee on Financial Services, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

Hon. BARNEY FRANK,
Ranking Member, House Committee on Financial Services, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN OXLEY AND RANKING MEMBER FRANK: On behalf of the National Association of Federal Credit Unions (NAFCU), the only national trade association that exclusively represents the interests of our nation's federal credit unions, I want to reiterate our support for the Expanded Access to Financial Services Act of 2005 (H.R. 749) and urge the House to bring up and pass this key legislation.

NAFCU fully supports the merits of this bill, since abuses are rampant in communities where immigrants rely on money transfer companies to send remittances to family members and others in their country of origin. Unfortunately, money transfer companies oftentimes charge exorbitant fees on those sending remittances, while imposing poor exchange rates. For example, a $1000 money transfer to Mexico via IRnet would cost $10, while the same transaction via Western Union would cost between $30 and $50 depending on the Western Union location. Also, the credit union providing the transfer may be successful in converting an unbanked potential member into a member. In reality, and in far too many cases, the costs associated with sending such remittances is essentially nothing more than another form of predatory lending. Many people do not know that credit unions can provide a lower cost and better alternative to these predatory practices. As such, NAFCU is pleased that a number of our member credit unions currently offer remittance services to their members.

Last year, in testimony before the House Financial Services Subcommittee on Financial Services and Consumer Credit during a hearing on the issue of regulatory relief for credit unions on July 20, 2004, NAFCU Board Secretary and Xerox FCU President & CEO Bill Cheney testified:

". . . NAFCU supports efforts to allow federal credit unions to offer check-cashing and money-transfer services to anyone within the credit union's field of membership. We believe this new authority, which would be discretionary and not mandatory, will allow credit unions to help combat abuses by non-traditional financial institutions that prey on our nation's immigrants and others who live and work in underserved communities."

That statement remains true today. The credit union industry continues to work on the front line to combat financial illiteracy and to teach consumers about sound financial practices. NAFCU believes that H.R. 749 is a good step forward in creating an alternative to those who have no choices in traditional financial services.

Thank you for allowing us this opportunity to share our support for H.R. 749. We hope that the House is able to bring up and take action on this legislation in a timely manner. If you or your staff have any questions regarding remittances abuses and how credit unions can be used to help address these problems, please do not hesitate to call on me or NAFCU's Director of Legislative Affairs, Brad Thaler.

Sincerely,

FRED R. BECKER, Jr.,
President and CEO.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 749 would allow credit unions to provide lifeline services; that is to say international remittances, wire transfers, and check-cashing services to nonmembers who are within the credit union's field of membership. Now, a credit union is restricted and serves a restricted number of people. Some credit unions are based on employment, and so you may have a credit union that serves the textile workers of Los Angeles. You might have another credit union geographically based that serves the northeast San Fernando Valley. This bill only allows a credit union to serve those who are within its field of membership, who are eligible to become members of a credit union. And it makes good sense to allow those who fit within the field of membership, but are not yet members of the credit union, to get these lifeline services. These lifeline services are often priced very high, whether it be check-cashing on the one hand, or international remittances on the other. And to instead provide additional competition so that credit unions can bring the price of these services down would be very helpful to those at the very bottom of our economic ladder.

As the gentleman from Delaware points out, it also brings people who do not have a relationship with a financial institution into a financial institution. It gives them a chance to move from nonmembers who are making use of the check cashing and remittance services, to members who have a checking account, and then gradually a savings account, a credit history, and a real piece of the American financial pie, if you will; a chance to participate with all of the services that the financial institutions of this country provide.

Now, consumers who are sending remittances now, sometimes they are paying as much as 15 percent of the amount that they plan to send. So if you are sending $300 back to your parents in Mexico, you may spend $45, and this bill will provide additional competition in the international remittance area, where many credit unions providing services to those who are already members often provide these services for only $14 or less per transaction. By bringing people into credit unions, credit unions can do what they do best, and that is serve those who are within their field of membership and begin the process of providing financial education, combating predatory lending, and bringing people into the financial system.

Today, more than 200 credit unions already provide to their members wire transfer services to almost 650 points of service in 40 countries. So the credit unions are well positioned to provide these wire transfer and international remittance services.

In 2003, the Credit Union National Association adopted a group of principles designed to guide their members when providing these international remittance services. They basically say that credit unions should disclose the cost of the transaction in their advertising and brochures and in dealings with the customer, that the credit unions will provide current exchange rate information before conducting the transaction; that they will tell the customer the exact amount of foreign currency to be received by the recipient; and they will tell the sender when the funds will be available to the recipient. These kinds of high principles are important for those in the international remittance business, and to have credit unions more involved in that business and subject to those principles is an important step forward.

As the gentleman from Delaware pointed out, the size of the international remittance business is quite large. In fact, it is estimated at least at $10 billion annually. It is expected to double by the end of this decade, and there are some estimates that place it well above $10 billion annually now.

I should also mention that nearly half of the Latinos in this country do not have an account with a mainstream financial institution, and that is why it is so important in dealing with that immigrant community, as well as other immigrant communities from elsewhere in the world, that we provide this opportunity for credit unions to provide international remittance services.

I should also take a moment to recognize the work of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. GUTIERREZ) who has been the leader in dealing with all of the various aspects of the remittance, international remittance issues, and to recognize my friend, the gentleman from the Inland Empire (Mr. BACA) who provided a clarifying and perfecting amendment to this legislation. I believe that this legislation will help credit unions provide services to those who need them, will drive down the price of those services, and will introduce people to our financial institutions. I urge an aye vote.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Mr. GERLACH).

Mr. GERLACH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY) for taking up this bill so quickly, and the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) for his work on behalf of this important legislation. I would also like to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. BACA), the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. GUTIERREZ), the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. KANJORSKI), the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE), and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) for their efforts as well.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to encourage my colleagues to support H.R. 749, the Expanded Access to Financial Services Act. This bipartisan legislation will amend the Federal Credit Union Act to allow credit unions to offer money order, check cashing, and wire transfer services to anyone who is eligible to be a credit union member, whether or not they have credit union membership. The bill is identical to section 307 of H.R. 1375, the Financial Services Regulatory Relief Act, which passed the House by a vote of 392 to 25 on March 18, 2004.

H.R. 748 reaches out to individuals who, for whatever reason, do not have established bank accounts. These unbanked Americans, estimated to be up to 10 million households, are frequently charged high fees for a variety of financial services. By bringing competition to the marketplace, we can provide our constituents access to lower-fee alternatives.

Many of those who would utilize these services are hardworking immigrants trying to wire money home to help provide for their families. According to the Pew Hispanic Center and Multilateral Investment Fund, $10 million is sent back to Latin America each year, a figure that can more than double in the next 5 years.

It is my hope that the underserved persons who are reached by this bill will be able to use these services to establish a credit history that can then allow them to take advantage of other financial services. An initial positive experience with a depository institution may encourage the "unbanked" to explore other financial products.

Further, bringing immigrant workers into financial institutions is important for national security. Credit unions are required to follow the recordkeeping and reporting requirements of the Bank Secrecy Act. They must also determine that customers are in the field of membership, a process that would involve personal documentation review. Having international money transfers go through regulated financial institutions makes it easier for law enforcement officials to learn of and follow suspicious activity.

This legislation has the support of the National Credit Union Administration, the Credit Union National Association, and National Association of Federal Credit Unions.

H.R. 749 is a good, bipartisan bill. It reaches out to communities that have historically been left out of the financial services arena and encourages hardworking Americans to develop relationships with financial institutions. I hope the Members will choose today to give their constituents access to affordable financial services.

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 749, the Expanded Financial Services Act of 2005.

This legislation will allow credit unions to offer services to individuals who are in their field of membership, not just those who are members.

This bill will open up the marketplace, and will provide lower-cost services to underserved individuals. The result will be that thousands of unbanked households will be able to enter the economic mainstream.

H.R. 749 includes a provision that I introduced in the Financial Services Committee that will allow these individuals to use credit unions to send international and domestic electronic fund transfers.

This provision will help underserved individuals to send and receive funds to and from their families.
